"Stretching Forward"

THE old year has gone. It is time to forget "the things which are behind." It is time to stretch forward to "the things which are before." It is time for the Forward Movement to begin.

By way of indicating the MESSENGER's desire to cooperate with the Church Boards in the program which they have adopted, and with the further purpose of keeping constantly in our minds the ideals they have set before us, we have placed in the motto space, near the top of this page, several Scripture texts which seem particularly appropriate to the Forward Movement program.

The words which occupy the central position are from the same great apostle and the same letter, as it happens, as were those which have stood there heretofore. They express most admirably and tersely the practical import of the new movement. They do not define it but they do tell us exactly what each of us must do to make the movement a success.

On either side are words which summarize the objectives of the movement. They define the nature of "the things which are before," to which we must stretch forward, for they well state the sum and substance of that "goal" to which Paul himself, even in his old age, was still "stretching forward."

The passage on the left is taken from that memorable address which Jesus delivered to his disciples on the slopes of Olivet, when the cross was already casting its shadows over him. It states concisely the task of world evangelism with which Jesus formally charged these disciples a few week later, and which will ever remain the first and foremost task of the church of Christ, until it be accomplished.

The passage on the right is taken from that wonderful sentence in which Paul sets out the one final function of all the varied agencies in the church,—the culture of the soul into complete Christlikeness. This is the ultimate purpose of evangelization. This is what the church is charged to do with all who heed its proclamation of the Gospel.

The one text embodies that part of the Forward Movement program with which the Mission Board is primarily concerned. The other deals with religious education, the chief interest of the Sunday-school and Educational Boards. Yet sharp distinctions here are impossible and inadvisable. The two texts together comprehend the business of all the Boards not only, but of the whole machinery of the church.

How long these texts shall stand as our motto, we can not say. But we agree to remove them, at least as soon as the ends expressed by them are reached.

Perhaps you would like to hurry matters up a little. The way is open. Stretch forward.

Doing Honor to the Fathers

ONE way of honoring the memory of the great and good men of past ages is to build monuments of stone and write beautiful inscriptions on them. And recite their achievements in books and speeches. Another way is to emulate their virtues. The former method need not be disparaged altogether, but most people will agree that the second is the better. And when the first is used, if it is to be anything more than hollow pretense, it must be supplemented by the second.

Such trite observations as these will, of course, pass without question. But there is still a point involved which is worthy of at least a passing notice. Granted that we wish to honor the fathers by the second and better method, how shall we go about it? What does it mean to emulate their virtues?

There are two answers to this question. One is, to do what the fathers did. The other is, to do what they would do if they were in our place. The first answer is right, in part. The second is altogether right.

If the fathers were alive today,—we mean those faithful ones whose good example we desire to follow,—they would do many things exactly as they did them years ago. And many things they would do differently. For they would be just as loyal and conscientious in carrying out the fundamental principles of their faith now as they were then. This would require them to take account of the many changed conditions in which they would find themselves. We know they would do this because this is just what they did in their own time. This unswerving loyalty to Gospel principles would make their present methods and activities, in some respects unlike, in some respects the same as, their former ones. Wherever their practice would vary from that of the past, it would be because loyalty to the principle required it.

True loyalty to the fathers and emulation of their virtues is not the same as doing everything they did and nothing else. It is putting the same spirit into our work that they put into theirs. It is being as useful to our age as they were to theirs. It is facing the problems of our time with the same courage and devotion to the truth that enabled them to meet their problems successfully.

Let us do honor to the fathers by making as much progress in bringing the real Gospel of Jesus into the hearts and lives of our fellow-men, as our fathers themselves did.

A Good Exercise in Spiritual Culture

STRETCHING is good exercise. Sometimes it hurts a little, but this is seldom just cause for alarm. It probably means nothing more than the tearing down of dead tissue. As soon as the new tissue has had time to grow, you will be stronger and healthier than before.

Perhaps that disinclination to stretch forward in your church activities is due to a like reason. Lazy Christians get their spiritual systems all clogged up with dead tissue. Working this off may be a trifle painful, but the new life which follows is so much more vigorous and satisfying that it is worth the cost.

For an exercise in spiritual culture there is nothing better than "stretching forward."

Teaching Gospel Truth by Contrast

IN the New Testament many striking contrasts are used in teaching the important truths of the Gospel. Jesus used a number of them, and Paul, in his Epistles, also uses very many. These contrasts put the truth in such a light that no one can mistake their meaning.

One among the strongest, used by our Savior in his teaching, grew out of an experience in the temple. There he saw the wealthy men cast their gold and silver into the treasury box. As it rattled and jingled into the box, it might have been heard all over the temple. While this was going on, a poor widow approached the box. She was rather poorly dressed, as may readily be inferred. She did have two mites in her hand, and these she cast into the treasury and walked away. She may have had fears that her small gift,—two-fifths of one cent,—would not be readily found among the gold and silver. If we had had the choice of the wealth thrown in, we doubtless would have taken the gold and the silver, and left the mites. But God's arithmetic, as to real values, is different from ours. Jesus saw it all and, calling his disciples unto him, he drew the contrast between the givers. He said: "Verily I say unto you, That this poor widow hath cast more in than all they which have cast into the treasury. For all they did cast in of their abundance; but she of her want did cast in all that she had, even all her living" (Mark 12: 43-44).

What an important lesson this contrast teaches, and how plain it all is! Who can misunderstand it? Try your best and you can put no other meaning into it than Jesus placed in it. The poor widow gave until she felt it, for she gave all her living. It is said that some give after feeling around for the smallest coin among their abundance. That kind of giving does not count in the sight of God.

A good brother was soliciting money for a worthy cause. He approached a wealthy brother and solicited him for help. He answered: "Well, brother, I suppose I must give my mite." The good brother at once replied: "Don't do that; we do not need all you have,—even all your living."

In that wonderful and most beautiful love chapter, 1 Cor. 13, the apostle uses a half dozen of the most striking contrasts to be found in all his writings. They are drawn between love and other important gifts. He says: "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not love, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not love, I am nothing. And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not love, it profiteth me nothing" (1 Cor. 13: 1-3).

Look at each of these most remarkable contrasts! Study them carefully, and note how, in the rest of the chapter, Paul defines the characteristics of love.

As Drummond says, he passes the word through the prism of the Holy Ghost and gives us its elements. You may have the oratorical ability of a Demosthenes or a Cicero, and have, in addition, the silver tongue of an angel, and without love your words become as a sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal,—only a hollow, empty sound.

You may have the gift of prophecy,—even the ability to foretell future events,—but if you lack love, the gift does not count in Christian character. In addition to prophecy you may have all faith, so that you could remove mountains, and yet, if you lack love, your faith is an empty shell. It has often been said: "Only believe, and you shall be saved," but you must have the love of God shed abroad in your heart and soul, if faith is to count. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength and with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself," if your faith is to count.

You may have all knowledge, and understand all mysteries; you may have finished the common and high school courses, taken a degree in college and university; you may have B. A., M. A., Ph. D., D. D. and LL. D. attached to your name, but if you do not have love, you are nothing. Without this one great Christian essential, your degrees are but the thin, empty air of mere fame.

And then you may,—having the wealth of the world as a Carnegie, a Rockefeller or a Rothschild,—sell all you have and give it to feed the poor and starving, but it will profit you nothing unless you are prompted by love. And then, to reach the highest possible sacrifice, you may give your body to be burned, but if you do not possess love, it profiteth you nothing. The false prophets on Mount Carmel, in their contest with Elijah, cut themselves with knives until their gashes made their altar and sacrifice red with their life-blood. Some may even have died from their self-inflicted wounds. Yet all this profited them nothing.

The important lesson of love is here taught in a most forceful way. It places love at the very height of Christian character. The chapter closes by placing love above faith and hope. All three abide, but the greatest is love. We must have the love of God in our hearts, and also have love for humanity and for our fellows in Christ. Jesus says: "A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another."

Is It Ever Right to Do Wrong?

Is it ever right to do wrong? Shall we do evil that good may come? Does the end sanctify the means? If the cause is righteous, are we at liberty to do whatever is necessary for the attainment of it? Do two wrongs ever make a right? Is a lie ever justifiable?

These are questions which people have asked from time immemorial, but they are ever new. Multitudes are asking them now,—not in this abstract form, but in practical affairs of everyday life, especially in crisis times.

If the attainment of a righteous cause justifies the use of unrighteous means, then, certainly, they should be used in the highest of all causes. If it is ever right to do wrong, then it certainly would be for the purpose of accomplishing the highest possible end.

So the Mohammedans reason, and they propagate their faith by the sword, and the poisoned cup and the massacre of the "infidels" follow. So, also, reasoned the Jesuits, justifying murder, intrigue, deceit, and even adultery.

And certainly the progress and conservation of the Kingdom of God is the highest of all ends. It is the greatest of all causes,—the most sacred, the most holy, the most fruitful of good to mankind, and to the glory of God.

Certainly, then, if the end ever sanctified the means, then men are justified in using any means necessary for the progress of the church, and the high cause of Jesus Christ.

Then we must admit that the Mohammedans and Jesuits are right.

But, in all Christian circles, such sophistry has long ago been utterly repudiated. Public sentiment would not even for a moment, endure or justify any such procedure among evangelical Christians today.

In the realms of private life, politics, even in business success, such principles are still in use, and men justify every kind of evil because of the outcome which they claim to be seeking.

But certainly, when men stop to think, they can not long hold such beliefs. The very raising of the question, in the title of this article, "Is It Ever Right to Do Wrong?" shows at once the self-contradiction of such a philosophy. The Apostle Paul himself repudiated such a charge, brought against himself, as the basest of slander. The conscience of every Christian man revolts against it, whatever self-interest may plead. Wherever men have proceeded on this philosophy, sooner or later, the foundations have been dissolved underneath, and their cause or seeming progress has come to ruin.

Our Master himself said that all lies, for example, are from Satan, that he is the father of lies. If, then, we use a lie to help in a righteous cause, we are, in effect, pleading that we must have the devil's help in accomplishing God's purpose. And, just as Satan is at the root of all lies, so he is the source of all evil. Consequently, whenever we plead that "we must do evil that good may come," we are confessing that we must make a compromise with the devil, for the sake of accomplishing a righteous purpose, or promoting a righteous cause. The philosophy is utterly self-contradictory, and untenable, when one tries to think it out from any logical or ethical point of view.

Even the popular phrase, "Of two evils, choose the least," involves a sophistry and self-contradiction. If the things are, in reality, evil, we can not,—we dare not,—choose them. What we really mean is, that of two seeming evils, choose the one which will mean the least of self-sacrifice. We do not mean that it is intrinsically evil, but that it involves a larger personal sacrifice.

It is a false basis, at any rate, upon which to make any decision, for we are never allowed by God to come into any place where we must choose evil in order to do good. "For God is faithful, who will not suffer us to be tempted above that we are able to bear, but will with every temptation, make also the way of escape, that we may be able to bear it." The thing to do is not to weigh the two evils which confront us, but to pray and search for "the way of escape" which God has himself provided in every case of trial, and every testing time.

If we choose evil, we make an alliance with the evil one. If we throw ourselves into the hands of God, and obtain his help, then we shall triumph on a real and lasting basis.

There was a period in Jacob's life when he felt that he must do crooked work for the sake of attaining his end. He and his mother basely deceived and cheated Esau, in order to obtain the blessing of the birthright, which had been promised by God; but both of them suffered severely for this trickery and deceitfulness. In God's own good time, had they cast themselves on the mercy and love and faithfulness of God, he would have manifested the proper way of bringing about the promised blessings.

There came, however, later, a period in the life of Jacob when he was soundly converted,—after the angel of God had wrestled with him all through the night, and Jacob said he would not let him go until he had obtained the blessing. Then, at the cost of physical defect for the rest of his life, he paid the price and obtained the blessing from God. From this time on he was no longer the trickster, the schemer, the supplanter, but obtained his blessings by throwing himself on the mercy, the love, and the will of God, in simple faith and implicit trust. He was willing to bide God's time. And now he was able to obtain his blessings through the will and working of God, and not through human scheming. It was in token of this that his name was changed from "schemer" to "prince," for a prince he had power with God and therefore power with men.

So it is ever. The world does not long honor men who do evil that good may come,—who make a compromise with evil and sin in order to escape persecution. The names which posterity delights to honor, are the names of men who stood upon eternal principles of right, and standing out, if need be, against the public opinion and common understanding of their age. So it will ever be. They are the men of profound vision, with a wider horizon of truth. They are the men who rest in the goodness and providence of God. They are the men who will do right though the heavens fall.

This does not mean any petty narrowness. This means the larger vision, because a man takes his stand upon eternal truth. It does not mean any base fanaticism. It does often involve a misunderstanding by our fellows, who have the narrower vision, who have less stalwart hearts, who are moral cowards, who are afraid to do the good which they know is right.

"Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good." "Blessed is he that overcometh." "When the enemy shall come in like a flood, the Spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against him." "The eyes of the Lord run to and fro throughout the whole earth, seeking to show himself strong in behalf of those whose heart is perfect toward him."

Meeting of the General Mission Board

[For this excellent summary of the Board's deliberations at its meeting held Dec. 18 and 19, we are indebted to the kindness of the Secretary, Bro. J. H. B. Williams.—Ed.]

At this time of the year there is always a great amount of business to be considered and the recent session proved no exception to the rule. Among the more important items which would be of general interest, we might mention the following as being the basis of a good share of the Board's work at this meeting:

Since the August meeting, the Board has had a committee investigate the advisability of employing a home mission secretary. This committee made a report and the Board has decided to employ a secretary whose special business it will be to look after the mission interests of the home base. In order to outline his work, the committee was continued, to make a full report at the April Board meeting.

The General Mission Board, during the last few months, has been making a study of the relation which it would sustain to the missions of other churches, now operating in South China, in case a pastor were sent to that territory. The Board at this meeting appointed a special committee to seek for a pastor for the South China field.

Owing to the difficulties connected with the assignment of our special supports in our foreign fields, and the difficulties which our missionaries find, in reporting on the work of such persons as the native workers and orphans, the Board granted both India and China the privilege of trying out, in one station in each field, a plan by which they will offer to our people shares in the support of a mission, in place of the assignments of native workers. The assignment method often proves disappointing to our people, because of the difficulty in securing reports from their workers, and also because of workers frequently changing on the field.

Furloughs were granted Brother and Sister J. M. Blough, Bro. J. I. Kaylor and Sister Olive Widdowson. The Board very keenly feels the loss of Sister Nora Lichty, who has recently been called home, and expressed its sympathy to Brother Lichty in his sad loss.

A number of petitions were laid before the Board, to provide funds for building operations in China. The workers there are laying the foundation for a very strong work in years to come. Because of the rates of exchange being so excessive in China, our Board, some time ago, asked the workers to defer all building operations, as much so as possible, for the present time. In view of this request, and in the hope that the rate of exchange will be more satisfactory later on, $10,000 was set apart to cover the most urgent items asked for by China. The remainder of the budget was referred to the April meeting for further consideration. Of special interest is the fact that China asked for $3,500 for the purchase of mission property at Shou Yang, China which amount the Board understands it granted in the above appropriation. This station has long been occupied by the English Baptist people, but they were very willing to sell the property to us at a reasonable figure and since it lies contiguous to our territory, and its occupation would be most advantageous for our work, the China mission desires to purchase this property and to open a third station in connection with our China work. China was authorized to organize a building committee, to take care of the many intricate problems connected with building operations in that land.

Furloughs for Dr. Brubaker and family, Ernest Vaniman and family, and Sister Emma Horning, were granted for 1920.

Our missionaries desire to participate in the educational work in the capital of their province, Tai Yuan Fu. Our Board asked them to investigate further the possibilities connected with this, and to report to us at a later meeting.

Considerable time was consumed in the discussion of the Board's Five-year Forward Movement, which is to commence with Jan. 1 of this year and to terminate with Jan. 1, 1924. Many matters were discussed in connection with this, announcement regarding which will be made in due time. Possibly, as a portion of this work, and to give it prestige, it is planned that our church endeavor to raise $150,000 as a special offering at Winona Lake, at our coming Annual Conference. To do this, we sincerely trust that the entire Brotherhood is willing to coöperate in the fullest manner possible.

A number of assignments were made for the foreign field, and it is hoped that a larger number will present their applications for appointment at the April meeting. Truly, our fields are in such a condition at this time, especially in India, that workers must be found if we desire to conserve the efforts which have been put forth by our missionaries through their self-sacrificing labors in the past.

A full report was given of the visit of the Secretary to the Southland, and considerable discussion took place with regard to how our Board may best help our brethren in the southern part of the country. The question is still open for further study, and it is hoped that from this there may come forth some very tangible plans, whereby we can assist in prosecuting mission work in that territory.

Because of the rapidly-changing conditions, the Board feels the necessity of the revision of a number of our tracts; also the wisdom and value of securing other tracts, written in the spirit of service, and in harmony with the spirit of our times. The Tract Examining Committee is being requested to coöperate in securing such literature.

The General Sunday School Board presented a letter to the Mission Board, in which they pledged their fullest coöperation in missionary activities. This letter was much appreciated, and we feel sure that the Sunday School Board, by their help and influence upon our young people and children, can render a splendid service in behalf of missions.

A few improvements were authorized in the Publishing House building, among these being the preparation of a room in our library where visiting students, and others, desiring to read, may find a suitable place.

Some years ago the Board acquired property at Denver, Colo., known as the Denver Colored Home. At this meeting a deed was signed, whereby the property is satisfactorily disposed of. Other deeds were executed, conveying properties owned by the Board which have been sold,—the proceeds of the same to be used for endowment or direct mission work. A loan of $1,100 was made to assist in the erection of one churchhouse. A number of appropriations were made for State Districts, to help them in their mission work.

The question of music for the Church of the Brethren was referred to the General Mission Board at the Wichita Conference, and this question is being carefully studied with a view of supplying our Brotherhood with suitable music for its various requirements.

Other matters of a more or less general character

Truth Never Dies

Truth never dies. The ages come and go;
The mountains wear away; the seas retire;
Destruction lays earth's mighty cities low;
And empires, states and dynasties expire;
But caught and handed onward by the wise,
Truth never dies.

Though unreceived and scoffed at through the years,
Though made the butt of ridicule and jest,
Though held aloft for mockery and jeers,
Denied by those of transient power possessed,
Insulted by the insolence of lies,
Truth never dies.

It answers not, it does not take offense,
But with a mighty silence bides its time,
As some great cliff that braves the elements
And lifts through all the storm its head sublime.
It ever stands, uplifted by the wise,
And never dies.

As rests the Sphinx amid Egyptian sands,
As looms on high the snowy peak and crest,
As firm as rock-ribbed, stern Gibraltar stands
So truth, unwearied, waits the era blest,
When men shall turn to it with great surprise;
Truth never dies.

The Forward Movement in Edu

By D. W. Kurtz

Chairman of the General Educational Board

THE EDUCATIONAL BOARD has set a goal toward which we ask the church to work with respect to Christian Education in our colleges. The goal that has been set is the minimum,—the very least that is necessary to meet our needs. The more I study the goal, the more I am convinced that it is too low, that it must be interpreted as a minimum, and that we should go as far beyond this "one mile" to the "second mile" as possible.

The Forward Movement means a united effort on the part of the whole church to make progress; it is an effort to do those specific things that must be done in order to meet the needs of the church and the cause of the Kingdom. If we do not make progress, we are guilty of neglect, of burying our talents, and loss and ruin will inevitably result. Growth is the first law of life, and if we do not grow we shall die. Our colleges are under the oversight of the church, and they are largely owned and controlled by the church, but they must grow to meet the new needs of the church and humanity.

The world must be made over, and no problem is settled until it is settled right. No problem is settled right unless it is settled in accordance with God's will. Hence the world must be Christianized. The work of missions and the Sunday-school depends ultimately upon the Christian college for trained leadership. The Christian college is absolutely essential to the missionary enterprise, and the spreading of the Kingdom of God, at home or abroad. There must be a forward movement in the colleges to make a for-

3. Ninety per cent of our s form of regular Bible Study.
4. Twenty per cent of our s life of definite Christian Servic
5. Fifty per cent of our colleg lives to the ministry or mission

Let us examine each of moment.

The first item is: "Thirty-f rolled," would require an inc our present attendance. But thousand Brethren, or childre attending State schools and c nations. Then there are a go to school at all, that shou aided where necessary,—to a church. "At least 60% p courses,"—this would mean a the present college enrollme actly three times as many in t

The second point is: "$300,000 raised annually for five years for endowment." We have ten institutions. That means an average of $30,000 for each institution per year for five years, or an average of $150,000 added to the present endowment of each college. There is not a single college president but will admit that this is very low,—the absolute minimum for efficiency five years hence, and this should be greatly "oversubscribed." The law demands a minimum of $200,000 endowment for a standard college. A few of our colleges have reached this minimum. But this does not spell "efficiency" five years hence, with the world to be Christianized, and a Christian democracy to be created. Until our colleges have reached this minimum, they are not colleges at all. The church must be dead if she is satisfied with this minimum. We must be efficient, and grow to meet the growing needs of the church and the world.

The third point is: "Ninety per cent of the students engaged in regular Bible Study." There are always some "special" students of music or business, etc., who can not be induced to take Bible courses. It is already an almost universal custom of our colleges not to grant a diploma in either the academy or college department without some Bible Study. This is commendable. We wish to urge an increase in this direction. We believe that the church college, that gets its money from the church people, has no right to exist unless religious education is the primary motive of the college. Bible Study is essential for culture, for religion and for democracy. All the regular students should study the Bible in classes for credit. This does not refer to the group studies under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. These associations are doing a great work. But the goal referred to has in mind the required work for graduation.

The fourth point is: "Twenty per cent of the students looking toward a life of definite Christian service." This has reference to that large number of Sunday-school teachers and officers that are needed, to the social settlement workers, Red Cross, etc., that are in every sense in Christian service, but not all of whom are in the class of ministers and missionaries. This, again, is too low, especially if nothing more would be meant than the old type of Sunday-school teacher that met his class on Sunday, but never thought of them through the week. We must raise up an army of laymen who are, first of all, Christians, who willingly dedicate their lives to Christian service of a high order. The church college must give these people the vision and training for the various fields of opportunity that are open everywhere.

The fifth point is: "Fifty per cent of our college graduates dedicating their lives to the ministry or mission work." Of course there have been many classes in the past that have done better than this. There have been classes where every member has either been a minister, a missionary, or the wife of a minister. Where graduating classes are small, this often happens. The past record of the Brethren colleges is most excellent. An investigation, a few years ago, showed that 45% of all the graduates of Brethren colleges are either in the work of the ministry or on the mission field. But the experience of other schools shows that a very small per cent enter this field of service. In some institutions less than 2% of the graduates enter the ministry. Our contention is that the church school must furnish the ministers and missionaries for the future, and it is not too much to ask, upon a larger enrollment, that 50% of the graduates, who will constitute about one-third of one per cent of the church, should give their lives wholly to the cause of the church. If the church college does not furnish these leaders, they will not be forthcoming, and the cause of Christ will suffer.

The goal that has been set for the forward movement during the next five years is necessary and possible. It can be done if the whole church wants it done. Much more can be done and ought to be done. These are the least possible to make us efficient for the task laid upon us by our Lord. Will we be faithful?

Christ's Wisdom in Answering Questions

BY I. J. ROSENBERGER

CHRIST constantly met with inquirers, some of whom were sincere, while others were insincere. At times they sought to tempt Jesus, or to catch him in his words.

PROPOSITION I.—Christ answered all sincere seekers definitely and with care. Matt. 19 records the circumstance of a young ruler who came to Jesus, inquiring the way of eternal life. The evidences were that he was sincere, because: (1) His haste,—"came running." (2) His meekness,—"he kneeled to him." (3) "Jesus beholding him loved him." Jesus quietly quoted the commandments, for they in faith then, as now, are the means of salvation, "for Christ is the author of salvation to all them that obey him." But this young man, like many today, yet doubted his religion; hence, he further inquires: "What lack I yet?" He found out that he had not made sufficient distribution of his goods to the poor. Christ gave this seeker the needed information.

PROPOSITION II.—Christ answered all insincere querists with an evasive answer, or led them to answer their own query. In Luke 13 we have one inquiring: "Lord, are there few that be saved?" The question was irrelevant and insincere. And Jesus passes him by with this needed information: "Strive to enter in at the strait gate; for many, I say unto you, will seek to enter in and shall not be able." This was an evasive answer and bore marks of reproof. Luke 10 records the circumstance of a certain lawyer who came to Jesus, seeking the way of eternal life. As he came, tempting Jesus, he was insincere. Jesus quietly had him to answer his own question by quoting the law. To this Jesus replied: "Thou hast answered right. This do, and thou shalt live." This was followed by a second question: "Who is my neighbor?" Jesus answers by relating the circumstance of a man who was robbed and injured on the road from Jerusalem to Jericho. A priest came that way and then a Levite, but they each "passed by on the other side." But a Samaritan came that way and administered to his needs. Now, says Jesus, "Who was neighbor to him that fell among thieves?" The lawyer answered: "He that shewed him mercy." Jesus replied: "Go, and do thou likewise." Hence this lawyer, being insincere, met with defeat by being quietly led to answer his own question. On this Solomon once says: "Answer a fool according to his folly."

PROPOSITION III.—Christ, in explaining or teaching a doctrine, did it so clearly that he left no grounds for misunderstanding or division of sentiment. The lawyer, referred to in the foregoing, had no trouble to understand Christ as the means of eternal life, after he had quoted the Scriptures to which Christ referred. And the matter, as to who was his neighbor, he had equally clear after Christ had explained it to him. Any child in the fourth grade of common school could have safely answered Christ's questions. And I take pleasure in reciting the facts that Christ's teaching, relating to faith and practice, were all that plain,—so much so that we are all to speak the same thing. We are represented as being framed, builded, joined and knit together, without divisions. Christ's body is a corporate entity, and as such can not be divided. When Christ came to Peter with a basin and towel, Peter made some inquiry. To this Christ replied: "What I do thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter." After Christ had given them the example of the service desired, telling them what, and showing them how, there were no grounds left for a misunderstanding, and there are no grounds for a misunderstanding now. I venture the statement that every minister in the land, with myself, understands that Christ, in the communion service, washed his disciples' feet, and ate a meal with the twelve. After that he gave them his body and blood, in the symbols of the loaf and fruit of the vine. These were given after supper. While they can not help but understand alike what Christ said and did, they do not believe the record, hence dismiss it at pleasure, and do otherwise. The ancient priests were to make fringes upon the borders of their garments, and upon those fringes was to be a ribbon of blue. On this point there could be no misunderstanding. Under the Gospel we are forbidden to wear gold. There can be no misunderstanding in this clear prohibition. Many, however, baptized by trine immersion, wear gold,—not because they can not understand the Scriptural teaching, but because they don't believe the Divine Record. Hence those who wear gold,—however trivial it may seem to them under the wayward teaching received,—inevitably stand as violators of the Divine Statute. "For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all."

"Mere-Worm" Christians

BY GALEN B. ROYER

You have met and talked with them. In their public prayers, they who thus exercise have about the same series of expressions each time, and usually designate themselves, and every one about them, as "mere worms of the dust," and their lives, in too many instances, are in perfect accord with their characterization. The description is not poetical with them, but in contrast with their privileges is all too real. They live on the husks of Christianity and never bite deep enough to get a mouthful of golden grain. They may not be prodigal sons in a far country, but they are as far from intimate fellowship with the Father as if they were not in their Father's house at all. They dwell on the formal and external, look pious after their ideals of outward righteousness, and find fault with those who have a feast of good things at the Gracious Hand of the same Father. They insist that worship must be "at Jerusalem," but do not realize that it "MUST be in spirit and in truth."

They are always dwelling on their sins, cares and difficulties. Once, a long time ago, they went to the cross with their guilt, and had a most joyous forgiveness. They saw into the Kingdom of heaven (John 3: 3), but they have long since lapsed, and their eyes, thoughts, and all, are centered upon their wretched self. They never rise above their troubles, trials and shortcomings any more.

Now this is not the way the Lord would have Christians live. He meant for us to be "meek and inherit the earth" (Matt. 5: 5), but he did not mean that we should think or call ourselves "mere worms." We might have been justly characterized as such before we put on Christ Jesus, but we, who have been "buried with Christ in baptism" (Rom. 6: 4), are not expected to remain in our former condition even in our own estimation. "Like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life." Christians are called "sons and daughters," "priests," and such other noble, glorified terms.

In our new life we have no more right to think meanly of ourselves than we would be able to think thus of our Lord. Can the "Elder Brother" be pleased when the adopted sons and daughters think of themselves as "mere worms"? Never!

Nature teaches us better than this. After the long winter,—the very symbol of death,—has passed, nature puts forth her bursting bud and unfolding leaf. All nature takes on the delicate and pleasing hue of fresh new green. Delighted and buoyed up, we exclaim: "New life." The caterpillar goes forth in its groveling estate as a "mere worm." Who enjoys looking at it? One day, however, from that chrysalis comes a butterfly, with wings large, bright and beautiful! Spreading them, it soars off towards heaven,—the very expression of liberty and joy! This, too, is the new life. What stranger and more unnatural thing could happen than that the butterfly should crawl along as its former self, the "mere worm," did!

The privilege of rising to things above is not only freely given to each one, but we are urged to live in the upper currents of God's love and goodness. "If [or perhaps more accurately, since] then ye were raised together with Christ, seek the things which are above" (Col. 3: 1). Christ's death set us free from the bondage and slavery of sin, and the responsibility is all the more upon us, since "risen," that we "seek those things which are above."

A sacred writer says: "Man's ways are not God's ways," and that may account for the former constantly putting things backwards, from the way the Father would have them. Had man written, he would have said: "Seek the things that are above, so that we may rise with Christ." Man places obedience first and reward last, while the largeness of the All-Father heart places blessing and reward first, and obedience to follow because of it. What joyous obedience it is, that is the outgrowth of gratitude for salvation freely given!

Hence it is not by seeking heavenly things that we attain to the risen life. By "reckoning ourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God" (Rom. 6: 11), we place ourselves, through faith, on the right side of the cross, and free from the power of sin and corruption. Thereby we walk in the newness of life.

Why did Christ die? Did he endure the cross and despise the shame, in order that we might grovel on earth as "mere worms,"—full of the corruption of hidden sin, and with hearts foul and evil? Is it intended that we should fix our hearts and fill our lives with the pleasures and gains of this world, seeking its riches and glories, ease and comforts? Did our Lord deprive himself of home, fill his life with hardship, toil and suffering that we might forget all these, and struggle for wealth as so many do who live and act like "mere worms"? Did Christ die as a malefactor "despised and rejected of men" (Isa. 53: 3), to teach us to hold a good name among men, to dally and compromise with sin, with greed, with gain, with power, so that we might hold position and distinction?

What a disappointed Savior he must be when he beholds those who outwardly died unto sin through baptism, still clinging to earth's tinsel and trash, fearing the censure of men, and compromising, in every way, their convictions concerning eternal things, neglecting the "infinitely weightier realities of eternity, and souls, and God"! At any rate, how really disappointed the Father has a right to be over these "bere-worm" Christians, these so-called followers of his who never show the power of the resurrection in their lives! Men of the world launch some new business enterprise. They put a lot of money into it because they expect good returns. What is their keen disappointment if the returns should not come!

The Heavenly Father, nearly two thousand years ago, launched a great salvation scheme for the world, and put all the capital of heaven (John 3: 16) into it. He thrust forth from heaven its greatest Treasure to redeem sinful man.

> "I gave my life for thee,
> What hast thou given to me?"

What return of love are we giving the Father for his investment in our salvation? "Mere-worm" Christians surely are not giving anything in return, for they are not walking in "newness of life." They fail to have "fellowship with God" (1 John 1: 3, 7), victory over sin (Rom. 6: 17), and joy in service, and until these are found, the Savior is not, can not be satisfied with the travail of his soul on Calvary (Isa. 53: 11).

Ah, my brother and sister, as long as we cling to earth, chained to its temptations, and fouled with sin's bondage and filth, burdened and weighed down by its anxieties, cares and fears, perhaps laboring in all outward appearances for the Master, but finding none of the joys of success in his Name, we may be sure we are still in the worm stage, rather than in the butterfly life. How much better it would be, were we who live on the resurrection side of the cross, to know that the

This victorious new life should bear its constant message in our lives as

> "In Christ I touch the hand of God,
> From his pure height reached down,
> By blessed ways before untrod,
> To lift us to our crown;
> Victory that only perfect is > Through loving sacrifice, like his."

Conquered by Kindness

2 Kings 6: 8-23

BY JAMES M. MOORE

In all the history of the north ten tribes of Israel, from the division of the Kingdom to the carrying away into captivity by Assyria, not one righteous king is mentioned. This fact is disappointing.

Occasionally, however, there was a king who responded to right sufficiently to open the way for God in a measure to manifest his power. Meager though these responses were, still through them we have received some most important lessons. It is impossible for us to conceive what a glorious history might have been Israel's had her rulers given God a chance to perform all his desire.

Syria's Invasion

It was likely under the reign of Jehoram, though his name is not mentioned in direct connection with the narrative. Syria was a nation to the northeast, which for years had been a constant menace to the north ten tribes.

At this time they were waging war against Israel, and time after time had laid their plans to trap and capture Israel's king. In each case they had failed, and their leader was convinced that somewhere was one who was acting as a spy for the enemy.

He called a council of his men, and demanded the identity of the traitor. In explanation he was told of the work of Elisha, the prophet, who was informing the king of Israel of the very words spoken in secret. This so enraged the Syrian king that he determined to take the prophet at any cost.

Led into a Trap

Elisha was in Dothan, and in the morning, when his servant arose, he saw a host of Syrian horses and chariots about the city. In his extremity he exclaimed: "Alas, my master! how shall we do?"

At the prayer of the prophet the servant's eyes were opened, and he saw the mountain full of the horses and chariots of God, ready to protect. Another prayer by the prophet, and the soldiers were smitten with blindness.

Elisha promised to lead the army to the man they were seeking. They were in pursuit of the king of Israel, and hence were led to the capital city of Samaria.

The prophet was working in close touch with Jehovah, and prayed that the men he had led might now be permitted to see. Their eyes were opened, and they found themselves in the very presence of the king of Israel, but absolutely at his mercy.

Coals of Fire

It was the opportunity for Israel's king, and in his impatient haste and intense zeal he broke forth: "My father, shall I smite them? shall I smite them?" Scarcely could he restrain himself until he received the reply.

The prophet, however, forbade violence, and called attention to the fact that captives taken in battle would not be killed. "Set bread and water before them," were the instructions, "that they may eat and drink, and go to their master."

Years before, the wise proverb writer had given

THE ROUND TABLE

Good-bye, Old Year

BY MYRA WELCH

Good-bye, Old Year! You've brought us naught but sorrow.
Naught but sorrow? Ah, when you were old,
Athwart the darkened page, there fell
A dash of joy,—a gleam of gold,—
And nations yet unborn will hold
You in remembrance for that hour.

But, oh, the countless prayers that have been offered,
The countless alms that have been proffered,
The countless graves that hide the dead,
The countless tears that have been shed,
And cannon's roar and shot and shell,
And all the dark despair of hell
With pain and grief, and many a withered flower,
Are buried in your heart,—farewell!

When you were young we greeted you with joy and laughter,
But yet there hung a shadow o'er our mirth.
Perhaps you knew the hotter fires that flamed soon after
Were being kindled at your birth.
Perhaps you knew that hate and rage
So soon would mar the fair white page.—
Ah, well, good-bye, Old Year, to you,
We'll turn our faces toward the new.

Good-bye! Of all the years, you've been the longest,
If time be reckoned by our suffering and tears,
But with the tolling of the bells
That marks your death, a joyous clangor tells
Another year is born, and music swells upon the breeze.
He brings a cheerful, smiling face;
Upon his brow no shadow lies,
No trace of sadness in his eyes.
He brings the dawn of peace, a promise for the morrow,
That brings to us a sweet release
From all our doubts and fears and sorrow.

Old Year, no need to blush in shame,
It may be your were not to blame
That all the woe and all the tears
And all the hate and greed of years,
Should culminate within your breast.
It may be . . . it was . . . for the best.
God knows, and future years will tell,
But now we gladly say, Farewell,
Old Year, to you,
And turn our faces toward the new.

"Whom Seek Ye?"

BY S. S. W. HAMMERS

THERE was something about this question that terrified men. When Christ saw the men looking around among the olive trees for some one, he said to them: "Whom seek ye?" They answered: "We seek Jesus of Nazareth." He replied: "I am he." There was something about his reply that terrified them, for they trembled and fell to the ground.

Those hands that had wrought so many wonderful miracles, those hands that had often been raised to bless the disciples, were bound. It was then that Peter drew his sword, and cut off the ear of the high priest's servant. Jesus compassionately healed the wound at once. He would not let the man suffer. Christ did not come to earth to destroy life. He came to save fallen man. The Son of God was crucified at the hands of his rebellious creatures. He came to his own, and his own received him not. They chose a murderer, and crucified the Son of God. Thereby Satan became the god of this age (2 Cor. 4: 4).

What do the people of this twentieth century think? "Whom seek ye?" Are we not, like Judas,—more willing to sell Jesus than to serve him? Judas went to the Sanhedrin and to the chief priests, saying unto them: "What will ye give me? . . . And they covenanted with him for thirty pieces of silver." We hear Christian men and women say today: "That was a small amount." But how many, just now, are selling Christ for much less than Judas? There are millions of men and women today, professing to be followers of Christ, who are selling him for a little pleasure at the card table, at dances, at shows, theaters, secret societies, clubs, baseball games, moving picture shows, or other worldly and popular amusements.

Now, brethren, let us know nothing but Christ Jesus. Let the world see that we seek only him. Let us face this tremendous crisis of the twentieth century with a decision to walk in the steps of those who followed our Lord by the way of the Cross.

Having forsaken the world and entered another Kingdom, our concern should be for its purity and its development. We have a great task before us, to deal with the sin that is creeping into the church. We must teach and exhort and give loving admonitions. At times, reproof should be resorted to, and sometimes righteous indignation must be shown. Note the bold attitude of Jesus in the temple. Let us so live that the world can see whom we seek!

My Inheritance

BY JAMES A. OSTERWISE

I THINK we all know what an inheritance is. An inheritance is something that is left to us by some one. In this life we may inherit a great many things. Some people inherit weak and feeble bodies; some, impaired minds; some, bad habits; some, criminal traits. On the other hand, some inherit an inclination to do and be good.

Very much depends on the person who left us our inheritance. For example, look at Cain, who seemed to have inherited and fostered the worst traits of his parents, and slew his brother. Or look at Samuel, who had a good mother, and note his noble life. We could find many more, but time and space do not permit.

Then, too, very much depends on how we use our inheritance. We all know how the prodigal son, in Luke 15: 11, misused his inheritance. Very often this is the case, even today.

Abraham inherited land. Solomon inherited the throne. You and I can inherit the Kingdom prepared for us, if we come to God, the Father, and become his sons (Matt. 25: 34).

If we follow in the footsteps of our Elder Brother, Jesus, we shall inherit eternal life (Matt. 19: 29). Jesus said he was going to prepare a home for all who would love and serve him, a home of wondrous beauty, too grand for finite mind to picture,—a home where there is no sickness, no pain, no tears, no sighing, no death or parting, and where a good-bye is never known, but where all is peace and joy,—not for a little while, as here below, but lasting throughout eternity. God said, through John, that the home above is one of light, where we will have no need of sun, moon, or stars; neither any other light, for Jesus is the Light of it. There will be no night there. This is the inheritance left me by my Heavenly Father.

In conclusion, let me ask you to share this inheritance with me. Today, if you hear his voice, harden not your heart. Jesus says: "Come unto me and I will give you rest. And the Spirit and the bride say, Come. And let him that heareth say, Come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely."

Thinking Seriously

BY J. C. FLORA

GREAT battles have been fought in Europe. Great battles have been fought in the bosoms of mothers who have given their sons. Great battles are to be fought around the Peace Table. And still greater battles are being fought behind closed doors, as men and women everywhere are analyzing their own hearts in relation to the problems of life. One striking result of the war has been that men are thinking seriously. Serious thought means well-directed effort.

In pre-war times many were spending their years as a tale that is told. At present we are counting the cost. We are reading the signs of the times. We are taking life seriously. Selfishness and personal aggrandizement are being minimized. We are seeing great opportunities for service. We begin to see the Christian religion in its right perspective. The brotherhood of man is being translated into new terms. The great doctrines of the Atonement, the Resurrection and the Second Coming of Christ have been given new meaning.

"As a man thinketh in his heart so is he," may be said of nations as well as of individuals. Grave thinking comes as a result of being called upon to make the big sacrifice. This old World has been trembling beneath the sacrifice of life and blood. During the reconstruction she must tremble beneath the great sacrifice of national ambition on the one hand, and the feeding of a hungry world on the other. The task and responsibility, just ahead of us, will demand just as great sacrifice as during the war. The winning of the world for democracy and Jesus Christ means a great sacrifice for years to come. Keep the great need before you. The need can only be met by sacrifice. The people of the world will only make the sacrifice as they think seriously of the realities of life. The greatest battles are not fought on the battle-field. The greatest victories are not won in the open, but behind closed doors, in our moments of meditation and prayer, the greatest battles are fought. "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honorable, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report: if there be any virtue and if there be any praise, think on these things" (Philpp. 4: 8).

God Himself Our Ground for Gratitude

BY RALPH G. RARICK

WE have recently observed what Dr. James M. Ludlow calls "our annual time for saying grace at the table of eternal goodness," or Thanksgiving Day. The people throughout the land were, according to custom, invited by our President, in his Thanksgiving Proclamation, "to cease upon that day from their ordinary occupations and in their several homes and places of worship to render thanks to God."

The writer does not, for a moment, question that almost everybody made that day for themselves at least a bit extraordinary. But his writing, under the above caption, is prompted by the certain knowledge that some there are among us who, because outward circumstances have brought on adversity, have been and are still sincerely soliloquizing: "Where, poor soul of mine, is your ground for gratitude?"

Many of us have not been nonplussed for a lack of conscious reasons for thanksgiving. Nay verily! If there has arisen a puzzling situation with us, it is, rather, in wonderment that our year's journey could be of such smooth traveling, and why we should be made the recipients of such a grand total of highly abounding favors. We have had plenty to eat; our tables are laden. There is meat in the larder and grain in the granary. We have had sufficient to wear, and of our substance there was some to spare. The family circle has remained unbroken, and there is no perceptible languor because of sickness. Thanks be to God!

Albeit, great as the afore-named blessings are, and as much as they ought to augment our thanksgiving, they are much dependent, nevertheless, on exterior conditions, and they constitute not the rock bottom reason for gratitude. If they did, then our writing would necessarily be without much encouragement for those of our comrades in life, whose traveling is rugged and who are poor in physical comforts. As it is, triumphant gratitude stretches like a glorious rainbow over the empty meal barrel, the bare table and the desolate home. Aye, it arches the vacant chair and the fresh mound in the white-capped city of the dead.

In the realm of the invisible, it is fastened steadfast and sure on the ever-living and ever-loving God himself.

In a certain home, overseas, the mother was left alone, save for the presence of her little daughter. The husband and two sons had been snatched from her by the call of arms. At the outset, though, she resolved to be of good courage, and in the spirit of other mothers in her land she clothed herself, hoping that all would go well and that those she cherished would some day return. She would "keep the home fires burning."

But one day, soon afterward, as this mother searched most carefully, almost breathlessly, the bulletin board of casualties, she found sad news concerning a loved one. Tears flooded her eyes at the moment, and not until the surgings within had somewhat subsided, could she be sure. Yes, it was her son,—her first-born,—sacrificed! For him she mourned, and as truly as did David for Absalom, though not for as long. The thought came to her aid that other mothers, many of them, were passing through this same valley of sorrow and sacrifice. She would be brave!

But a second time she passed into the valley. Again a son was numbered with the dead. Her passage through this second affliction was fraught with more difficulty, and she succeeded only partially in regaining her sorely-taxed fortitude.

But all energies broke down at last, beneath the weight of a third bereavement. That which she feared had come upon her. The news that her loving husband, the mate of her own heart, had also given his life, completely overwhelmed her. No more would he write letters, nor would he ever return home. It left her broken-hearted. What had she to live for, or to be grateful for now? With such feelings of wretchedness breaking in upon her life, she sank and sobbed despairingly.

Then it was that her little daughter, in childish sympathy, drew near, put her arms around her mother's neck, and gently asked: "Mama, is God dead?" Ah, that artless question was as if an angel had spoken to her. It was as cheering to her grief-stricken soul as the sun's rays to one coming out of a dark room. "No, child," she replied, between ebbing sobs, "God is not dead. Your mama had forgotten that." A little child was leading, and when the mother looked beyond her just reasons for sorrow, she experienced a regenerated gratitude, founded on the Loving Almighty, in whom "we live, and move, and have our being."

So may we learn, dear Lord, that, in the midst of whatever may befall us, we do not consider ourselves in a class exempt from thanksgiving or thanksliving. May we understand that, while some of us have fewer items to be thankful for than others, there is always, for all of us, the abiding basic reason for gratitude,—that of thyself!

National or International

BY A. V. SAGER

ABRAHAM was the father of a great and virile nation. God does not will that the descendants of a man of such marvelous moral and spiritual caliber should sink into oblivion in a decade. They are the salt of the earth. They do not only preserve, but they construct,—they build. They are the force that makes for righteousness and purity. It was this blood that flowed through the veins of the kings, seers and prophets of Israel, and culminated in that greatest of all prophets,—Jesus of Nazareth. On the hills and in the valleys of Mesopotamia the seed was sown that was to germinate, grow, blossom and ripen, and, eventually, spread over all the earth. Abraham had the elements of an executive, a diplomat and prophet combined, the full stature of a king without a kingdom, a sojourner among a strange people, but respected and honored because of his open-hearted frankness, his unselfish devotion to right and square dealing.

Witness the mutual agreement between him and Abimelech,—a sort of reciprocity, international or interracial in a straight business transaction. We have no evidence that the covenant was ever infringed upon or broken by either. Then, too, his kind but firm regard for the rights of others, his generosity in the division of life. There were no get-rich-quick schemes, no profiteering, no monopolizing to take advantage of the common people. Notably there are two forces that operate to disturb the national and international equilibrium,—physical and economic. The latter is the most dangerous because it is the most insidious, the most treacherous. It works under cover. It reaches out its thousand tentacles. It enslaves, crushes and mangles. It brooks no opposition. The world is its field. We talk glibly about military despotism; but the so-called business autocrat is more to be feared because he holds in his hand the instrument that can make for peace or create war. It is, however, generally held up under the camouflage of national prosperity.

There is a persistent pleading, from some sources, for a more national solidarity. Is it a repetition of the Bismarck dream for a more united Germany, so we can dominate the physical and economic policies of the world? One of the principal causes of the late war was the mad and insane national spirit that had been woven into the woof and warp of Germany's social and political life. Egotism and self-aggrandizement had so distorted her mind that she considered herself invincible before all the world. Now she lies torn and bleeding,—a sad spectacle and a lesson for us,—afflicted with racial and national vanity.

A certain critic says that Mr. Roosevelt's analogy is not correct when he puts the internationalist on a level with a "man who loves all other women as much as he does his wife." He says that "one may change his country as he does his city without shame." He gives this definition: "An internationalist is one who, while he loves his country, perceives that above all nations is humanity." And again: "The internationalist must have a higher sense of honor than the mere nationalist, and not encourage any gain for his country which means injustice or injury to the world."

Standards

BY EARL L. FLORA

AMONG the different standards and regulations, set up by our Government, none are of quite so much interest to the farmers of northern Minnesota, as those governing the grading of potatoes. There are two tests which they must pass before being classed as "U. S. standard grade number one." First the potatoes must pass over a screen of the required mesh, to insure being of the specified size. Then they must be free from scab, cuts and other defects. Only five per cent may be defective in number one grade. Many farmers are losing much of their crop this season because it can not stand the test.

As we watch the sorter at work, separating the number one grade from the culls, we are reminded of another standard, long established, which concerns every kind and condition of the human race. When King Immanuel was here on earth, he set up a standard very similar to that by which the potatoes are tested. He expects us to reach a certain size in Christian growth and development. When the potatoes are screened, they use a different mesh for those of different growth,—one for long, slender varieties, another for the round. This is just Christ's plan, as outlined in the parable of the talents. Each must meet the test according to his individual powers. He knows what our strength is, and though we may deceive ourselves and our fellow-men by saying: "I can't," we can not deceive him. We must use the powers and talents he gives us, and he will select the screen on which to test us.

But how about the scabby and defective ones? Christ's standard is more rigid than that of our Government. They allow five per cent of defects. He the undersized, scabby, sinsick, a less life and, by his regenerating to one that is pure, noble and us

How about it, unconverted sou test as grade number one? Has its scabs on you? The blood of it whiter than the snow. Has fork left scars or open cuts on y of Christ can heal them and t being. Like the rejected potat formed into a new life, whose yond human comprehension.

How about it, professing Chr over the screen? Can you stan judgment? Can you meet the grade number one?

AMONG THE CHURCHES

CALENDAR FOR SUNDAY, JANUARY 5

Sunday-school Lesson. Pharaoh Oppresses Israel.—Ex. 1: 1-14; 2: 1-25.

Christian Workers' Meeting. Our Watchword for the New Year.—Matt. 1: 23b.

GAINS FOR THE KINGDOM

One was recently baptized in the Brick church, Va.

Two were recently baptized in the White Oak church, Ohio.

One has been baptized in the West Goshen church, Ind., since the last report.

Fifteen confessed Christ in the Eversole church, Ohio,—Bro. R. N. Leatherman, of Cincinnati, evangelist.

Thirty-three confessed Christ in the church at Canton, Ill.—Bro. J. Edwin Jarboe, of Chicago, evangelist.

One confessed Christ in the Wakarusa church, Ind.,—Bro. John Appleman, of Nappanee, same State, evangelist.

Four confessed Christ in the Beech Grove church, Ind.,—Bro. Wm. L. Hatcher, of Rossville, same State, evangelist.

Nine confessed Christ in the Mechanicsburg house, Lower Cumberland church, Pa.,—Bro. H. S. Gipe, of Hershey, Pa., evangelist.

Three were baptized and one was restored in the Washington City church, D. C.,—Bro. J. M. Henry, home minister, evangelist.

Three were baptized and one restored to fellowship at the Crowson church, seven miles west of Lawrenceburg, Tenn.,—Bro. R. C. Edwards, of Jonesboro, same State, evangelist.

CONTEMPLATED MEETINGS

Bro. J. Edwin Jarboe, of Chicago, to begin Jan. 5 in the Ottumwa church, Iowa.

Bro. Chas. Bonsack, of New Windsor, Md., to begin Jan. 1 in the church at Nappanee, Ind.

Bro. Stover Kulp, of New Enterprise, Pa., to begin about Feb. 1 in the Smithfield church, same State.

Bro. Warren Slabaugh, of Wenatchee, Wash., to begin a Bible Institute about Jan. 1 in the East Wenatchee church, Wash.; Bro. Paul Mohler, of Minneapolis, Minn., will conduct a series of meetings at the same time.

PERSONAL MENTION

Bro. Wm. Bixler has changed his address from Ellet, Ohio, to R. D. 21, Box 44½, East Akron, same State.

Bro. S. M. Annon, formerly of R. D. 1, Box 18 A, Montrose, W. Va., should now be addressed at R. D. 1, Box 26, Thornton, same State.

Bro. Hiram Forney, 555 W. Lincoln Avenue, Goshen, Ind., has arranged to give some time to evangelistic meetings this winter. Churches desiring his assistance in this work should communicate with him as soon as possible.

From the Bridgewater College "Bulletin" we learn that Bro. Paul H. Bowman, of the college faculty, and formerly President of Blue Ridge College, has been elected President of Bridgewater College, to succeed President John S. Flory, resigned. It has been known for some time, by his intimate friends, that Bro. Flory greatly desired to be relieved of the administrative duties which he has so efficiently performed for the past ten years. In March, 1917, his resignation was tendered the Board of Trustees but declined. The Board has at length yielded to his insistence. Dr. Flory's future plans have not been announced, but the Board has urged him to remain with the college as head of the Department of English. Dr. Bowman, it appears, has not yet indicated his final acceptance of the new responsibilities imposed upon him, making this contingent upon certain other matters. He has, however, consented to direct the impending campaign for the completion of the endowment fund.

MISCELLANEOUS

The Olympia church, Wash., announces her love feast for Jan 4.

The Bible Institute at Sebring, Fla., with Bro. A. C. Wieand in charge, is to begin on Monday morning, Feb. 10, to continue two or more weeks.

Important Notice.—The Bible Institute, which was planned to be held at Elizabethtown College Jan. 10-17, has been recalled on account of the uncertain health conditions at Elizabethtown and surrounding communities.—H. K. Ober

The Salem church, N. Dak., has demonstrated the practicability of setting apart a certain number of acres for the use of the church farming it to the best advantage, and then devoting the net proceeds to religious purposes. The eighty acres, thus utilized, yielded a net profit of $914. Here is a plan that, in some of the country congregations, at least, might be made to work most admirably. It would afford an opportunity for a united effort, truly worth while.

"I believe it is your good pleasure to assist freely in the finances of the church as the Lord has prospered you," says a recent pastoral letter, among other good things. Is that your "good pleasure"? Some Christians do not enjoy this part of their church life.

The Loramie church, Ohio, will be in a position to employ a pastor after March 1, 1919. The present incumbent, Bro. Ira H. Frantz, has resigned from that work, expecting to take up pastoral duties in Kansas, his old home. Any minister who may feel like assuming the pastorate of the church above named, may address Bro. L. C. McCorkle, Dawson, Ohio.

A brother, while referring to the activities of an eastern congregation, says: "The Local Missionary Committee is creating some very favorable sentiment for home missions." The incidental remark of the brother calls attention to the fact that a Local Missionary Committee has the opportunity of doing untold good by way of creating renewed interest and activity in missions, if it will but make the proper effort. In most congregations good leadership along right lines will do wonders, and this applies in a special way to the cause of missions.

The "Lebanon Report," a newspaper published at Lebanon, Pa., had, in its issue for Dec. 23, a very interesting and considerate account of a baptismal service by the Brethren in that city, on the previous Sunday. The pool in the Baptist Church was used for the occasion, by the courtesy of the Baptist people. The paper quotes, at some length, remarks made by Bro. J. G. Francis in explanation of the face-forward, threefold action practiced by the Brethren. The whole account is written in a sympathetic spirit and describes the service as very impressive.

Vital religious belief is not a something that is manufactured by teachers or ministers. It is born in the hearts of men. Some men say: "I believe in religion but I don't believe in the church." The fact remains that they can not have real religion without organization. True religioo is a social force. No man can be religious alone. There must be the dual relationship to God and to man. The church is man's expression of his religious life and instincts. It is the organization, instituted by Divine Authority, to permit man to serve best, for true religion means service. We must not forget that man's greatest need is spiritual, and that the church is the organization which has been created to satisfy this need. This, of itself, justifies the existence of the church. In order to fulfill its Heaven-ordained purpose, the church must direct religion so that it will be of social value. It is the business of the church to save souls,—not merely those of its own immediate narrow circle, but those of the great world field.

The following words, taken from resolutions adopted Dec. 12 by the Executive Committee of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, will surely meet with a hearty response among all readers of the "Gospel Messenger": "In all our churches and Christian homes let us devoutly implore our Heavenly Father that his Spirit may guide the counselors at the Peace Conference to the end that with divine wisdom they may draft those common agreements and covenants for the nations by which justice and fair dealing may be secured in the institutions and practices of international life. Let us pray that the nations with which we have been at war, in overthrowing their military autocracies, may not pass into atheistic anarchy. Let us pray that rulers and leaders may place the welfare of the world above any private interest of individual or nation. Let us pray that God's Kingdom may come in the widest relations of men, and that his will may be done in all the earth, even as it is done in heaven."

A BYSTANDER'S NOTES

The Business of the Laity.—As we remember it, Chas. H. Spurgeon, the celebrated London clergyman, used to say that "it is the business of the preacher to fill the pulpit, but that it is the business of the laity to fill the pews." The great preacher meant that every church member should attend services regularly, and should bring as many others as possible. There has never been such a thing as an empty church while all the laymembers did their duty.

The Church That Wins.—In last week's issue we suggested some questions on congregational efficiency. This week we present an enumeration of some leading essentials that will enable the church to be a real power in the community: It must aim high, keep out of the ruts, and attempt large-sized tasks. It must send grumblers and persistent fault-finders to the rear, until they learn to cooperate with the workers. It must make much of the young people,—the future workers of the church. It must acquire the "handshaking habit." It must remember the poor, as scripturally enjoined. It must build up a wide-awake midweek prayer meeting. It must circulate inspiring religious literature. It must inspire the shirkers to real service. It must do the Lord's business along business lines. It must secure the spiritual uplift of many family altars. It must be permeated by the spirit of heroic self-denial. It must spread the fervor of the "Amen corner" all over the meetinghouse. It must insist on the best things for the Sunday-school. It must forget the minister's shortcomings by a just appreciation of his faithful labors. It must illustrate Christian hospitality in its most exalted Scriptural sense. It must be loyal to the revivals as they come from year to year, but pastor and members must bear in mind that if this world is ever to be redeemed, it must be accomplished by the irresistible power of personal conquest.

Adapting Church Methods to Present Day Needs.—Reports from churches everywhere seem to indicate that the new conditions, created at home and abroad by the late war, necessitate special adaptations in ways and means, in order that the spiritual needs of the masses may be adequately provided for. There has never been a time, perhaps, in the history of Christianity, that offered such marvelous opportunities for real service. While Gospel principles never change, methods may have to be modified to render the mission of the church most effective.

One of our eastern churches has launched out on a move of considerable significance. A transportation committee has been appointed for the specific purpose of making sure that members without a conveyance are provided with a way of getting to the love feast services. That is a splendid plan, so far as the love feast is concerned, but why not broaden out a little, to take in at least some of the other meetings? In some way the aged and infirm should be given an opportunity to be present at most of the sanctuary services. Who can suggest a plan by which this most desirable result can be attained efficiently and systematically? We will be glad to publish any suggestion along the line above indicated.

Elizabeth Fry's Rules.—The saintly character of this old-time Quaker lady has often been commented upon by her biographers. When asked, at one time, about some good resolutions for the new year, she suggested the following, which truly are well worth while: "(1) Never lose time. Do not think those hours lost which are spent in healthful recreation, but make it thy habit always to be usefully employed. (2) Never err the least in truth. (3) Never say an ill word about a person when thou canst say a good thing about him. Not only speak charitably, but feel so. (4) Never be irritable or unkind to anybody. Thou wilt be the one most injured. (5) Never indulge thyself in luxuries. Thou art the Lord's steward. (6) Do all things after prayerful consideration, and when thy path to act right is difficult, put confidence in the Supreme Power which alone is able to assist thee. Never forget, however, to exercise thine own powers as far as they go."

One Way of Selecting a Pastor.—When a congregation entrusts the tentative selection of a pastor to a committee, it imposes a task of no slight magnitude. To save disappointment later on, no one can find fault with a congregation because it wants to know all about a pastor before securing his services. It is the business of the committee to find out all it possibly can. This is the way one committee inquired of the people who had been given as references:

"Give us a line on his personality in and out of the pulpit. What pastorates has he had and their length? What family has he? His age and birthplace? His height and weight? What success has he had with young people, Sunday-school and the men of his church? What are his views on missions? Does he love people better than books? Would he be an inspiration to young men and young women in their individual development? What is his type of preaching? Does he preach Christ or Emerson? What is the size of his present church, congregation, Sunday-school and young people's society? What are his weaknesses? Does he take any interest in the finances of the church? What salary is he getting? Does his wife in any way detract from his ability?"

These questions may, perhaps, cut fairly close to the line of purely personal qualifications, and yet a fair and unbiased examination will reveal them to be of considerable significance.

On the Threshold of the New Year.—As the Bystander writes these lines, the old year is drawing to a close. How very much like a strange dream it seems! How the shadows of the past rise before us to warn or to bless, as we who live traced our acts on the hard steel of memory's imperishable tablet! Over the land lies a mantle of snow,—white as the forgiveness of God,—teaching man the most beautiful of all lessons, that perfect love covers all failings. We say, "Happy New Year," and hope that our fervent wish may indeed be realized. We trust that brighter days may be in store for the world than those experienced in the year which has left on the heart so many and varied pictures of distress, death, sorrow and anguish. How many the changes one brief year has wrought! There are pictures on memory's tablet that each one may well recall. Who of us has been true to his vows, his promises, and all that is best and holiest? God only knows. The beautiful picture we began to paint one year ago is marred by too many blots and blemishes. There is gloom where we meant to have radiance. There are tears where there should have been smiles. As we enter the portals of the new year, we may well take the forward look, and endeavor to make it a year of better things. Strive for the open-hearted liberality that lifts man to a higher plane, and gives abundant means to every phase of church activity! Let us go forth, to battle bravely with the problems of life, having more of God and less of selfishness in our hearts!

AROUND THE WORLD

The National Missionary Society of India

The society named above has just issued its twelfth annual report. It is the primary object of this organization to evangelize those districts of India where no missionary work of any sort is being carried on. Such an endeavor is most praiseworthy, as it takes care df many points that would otherwise be wholly neglected. At the present time fourteen native Indian missionaries are engaged most assiduously in this work. Three of these men are doctors, and all are well educated. Five additional workers are being trained, and arrangements are being made, still further to extend the activities of this most worthy movement.

New Openings in China

At this time 1,700 walled cities of China, as well as thousands of smaller centers and market towns are for the first time really open to the missionaries. According to a leading authority on Chinese affairs, this is due to a series of international events, which have caused Chinese leaders to realize the impotence of their traditional cults. Missionaries regard this as a strategic situation, offering a rare opportunity to reach people of the better class. Special efforts are being put forth to meet the issue at hand. While this involves the application of methods, differing from those hitherto employed, the best of hopes are entertained that many persons of influence in the community may be gained.

Appalling Figures

According to investigations of the Statistician of the Prudential Life Insurance Company, more than 500,000 Americans have committed suicide since 1776. More suicides occur in the spring than during any other part of the year. Men are more prone to lay violent hands upon themselves than women. Between the years 1911 and 1915 nearly 39,500 males and about 11,000 females died by their own hands. Regardless of the fact that self-destruction has become almost a daily occurrence in the large centers of population, the subject has received but little consideration from church or state. Sociologists claim that most cases of suicide are due to the absolute lack of religious convictions, and a consequent disbelief in a hereafter.

A Wise Factory Owner

The Japanese owner of a spool silk factory, though not a Christian himself, has well-defined ideas as to congenial influences for his workers. Requesting two missionaries to give regular talks to his employés, he frankly admitted that he had no faith in Buddhism. Two priests of that cult had come once a week to talk to his workers, but the personal life of these men was even more questionable than their preaching. He arranged with the mission workers for an hour's worship each evening,—to this end closing his factory an hour earlier, each day, than usual. His trust in the efficacy of the missionaries' efforts was fully justified. Greater industry and faithfulness, as well as better morals were clearly apparent. "Godliness is profitable in all things."

The Uplift of the Filipino

One of the most striking evidences of the marvelous transformation of a savage people, is seen in the present status of the Philippine Islands, as compared with their former estate. "Unele Sam," strongly reinforced by the ever faithful missionaries, has done wonders for the Filipinos. The excellent public school system has been a great power, and will do still more in the future. Improved methods of farming have been brought within reach of the native agriculturists, and the results so far attained are most gratifying. Religiously, also, much progress has been made. Though Protestant missionaries have labored on the islands only since the United States has been in control, they are succeeding most admirably in arousing the natives to higher ideals.

Authentic Information

Immediately upon the signing of the Armistice, the publishers of the "Chicago Daily Tribune" took steps to secure first-hand information about actual conditions in Germany, by sending Mr. Frederick A. Smith, their representative, to Berlin and other points. After spending several weeks in various parts of the country, Mr. Smith is giving his impressions in a series of articles. A few extracts from the first of these, just published, are given herewith: "(1) The revolution is complete and apparently genuine,—the great majority of the people seemingly having embraced spontaneously the chance to throw off the rulers and militaristic chiefs who plunged the empire into disaster. (2) Germany in general is suffering grievously from the lack of food in unproductive districts. Influenza is causing a widespread increase in mortality on account of the lack of nourishing food, particularly among women and infants. After traveling more than 1,200 miles through the country, the vital, immediate need of breadstuffs and fats is not to be doubted. (3) All Germans are united in a plea to President Wilson and America, quickly to relieve the food situation, thus saving them from the peril of the Bolshevists, whose influence may lead to a reign of terrorism."

China Wants No Brewers' Invasion

As might be expected, the reported decision of American brewers, to exploit China, is arousing indignation which the press of that land is not slow in voicing. "We have no desire," we are told, "to drive out the opium fiend, only to usher in the drunken sot. Apparently the brewers think they must educate the Chinese to the delights of western baechanalianism. Why do not the westerners come to teach us better manners than indulging in opium, eigarets and intoxieants?" We trust that our great Washington Government will take steps by which trade expansion in China will be wholly barred, so far as a propaganda for the sale of intoxieants is concerned.

Unseen Seed Sowing

Not all the evidences of effective Christian teaching in India are revealed by missionary statisties. In the innermost recesses of many Hindu high easte homes the foundations for a new India are silently being laid. Nineteen ladies in the house of a Brahman in Triplicane allowed Christian missionaries to hold prayer meetings. At another point thirty ladies came from different points to hear the Bible read, and to sing Christian hymns. It should be remembered that not one of these ladies would dare to confess her faith publicly. Many are profoundly impressed, and fully determined to enter upon a life of perfect trust in Christ, but under present circumstances they simply can not. May we not hope that some day these fettered ones will be given full freedom?

Security That Can Not Be Questioned

President Wilson, during his recent address at the University of Paris, defined his conception of the League of Nations as a "moral force of men throughout the world," which would turn its "searchlight of conscience" upon any wrongdoing and aggression. "Just a little exposure will settle most questions," he declared. "If the Central Powers had dared to discuss the purposes of this war for a single fortnight, it never would have happened. If,—as should have been done,—they had discussed it for a year, the war would have been inconceivable. . . . There is a great swing of moral force moving through the world, and every man who opposes himself to that swing, must go down in disgrace. . . . My conception of the League of Nations is just this, that it shall operate as the organized moral force of men throughout the world."

A Real Thank Offering

We read, the other day, the touching account of the generosity of a sixteen-year-old native girl in Africa, who, in some way, had been won to Christ. Coming to the Lord's house on Christmas Day, she brought her offering,—it being the beautiful custom of the native Christians to give their choicest gifts to Christ on that day. They are all poor,—a degree of poverty of which we know nothing. This girl, just saved out of heathenism, brought a coin worth eighty-five cents,—a large sum in that country. The missionary was about to refuse the gift, thinking that so large a coin could not have been obtained honestly. When asked about it, she explained very simply that, in order to give Christ an offering, she had gone to a neighboring planter and bound herself out to him for the rest of her life, that she might obtain the eighty-five cents. She had virtually brought the whole financial equivalent of her life of pledged service, and laid it down in a single gift at the feet of her Lord.

No Reason to Feel Discouraged

Many things contributed towards making the observance of the recent Christmas season especially joyous, but a factor of special significance was an announcement by the national prohibition workers. Basing their prediction on evidence not to be questioned, we are assured that by May 1 the Prohibition Amendment to the Federal Constitution will have been ratified by the necessary "three-fourths" of the States. A survey of the prohibition situation reveals the fact that fifteen States have so far approved the Amendment. Thirty other States, whose Legislatures will meet this month, will be sure to adopt it. Colorado went bone-dry recently. Dec. 16 the State of Nevada made the same choice. New Year's Day, 1919, will ever be remembered by the people of Florida, as marking their adoption of a prohibition regime. Ohio will go dry May 27, 1919. Wyoming will enter the prohibition ranks Jan. 1, 1920. The old Acme Brewery, at Macon, Ga., is now packing millions of dollars' worth of meat, instead of bottling thousands of gallons of "tanglefoot." It has quit the business of starving families, and gone to work to feed a hungry world. Most encouraging, also, is the recent report from England, that Walter Hume Long, Secretary for the Colonies, will urge the British Government to prohibit the sale of liquor throughout the United Kingdom, though fully aware of the fact that it means the loss of millions in revenue. From France also comes the assurance that further prohibition measures will be added to those already in force. The people have seen the evils of alcoholism as never before, and there will be no hesitancy in taking the necessary measures for safety. It took thirty years to evolve a bone-dry system of prohibition in Kansas, but since that Commonwealth has blazed the way, it will not take other States long to fall in line. Ratification of the Federal Prohibition Amendment by more than thirty-six States before May 1 will complete the job of making the United States bone-dry.

Gospel Opportunities in Persia

Since the recent favorable turn of events, Persians no longer fear to be heard talking about Christ. Many may be seen reading their Bibles in public, with an evident relish. In both the town and country districts there is a constantly increasing friendliness towards the Gospel. Whatever may be the trend of affairs in Persia in coming days, one thing is sure,—western influences, including the best of religious impulses, are gaining ground. Hereafter, Persia will not be left to her own devices. Unhelped, she can do very little, but assisted in the best utilization of her unexplored resources, she may become prosperous herself, and also be of value to other nations. Here is an opportunity for helpful, considerate service, in order that the best things possible may be done for Persia.

Palestine Expresses Its Thankfulness

A cablegram from Palestine was received Dec. 26, by the "American Committee for Relief in the Near East." Profound gratitude is shown in that message by the people of Jerusalem, Bethlehem, Nazareth and other points, toward the Sunday-schools of Ameriea for the substantial relief so heartily bestowed, and they do not hesitate to express their thorough appreciation of the unstinted assistance thus given. General Allenby, in command of the British forces, sent Christmas greetings "to every scholar, teacher, and officer, thanking them for last year's offering, instead of giving each other presents." The cablegram was sent by representatives of the American Committee in Cairo. It demonstrates clearly that the beneficence of the American Sunday-schools is being worthily bestowed.

Leading Peace Principles Found Acceptable

After enthusiastic receptions at various points in France, President Wilson has proceeded to London where, Dec. 26, he was welcomed with regal splendor. Recent utterances by our Chief Executive give rise to the hope that the American chart of peace is acceptable to all the nations concerned,—this having reference to the President's much discussed "fourteen points." He has not found, among the great leaders, any dissatisfaction with the leading principles or fundamental purposes proposed by him. Apparently, therefore, the various conferences, during the last ten days, have not been without favorable results. It is admitted, however, in conference circles, that the hard work still ahead is not on principles, but in the defining of their concrete form, and in the determining of the details of their application in the Peace Treaty.

Coming Events in Palestine

Unusual interest is being manifested in the proposal to reëstablish the Jews in the land of their ancient heritage, bestowed upon them nearly four thousand years ago by God himself. One thing is sure,—the future of Palestine will be closely affiliated with the future of the Jewish people. A revived Hebrew nationality in the Land of Promise is sure to have a most pronounced moral effect on the whole world. Such is the consensus of opinion, not only of the Jews themselves, but of all intelligent people in general. Lord Robert Cecil, British Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, declares that "the reëstablishment of the Jewish nation in Palestine is bound to have a far-reaching influence on the history of the world." Another British statesman, Col. Sir Mark Sykes, maintains that "Palestine will ere long be the center of ideals radiating to every country." This, however, suggests a question which those, particularly concerned in Israel's spiritual welfare, and in the spread of the knowledge of Christ among the nations, must ask themselves: "What will be the nature of the great intellectual and moral force which will center in Palestine with the regathering of the Jews, and which is bound 'to radiate to every country'?" Will it be for good or for evil? Will it help to establish God's Kingdom on earth, or will it rather retard or hinder it? It must be conceded that, according to leading writers, the immediate outlook is not very bright, for we must admit that the spirit of this reviving Jewish nationality is in its essence anti-Christian. Not until the day when "the Spirit of Grace and Illumination is ponred out upon them, and the veil is removed from their eyes," will they recognize Jesus as their mighty Redeemer and King.

HOME AND FAMILY

I Shall Not Pass This Way Again

I shall not pass this way again!
The thought is full of sorrow;
The good I ought to do today,
I may not do tomorrow.
If I this moment should withhold
The help I might be giving,
Some soul may die, and I shall lose
The sweetest joy of living.

The present hour alone is mine;
I may not have another
In which to speak a kindly word,
Or help a fallen brother.
The path of life lies straight ahead;
I can retrace it never;
The daily record which I make
Will stand unchanged forever.

To cheer and comfort other souls,
And make their pathway brighter;
To lift the load from other hearts,
And make their burdens lighter,—
This is the work we have to do;
It must not be neglected;
That we improve each passing hour
Is of us all expected.

I shall not pass this way again!
Oh! then with high endeavor,
May I my life and service give
To him who reigns forever.
Then will the failures of the past
No longer give me sadness,
And his approving smile will fill
My heart with joy and gladness.

BY BESS BATES

Mrs. Elbridge set down the two pails of slop she was carrying to the squirming, squealing pigs as easily as I could have set down two bottles of milk. She looked up. In her face was strength and kindness and love. Hard work had set its mark there, too, but it had not hindered. It had only helped the strength and kindness and love to grow stronger. About her were the evidences of moderate prosperity, obtained by hard work,—house, stiff and clean, barn, garage, orchard and truck patch. She milked and cared for the cow, tended the pigs, plowed, weeded and gathered in the harvest of the garden and orchard, for her husband and children were away on other work. Her muscled body proclaimed her ability to do that work, and in her homely, kindly face was something that glorified that work.

"Yes," she began, "people have said that Mrs. Elbridge has Harold tied to her apron strings. It may be I have but I am satisfied. One woman that used to laugh at me, said only the other day she wished I had her boy tied to my apron strings. Well, we have done everything for our children. One year my husband worked at shearing sheep and used the money to buy Mabel's piano. The next thing was a cornet for Harold. Paid eighty dollars for it,—second-hand at that. We have given them music, a pleasant home, and a car. Now we are educating them. That's why I am alone with all this work. They must have their chance.

"The girl was easy to raise. She always stayed with me. But it was the boy! Mabel was the older by six years. She used to say, when he cut up some of his capers: 'Mother, can we ever make anything of him?' But I am satisfied. He has gotten over those boyish pranks. He is twenty-one now and working hard at school."

A reflective look came over her face as she went on: "I always knew where Harold was. If he stayed out too late at night, I was there to see that he got home. The worst trouble he ever had was when he was fourteen. He used to go down to the pool-room at noon and help. He made a lot of money, but I didn't care for the money. I tried to get him to stop but I couldn't make him. The boys dared him to come in Poleski, the proprietor, paid him well and he went. One day, when he didn't come home for dinner, I put on my things and went down there. I didn't know what I was going to do, but I knew I was going to do something. There are always lots of men there, but I opened the door and stepped inside. As soon as Harold saw me, he dropped his,—what do you call it?—oh, yes, cue, and said: 'There's mother. I must go.'

"I let him get out and then I turned back. Those men all stopped playing and sort of lined up, waiting to see what I would do. Poleski took the coal pail and slipped out the back door. I turned to one of the men and said:

"'Will you ask him to come in?'

"He came back in, with the pail empty. I didn't know what I was going to say. I looked at him. He was white and shaking. By that time I was shaking too and that weak! But that didn't stop me any.

"'What do you mean,' I began, 'by letting my boy come in here noons? He is a minor. I am going to make it hot for you. You know I don't want him in here.' I went on and said quite a lot more, but I guess it was mostly repeating that thought. Anyway, when he could get a word in he says: 'What will you charge to let me off?'

"That surprised me some. I didn't want any money. I wanted my boy. I just wanted to keep my boy clean and pure and free from vice, to start out in the world, even if it did mean tying him to my apron strings.

"'Well,' I said, 'I'll let you off this time if you will promise me never to let him come in here again.'

"He promised and I went out. The cool air felt so good. Harold had been waiting.

"'Mamma,' he said, 'I'll never go in there again. The boys dared me or I wouldn't have gone at all!'

"He never did go back either. So I gave him a nickel to get a sandwich. He hadn't time to come home for his dinner. And he went on back to school.

"I have cried about him. I have worked for him. I have done everything for him. It has paid. He is a good boy now and I am satisfied."

Keeping the Balance

BY REBECCA C. FOUTZ

Sister Streeter had brought her mending along to stitch at, while she chatted with Sister Hartling. There was always so much of it to do that she could not idle any time, and she did not mind if her good neighbor and church sister did see how she had to try to make old clothes last a little longer, for she knew she understood.

She had something on her mind and somehow Sister Hartling could always help when anything troubled her. Presently she began: "What do you think of this doctrine of 'just believe to be saved' that one hears so much about nowadays? To listen to some folks explain it, one would think that was all that was required of us and yet I can't see why the Lord went to all the trouble to say and have recorded many other things for us to do. I just can't make the two meet."

"Yes, it is rather confusing," Sister Hartling readily agreed, "until we are willing to balance it like the Lord does." After some thought she went on: "A little prayerful study will soon show one that there are two sides to it, the same as to all others of the Lord's plans. They make a perfect balance and it is only when we put more weight on the one side or the other, and destroy this balance, that we get all mixed up."

"Well, I'll be more than grateful if you can clear it up for me," Sister Streeter interrupted eagerly.

"I'll do my best," Sister Hartling returned, "by telling you how I see it. You know when our Master was on earth he frequently explained the spiritual by illustrating it with the natural, or things in nature, so people could grasp it more readily, and that is the way I can best understand and explain this matter.

"In tilling the soil, we first break up the ground and thus prepare it for the planting of the seed. Then, when the seed is planted, our work is not done by any means. We must keep cultivating so that the weeds do not destroy the life of the grain. Only by constant endeavor can we expect to reap the reward in the shape of a harvest. Now all this is man's part and he has to do it according to the laws of nature,—which are God's laws,—in order to get results. But this is not all, as we may sometimes think. We must not forget God's part, without which all our labor would be for naught. He gives the life to the seed and causes it to grow. He sends sunshine and rain and thus bestows the increase.

"You see here are the two sides,—the perfect balance. Now no amount of labor, on our part, can make up for the Lord's share. We simply can not give life or cause growth. This he does for us freely and willingly. But, on the other hand, the Lord's fulfilling his part of the contract will not benefit us unless we do ours, which is providing favorable conditions for planting and growing."

"Well, that is plain enough," Sister Streeter said with emphasis.. "We all know that God does not do for man what he can do for himself. It is only where our power ends that his begins, but I never had thought it out like you have. Now let me have the spiritual application," she urged.

"That is easy," Sister Hartling answered. "The plan of salvation is worked out the same way. God has provided this wonderful gift of eternal life at great cost, and it is free to all who will accept it. No one could ever earn it or be good enough to deserve it, no matter what he did,—no more than we can put life in seeds and cause them to increase. Both are God's part and entirely beyond our power. But, as in nature, we have a part to do too, and it is very essential, for without it God can not save us. With the aid of the Spirit, we must prepare our hearts for the implanting of this seed of life. And we can only do this by complying with God's laws or commandments in the matter. Man has repeatedly tried to alter them, or put them aside altogether, but he might as well try to plant seeds contrary to the laws of nature, and expect results.

"Then, as these theorists argue, there is really nothing to do after believing and taking the initial step by which the seed of this gift of eternal life is implanted. But the Word does not hear this out. We are much like the earth from which we are made. We naturally, and without any effort, produce sin (weeds) and, like the weeds, if not kept down by cultivation, it will choke out the good seed. Here is where our part comes in again. And because the Lord knows our need so well, he left us abundant instructions how it could be most successfully done. They are all given for a purpose, which is our continued growth and ultimate salvation. Only continued obedience will bring the harvest of reward."

"That certainly sounds reasonable," Sister Streeter assented, "but this 'just believing' sounds so easy and catchy that it deludes many people."

"Yes, just another ruse of Satan, to trip up the unwary," Sister Hartling went on. "Why, even the devils believe, for that matter. They well know that Christ is the Son of God. So do many others, who are not saved. Theirs is only an intellectual belief. To be effective as a saving power, it must be of the heart, and when it is, it will be an active or doing belief and will show out in the life. But this loose doctrine takes with the popular mind, for it does not mention service or sacrifice, nor does it include the obeying of any commandments that do not happen to strike one's fancy."

"Well, doesn't Paul lay particular stress on salvation by grace?" Sister Streeter questioned, not quite convinced.

"He does, but for a very good reason at that time. The mixture of Jew and Gentile and the change from the old or Mosaic law to the new dispensation, frequently caused confusion and trouble. Some insisted that the law's observance was yet necessary to obtain this new life, and Paul had to put extra emphasis on the fact that the law had been supplanted by something better, which was free for the accepting, and required none of the former's ceremonial rites to obtain it. But at no time or place did he even intimate that the commandments which Christ gave were to be laid aside. He not only considered them necessary and important, but he, himself, through the inspiration of the Spirit, added many instructions to them that he saw were needed for the pruning and cultivating process, so that the weeds of sin did not destroy this wonderful and freely-given gift. Yes," Sister Hartling concluded, "our part in the matter is as plain as God's, and there need be no confusion if we keep the balance which the Word gives us."

Then she smiled as she said: "This always reminds me of the many injunctions not to worry or concern ourselves about material things. Those things the Lord will provide. He always cares for us. He certainly does, but who is foolish enough to think that it means that we should sit down and fold our hands, thinking that he will pour a living into our lap? No, he gives us minds to think with, and hands to work with, and he expects us to use them to help ourselves. That is our part. But he blesses our efforts,—all of which would be in vain if he did not,—and gives the increase. The perfect balance again,—not that our part is as much as he does for us, but he considers and blesses it as such. What a lot of physical and spiritual weaklings we would be, if there were naught for us to do! We well know that the Lord never intended that, but, instead, that we should develop strength and bear fruit."

"Quite true," Sister Streeter affirmed, "and I greatly appreciate your helpful talk. I think we have spent a profitable afternoon."

"Yes it is much better to spend our time discussing matters that pertain to the Kingdom, than to engage in light talk or gossip," was the ready response.

CORRESPONDENCE

"Write what thou seest, and send it unto the churches"

DISTRICT MEETING IN CHINA

Our District Meeting convened at Ping Ting Hsien, Sept. 19. All but four of the missionaries and two of the children, who are on the field, were present. Three of our number and two children are in the homeland. Altogether we number thirty-six missionaries and fifteen children. Numerically, we are now the second strongest mission in the province. The responsibility of the home church, in finances and prayers, is no small one, if we are to bear our part of the burden in the evangelization of Shansi. We were also gladdened by the presence of Brother and Sister Elgin S. Moyer. Their sojourn among us has been a happy and helpful one.

Sister Emma Horning gave the opening address. She reviewed the past ten years of our missionary experience and suggested policies for the future.

Many are the problems and opportunities facing us now. We are asking the home church to support us for the next year with more than $35,000 for equipment. All this is greatly needed, and we are counting on your support. The very unfavorable rate of exchange makes our budget double what it was in previous years, even if we were only doing the same amount of work as then, but now, with the increased amount of work and the greater opportunities, we still expect you to supply the funds.

We spent some time in discussing our educational policies. It will doubtless be a source of inspiration to you, to know that of all the schools in Shansi and Chihli, taking the uniform examinations, the Ping Ting Boys' School took first place. As we have no high school, we have sent six boys to one of our neighboring missions, for their advanced work. We also have one of our graduates in a Bible School.

Our native church is growing rapidly, and we spent considerable time in discussing plans for its organization. We are leaving them to plan the organization as much as possible. The worship of ancestral tablets presents one of our big problems.

Undoubtedly there are some commendable features to the honoring of worthy ancestors. To keep the good, while excluding the harmful, in this ancient rite of religious worship in China, is one of the most puzzling problems we have. It is comparatively easy to get the idols down and out of the homes, but the ancestral tablets are an altogether different proposition.

We had five busy days at the District Conference. Each day Bro. Oberholtzer gave us an hour of Bible study. We were made to feel more keenly than ever the part we must take in promoting the interests of God's Kingdom.

One evening we had a social. We were divided into groups, according to the college we represented, and each group furnished a part of the entertainment. It was quite evident that some of our number have not forgotten all the care-dispelling diversions of our college days.

We thank our Father for the recruits which have come to the field. They are getting on splendidly with the language, and show ability to meet the missionary situation. May the Father call many more to this field of rich opportunity! Anna Crumpacker.

THE WORK AT EAST ENID, OKLAHOMA

I had the privilege of spending nearly six weeks this fall in the Child-Saving Mission Home at this place. For a time it seemed difficult to find homes for the children. Then we began to pray definitely that a home might be found for each child, and in a few weeks every one had been placed or spoken for, with applications still coming in. Our manager and matron, Brother and Sister Ray S. Wagoner, are being wonderfully used of the Lord in the work, and we praise him that they are so willing to be used in his service.

The problem of finances has always been a weight, so, after prayer and consideration, the board of trustees decided to launch a campaign to raise an endowment of $75,000 for the support of the work. The epidemic has hindered the plans for this work somewhat, but the Lord is remembering us, and the fund is slowly increasing. We have been blessed in that Sister Addie Yoder has come to assist in the work in the Home, and that Sisters Kathryn Smith and Clara Dodd have been sent to us as field workers.

Recently a young woman was shown into our baby ward. In looking into a crib at one of the babies, her heart was so filled with love that she desired to have the child. It was one of the happiest scenes I ever witnessed, as she and her companion started home with their treasure. Often these foster parents, after a few weeks, months, or years, bring their children back to the Home, proudly to show how the little ones have developed, and to tell how they have grown into their affections.

The days are full of pressing duties, and the work is not without its problems, but who can estimate the value of these efforts and the results in the future? Td me, while there, the sweetest time was at the close of the busy days when we all gathered in the parlor, stood around the piano and sang, while Sister Wagoner played the children's favorites, "Sweet Hour of Prayer," "Jesus Loves Me," "Jesus Wants Me for a Sunbeam," "Kind Words Can Never Die." Then Bro. Wagoner read some good old Bible story, and we all knelt, uniting in the Lord's Prayer.

When the work of raising the endowment has progressed a little further, Bro. Wagoner is hoping to open up mission work in the city. There are now more than a dozen members located in this wide-awake business center. Brother, sister, keep on praying, as the work here grows and develops. New opportunities bring new problems, and we must have the Lord's guidance, in order to be led to real success in the work.

At present I am with my parents, enjoying the balmy breezes at Sebring, Fla. Already a number of brethren and sisters have arrived from the North, and how we all enjoy meeting together in our neat little chapel for worship! Our people here certainly know how to make the new-comer feel at home. Father and Mother Moore, and others, have been wonderfully used of the Lord in establishing this church center where our people may escape the rigors of the northern winters and be built up both physically and spiritually. Elsie K. Sanger.

SOUTHERN PENNSYLVANIA

The District Meeting of Southern Pennsylvania was held in the Bermudian house, Lower Conewago congregation, Nov. 26 and 27. The weather was ideal and the attendance good. There were forty-four delegates, fifty-five ministers, and a number of other visitors. The delegates and visitors received their meals in the dining-hall of the church. Lodging was provided in homes of the members and friends of the church. Eld. I. W. Taylor, Elizabethtown College, and Eld. Galen B. Royer, of Juniata College, favorer us with sermons on "Home Missions" on Tuesday evening, after which the offering from the various congregations of the District for missions was taken, aggregating $795.66. The opening of the business session was in charge of the retiring officers. The following officers were elected: Moderator, Eld. Joseph A. Long; Writing Clerk, Bro. Joseph J. Bowser; Reading Clerk, Eld. A. S. Baugher.

We had a number of queries from the District, but no papers for Annual Conference. One of the important matters considered at this meeting was the acceptance of the proposition of the Trustees of Elizabethtown College, to turn over the college, free of debt, to the Eastern and Southern Districts of Pennsylvania, respectively, both exercising in the joint ownership and control of said college. The following Trustees were elected: J. H. Keller, C. R. Oellig, A. S. Baugher, C. L. Baker.

Elizabethtown College was represented by Eld. H. K. Ober, President, and Brethren I. W. Taylor and Samuel Hertzler, Trustees. Juniata College was represented by Brethren Wm. J. Swigart, J. J. Oller, and Galen B. Royer.

The time originally appointed for our meeting had been postponed on account of Spanish influenza, but a marked degree of spiritual fervor was prevalent throughout the entire business session. Many expressions of sincere gratitude to God for his goodness, and the hope of an early world peace, were offered.

As auditors to pass upon all the accounts of the District yearly, Brethren Joseph J. Bowser and Jacob I. Baugher were chosen for three years. As members of the Standing Committee for 1919, Elders C. L. Baker and D. A. Faust were chosen; alternates, Elders C. R. Oellig and Albert Hollinger. Next year's meeting is to be held in the Lower Cumberland church, Mechanicsburg, Pa.

AN EVENING AT NANYAO, CHINA

It was evening as we started out for a two miles' walk to one of the villages called Nanyao. We waited till evening because we wanted to show the reflectroscope pictures to the village people. Some one had preceded us and told the people that we were coming. In our party were Miss Horning, Mr. Chang, who does the lecturing, a servant who helps Miss Horning to operate the reflectroscope, and myself.

It was nearly dark when we arrived. A few people had gathered, but we visited in a few homes until it became quite dark. The boy went up one street and down another, ringing the little hand-bell to call the people together. We occupied an old temple court for the lecture, because there is a platform in it, and because the four walls help to keep the crowd closer together. As we stood on the platform, we could see the people coming down the hill with their paper lanterns, and they continued to come, one by one, until about half of the lecture was over.

When it was time to begin, a postcard with the picture of a beautiful rose was thrown on the canvas. Mr. Chang began his talk by speaking of the flowers, and how the Heavenly Father makes them grow, because he wants his people to enjoy them. As pictures of schools, hospitals, and business places were shown, he talked of education and its value to both boys and girls, of the methods of caring for the sick, and of the prosperity due to Christian civilization. As pictures of the body, muscles, bones, nervous system, and circulatory system were thrown on the canvas, the people were taught the value of cleanliness, the harm to the body and mind, caused by the smoking of cigarettes and of opium. The harmful use of the morphine needle was shown. The evil effects of the lack of exercise were also demonstrated.

When Chinese young people have been in school a few years, they think that it is not proper to do any manual work, neither do they think it necessary to exercise a great deal. A girl who goes to school does not consider it lady-like to play games which demand exercise. Much teaching, therefore, is needed along this line, so as to develop their bodies, that they may become strong.

One picture which impressed the people very much was that of a large foot. Some one in the crowd made the remark that it would take a rather large shoe to fit such a large foot. Mr. Chang told them that God made people's feet so that they might easily walk. He made the feet of men and women alike, with five toes, but unfortunately some go against God's wishes, and devise footbinding for women, so that they can not be in the home, or anywhere else, what God intended them to be. He also told them of the diseases due to footbinding, such as consumption of all parts of the body, for the women thus hampered can not exercise, or get out into the fresh air. Could we all see the condition of these women whose feet are only three or four inches long, we would cry out against this custom.

Next, some pictures were shown, illustrating the life of Christ. The people were told the simple story of Jesus,—many of them hearing it for the first time. They were told of the goodness of God in caring for his own. The last picture was that of a large church, and the people were invited to come to services. Many of them do come.

While Mr. Chang was talking, we prayed that this crowd of four or five hundred upturned faces might receive a lasting impression. How they seemed to enjoy it! How they were drinking it all in! It did sound good to them.

After Mr. Chang was through talking, the head of the village came on the platform, and spoke of the reforms, just advocated against footbinding, smoking of opium and the use of the morphine needle. He advised all to cut off their queues. We know that the officials are with us, for laws have already been made, to dispense with these objectionable things. But the crowd did not seem to pay very much attention to him as he spoke, and we wondered why. Then we learned that he himself uses the morphine needle. The people knew this, but he wanted to make a good impression on us, nevertheless. He knows what is right, but does not do it. He, too, needs the power of Jesus to help him.

When we got ready to leave, the women came around with their lanterns, and held them up to our faces, so as to get a good look at us, for a foreign woman is not an everyday sight. We talked to them a little while, and then they asked us the regulation questions as to age, nationality, family, etc. Anxiously they inquired: "When are you coming again? Do come soon and tell us some more." They were told that the pictures must be shown to other people, too, but that sometime they would have another opportunity.

Is there any value to this method of teaching? Yes, it is one of the best ways of getting an opening into the lives of these people. It visualizes the teachings for them, so that they can see, as well as hear, the truth. Many of them have never learned, so talking sinks in slowly. It gives them a general idea as to why the foreigners are among them. It is a means of driving away the fear of foreigners, and opens the homes, so that the workers can go into the homes and become acquainted with the women, and teach them that which will bring them peace. It shows them that we are here for the good of all.

Pray for this work and for Miss Horning, as she goes from place to place, showing pictures and bringing a message of love to the people. Mary Schaeffer.

Peking, China.

MOUNT MORRIS COLLEGE

The college has had the second outbreak of influenza, and we were made very sad by the death of Sister D. J. Lichty. Her body was taken by Bro. Lichty, accompanied by Dr. L. S. Shively, to LaPlace, Ill., for burial. Sister Lichty bore her suffering so patiently, and met death so calmly that we are again reminded that death is not so much to be dreaded when we are prepared to meet God. We had a very touching memorial service in the College Chapel, after the students were again well enough to assemble in public worship. Out of all this cloud the Volunteer Band shines brightly, and seems to be determined to do more and better work for the Master.

Bro. D. J. Lichty will make a visit to quite a number of the Brethren colleges, under the direction of the General Mission Board. He will return in February, to take up again the work which he had started in the college.

The college management plans to have every student's throat examined each morning, for several mornings after he returns to the college, at the close of the vacation. We take this precaution to check the spread of the "flu," if any should have been exposed to it while at home, or on the train returning.

We are still adding new students to our number, and hope to have many more after the effects of the war have passed. Bro. Ira P. Eby who, with his good wife, has been cooking for us for more than two years has returned from the hospital. He is improving and is much encouraged.

W. E. West, Business Manager.

MUSCATINE, IOWA

It will surprise no one to state that the rage of the influenza has cast a pall of gloom over our entire country. It has brought bereavement and sorrow to many hearts and has impeded business, as well as all the public meetings essential to efficient and regular religious activity. And yet, our people have done remarkably well, and have practically said: "Whatever betides, we know that the Lord will provide."

The quarantine of our city was lifted last Friday. Sunday morning we met for our Sunday-school and preaching services for the first time in four weeks. We were quarantined Oct. 15 for four weeks. We had had only one service when the quarantine was again placed on us for another four weeks.

A number of our members suffered with the influenza, but the Lord was very gracious, and spared their lives. Our band is still unbroken, for which we thank our Loving Father in heaven.

We met at 2:30, on Sunday afternoon, for our regular council. We reelected all of our present church and Sunday-school officers for 1919. I never saw a better spirit manifested in a business meeting. We are planning to undertake great things for the Lord next year.

Our people are overflowing with gladness that the stupendous world-wide war seems to be at its end. May the Lord control our joy, so as to render it sane, sober, and sacred!

We ask an interest in the prayers of all our dear brethren and sisters. There is an open door for the Gospel of Jesus Christ in Muscatine. Leander Smith.

BIBLE INSTITUTE IN SEBRING, FLORIDA

Arrangements have been completed for a Bible Institute in our chapel, beginning Feb. 10 and continuing two or more weeks, with Bro. A. C. Wieand, of Bethany Bible School, in charge. Bro. Wieand is to reach Sebring not later than Feb. 8, and on Sunday, Feb. 9, will be with us in our regular services. The Institute, as stated, will begin the next morning, there being a session in the forenoon and another in the afternoon. There are likely to be no evening services until the following Sunday, when our revival commences, to be continued each evening, in connection with the Bible Institute. The forenoon sessions will be devoted to studies in Revelation, and the afternoon to some other line of work,—probably biographies of noted men and women mentioned in the Bible.

Members from other parts of the State, as well as some from the North, have expressed a desire to attend this Institute. Those wishing to do so, will please write Eld. J. H. Garst, of Sebring, stating the time they expect to be here. At our approaching members' meeting a committee on lodging will be appointed, to look after the comfort of visiting members. The committee will secure the cheapest rates possible for rooms and boarding. In the meantime, we should be advised of the number of people coming, and whether they are coming in their cars or by rail. J. H. Moore.

THE DEATH OF A VOLUNTEER

Within the past month a sad bereavement has come upon us. God has called one of his loved ones to her reward. He has taken a life fully consecrated to his service and submissive to his will. Sister Good had answered the call, but in the midst of preparation for such a noble service, the Lord said: "It is enough." "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

Minnie Good

Minnie Good, daughter of Brother John H. and Sister Emma Mohler Good, was born near the small village of Hinkletown, Lancaster County, Pa., June 29, 1891. She died at her home in Lancaster City, Nov. 18, 1918, aged twenty-seven years, four months and twenty days.

With her parents she lived in several other localities, but always in the county where she was born. She leaves her blind, invalid father, mother, three sisters and two brothers.

In the country public school she received her early education. She entered the Bareville high school, but on account of failing health could not continue her school work at that time.

When she was sixteen years old,—in the summer of 1907,—she was awakened to her need of a Savior through the help of meetings at the Earlville church, conducted by Bro. H. K. Ober. She was baptized Sept. 15 by Bro. Martin Ebersole.

Hers was a joyful Christian life, and she had a strong desire to share that joy with others. Those living in heathen darkness soon became the great burden of her heart. About three years later a still small voice whispered: "Go." Seeing the great need, but feeling herself too unworthy for such a high calling, she spent sleepless nights and was engaged much in prayer.

In the fall of 1917 she entered Elizabethtown College, aiming to prepare herself for the great work which, as she thought, God had planned for her. The tender voice of our Loving Savior insistently impressed itself upon her until she answered: "Here am I, Lord." After thus having fully surrendered herself she said: "Now I have peace of conscience. I am so happy." Sept. 19 she became a member of the College Volunteer Band.

Since coming to this city, nearly seven years ago,—she has taken an interest in all church activities. She was assistant Bible class leader, president of the Missionary Society for one year and taught a class of young girls in the Sunday-school.

She was possessed of a kindly, cheerful and sympathetic nature that endeared her to her class of girls as well as to her many friends. She was ever ready to give a helping hand, and never considered it a sacrifice to do good to others.

When Elizabethtown College closed, on account of Spanish influenza, she came home seemingly well, but in a few days was stricken with the disease. After one week's illness her bright, promising career was ended.

Shortly before she took her departure she said: "Mother, I am going home now." Eld. H. B. Yoder was called to her bedside and had a short season of prayer. A few minutes later she peacefully fell asleep.

She was a devoted daughter and sister and was especially fond of children. We miss her. Her radiant smile is gone but we shall ever cherish the blessed life of Sister Minnie. While it is hard for us to understand the purposes of God in calling her away, we know that it was his will and whatever he does is well done. Leah N. Phillipy.

What Next?

generation, looking back upon the awful price of blood and treasure with calmer judgment, wonder why it could not have been accomplished without this devastation and this sorrow? We now look back thus upon the Civil War for the freedom of the slave.

Men usually know what they want, but they do not always know how to get it. Their desires often breed a chaotic condition of thought, and nothing being more natural than giving literal expression to thought, it follows that a chaotic condition will result.

The moral influence on the church, of the world's past and present condition, may indeed be a matter of concern, yet it need not give undue alarm. Though reform, reorganization and reconstruction may be needed, it does not follow that these must be preceded by a demoralizing upheaval or a breaking up of present, well-organized conditions.

Granting that such results did occur in the past and that out of such conditions new energies did awaken, and that reform and progress did follow, yet it took also a generation of denominational effort to regain the lost prestige and momentum.

The church can properly direct its thought, however agitated and restless it may be, however imbued with the spirit of reform, reorganization and reconstruction it may be, if it will coolly and calmly deliberate on the problems of the present, in the light of the past. Then all will be well.

Perhaps there is not as much real need of reconstruction in church activities as there is of reconsecrating and redirecting and redeveloping the partially dormant energies and resources that have, in recent months, been overshadowed by the more glaring activities of the temporal environments.

The world has stood aghast at the appalling affairs that have come upon it. Nothing is more natural than that this influence should penetrate to the ranks of the church and likewise affect its morale. If ever there is one time, more than another, for cautious movement and sound judgment that time is now.

Perhaps less attention to the contour of the channel through which the church is to move, and more consecrated thought as to the purity and depth of the stream, would effect a strength of character whereby it would be able to make itself the leading factor for world righteousness.

The hope of the world's fitness for democracy lies with the church.

The Baby

BY JULIA GRAYDON

SHE was only lent us for a little while. Only a few times we saw her smile as we gazed into her innocent baby face. Then, one night, a white-winged messenger came for her and carried the little spirit of our dear one back to heaven, where other little ones waited for her.

We gave her up, oh, so reluctantly, and with aching hearts, and we could not look at the empty cradle. Yet, had it not been for the mortal tears which blinded our eyes, we would have seen the little hands beckoning to us, to come and join her in that land of light.

Would we call her back to earth again? No, no. We must strive to be glad that our treasure is safe in her Father's house, where "God shall wipe away all tears from our eyes."

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

CALIFORNIA

Covina.—After four weeks' closing of the churches because of the epidemic, we again met for services Oct. 20. On this Sunday the Sunday-school offering made up in part for the time we were closed, and the offering for the next two Sundays practically made up the deficiency. We have great cause for thanksgiving, first that the war is over and second that our church has lost none by death. At the Thanksgiving Day service an offering was taken, and a further opportunity was extended to all who were not present, to give their offering. The total amount was $411.72. We gave $45.72 to the Chinese mission in Los Angeles, and $366 to the World-Wide Mission. Dec. 13 the church met to elect Sunday-school officers for the coming year. Bro. D. J. Overholtzer was elected superintendent. All other officers were also elected. The Mothers and Daughters' Association having reorganized in October, elected Sister Jennie Brubaker as president. Their first program was given Dec. 11. —Mrs. Temple Snuble Funk, Charter Oak, Cal., Dec. 16.

Elgin.—The "little church on Highland" went "over the top" again last Sunday. Though no effort was made to collect a big audience, on account of the epidemic, a most interesting program was carried out, the performers being mostly children. A little girl made a prayer, another did beautifully a pantomime, "Holy Night," a little boy made announcements, and others sang or read. Each Sunday-school class made a "white offering," the total amounting to $120.25. Besides this, eight French and Belgian orphans were adopted by different classes, one by the "junior congregation" and one by the Ladies' Missionary Society. Of the pledges on these, $85 is already paid in. Bro. F. E. Miller made the Christmas address. The children were remembered with the usual sweetmeats. . . . The "junior congregation" is a new feature in our church. At the close of Sunday-school, the youngsters from six to sixteen are marshaled to their assembly room downstairs, and here they have their own services, and Bro. H. Spenser Minnich preaches to them at the same hour the adults are worshiping in the auditorium. We are hoping great things from the venture. . . . Sunday evening Bro. H. S. Randolph, of Bethany Bible School, filled the pulpit. . . . Christmas night the prayer-meeting was unusually interesting and well attended.—Adaline H. Beery, Elgin, Ill., Dec. 26.

the roming year were elected, with Bro. S. A. Blessing, elder, and Bro. Samuel Wenger, Jr., Sunday-school superintendent. Bro. Blessing made an earnest plea for s strong, united effort on the part of the entire membership, in behalf of the work of the church for the ensuing year, and the prospects seem very encouraging.—J. Henry Showalter, West Milton, Ohio, Dec. 21.

White Oak church met Sunday afternoon at the home of the writer, for a short service, following which two applicants were baptized. We ask an interest in the prayers of all, that the White Oak church may grow in spirit and in numbers.—R. C. Davidson, Lynchburg, Ohio, Dec. 21.

OKLAHOMA

Big Creek church met in council Dec. 16, with Eld. N. S. Gripe presiding. Bro. Gripe was chosen elder for another year. Sister Nellie Kinzie was chosen Sunday-school superintendent, and the writer Christian Workers' president. Five letters were received and one was granted. Our Sunday-school recently sent $25 to the Orphans' Home in Enid, Okla.—Oma Holderread, Cushing, Okla., Dec. 18.

OREGON

Mabel congregation met in council Dec. 21, to elect officers for the coming year. Brethren H. H. Ritter and D. Hileman were elected Sunday-school superintendents, and Sisters Mary E. Ritter and Marie Roberts, Aid presidents. We missed two weeks' services on account of the influenza, but our attendance is about normal again.—Mrs. Mabel Overholt, Mabel, Dec. 23.

Myrtle Point church met in council Dec. 7. Bro. C. H. Barklow was elected as elder for the coming year, the writer as Messenger agent and correspondent; Sister Minnie Hermann, Sunday-school superintendent; Sister Minnie Enlght, Christian Workers' president. Two letters were granted. A collection of $22.19 was taken for general church work.—Rachel Michael, Myrtle Point, Oregon, Dec. 15.

Portland.—We held our love feast Dec. 14, with Bro. S. P. Van Dyke officiating. About fifty enjoyed the feast. A number of members from the Newberg congregation were present, as well as a good representation of the home members. We were glad to have so many young brethren with us at this meeting, and also Bro. Josiah Rogers, who has been absent on account of sickness in the family. Sister Nellie Carl led the song service. The spirit of the meeting was good. The Sunday morning services were also well attended and the visiting members were an inspiration and help to us.—Grace W. Hewitt, Portland, Oregon, Dec. 16.

PENNSYLVANIA

Cedarus.—Dec. 8 the Fairview Sunday-school held its Children's Day exercises. The weather was ideal and the attendance large. Bro. Daniel Snyder, of the York church, was the principal speaker, dealing largely with the importance of giving the right instruction to the young. Remarks were also made by Brethren Crist and Hoover, of York, and Eld. D. Y. Brilhart. Codorus Sunday-school held its Children's Day exercises on the Sunday following. The program consisted of recitations and songs, after which Bro. J. J. Bowser, of York, gave an address. His theme was "Consecrated Christmas of Living." The interest was good, and all participants did well. Bro. J. H. Keller also gave a short talk, after which a collection of $47 was taken for Armenian Relief.—S. C. Godfrey, Bed Lion, Pa., Dec. 23.

Lower Cumberland congregation recently closed two series of meetings. Bro. Nathan Martin, of Elizabethtown, Pa., came to the Baker house Nov. 16, and conducted a two weeks' series of meetings. We feel that the members were greatly revived. The meeting closed Nov. 30. Our love feast was held Dec. 1 at the Mohler house. Bro. Martin officiated. A number of visiting brethren were present. Dec. 2 the series of meetings commenced at the Mechanicsburg house, conducted by Bro. H. S. Gipe, of Hershey, Pa., and continued until Dec. 19. Nine were baptized. We enjoyed the messages these brethren brought us.—J. W. Gelbt, Mechanicsburg, Pa., Dec. 24.

Pittsburgh.—Bro. C. Walter Warstler having taken up the pastorate at the Pittsburgh church early in September, the Ladies' Adult Bible Class had arranged a reception in honor of Brother and Sister Warstler for Oct. 8. On that day the InSeneza ban was on at the church, so reception was postponed until Dec. 12, when we had a very enjoyable and well-attended gathering. Prof. I. E. Holsinger gave the address of welcome, to which Bro. Warstler responded. Three neighboring ministers were present and brought greetings and good wishes from their several churches: Dr. C. L. Cartwright, of the Mary S. Brown Methodist church, Rev. Gilbert Condett, of the Squirrel Hill Methodist church, and Rev. H. M. Harley, of the First Brethren. Everybody enjoyed the excellent program rendered and also the lunch which the ladies served. After a pleasant evening we departed, wishing Bro. Warstler' and his family success for the New Year.—Mrs. A. O. Dorner, Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 23.

Smithfield church met in council Dec. 7, with Eld. W. H. Holsinger presiding. Only few changes were made in the officers for the coming year. Bro. Holsinger was reelected as pastor and elder. Bro. Stover Knlp, of New Enterprise, will begin a series of meetings about the first week in February. Bro. T. T. Myers, of Huntingdon, will talk to us Dec. 22 in the interest of the Anti-saloon League.—Jos. Perrin, Dorbarn, Pa., Dec. 21.

Upper Conewago church met in council at East Berlin Dec. 21, Eld. C. L. Baker presiding. Two were received by letter. We decided to hold our spring love feast at the Mummert house May 17 and 18, and our fall love feast at the Latimore house Oct. 18 and 19. The writer was reelected Sunday-school superintendent for East Berlin. At our Thanksgiving services the offering amounted to $168, half going for home and half for foreign mission work. Owing to the epidemic of influenza the series of meetings that was to have been held at East Berlin by Bro. Ralph W. Schlosser, of Elizabethtown, was recalled. We feel thankful that things look better at this writing.—Andrew Bowser, East Berlin, Pa., Dec. 22.

TENNESSEE

Lawrenceburg.—Bro. B. O. Edwards, of Jonesboro, Tenn., began preaching Nov. 17 at the Lone Star church, four miles east of Lawrenceburg, continuing until Sunday, Dec. 1. The attendance and interest were good, but the attendance was not what it should have been, on account of sickness and other causes. From this place we went to the Crowson church, seven miles northwest of Lawrenceburg, and began meetings in the evening, continuing until Sunday evening, Dec. 8. As an immediate result three promising young people accepted Christ as their Savior and were baptized, and one was restored to fellowship. Bro. Edwards preached the Word with power, and endeared himself very much to the people while here. He is thinking some of making this his home, since he is well pleased with the country and the prospect of building up a strong congregation of good people in this, the heart of the great mission field of the South. We would be very glad indeed, if any of our Brethren, who may be traveling southward to spend the winter, would stop off at Lawrenceburg, to render any assistance they may be able to give.—A. M. Bashore, Lawrenceburg, Tenn., Dec. 21.

TEXAS

Bethel.—Dec. 18 Bro. J. A. Miller came to us. On account of rain and bad roads, we could not have services at night. We held our council Dec. 19. Bro. J. A. Miller was chosen as elder, Sister Ella Miller as "Messenger" agent, and Bro. Willis Neff, Sunday-school superintendent. On account of sickness we have not kept up our services regularly for some time. We meet on Sunday evenings in a community sing, which is enjoyed by all.—Minerva Strohm, Kenedy, Texas, Dec. 22.

Manvel.—Bro. J. H. B. Williams was with us Dec. 1 and 2, giving us some very interesting sermons. Bro. Brubaker, of Necona, preached the remainder of the week. We had our love feast Dec. 7. The following Sunday five accessions. Bro. J. Wm. Miller, of San Antonio, expected to be with us throughout the week, to help with the singing, but was called home because of illness. Dec. 14 we met in council. We elected our officers for the coming year, with Bro. M. H. Peters, elder; Bro. J. O. Raligh, Sunday-school superintendent and Sister June Badger, Christian Workers' Society president.—Ethel O. Peters, Manvel, Tex., Dec. 16.

VIRGINIA

Bethlehem.—The Thanksgiving offering, taken at Bethlehem, as recently reported, amounted to $66.35. On the first Sunday an offering of $2 was given at the White Oak schoolhouse; one of $25 at Blackwater Chapel and one of $42 at Cedar Bluff,—all pretty good for the Bethlehem congregation. These amounts, with a few checks sent by other individuals, bring the total Thanksgiving offering up to $145. Half of this amount goes to the General Mission Board and half to the war sufferers. —S. E. Bowman, Elk Run, Va., Dec. 19.

Mine Run church met in council Dec. 14, with Eld. D. M. Glick presiding. Bro. D. M. Quinn was appointed Sunday-school superintendent for next year. Eld. D. M. Glick was chosen as elder for another year. We did not have any church services in October, on account of influenza.—R. Anna Britton, Rhodesville, Va., Dec. 18.

Peters Creek church met in council Dec. 7, with Bro. C. E. Eller as moderator. Officers for 1919 were elected, with Brethren Miller Neff and A. T. Henry, "Messenger" agents, and Bro. Neff, writer, correspondent. There was $209 dan ou the Mason's Cove churchhouse, built last spring. That amount, with enough to cover some other small debts, was easily raised by volunteer subscriptions, and so we enter the New Year free of debt. Sister Lizzie Wimmer was received as an elder's wife, not having been present when her husband was ordained. Letters were granted to Bro. J. E. Wimmer and family. Bro. Wimmer goes to Selma, Va., as pastor and elder of the church there. We wish them much success in their new field of labor.—Mildred Neff, Roanoke, Va., Dec. 20.

Trevilian church met in council Dec. 14, with Eld. I. N. H. Beahm presiding. Bro. Isaac Neff was chosen elder for the coming year. Sister F. M. White was elected Sunday-school superintendent. Bro. F. M. White, of Belmont, has moved into the Trevilian congregation. We are glad to have him and his family with us. He has consented to conduct a teacher-training class for us, beginning with the first of the year.—Rebecca Glick, Trevilian, Va., Dec. 20.

WASHINGTON

East Wenatchee church met in council Dec. 14, with Eld. M. F. Sharp presiding. Among the items of business was the adoption of a constitution which, we believe, will be a great help to the working plans of our church. Bro. Warren Sisbaugh was chosen elder, with Bro. J. J. Filbrun, assistant. Sister Cleo Hemlnger was elected as president of the Christian Workers' Society. Because of the growth of our Sunday-school, it became advisable to organize a Junior Department. We now have three departments. With our new officers we hope to have a very prosperous new year. We expect to have a series of meetings and Bible Institute soon after the first of January. Bro. Warren Sisbaugh will conduct the Institute, and Bro. Paul Mohler will do the preaching. These are the joint services of the Wenatchee and East Wenatchee churches. Our love feast was postponed for the present, on account of the influenza.—Mrs. E. R. Eikenberry, East Wenatchee, Wash., Dec. 16.

Olympia church met in council Dec. 17, with Eld. D. R. Eby presiding. Officers were elected for the coming year, with Bro. Eby as elder, Sister Mary Lehman, church correspondent; Bro. Wesley Lehman, Sunday-school superintendent. Bro. Warren Sisbaugh, of Kendall, Wash., will hold two weeks' Bible institute, beginning Dec. 23. Our love feast will be held at the close of our Institute, Jan. 4.—Bettie Shumate, Olympia, Wash., Dec. 21.

WEST VIRGINIA

Beaver Run.—Our Thanksgiving offering for World-wide Missions was $36.75. The Sunday-school added $6 to this. At the recent council meeting our Sunday-school was reorganized, with Bro. E. M. Miller, superintendent. As presiding elder for 1919, Bro. G. S. Arnold was reappointed. It was also decided to hold the love feast Oct. 4, and continue in a series of meetings. We decided to hold a Bible term of one week during the latter part of November. We will take an offering on the first Sunday in January for the Armenian sufferers.—O. S. Arnold, Burlington, W. Va., Dec. 23.

Rockley congregation met in council Dec. 14. Two committees were appointed and two letters granted. Dec. 1 three of our ministers were ordained to the eldership by Elders O. S. Arnold and Peter Arnold.—A. L. Stites, Antioch, W. Va., Dec. 18.

WISCONSIN

Rice Lake.—Dec. 2 Bro. J. Edson Ulery, of Onekama, Mich., came to us, to give us a series of eighteen soul-inspiring sermons. The members were greatly strengthened and encouraged, and we are looking to a continued future fruit from the work in the future. While the attendance was good, it was not what it would have been, had there been less sickness in the town. Some of our members were not permitted to attend any of the meetings because of sickness. Personal work was also much handicapped. The weather was beautiful all during the meetings. Bro. Ulery closed his meetings on Sunday evening, Dec. 15, and went to Winona, Minn., to help in arranging the program for our coming Conference. At our recent Thanksgiving service an offering was sent to the General Mission Fund, amounting to $7.25. We would like to get in touch with any members that are contemplating a change of location, as we feel that we have advantages worthy of consideration. We are desirous of having more workers located with us, as we have a large field and a good opportunity for personal work.—Wm. H. Eller, Rice Lake, Wis., Dec. 17.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL LESSON COMMENTARIES

Commentaries put the very cream of all that has been written on the lesson passage at the finger tips of the teacher.

Wide-awake teachers use gnod commentaries. Our commentaries were never better than they are this year.

Thornton's Pocket Lesson Commentary, ...25c

You cannot find a more keen or illuminating little commentary on the Sunday-school lessons for the whole year. Limp vellum; 160 pages. Exact size 2½ x 5½ inches. Just fits the vest pocket.

Providential Preparation

You would think that such a wonderful work as God had marked out for Moses would call for a very wonderful kind of preparation. It did. His preparation was wonderful. And yet so natural. It was not suddenly and miraculously dropped down on him from the skies. He got it through a long, a very long, train of events. It was made up of experience with people and things,—the people and things he would need to understand.

How, in spite of the designs of wicked men, his life was saved, and the first years of it spent in the lap of his own mother, where he drank in the purest of spiritual, as well as physical, nourishment; and how the next years came to be spent in the court of Pharaoh, where he had access to all the "wisdom of the Egyptians"; and how still other long years were spent in the wilderness, through which he was later to lead his people,—all this is wonderful indeed, and he is hopelessly stupid who does not see in it the beneficent Providence of God. But that Providence,—let it carefully be noted,—consisted not in conferring wisdom and preparedness upon him, but in providing him with the opportunities.

That is the way God prepares men for service now. Not until you have made diligent use of all the means at your command will it be time to ask why God has not given you such an equipment for life as he gave Moses. And then you will not care to ask. You will be too busy in the field of service into which God has led you.

Why It Is Called "Movement"

It is because the idea is that it should move. If that seems to you unnecessary, please suggest a better way of getting "forward."

Inertia,—Norton's "Natural Philosophy" used to say,—is that property of matter, by virtue of which a body tends to retain its present state. Something like that comfortable feeling that steals over you the first warm days of spring.

Sorry to disturb you, brother, but the time has come for you to move. Souls are perishing for want of the Bread of Life. The only way to help them is to go where they are. That means we'll have to move.

It's the seductive comfort of that "present state" that hinders. We must move. The trouble is with you and you and you and me. When we all get to going, the church will move. And then it will go forward.

Making and Using Money

In a recent course of reading, the following gems were noted down on money-getting and money-using:

Every dollar that a man has should be used to the glory and honor of God.

If a man's pocketbook is not converted with his soul, the man will not get to heaven with it.

It is not wrong for a man to make money, but it is wrong for him to spend it foolishly.

There are certain things that money alone can secure, but among the things it can not secure or buy, is a good character.

If men loved men as they love the almighty dollar, the millennium would be just around the corner.

Wealth is a curse unless the owners of it bless the world with it.

Everything a man has is God's. On that profound principle the whole of human life should rest. We are not our own,—we are bought with a price.

The first duty of every man who has money is to ask himself: What would Christ have me do with it? The second is to go and do it after hearing the answer.

"Whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?"

Most of the evils of our present condition flow out of the love of money. The almighty dollar is the God of Protestant America.

The teaching of Christianity about wealth is the same as about anything else: It all belongs to God and should be used by man as God would use it in man's place.

It is a great mistake, which many people make,—church members among the rest,—that the money they get is their own, to do with as they please. Men have no right to use anything as they please unless God pleases so, too.

It is just as true now as when Paul said it, nearly twenty centuries ago: "The love of money is a root of all kinds of evil." It is the curse of civilization,—the greatest god of the human race today.

If all the money, owned by church members, were spent to the honor and glory of God, there would be fewer costly dwellinghouses and houses of worship, fewer expensive automobiles, and very much more money given for the great mission work and spreading of the Gospel.

All wealth, from the Christian standpoint, is in the nature of trust funds, to be used as the Administrator,—God,—shall direct. No man owns the money for himself. The gold is God's, the silver is God's. That is the plain and repeated teaching of the Bible.

The church that thinks more of fine architecture and costly furnishings, than of opening its doors to all people that may want to hear the Gospel, is a church that is mortgaged to the devil for all it is worth, and he will foreclose the mortgage at the first opportunity.

The foolish, unnecessary expenditure of money by the world, and church members, too, on their trivial pleasures, at a time when men, women and children are starving and crying for food, is a cruel and unchristian waste of opportunity and of God's gold.

A careful reading and study of these gems of thought on the money question will be most helpful. If found true, live them out in your life and so please God.

The Forward Movement at the Mission Board Meeting

Last week the Secretary of the General Mission Board gave us a comprehensive view of the business transacted by the Board at its December meeting. Since he could not speak at length of the numerous matters mentioned, we have asked his permission to state, in a little more detail, what the Board did about the Forward Movement. The program had already been adopted, as Messenger readers are aware, so that there was no question on that point. But the Board fully understands that laying out a program and making it effective are two entirely different things. It is under no illusions as to the nature of the task it has undertaken. In evidence of this, we think you will be interested in certain measures considered and agreed upon.

Of these none seems to us more significant than the preparation of some special Forward Movement literature. A group of leaflets, bearing on various phases of the program, was authorized. In fact some of the manuscript is already in hand. Arrangements for this literature are not yet complete, but the following definite assignments have been made.

Bro. H. C. Early, Chairman of the Board, will tell "What the Board Would Do With $250,000 Annually." "Fifteen New Missionaries Annually for the Next Five Years,—Is It Possible?" is to be answered by Bro. Galen B. Royer, of Juniata College, and long associated with the Mission Board's activities. Bro. E. H. Eby, who has just returned to the India field, will discuss "The Local Missionary Committee and Its Work." "A Workable Plan of Systematic Giving" is to be worked out and described by Bro. Ross D. Murphy, of Shippensburg, Pa. Sister Martha Martin, of Elizabethtown, Pa., is preparing a treatise on "Mission Study for Juniors." Bro. Edgar Rothrock, of Holmesville, Nebr., Secretary of the Tract Examining Committee, has been assigned the subject, "A New Mission Station Annually in Each State District." He is to tell how this can be done and what it will mean for the Home Mission Work. "Wanted,—Three Hundred Men Annually for the Ministry" is the inspiring theme to be handled by Bro. V. F. Schwalm, of Manchester College. Bro. J. H. Cassady, of Huntingdon, Pa., one of our most experienced evangelists, will outline "An Evangelistic Campaign for the Church of the Brethren." Finally, the Secretary himself, Bro. J. H. B. Williams, will have something to say about "The Forward Movement Idea" and "The Resources of the Church Mobilized for Service."

"Finally" is hardly the proper word, however, in the last sentence, as other topics and writers will certainly be added to the list. Besides this, the Secretary is not likely to be the last of the group in responding to his assignment.

It may be that you are wondering what the Board intends to do with this literature and, in particular, whether any of it is likely to have any bearing on your plans. If so, we suggest that you write the Secretary and ask him whether you are to be bothered with it, or whether there is anything you need to do about it.

A careful reading of the foregoing list of subjects and writers, or possibly even a casual reading of it, is enough to show that the Forward Movement program is not regarded by the Mission Board as a mere device for whiling time away at its meetings, but that it is taking the matter seriously. Consider a little further testimony to the same effect.

You are probably familiar with the efforts of the General Sunday School Board to encourage Sunday-school efficiency by suggesting certain definite requirements as a condition of being recognized as a standard Sunday-school. Notwithstanding the limitations of all methods of this kind, the plan has proved its usefulness. The Mission Board decided to make use of the same method in promoting congregational efficiency in respect to missions. The matter was not worked out fully, but the main points in such a "standard" were considered and tentatively adopted. Would you like to know what they are?

Remember that this is only tentative and incomplete, but it was agreed that any church, to be regarded as a standard congregation, should be able to meet some such requirements as these: The pastor or elder in full sympathy with missions, some plan of systematic giving, at least one mission study class a year, a missionary superintendent in the Sunday-school, a missionary committee in accordance with the 1911 Conference decision, faithfulness in meeting all District apportionments, special missionary sermons at least semiannually, a missionary library.

Wouldn't something like that be a very modest missionary standard? Look it over again carefully and then ask yourself whether your congregation measures up to it. If it does not, ask yourself another question: Is any part of the responsibility yours? If such a list of tangible points were tacked on the wall of your church somewhere, would it help, possibly, to keep the whole membership reminded of their obligations?

Bro. Williams referred last week to the Board's contemplated "drive" for a Conference offering. It is believed that this offering should be worthy of the occasion and the cause, as well as of the resources with which God has so abundantly blessed us. To this end the Board has in mind a more thoroughly organized effort than has ever been made before, something after the manner of the numerous financial campaigns which were so successfully carried through in connection with the war. It is certainly a shame that the children of this world should be so much wiser in their generation than the children of light. Shall we not learn some measure of that wisdom?

Of all these matters you will learn more in due time. The chief purpose of these remarks is to assure you that in launching this Forward Movement our Church Boards fully realize that it is no child play; that they have undertaken the direction of this campaign with a vigor worthy of the high ends in view; that they mean business and are counting on the loyal coöperation of every member of the church.

Elders and pastors, are you awaking to the opportunities before you? Are you marshalling your forces for the great 1919 offensive? Are you ready? Have you begun to move? And will you keep on and on, "stretching forward" until "this gospel of the Kingdom shall be preached in the whole world" and "till we all attain . . . unto the stature of the fulness of Christ"?

The Military Exemption Act of 1903

In our last article we had something to say regarding the part the Brethren should take in making war impossible. In this one we call attention to some observations, respecting the enactment and application of the law relating to the exemption of members of nonresistant religious bodies from active military duty. We need not call up the experiences of our Brethren during the Revolutionary War, the War of 1812 and the late struggle between the North and the South. It is only to the world-wide war and some things leading up to certain privileges granted us during the war, that we wish to refer.

In 1903 a bill entitled, "An Act to Promote the Efficiency of the Military, and for Other Purposes," was introduced in Congress, and after being fully discussed and amended, was passed by both the Senate and the House. The bill contained twenty-six sections. Section two deals with those exempted from active military duty, such as Vice-president, members of Congress, customhouse officers and clerks, postmasters and others. At the end of this section there is a proviso reading as follows:

"Provided, That nothing in this Act shall be construed to require or compel any member of any well-organized religious sect or organization, at present organized and existing, whose creed forbids its members to participate in war in any form, and whose religious convictions are against war or participation therein, in accordance with the creed of said religious organization, to serve in military or any other armed or volunteer force under the jurisdiction and authority of the United States."

In its original form, and before being passed by either House, the bill did not contain this section. At the time there lived in Washington a very intelligent gentleman, whose relatives, then living in Virginia, were members of the Mennonite Church. Going over the bill carefully, he observed that no provisions had been made for members of religious bodies opposed to participating in war. Being on good terms with the chairman of the committee, having the bill in charge, he called his attention to what seemed to him a grave defect in the bill. The chairman, who happened to be well acquainted with the Brethren in Virginia and some other States, as well as some other nonresistant bodies, readily perceived what hardships such a bill, in case of war, might produce for the members of these religious organizations. Between the two the proviso, as quoted above, was worked out, introduced and incorporated in the bill, which passed both the Senate and the House in that form. The bill, including the noncombatant proviso, being satisfactory to Roosevelt, then President, was signed by him Jan. 21, 1903. This, it will be observed, was eleven years before the European war broke out.

When the United States entered the war and plans were drawn up to raise an immense army, due notice of this proviso was taken by the President and the military department, so that, when the military regulations were published, the noncombatant clause was made to stand out quite clearly. This proved very satisfactory to our people, to the Quakers, the Mennonites and other nonmilitary organizations. In the working out of the draft, however, all drafted noncombatants experienced more or less difficulty in securing exemption from active military duties. Right at this point our members were not as well prepared for the situation as they should have been, and yet, where the cases of drafted young brethren were handled skillfully, they fared as well as could have been expected.

The military heads at Washington showed due consideration for the conscientious scruples of the members of the churches opposed to war, but this can not be said of all those entrusted with the execution of the nonmilitary regulations. In not a few instances some of our young brethren were subject to considerable humiliation, and at times their treatment bordered on persecution. This was no fault of the law passed by Congress in 1903, or the instructions sent out from Washington. It seems not to have been understood that the very bill, providing for the exemption of members of nonresistant religious organizations from active military duties, was signed by Roosevelt, who, during the late war, denounced the actions of those who claimed such exemption on account of their religion.

Right on this hangs a story that has not yet appeared in print. Those who have read some of the books, written by Mr. Roosevelt before he was dreamed of for President, will recall some very severe statements that he made against certain religious people, who refused to take an active part in some of the wars in which even our country was engaged. Well, when he ran for a second term of office, all these statements were selected, printed in a little tract and widely distributed by certain of his opponents, with a view of turning as many of the voters of nonwar religious bodies, as possible, against him.

The one who helped frame the religious exemption proviso of the Military Act of 1903 came to Elgin, with a view of having the MESSENGER take the matter up and expose Mr. Roosevelt's attitude regarding people holding nonresistant views on account of religious scruples. We had a long talk on the subject.

In the meantime we wrote Congressman Hitt, who was then in Washington, and had him sound the President regarding the hard things that he had written years before against the members of the churches opposed to war. Mr. Hitt had been supplied with extracts from the writings of Mr. Roosevelt and took the matter up with him. He then wrote us a very nice letter, saying that he felt sure that the views of the President had undergone very favorable modifications regarding the nonmilitary views of the Brethren, Mennonites and Quakers, and he was quite sure that in event of war he would insist on no violation of conscience along this line. There the matter rested, so far as the MESSENGER was concerned. We said nothing about the widely-circulated extracts, much to the disappointment of the gentleman who called on us at Elgin and some of the Brethren who had become a little stirred up over what, to them, seemed a serious political situation.

We are telling all this to show that the exemption of our people from active military duty is a matter that was worked out, passed by Congress and approved by President Roosevelt before the European war was dreamed of by the masses in the United States. Let it be remembered that the military Act of 1903 superseded all previous regulations respecting the exemption of nonresistant bodies from military service, and the importance of the Act, so far as the Brethren are concerned, will be quite apparent. Surely, the Lord had a hand in this.

But the world war is now over, having ended, as we think, in the interest of that which is best for mankind. Generally speaking, our boys were well cared for, and not one of us should now fail to show due gratitude to the Government for respecting our views, and protecting us in our religious rights. Respecting war, the attitude of the church has undergone no change. We were driven out of Germany on account of our opposition to militarism and have now lived to see the day when our peace claims are being taken up by the best thinkers of the world, and in time these tenets are destined to become more popular than the war spirit ever was. We are not to change our nonmilitary attitude. Instead of surrendering or modifying our peace claims, it becomes our duty to emphasize and strengthen them, and, along with others of like views, help push them to the front and keep them there until wars shall be entirely abolished from the earth. Taking this view of the situation, our people have tremendous responsibilities resting upon them. J. H. M.

The Open Way into the Book of Revelation

SEVERAL years ago our brother, Eld. M. M. Eshelman, published a book with the above title. A number of copies were sold, and satisfaction was given to those who read it. Since the publication of the book, our dear brother has lost his eyesight, and the world is in darkness to him. There are yet unsold several hundred copies of the book, and he has great need of the money invested in them. In order to have them sold, he has reduced the price from one dollar to fifty cents. If you do not have a copy, the opportunity is offered you now, to secure a copy at a very low price, at the same time exercising the privilege of helping our needy brother.

The book is prepared in studies, with five hundred questions and answers, and as many quotations from the Scriptures. Our brother spent a busy year in getting it ready for the press. You will find it well worth what you give for it. The book is well bound in cloth. Will you kindly make an effort to sell these books and thus give the author needed help? Send fifty cents to the Brethren Publishing House, with your address, and the book will be sent postage prepaid. If you feel to do so, send a dollar, get two books, and give one to a friend. Please help!

Peace Over Earth Again

Rejoice, O world of troubled men;
For peace is coming back again,—
Peace to the trenches running red,
Peace to the hosts of the fleeing dead,
Peace to the fields where hatred raves,
Peace to the trodden battle graves.

'Twill be the peace the Master left
To hush the world of peace bereft,—
The peace proclaimed in lyric cries
That night the angels broke the skies.
Again the shell-torn hills will be
All green with barley to the knee;
And little children sport and run
In love once more with earth and sun.

Again in rent and ruined trees
Young leaves will sound like silver seas;
And birds now stunned by the red uproar
Will build in happy boughs once more;
And to the bleak, uncounted graves
The grass will run in silken waves;
And a great hush will softly fall
On tortured plain and mountain wall.
Now wild with cries of battling hosts
And curses of the fleeing ghosts.

And men will wonder over it,—
This red unflanking of the pit;
And they will gather as friends and say:
"Come, let us try the Master's way.
Ages we tried the way of swords,
And earth is weary of hostile hordes.
Comrades, read out his words again:
They are the only hope of men!
Love and not hate must come to birth;
Christ and not Cain must rule the earth."

The Best for God

BY EZRA FLORY

WHAT Ezra and Nehemiah fail to tell, of the condition of the Jews after their return from the captivity, the prophets give us in a portrait of the moral conditions. Malachi calls upon his people to present their offering to the governor who would not accept their lame and sick. He accuses them of robbing God to their own undoing. The spirit of that age is apparent in the inability of these people to discern moral values. Hear them: "Wherein hast thou loved us?" "Wherein have we despised thy name?" "Wherein have we polluted thine altar?" "Wherein have we wearied thee?" "Wherein shall we return?" "Wherein have we robbed thee?" "Wherein have we spoken against thee?" God should have the best in offerings, in worship, in service.

He who berates the Christian is not rendering the best to God. He who neglects the Word, or tries to belittle it, is not giving God the best. He who persistently lauds another institution above the one for which Christ died, and of which he is himself the Head, is not giving God the best. Mothers who are prone to talk about the glory of dress, and then rebuke little children for boasting of their new shoes or new clothes, can not give God the best. The father who at the table commends himself for some shrewd device by which he makes money out of another's loss, and then scolds his son for greed in overreaching another child, is not giving God the best.

Thus we might continue to turn the searchlight upon various activities and find interesting correlations. Let us turn it once more,—this time upon our religious education. When we consider that we are giving twenty-five hours to secular education and but one hour to religious teaching; twenty-seven dollars to the former and ninety-four cents to the latter; trained teachers and good equipment to the former, and teachers with little or no training and meager equipment for the latter, we raise the question: "Are we giving the best to God?".

Mr. Magee studied the catalogues of forty-five denominational colleges. He found that twenty of these provide for no religious education other than Bible study; only seven offered courses in religious psychology; eight offered courses in pedagogy for Sunday-school teachers; four provided courses for the study of denominational history; eleven offered study in Christian missions. The more remote the subject was from religion, the larger the schedule of hours, except in the one course of Bible study. We should remember that these institutions, as a rule, were established upon the theory that they were to impart a religious form of education. Mr. Magee concludes thus: "Is there any possible connection between what has just been said and the present poverty of our churches in religious workers? Should our churches longer be compelled to depend upon mere novices, when other fields are demanding experts?"

God has a right to our best in religious education. There is no such thing as cheating God. "With what measure ye mete it shall be measured to you again," will apply here as elsewhere.

A Bird's-Eye View of a Missionary Sunday-School

BY W. G. NYCE

WHEN my friend, whom I was visiting, said: "Sunday-school is at 9:30 tomorrow morning," I experienced no thrill. I had not missed a Sunday for twenty years, except for sickness or some other matter beyond control, and so, to go with him to his Sunday-school, was a matter of course, and I considered the prospect with perfect calmness of mind. Even when he added: "You may be called on to speak a few minutes, as you are so interested in missions, and ours is a missionary Sunday-school," I was unperturbed. I had often done that. So I slept that night without any premonition of the rare and delightful experience which was to be mine the next day.

It was a bright, sunny morning when we got into the car, and started the three-mile journey to the church, which I remembered was located on the corner of two of the principal streets of the neighboring town. Two or three cars were ahead of us, one came up behind, and another turned into our little procession from a crossroad. Presently we were stopped at a railroad crossing, and I discovered three more cars held up ahead of our line, with more still coming in the rear.

"You have the same Sunday joy-riding crowd as we have at home, I see," I said to my host. He looked at me a moment, and laughed.

"Behind us are the Lawries, going to our Sunday-school. Ahead of us is Bro. Davis with his big family; also going to our Sunday-school. I'll venture that every car in this line is going to the Brethren Sunday-school."

He got up and looked backward and forward, along the line, and remarked, as he sat down again: "Yes, they're all going with us."

The train had moved on by this time, and after a short run we pulled up to let the women alight, and then found a position in a long row of cars by the curb, which stretched down one whole square, and half way up the other side. We hastened back to the church, where it looked to me as if there must be a Convention on, or a District Meeting, or something,—crowds of happy-faced, enthusiastic people, old and young, were pressing into the three large entrances with an eagerness that seemed to indicate a fear they would miss something unless they got in on time.

Over the central doorway were grouped four large flags,—an American, a British, a Japanese sun and a Chinese Dragon.

"Quite a patriotic display," I remarked to my friend, as we passed in.

"Oh," he replied, "those are the flags of the countries where we are doing business,—branch Sunday-schools, so to speak. The American flag is for the homeland, of course, the British for India, where we are paying the running expenses of a Sunday-school, and the others are for Japan and China, where also we are maintaining two schools. All the money given in those schools is spent for missionary work elsewhere, and we pay their expenses."

My eye caught an array of striking posters on the wall of the corridor we were passing through, each one having something to do with the need of the Gospel in every land. My friend informed me that these were all prepared by pupils of the school. Some were in black with pencil or brush, and some in colored crayons, while one was a most creditable water color, and I thought at once of the consecrated little artist who had done this service for the Master. Interspersed also were many pictures from magazines, with prints of leaders of the past, and here and there a telling motto.

On the walls of the Sunday-school room mottoes and inscriptions also maintained their silent work of education. One of these, in particular, impressed itself forcefully upon my mind. It was this: "What shall it profit a Sunday-school if it gain the whole town, and lose the spirit of missions?"

Three beautiful silk service flags hung in suitable positions in the big room. And not one of them was military. One was inscribed: "Enlisted and Serving in Foreign Mission Work." On the blue ground of this flag there were nine white stars, and one gold one,—indicating that one worker would never come home on a furlough.

On the second flag, the inscription at the top of which read: "Engaged in Home Mission Work," there were fourteen white stars.

The third flag bore a constellation of 125 stars, and the inscription read, "Enlisted, Trained and at Work in Special Service in the Home Church." There were five gold stars upon this flag.

All these workers were upon the same basis of recognition, and honored alike by the home church, and this, I thought, would be about the way the Master himself would look upon it.

Fully five hundred people were in attendance,—521 as the wall board disclosed later, when the secretary had made his rounds. These all united in the Assembly, which was a frequent feature of this school,—all departments joining in the opening service in the main auditorium. I expected to see or hear some reference to missions in this opening exercise, but, to my surprise, I did not, nor later in the closing. I learned that it is an invariable custom to hold a Missionary Five Minutes once a month, after the lesson period,—and this did not happen to be a Missionary Sunday. This was varied every three months by one or another of the departments giving a fifteen or twenty-minute missionary program, and once a year, or oftener as the Lord sent the opportunity, an entire day was devoted to a missionary demonstration of some kind. But plainly, as I could see for myself, the effort was made not to overdo the subject to the exclusion of other good and necessary Sunday-school interests.

The plan seemed to be to keep the atmosphere intensely missionary. This resulted in a natural and perennially-vigorous class interest, which would find its own irrepressible expression, and I was informed that never a Sunday passed without the work in other lands receiving attention, or being used as an illustration in most of the classes.

In the Antiochers' Class of men, named after the first missionary center, where I was given a seat, the secretary, after the Class business had been disposed of, and just before the lesson, drew from his pocket a letter which he waved exultantly. It bore an Indian post-mark, and the men all looked expectant. It was from a former member of the class, now a missionary in India, and the reading of it was received with great enthusiasm. Among other things, the writer made reference to the need of new tires on the automobile that the boys had given him a year before. The writer said: "I'm afraid I'll soon have to walk again, but I certainly have been able to make time this year." In a few minutes the bearer of a hat was around the class, and had $100, which was handed to the Treasurer, a motion being passed to send it for this particular need.

The lesson for the day was: "Jacob Fleeing from His Angry Brother," and the teacher had two of the men ready with short talks on "Armenia, the Land to Which Jacob Fled," and "Present-Day Mission Work Among the Arabian Mohammedans."

I do not know just how classes in the other departments gave expression to the dominant interest, though I do happen to know, from overhearing the conversation of several women, as we stood in the aisle after dismissal, that one of the organized classes of women, in its business session that day, arranged for a survey of the town, and surrounding country, plotting out the streets and townships among the seventy-two available members of the class, whose business it was to obtain an informal religious census of the field. The idea was impressed upon me that far-away was not designed to operate to the exclusion of close-at-hand.

I peeped into the Primary Room, and bumped into the young superintendent as she was coming out with an armful of books and papers, and a beaming face. She seemed to appreciate my open admiration of her very wonderful collection of working materials. In one corner of the room she had arranged what I at first thought was a fish-pond. One one side of a large shallow pan full of water at what was evidently a representation of a dock, was moored a little yacht, the kind you get at the five-and-ten-cent store. On the other side a sand bank led up to a miniature jungle and a little kraal, and close by, in a little creek, was moored a tiny canoe. This was Africa, and trips were taken by the children, and supplies sent across in the little vessel, and one or two of the teachers, upon the other side, brought out the little "natives," and I could readily see how the whole thing could be made very realistic indeed.

In another corner, upon a table, had been erected a cunning little tea-house, and it did not need the little sunken garden, with its rustic bridge, and other well-known native objects about the place, to tell me that this was Japan. Three missionaries from Japan on furlough, and a Japanese student visiting this room, had left their autographs with the superintendent, and these were tacked up upon little posts and served as garden decorations.

The two other corners of the room and an alcove had representations of India, China and South America, and the superintendent told me enthusiastically what good times the children had in visiting these different lands, and what stores of information they were acquiring.

"Here is where missionary careers are begun,—in this room," she said. "And I expect to go over, too, in a few years, after I have finished my training as a nurse."

The offering that day was $49.50,—and the amount was no sooner on the wall-board, than two or three young fellows, in a class near the board, beckoned to the secretary, and presently the record read an even $50. Fifty dollars was an average offering, and it all went to some form of mission work, the expenses of the school being abundantly provided by free will and unsolicited offerings direct to the treasurer.

The spirit of that Sunday-school was life, and the chief desire seemed to be to help others to enter into it. They gathered around me,—a total stranger to them all,—as if I had been a long-lost brother, and the pleasant and happy impressions that I carried away with me will not soon be forgotten.

I was endeavoring to find words to express this to my friend while we were riding home in the car. Then we both turned our attention to what Jennie, the daughter, was telling her mother: "We had such a good time in our class today. Miss Annie likened the story of Jacob leaving home to that of the Prodigal Son, and then she told about a Prodigal daughter that she knew of, and she told it all so tenderly and touchingly that she had us all crying. And when she asked us if any of us wanted to start back home today, six of our girls gave themselves to Jesus."

And my friend said softly to me: "Missions did it all."

True Courage

BY MRS. J. W. BARNETT

In these days of trial, sorrow and suffering, when men and women have been tested as to their position and part in the great world family, we are made more and more personally responsible, and our own individuality is severely tried. Our interests are becoming broader. We are thrown together more, and we are beginning to see all nations as one great family, and God as our Father.

As members of that human family are we facing the great questions and issues of the present, with fidelity and courage, making ourselves, as brother and sister to all, worthy members of this household, to lift and draw all men to the Father?

To be an elevating, uplifting power one must not lose his individuality in the rush, and go on with the crowd. One must have the courage of his convictions. This characteristic seems to be the word of the hour, and yet true courage appears to be sadly lacking in the world. How great and admirable the trait when exhibited in the life!

But what is real courage? To be brave enough to do the right regardless of consequences. But some, through wrong teaching and environment, have a depraved idea of what is right or what is true courage. Some do the things they believe to be right. Like Paul, they are to be admired for being conscientious. I wonder, in this day of Bibles everywhere, how many would like to place themselves in this crowd.

Then there are those who have had a different environment, who really feel smitten in conscience, but who desire to be like other people,—popular. Oh, what a position this,—to be popular! Such people are moral cowards. Yes, even if they do not like the word, it applies to them. Some are too big cowards to endure criticism. It takes more "backbone," more manhood to refuse to do wrong than it does to partake of or practice evil, even in the face of great physical danger. Exercise of brute force is not courage. There is nothing brave or noble about this. To endure being persecuted, slurred and derided because of principle, is courage which can never be measured or appreciated on earth.

Daniel was a beautiful example of this type of courage. Oh, how many times, in Sunday-school and home, we have studied and admired his life! Yet can we and do we live his life in 1918? Jesus took the unpopular trail. How few today are willing really to march beside him! Truly, we partake of the communion, but do we participate in his bodily sufferings? Will the cup be drained even to persecution?

Meditation upon these beautiful lives of faith can not help but impart true moral courage. How marvelous the reward of faith! And no less grand and glorious will be the reward of those who, today, get the broader vision of our place and power in the world, and stand firm for every word that fell from the lips of our Master.

Be brave, be truly courageous, and the power of God's Spirit will fill the soul, joy and peace will abide within, and the whole creation, which is waiting for the revealing of the Christ Spirit, by the children of God, will recognize and be drawn to that beautiful life.

Fruitless Unrest

BY W. J. SWIGART

A sound mind is the greatest thing in the world. Sane thinking is the highest attainment of a human being. Correct judgment and right discrimination are the highest marks of a man. Good common sense is a most serviceable and desirable quality of mind and heart.

Simple and commonplace as these statements may seem, these qualities are not as commonly possessed as one might suppose.

Wisdom is the needed quality,—not superior mental power or poetic genius,—just common sense. Not knowledge, but sense to use that knowledge. Not great skill or power, but discretion to direct the skill and power one has. This is what wisdom is. Not the discovery of truth, but the application of the truth in personal affairs, is what counts. "If to do were as easy as to know what were good to do, chapels had been churches and poor men's cottages princes' palaces. It is a good divine that follows his own instruction. I can easier teach twenty men what were good to be done, than be one of the twenty to follow my own teaching. The brain may devise laws for the blood, but a hot temper leaps over a cold decree." So Portia rattles on in playful philnsosphy to Nerissa. "Wisdom is the principal thing, therefore, get wisdom." "Wisdom is better than riches." We freely grant the truth of all these trite sayings; but too often fail in the application of them to our own individual experience and doings.

The truth of all this becomes apparent at different times and in regard to different aspects of life and living. There is much useless and fruitless and bootless disaffection and unrest, because of vacillation and fickle judgment, lack of sense in choosing and deciding, failure to discern merit and make the best out of a course when once in it.

A mind of this sort, riding in a steam car, looks out and sees a trolley, and wishes he were in the trolley car instead of the steam car; or if in a trolley, seeing the fine pike, wishes he had come in an automobile,—never content with the choice that has been made nr the place in which he is. If he goes, he repents and wishes he had stayed at home; or if he stays at home he wishes he had gone. Instead of entering into the enjoyment of what he has and the profit and pleasure that rightly belong to the pursuit or place he is occupying, and making the most possible out of it, he is fretting himself over what he might have had, had he taken another course, or chosen another pursuit. By the time he is becoming proficient in some calling he begins to look out for another. Or, when he begins to prosper in one community, he moves to another.

There is a deal of camouflage in life. Things are not always what they seem, and people do not always see right. Distance gives enchantment to many views. The outside, or far-away, promises more than that which we have. "The pasture looks better in the next field," or even in the commons to the roving member of the grazing herd. Instead of enjoying the place one occupies he (or she) is discontented in looking at the place and position of others. Content and satisfaction with unchangeable conditions are desirable states of mind,—but all too rare. The prospect is brighter in the West to the discontent in the East. The teacher's wife thinks the farmer's wife has the more desirable place, while the farmer's wife wishes her husband had been a teacher or a preacher, instead of a farmer.

A boy in drilling pants and slouch straw hat, hot and tired,—and a bit lazy,—leaning on his fork in the hay meadow, gaping at the passing railroad train, wishes he could ride in that, instead of swelter under the boiling sun in the field. The odor of new mown hay comes in through the window of the royal and luxurious chair car and excites the pleasure and memory of the millionaire, sitting there and suffering from lack of bodily activity and brain fag, burdened with monstrous business cares and pressed with worrying responsibilities, hastening to a meeting of his Board, on the results of which hinge momentous consequences. (Anything that reminds us of our youth and childhood is interesting to us.) He looks from the window and admires "the boy with cheeks of tan and upturned pantaloons" and, remembering his own boyhood days, so full of health and so free from burdens and cares, wishes from his soul's depth he could exchange with the boy, and walk the meadow, take his fork and turn the hay, and get a full whiff of the wilting grass, eat as heartily and with as little peril to his aching stomach as the boy will do,—to fall asleep as quickly in the evening, and to be as hard to waken in the morning as he.

Alas for boy! Alas for man! There are plenty of "Maud Muller and the Judge" cases in the world. "Alas for judge! Alas for girl!"

> "Of all sad words of tongue or pen,
> The saddest are these: 'It might have been,'"

and many sentimental creatures have, with the illustrious author, sighed "alas" for both, that a prospective romance should be so ruthlessly thwarted.

But that is not the saddest moral in the story,—that Maud did not become the wife of the judge. That what might have happened didn't. The sadness is that both of them lost the real worth nf triumph or joy, or whatever of their own real state and station, in sighing over the prospective or visionary pleasure that might have been.

Bret Harte, in facetiously and yet philosophically paraphrasing the popular poem, changes a little the plot, and climaxes the romance with the actual marriage of Maud and the judge. Waiving sentiment and poetry and romance in favor of cold, hard facts, he represents the match as mismated in education, and unmated in culture and social qualities. They lived legally bound, but separate and apart in taste and spirit and sentiment. He lived his life and she lived hers. The house ill kept, she dozes in the presence of numerous and dirty children, while the judge entertains his friends alone in the library, or in the court chambers. Harte closes his parody with

> "The saddest words of tongue or pen,
> Are 'It is,—and hadn't ought to've been."

The stupid and persistent refusal to recognize the opportunities, the possibilities, the good and the desirable in the places, states and pursuits in which we are, loses for us half the sweets of life. The restless looking over the good that is already ours, and beholding the merits and charms that reside in the visionary fields that might be possessed, bring much disappointment, as well as failure, into human life. It is not only the grazing brute that sees the better grass in the next field, instead of cropping the sweet product at her feet. Many people do not get half out of life that is in it for them, because they do not pick up what is strewn in their pathway; because they do not appropriate what is afforded to them in their regular and ordinary vocations and avocations; because they do not partake of the sweets that are theirs for the taking.

Our eyes are very holden,—even our physical eyes are. We search and look fretfully for things that lie on the table right next to us, and see them not,—probably because they are so near to us. We live right in the midst of good and happiness, and recognize them not till they are clean gone forever. There are "books in running brooks, tongues in trees, sermons in stones and good in everything," had we but the quickened senses to perceive them and to interpret them.

The two disciples walked with Jesus and talked with him and ate with him, and yet their eyes were so holden that their burning hearts did not know it was he. "Hadst thou known the gift of God and who it is that speaks to thee," said Jesus to the woman at the well. Could we but know, or have consciousness of, the power and joy of full salvation and peace in Christ Jesus, that are ours just for the awakening and perceiving and possessing them! All have abundance of good things if they only could know it and enjoy it. It is not more blessings that any one of us needs, so much as it is a keener sense of perception and more alert appreciation of the blessings we already have.

It is a regrettable fact that it is often necessary that a blessing or a good be removed from us before we can appreciate its value. It is a pity that sight and hearing are scarcely thought of as blessings,—till they are gone. It is a pity that many persons never know how dear and precious and sacrificing is a mother's love and presence until she is dead, and the quiet and responseless face lies impassive, and ears are heedless, and the face unresponsive to the outpouring of love and appreciation for her devoted and beautiful life,—now closed and removed forever. Indeed, it is a pity that the privilege of repentance and the joy of reconciliation with God are rejected and flouted, often, till mercy is clean gone forever.

To return to the first thought of this article, and as a conclusion thereto,—the religion of Christ is the sanest thing in this world. It is said, and, I suppose, truthfully, that there is not an absolutely sane man on all subjects in all the world,—nor ever has been. God's thoughts are higher than man's thoughts and the nearest approach to a sane man is the one who thinks most like God thinks. God's Word tells us his thoughts or how he thinks. The best way to get our minds to be sound and sane, is to align them with the principles and teachings and tenets of the Christian religion,—to have within us the mind of Christ. "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting [correcting] the soul."

Clearing the Way

BY LEO LILLIAN WISE

Many a time, when my father and I would be out for a drive or walk, he would,—if there was an ugly stone or other obstruction in the path,—stop to remove the obstacle.

Once, when I was quite young, I asked: "Why do you do that?" He answered: "Well, it makes it easier for some one who will come along afterwhile."

Now the fact remains that we were not the first to pass by the obstruction referred to. Many others, oftentimes, had gone by, grumbling, no doubt, because of the inconvenience experienced, and yet it only took a few moments to remove the offending object.

Is it not true, many times, that in life's pathway many see obvious hindrances, but it remains for the one big-hearted person to take a little time to remove them, and clear the path. May you and I learn not only to see the stones, but also to remove them, making the pathway safe for those who follow us!

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

CALIFORNIA

Butte Valley.—Our church and Sunday-school were disenthused for three weeks on account of influenza. We have now had services again for three weeks and on Thanksgiving Day. Our collection was $37.06. The church was closed the second time for two weeks. We met in council Dec. 21 and elected church and Sunday-school officers for the coming year, with Bro. H. F. Moust, elder; Adaline Moore, "Messenger" agent and correspondent; Bro. O. M. Moore, superintendent of Sunday-school. Two families have left us and others are going soon. We regret this, as we are few in number and need their help. Next Sunday we will take a collection for Armenian and Syrian Relief.—Adaline Moore, Macdoel, Cal., Dec. 22.

Golden Gate Mission.—At our council, Dec. 6, we elected Sunday-school officers for the coming year, with Brethren John Reynolds and Joe Miller, superintendents. Our Christian Workers' officers for the coming six months were also elected, with Bro. John Rice and Sister Agnes Kerr, presidents. Dec. 22 our Sunday-school gave an interesting Christmas program. Dec. 21 Eld. D. L. Miller came to us, and preached on Sunday evening; also on Christmas morning. He gave a lecture on his travels in the Bible lands each evening during the week, except Saturday. We certainly enjoyed Bro. Miller's lectures and his stay with us.—Ivy Wolters, Oakland, Cal., Dec. 28.

Inglewood church met in council Dec. 7 for the election of officers. Bro. Wertenbaker was reelected elder and pastor and Bro. E. A. Culvert, Sunday-school superintendent. Dec. 15 the Mission Band of La Verne College gave a program. The talks, readings and songs were splendid and aroused the missionary spirit in all who heard them. The evening of about $6 was received for the expenses of the Mission Band. We held our Christmas service Dec. 22. Bro. Guthrie showed pictures concerning the birth and early childhood of Christ. He showed a number of Bible pictures while the solo "Jerusalem" was sung. Quite a collection of gifts of food and useful articles was received for distribution among the poor and needy. The Christmas offering, amounting to over $40, was given to the Armenian and Syrian Relief Fund. Three letters of membership were received at our last council.—Susan Stoner, Inglewood, Cal., Dec. 24.

La Verne congregation met in council Dec. 17, with Eld. S. J. Miller presiding. Eld. D. L. Miller, of Los Angeles, was called to the pastorate of our church. The annual election of officers resulted as follows: Elder, Bro. J. P. Dickey; assistant, Bro. S. J. Miller; Sunday-school superintendent, Bro. H. J. Vanimans; Christian Workers' president, Ina Marshburn. The work of renovating our church and installing pews is progressing, and we hope it will be finished in a week or two. Meanwhile we are having services in the college chapel.—Grace H. Miller, La Verne, Cal., Dec. 24.

Pomona church has again been holding services on Sunday, but the attendance has been somewhat limited on account of the influenza. The church held a business meeting, and after attending to some minor business elected Bro. D. L. Forney, of La Verne, formerly of Hedley, as pastor of the Pomona church. We are all very thankful for some one to accept the pastorate, and are thankful for the good companion he brings with him. We pray that he will be given patience and wisdom in our midst, that we may all work together to make our church what it ought to be.—Sister Mory E. Forney, Pomona, Cal., Dec. 28.

CANADA

Notice to the Churches of North Dakota, Eastern Montana and Western Canada.—The war is ended, all restrictions on travel between Canada and the United States are removed and in harmony with the decision of our last District Conference, the District Conference for 1919 will be held July 8, 9 and 10 at Bow Valley church, Olelchen, Alta., Can.—I. M. McCune, District Secretary, Irricana, Alta., Can., Dec. 27.

FLORIDA

Bethel church met in council Dec. 14. The election of church officers resulted as follows: Elder, A. D. Crist; "Messenger" agent, Harmon Towns; trustee, Albert Eastwood. It was decided to paint our churchhouse and finish praying for the same. For the benefit of those who pass through Jacksonville and desire to visit our congregation, we will say that the Bethel church is located about three miles from Doctor's Inlet, on the Atlantic Coast Line R. R. We have a good country for general farming, also for fruit and vegetables. We especially desire to correspond with ministers passing through, to arrange for a series of meetings. Address: Eld. A. D. Crist or the writer.—Mrs. Harmon Towns, Middleburg, Fla., Dec. 23.

Sebring.—The Sebring Sunday-school rendered a very enjoyable program on Christmas evening. The exercises were well attended by the members, children and others. At the close an offering of $40 was taken for the Armenian and Syrian Relief. Bro. I. J. Rosenberger is now with us and will remain at least a part of the winter. We now have four preachers in Sebring, and are looking for others.—J. H. Moore, Sebring, Fla., Dec. 26.

ILLINOIS

Astoria church met in council Dec. 30, with Eld. D. J. Blickenstaff in charge. One letter of membership was received and three were granted. Church and Sunday-school officers were elected for 1919, with Bro. Joe Etter, superintendent of Astoria house, and Bro. Howe Stauffer for the South Bilton house; Sister Blough, president of Christian Workers' Meeting; Bro. Abe Lind, elder for one year; Sister Fairy Cloanin, President of Aid Society. The church secured Bro. S. S. Blough as pastor for another year.—Goldie Eichenberg, Astoria, Ill., Jan. 2.

Champaign church met in council, with Eld. W. L. Heckman presiding. One letter of membership was read. Bro. Clyde Keim was chosen as Sunday-school superintendent, and Sister Alice Kitson, Christian Workers' president. Bro. Geo. W. Miller, of La Place, Ill., was chosen elder in charge for one year. The writer was chosen clerk and corresponding secretary. Our revival meeting, which had been in progress two weeks, closed with three accessions. Bro. Chas. Walters and wife, of Astoria, Ill., assisted in these meetings, which proved to be very helpful and inspiring.—F. H. Christian, Champaign, Ill., Dec. 21.

Liberty church met in council Dec. 30, with Eld. I. D. Heckman presiding. Sunday-school and church officers were elected for the coming year, with Bro. I. D. Heckman, elder, and Bro. Lucas C. Akers, Sunday-school superintendent. The latter spent the past seven months in Camp, and we were indeed glad to welcome him back. Bro. O. O. Stutsman, our former pastor, now residing at Burr Oak, Kans., spent a few days with us recently, having been called to baptize Bro. John Campbell. Bro. I. J. Gibson, who has been our pastor since June, 1918, is leaving to resume his studies in Bethany Bible School. We are hoping that some of the brethren may be procured frequently, to deliver sermons here until a minister is secured and permanently located at Liberty.—Marguerite Landon, Liberty, Ill., Jan. 2.

Virden.—After seven weeks we were permitted to have church services again, for which we were very glad. Eld. at recent business session our Sunday-school was reorganized with Bro. E. E. Brubaker, superintendent. Sister Ethel Brubaker was reelected president of the Christian Workers' Society. Last Sunday evening our Christian Workers gave a splendid New Year program. Bro. Haynes also delivered a most inspiring address on the text: "Forgetting the things which are behind. I press on toward the goal."—Stella Brubaker, Virden, Ill., Dec. 30.

INDIANA

Blissville.—Dec. 11 to 22 a series of meetings was held at the Blissville house, conducted by Bro. Christian Metzler, of Wabaunsa, Ind. The sermons were very inspiring and the attendance good. One was baptized and one reclaimed. We held our love feast Nov. 16. Owing to sickness and inclement weather, the crowd was small, but we had a very spiritual meeting. Dec. 7 we met in council at the Blissville house. Eld. John Morkley presiding. Several letters were granted. Bro. Oren Ruff was elected Sunday-school superintendent. We are hoping to do more work during the coming year.—Stella Ruff, Plymouth, Ind., Dec. 30.

Fairview.—We met in regular quarterly members' meeting Dec. 29. One letter was granted. Our Sunday-school was reorganized for another six months, with Bro. Elmer Cripe as superintendent. Christian Workers' Meeting was also reorganized, with Sister Anna Cripe as president. Church officers were also elected for another year. The attendance at this meeting was small,—largely due to sickness. We met on the following morning for Sunday-school, to review the lessons of the past quarter. An offering of $66 was lifted in response to the call of our Sunday-school Relief Committee.—Lula E. Root, La Fayette, Ind., Dec. 29.

Flora church met in council Dec. 26, with Eld. Ira Kreider presiding. Brethren Gilbert Stinebaugh and Riley Flora were also present. The yearly church visit was reported and Eld. Stinebaugh gave us friendly admonition on improvements. Bro. Kreider was reelected as elder for one year. At a recent council we elected Bro. Irvin Brim as superintendent of the Sunday-school.—Mattie Welty, Floro, Ind., Dec. 29.

Huntington country church met in council Dec. 28, with Eld. Scott presiding. Our crowds have been small at Sunday-school and church services for some time, owing to the epidemic, but we are hoping for better attendance in the near future. We had services on Thanksgiving Day, and Bro. Snell preached for us. An offering of $17 was taken for the Mission Endeavor Class lately sent $25.54 to support a pupil in the Boarding School in India. Our Sisters' Aid recently sent a box to the Old Folks' and Orphans' Home at Mexico.—Mary J. Miller, Huntington, Ind., Dec. 31.

Ladoga.—Today being review, we varied the exercises a little by having a Christmas and Missionary program. After a very interesting session, a collection of $10.40 was taken for Armenian Relief. We are hoping many good things for and from our Sunday-school for the coming year.—Lula Goodwin, Ladoga, Ind., Dec. 29.

Middletown.—Dec. 29 we elected new officers for our Sunday-school, with Bro. A. F. Carpenter, superintendent. We had a fair attendance, considering that there has been so much sickness. But we are trusting and praying for better days to come. We have had several cases of influenza, but no deaths. We hope the disease will subside, so that we may be able to resume our work.—Florida J. E. Green, Middletown, Ind., Dec. 30.

Monticello church met in council Dec. 21. Bro. G. B. Heeter presided. The work of several committees was accepted. On Sunday evening Dec. 22, the Missionary Society gave an interesting program.—Orpha Bridge, Monticello, Ind., Dec. 30.

Nappanee church met in council Dec. 19, with Eld. J. W. Grater presiding. Bro. Grater was reappointed as elder in charge of the Decatur, Illinois, church the coming year. Bro. J. F. Appleman was chosen as our elder. Officers for the coming year were chosen, with Bro. Ralph Miller as Sunday-school superintendent and Bro. Lawrence Swanson as Christian Workers' president. Our pastor, Bro. John F. Appleman, was reelected,—this being the third year he has served us. Our love feast was held on Thanksgiving evening. An offering was taken, which was sent to the General Mission Board. Our Sunday-school sent, as a Thanksgiving offering, two barrels of provisions to the Hastings Street Mission, Chicago. Dec. 22 we enjoyed a splendid Christmas program, given by the Sunday-school. Our young people, as well as the children, responded well in their work. On Christmas Day cheer was brought into the homes of several aged and sick families, by the young people's class carrying remembrances to them. Our revival services will begin Jan. 5, with Bro. Chas. Bonsack as evangelist.—Fern Grosh, Nappanee, Ind., Dec. 28.

Notice to Aid Societies, Churches and Individuals.—The winter season being on and the privation caused by the epidemic having brought to notice cases of need in the city of Logansport, Ind., our little band of workers here is ready to distribute such articles of clothing, food or other help as may be sent. Send donations to Mrs. H. C. Murphy, 1728 Michigan Avenue, Logansport, Ind. We still have no pastor located here and would be glad to have ministers passing through arrange to stop each Sunday at 1430 Michigan Avenue. Any minister desiring to take

In Harmony

Great Maker of our hearts, we bring them back
To thee, and on thy table lay them down.
And pray that thou wouldst take them all apart,
Remove the dust, restore that which is worn;
Drop in the oil of grace, and set again
Their parts in place, and pivot all their wheels
In jewels cut from thine own crown: of Faith,
Of Virtue, Knowledge, Temperance, Patience calm,
Kindness and royal Love; and then, O God,
Hold them to thine own heart until they beat
In unison with all thy thoughts, and point
With steady hands, that never lag nor haste,
To all the circling hours of starry Truth!

Feeding His Sheep

BY VERA F. SELLERS

THE soft light of the setting sun shone through the stained glass windows of the church, and lingered on the words: "God Is Love," written on the wall encircling the pulpit. It was the hour for the sacred song service, held every Sunday evening, and already the ninety and nine of the fold were comfortably seated, awaiting the announcement of the first hymn. With a smile that took in the whole ninety and nine, and the stranger within the gates, the chorister led in the melody that swelled from the hearts of the people until it carried the Sacred Story beyond the walls of the church, into the near by streets, where many paused to listen.

With the echo of the last hymn and the knowledge of the need of the people, burning in his heart, the pastor spoke the words: "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled." Were they not the words of his Master and theirs? If he did not help to satisfy that longing, through spiritual guidance and prayer, what would become of the sheep of his pasture? Then he thought of the words of Jer. 23: 1, and there followed a sermon of such blessing and strength that the people wondered at his understanding of their need. The benediction came as a seal to the Word that was spoken, and conscious of the pressure of a welcoming hand, even the stranger passed through the church door, realizing that, "blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled."

"My Brother"

BY JACOB FUNK

"If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar."

THESE are hard words, but none the less true. They seem hard, for when we consider who is our brother, we will find that it takes a much larger circle than most of us are willing to admit. Indeed, it seems to me that the same fellow who happens to be my neighbor, also happens to be my brother, and Christ's very apt illustration, as to who is my neighbor, leaves no room for doubt. All humanity is included in the circle. Some of them may not be of my choosing and not to my liking, yet they are my neighbors, to deal with as becometh a Christian.

So with my brother. He is flesh of my flesh, blood of my blood, and though I may be somewhat ashamed of him, at times, yet he is my brother,—mine to love, mine to help, mine to save. We may as well take this view first as last, for Christ came into this world to save it, and, before coming, he loved it. He loved them all,—the murderer, the thief, the obstinate, the wreckers of homes, the destroyers of virtue,—in fact, the whole catalogue of criminals was included in that love, and this is the same world that we are to love.

The Master gives us to understand that we shall receive little thanks if our good deeds are done to those only who love us. If the good and gentle and meek and loving are the only ones to receive our kindness, then our reward will be very small. It is perfectly permissible to hate sin, but hatred for our fellow-man has no place in the program of the Christian.

It is an impossibility to love God and to hate his creature. The man who says he loves God and hates man, is a liar. Do not excuse yourself, my brother, by enumerating the deeds of violence, of savagery, of vengeance that your brother may have committed. Possibly, if you take a square look at yourself, you will see some of the same brand of stuff not so far removed in your own life. God has dealt with you in very much mercy and methinks that you will have need of his mercy for future sins.

I love to think of every one as God's child. Some may have wandered far away from him, but still he loves them with an everlasting love. Well, then, let your love be like God's! You can test your love to God by just how much you love your brother. He is the true Christian who seeks the welfare of every man, in every way possible, who is always loyal to them, so that, in no case, will he take advantage of them, or serve himself at their expense. He makes their cause part and parcel of his life. I am thinking that if we take this view of the matter, many of our business affairs will have to be readjusted. Greed and graft will be eliminated, war will have no place in the history of such a people. The Golden Rule will be a real thing and not a mere sentiment. Prove your love to God by loving your fellow-man, and prove your love to your fellow-man by deeds of service, even though he may be your enemy. He is also your brother.

An Opportunity Lost

BY LEO LILLIAN WISE

THERE is a story told concerning an aged woman, who lived not far away from one of Queen Victoria's country homes. The Queen was in the habit of coming to this country residence unannounced, so the country people would watch for her, and when it was known that she was in their midst, would hope that, in some way, they might pay homage to her.

One day, while spending a short time in the country, the Queen was out driving. Suddenly a storm came up. The footman went to the door of a near by cottage to ask the loan of an umbrella. In response to his rap, the door was opened a little ways by the mistress of the home who enquired ungraciously: "Well, what do you want?"

The footman replied: "We have been caught by the rain. Will you please lend us an umbrella?

"Will you bring it back?" demanded the old woman.

"Yes," answered the footman.

She brought him the oldest one she had,—an old, ugly, green umbrella, and as she handed it out to him, said, still more ungraciously than ever: "Now see to it that you are careful with it!"

The umbrella was so old and worn, so full of holes, that it did not answer very well as a protection, and soon a heavy gust of wind turned it wrong side out. The next day the Queen's carriage drove up in front of the cottage and again the footman rapped on the door. He handed the woman a beautiful gold-handled umbrella, saying: "The Queen wished me to tell you that she was so sorry your umbrella was broken and she hopes you will accept this one in its place." And he was gone before the astonished woman could utter a word.

When she realized what it all meant, she cried and sobbed, she wrung her hands, and would not be comforted. "Oh, dear," she wailed, "just to think that all these years I've hoped that some time the dear, good Queen would pass here, and I might have the opportunity of doing something for her just once. And now she was at my door, and I would have been proud to let her have my best umbrella, but instead I gave her that awful, old, discarded one, and how dreadful I talked. Oh, dear!"

Some day, in God's beautiful heaven, we are going to be smitten to the heart because at some time we failed to recognize an ambassador of Christ's. Some unnecessary word, spoken to a brother or friend, will return to grieve us. Some uncalled for criticism or willful misconstruction of another's words or deeds will make us writhe in agony, and no word of comfort will come to us in our self-condemnation.

Let us learn to be more gracious in manner and speech to stranger and friend alike. Then, when we come to the end of the way, there will be no sighing, no tears, no sorrow over unkind words and acts of the past.

Teaching Missions to Children

BY H. A. CLAYBAUGH

JUST near us, about two months ago, we found a very pitiable situation in a home. At that time one of our workers accompanied the aged wife, who is past seventy, to the little cottage. His mission was to help carry some donations that the old lady had been given at a near by bakery.

In the home, the need of help was evident on every hand. The roof was full of holes. It had just rained and the bedding, clothing and furniture were soaked. Water was standing in puddles on the floor. The man of the house was past eighty and unable to work. The old people sleep in a room almost as dark as night in daylight.

Since we have learned of their situation, supplies have been sent to the little cottage. A new roof has replaced the old one.

The superintendent of the Bethany Primary Sunday-school told the children in a very vivid way, and asked them if they would not enjoy bringing a Thanksgiving offering and take it to the old people on the Sunday prior to Thanksgiving. The children were delighted and suggested many things that they might bring. The following Sunday the children came with their offerings. They were asked why they brought the things. One little girl replied: "To thank God for what he does for me."

About twenty children with their teachers soon arrived at the home, each carrying his offering. The old man wept when he saw the children, saying: "God surely sent you to us." The children sang some of their songs in the home, while the old people were lost in appreciation. The teachers experienced no trouble in keeping order. The children were so impressed and interested in what they were doing, that they did not have time for disorder. The old man took the hands of the children and repeated several times: "God sent you."

The old people were made happy and given some needed help. The children received something that will remain with them through life. The primary teachers believe this to be one of the ways to teach children the missionary spirit.

After Reading a Book

BY W. O. BECKNER

I READ a good book, not long ago. It doesn't matter what it was about, nor who the author is. The thing worth while is that what some one else puts down in a book makes you think some things yourself.

One thing I thought about was Judas Iscariot. He was a grafter, you know. He got land hungry, had no money to buy with, lay awake nights to think about that field,—had that on his mind more than anything else, and one day he sold his soul for enough to cinch the deal.

But where did Judas get his start in his career as a grafter? He had to start somewhere. Here is how it was. His child mind was as plastic and impressionable as any child's mind. His heart was as pure and innocent as any child's heart. He was not born a grafter, any more than you were. If you are a grafter, you learned it, and so did he.

It was the "atmosphere" of his parental home that started him to thinking that all other people were his legitimate prey. His father was a devout Jew, so far as praying on the street corners was concerned. Judas often went out with him when he went to pray, and stood there by him as he folded his hands together and said over his prayer. But that was not all. The old man loaned some money to a widow and said he would charge her only a low rate of interest, knowing full well that when pay day should come for her he would have a chance to get hold of her small home property. And he wanted that. Making long prayers and robbing widows of their houses was the way he sized up a good Jew,—a man who prayed and was shrewd at a bargain.

Yes, that was the "atmosphere" of the home in which the unfortunate lad had to grow up. Is it any wonder that he came to hold the view-point of life that he held? Notice, a good man in that "atmosphere" was one who said his prayers and who was shrewd at bargaining. It was the common view-point held up as ideal in his home.

An incident occurred when Judas was about twelve years old that stirred his young blood clear to the bottom of his nature. He "pulled off a stunt," as the boys said, and got away with it and heard his father's kindly approval. It was when the circus came to town. Iscariot gave Judas half a dollar to pay his way into the show that day and let him go with the other lads of his age. Judas came home at night and told how he went around behind the tent and watched his chance and then crawled in under the tent and had his half dollar left when he got home. Iscariot only laughed when he heard the boy's recital of the day's events, but a few days later he laughingly told one of the neighbors about it in Judas' presence, adding that he guessed the boy would be able to get through the world all right from the way he was starting out.

That was the first time Judas had had a chance to try his own luck at the game and it meant for him the beginning of his individual life career. Certain ideals were erected in his mind and had been given expression and in the course of nature his life current was to run in that channel ever afterwards,—unless, perchance, some great good friend should be able, through great tribulation, to supplant that ideal with a nobler one.

Just this last-named task is what his great, good Friend, Jesus of Nazareth, attempted to do. But he got to him too late. The currents of action had already worn down too deep a channel to permit the crooked nature to escape from it. Judas, the grafter, could not change his character after it had become fixed through continuous exercise of his ideals.

Suppose Judas had been your son, would you have been willing to do all in your power to keep him from the awful end he came to?

As Seen From An Aeroplane

BY OLIVE A. SMITH

A RECENT number of a popular magazine tells of a boy from the Middle West who is becoming educated in the matter of relative values by flying over New York City in a Government aeroplane. It is shown that this is one of the ways of gaining a knowledge of the true proportions of things. From the sky a certain gigantic building in the city looks like a spool of thread. As he goes higher and higher, the great city, with its thousands of living, struggling human beings, becomes a mere speck on the surface of the earth.

So closely is the physical related to the mental and spiritual, that such a person comes to see the pettiness of personal desires and the folly of the disputes which engage the average mind. No one can have exaggerated ideas about himself as a person, or about other individuals, when a great city like New York is seen as a speck far below. In brief, it is shown that the war is teaching us all wonderful lessons. Still, there are few occupations in which men and women can ride around in the air, even for the advantage of this kind of knowledge. The solid old earth still holds us by the force of gravitation, and it seems probable that the majority of us will need to spend the most of our days on its surface. The question is whether the young man who gains this knowledge of values and proportions, will be able and willing to come down and toil among his fellows,—the spiders and flies who have not been able to share the experience of his perspective.

Already there is much speculation as to what will happen when these boys are free to come back and take up the work of citizens in a time of peace. Often we hear it said: "John will never be contented to go into the store again," and "Henry won't be willing to be a clerk when he comes back." Speculators hold on grimly to their land, because they are sure that the boys will all wish to be farmers. But it is hard to tell what effect these years will have upon the soldiers. Undoubtedly they will be broader-minded, more efficient individuals because of their experiences, but the matter of individual tastes and talents is one that can never be safely foretold. The war is a developer as well as a destroyer. The clumsy, awkward youth, who once walked with eyes downcast, has made an astonishing success in the aviation corps; while the delicate boy, who knew no work more strenuous than looking after his own comfort and pleasure, has become a real hero in his ability for continual self-sacrifice. Transformations are marvelous and we swiftly forget all that we once learned about the necessity of preparing the youth for the kind of work which is in harmony with his native tastes and talents.

With all the broadening effects of experience and the knowledge that comes from the gaining of visions in regard to proportions, the soldier must become the citizen again, with the idea of service bigger, wider, and more effective than ever, or his experience has been of no avail. And we, who have not had his task, have had one equally important,—the task of keeping the "home fires burning." Our schools and churches, our civic life and home life, must be such that they will challenge the best efforts of men who have fought many battles besides those reported in the newspapers.

They have seen visions and dreamed dreams. They have walked with death, and they have gained a knowledge of values and proportions which, we believe, will make them better citizens, even though they may put to flight all our fondest dreams of what they will do when they return. Are we ready for their return? Can we give them the room they need for the larger life? Can we realize that they will be men, not boys, when they come back to us?

These Constant Calls to Give

BY IRA J. LAPP

GIVING is a Christian virtue and therefore demands constant exercise. Why not give constantly, for we are in constant receipt of blessings? The sun continues to shine, the birds continue to sing, the river and brook continue to minister, the grass continues to grow, our cup is constantly being filled by a Lavish Hand, so, why should we not just as constantly give?

You made a contribution last week, but since then you have had six days in which to produce and so, if giving be exalted to its rightful place in your life, you will desire to make another contribution.

Our life consists in our giving. Paul reduces this to a principle when he says: "Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him." Here we have the solution to our problem. We have giving systematized,—a system which every Christian should adopt, for he says: "Let every one of you."

The system demands that we give regularly: "Upon the first day of the week."

This system demands that we should give proportionately: "As God hath prospered."

This system is sound because it is an approved business method,—sound because it leaves the matter with you and your God, as to how much you should give. Thus it becomes a free-will offering.

The system is sound because it makes it easy to give on the basis "as God hath prospered you." The individual, who adopts this system of giving, is impressed with the truth that he need not give more than he can, but that God demands that we GIVE ALL THAT WE CAN. There is only one time to execute a duty and that is when that duty becomes apparent. It is when duties pile up that they become galling. Permit me to illustrate my point with this homely simile: "Giving is just like combing your hair,—if you comb your hair every day, it is readily done, but if you neglect it for a week, then it pulls."

The principle of systematic giving has been clearly set forth in Holy Writ, and I am wondering if the church has done her full duty if she fails to make operative methods whereby it is convenient and possible to give, whereby all can be induced to give, regularly and proportionately. This, indeed, should be a part of every live church's program. Why these constant calls to give? Perhaps the days of our stewardship are not as long as we might suppose.

Miami, N. Mex.

A MAN is what he is, not what men say he is. His character no man can touch. His character is what he is before his God and his Judge, and only he himself can damage that. His reputation is what men say he is. That can be damaged. Reputation is for time; character is for eternity.

Suggestions for the Weekly Devotional Meeting Or for Prayerful, Private Meditation.

The Joy of Perfect Trust

For Week Beginning January 19, 1919

1. Introductory.—(1) Faith is the certainty of God's all-sufficiency: (a) His omnipotence; (b) his omniscience; (c) his infinite love. (2) Therefore faith floods the heart with joy and peace. (3) This faith is the gift of God. (4) Open your hearts for his "filling."

2. Live by Faith.—"Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God." This is Christ's cure for fretfulness. He offers for our healing the balm of trust in a Father's care and watchful interest. If today you have money enough to purchase present necessities, Faith says: "Fret not thyself, for fear that you will fetch up at the almshouse." If today your children gather about your hearth, Faith says: "Enjoy the music of their happy voices: gather confidence from their unquestioning trust: train them for God, and trust them to his care without tormenting your soul with the fear that death might bear them from you, or, if they live, that some dire calamity may ruin their lives." If today you are in the enjoyment of health, and rejoice in strength "as a strong man to run a race," Faith says: "Let not your heart be troubled with fear of possible ills. To worry and to fret is but to hasten their coming." With each new morn Faith comes and says: "I will bear the burdens and overcome the foes of this day, and to its close I will cheer your heart with perfect peace."

3. Our Assurance of God's Love.—Just think of it,—God is love! You can lift up your heart today and say: "God loves me." Think of it,—all your sins are pardoned, washed away in the blood of Jesus Christ. Think of it,—you are the object of God's care, and he will never leave you nor forsake you, and neither death nor hell can ever touch you, for you are his and he is yours forever. Is that the kind of news to make one miserable?

4. Work But Do Not Worry.—Anxiety does not empty tomorrow of its sorrow, but it does empty today of its strength. It brings a double weakness, for it makes us feeble in today's endeavors and faint-hearted for the future. Jesus warns us against anxious thought as one of the insidious dangers to which we are constantly exposed. Faith in God furnishes the great defense against the gnawing and destructive effects of "anxious care." Thoughts of God's sovereignty, of his love, of his grace, and of his power will steady the heart and stay the soul against the ravages of anxiety.

5. How to Increase Our Trust.—(1) Consider what mighty possibilities are involved in the truth that God is infinite, and that you are a part of his plan. (2) Memorize some of the Scripture promises, and recall them when the temptation to worry returns. (3) Cultivate a spirit of gratitude for daily mercies. (4) Realize that cumbering care has never been of the least possible use, and never will be. It wastes vitality, and impairs the mental faculties. (5) Help and comfort your neighbors. (6) Forgive your enemies and conquer your aversions.

6. Suggestive References.—All things are possible if we fully believe, Mark 9: 23. Our belief in God is all-powerful, Rom. 1: 16. Peace through our faith, Rom. 5: 1. The gift of God, Eph. 2: 8. The shield of faith, Eph. 6: 16. Trust in the Living God, 1 Tim. 4: 10. The good fight of faith, 1 Tim. 6: 12. The just shall live by faith, Heb. 10: 38. The substance of things hoped for, Heb. 11: 1. The Lord our Helper, Heb. 13: 5, 6. Faith must be sincere, James 1: 6. Faith made perfect by works, James 2: 22. Faith leads to victory, 1 John 5: 4.

CALENDAR FOR SUNDAY, JANUARY 12

Sunday-school Lesson, Moses the Leader of Israel.—Ex. 3: 1 to 4: 17.

Christian Workers' Meeting, The Good News.—A Savior!—Matt. 1: 21: Luke 2: 10, 11.

MEETINGS IN PROGRESS

Bro. G. W. Ellenherger, of St. Joseph, Mo., in the South St. Joseph church, same State.

GAINS FOR THE KINGDOM

Two were recently baptized in the church at Ligonier, Pa.

Two were recently baptized in the church at Redcliff, Alta., Can.

Four have been baptized during the past six months at Sidney, Ohio.

One has been baptized in the Centralia church, Wash., since the last report.

Four have been baptized in the Eagle Creek church, Ohio, since the last report.

Three were baptized at Champaign, Ill.,—Bro. Chas. Walters, of Astoria, same State, evangelist.

Twenty-six confessed Christ in the Coventry church, Pa.,—Bro. Geo. W. Flory, of Covington, Ohio, evangelist.

One was baptized and one reclaimed in the Blissville church, Ind.,—Bro. Christian Metzler, of Wakarusa, same State, evangelist.

Four were baptized and four restored in the Brownsville church, Md.,—Bro. Wm. E. Roop, of Westminster, same State, evangelist.

Two were baptized in the Brick church, Greenland congregation, W. Va.,—Bro. B. B. Ludwick, of Mt. Pleasant, Pa., evangelist.

CONTEMPLATED MEETINGS

Bro. Hugh Miller, of Gettysburg, Ohio, to begin Feb. 2 in the Muncie church, Ind.

Bro. Oliver Royer, of Circleville, Ohio, to begin some time in January in his home church.

Bro. S. E. Thompson, of Garden City, Kans., to begin Jan. 26 in the Ottawa church, same State.

Bro. C. D. Bonsack, of New Windsor, Md., to begin Feb. 10 in the Moxham church, Johnstown, Pa.

PERSONAL MENTION

Southern Pennsylvania is to be represented on the Standing Committee of the 1919 Conference by Brethren C. L. Baker and D. A. Faust.

Bro. S. S. Neher, late of Twin Falls, Idaho, should now be addressed at Kingsley, Iowa,—he being in pastoral charge of the church at that place.

Bro. C. W. Guthrie announces the change of his address from 1144½ East Twenty-third Street to 3722 Madison Avenue, Los Angeles, Cal.

Bro. J. W. Grater, formerly elder of the Nappance church, Ind., has resigned from that work, and will be, hereafter, in pastoral charge of the Decatur, Ill., congregation.

Bro. I. J. Rosenberger, of Greenville, Ohio, is now at Sebring, Fla., where he is to spend at least a part of the winter, and his correspondents should so address him until further notice.

Bro. J. L. Mishler and wife, of the Pleasant Valley church, Ind., are spending the winter in Florida,—the failing health of Bro. Mishler, elder of the congregation, making this step advisable.

Bro. Geo. W. Flory, of Covington, Ohio, spent several hours at the Publishing House on Tuesday of last week and dropped into the "Messenger" rooms for a few minutes, to extend his greetings.

Bro. Virgil C. Finnell left Elgin early last week for Daleville, Va., where he was scheduled for a series of addresses in the Bible Institute. Following this he is to do some Religious Education Work in Roanoke and other Virginia churches.

Bro. Leonard H. Root, of Mount Morris, Ill., having resigned his pastoral work at that place, has arranged to give the coming year largely to evangelistic work. Churches, desiring Bro. Root's services, will do well to communicate with him as early as possible.

Bro. D. J. Lichty, our India missionary, now in the homeland and so recently bereaved, spent New Year's Day with friends in Elgin, and called at the "Messenger" rooms the following morning. While he feels his great loss most keenly, he has no other thought for his future than that of returning to the mission field. Bro. Lichty asked us to say to the host of friends, who sent him messages of sympathy, that he has appreciated them all most deeply, even though he can not make individual reply to all. We have in hand a well-written sketch of Sister Lichty's life and work, the publishing of which is deferred for another week on account of unavoidable delay in securing the engraving of Sister Lichty's portrait.

A telegram from Pres. John S. Flory, of Bridgewater College, states that "owing to the prevalence of influenza in the community, the revival and Institute at Bridgewater College, scheduled for Jan. 18 to 26, is recalled. There will be no Bible Institute at the College this session."

Our latest word from the missionary party, en route to India, was written at Shanghai, Nov. 29. All were well. With the very best of connections at Hong Kong, they would be able to leave that place Dec. 11, and reach India by New Year. Failing this, they would be detained a month at Hong Kong.

ELSEWHERE IN THIS ISSUE

Elders of Southern Indiana will please note Bro. J. W. Rarick's announcement among the Notes, concerning pending plans of improving the "Aged Persons' Home" of that District.

Bro. Jerome E. Blough, Treasurer of the District of Western Pennsylvania, makes an announcement among the Notes that should have the immediate attention of elders and pastors in that District.

As announced by Bro. I. M. McCune, District Secretary, the District Conference of North Dakota, Eastern Montana and Western Canada will be held July 8, 9 and 10, in the Bow Valley church, Gleichen, Alberta, Canada.

The members at Logansport, Ind., have many needy families to look after, by reason of the influenza epidemic, and could make excellent use of clothing, food, etc., that Aid Societies, churches, etc., may feel like sending to them. See the appeal of Bro. J. G. Stinebaugh, President of Middle Indiana Mission Board, as given among the Notes.

On page 28 Bro. S. E. Netzley, the wide-awake agent of the Batavia congregation, Ill., offers some excellent suggestions how the five thousand new subscribers for the "Messenger," as called for by the "Forward Movement," can readily be secured. Our brother speaks from an experience of many years, and the fact that he holds a record of "100% efficiency" as an agent, should enlist for his communication more than ordinary attention and consideration. Bro. Netzley also makes liberal use of the "Brethren's Card," with the church services printed on the one side. In his canvass he distributes them judiciously, thereby inducing some to attend services who would not otherwise do so. He also places a Brethren's Card in each book that passes through his hands.

MISCELLANEOUS

The new house of worship, erected for the Cincinnati mission, is to be dedicated Jan. 16, Bro. H. K. Ober, of Elizabethtown, Pa., delivering the dedicatory address.

Any one having a copy of the "History of the Tunkers," by H. R. Holsinger, and willing to dispose of the same, will please communicate with Bro. D. W. Kurtz, McPherson, Kans., naming the price at which he is willing to part with the book.

Bro. I. W. Taylor desires us to call attention to the following announcement: "The District Meeting of Eastern Pennsylvania will be held April 23 and 24, in the Spring Creek congregation, not at Ephrata, as stated in the '1919 Official Directory.'"

Are you giving your best in genuine sympathy with the many bereaved ones? We do not recall another time in our own experience when so many of our friends have suffered the loss of their loved ones. And the same is true of many others. God bless all the sorrowing and make us his willing ministers in their behalf!

Not very often does a congregation, as a body, receive a Christmas present, but that very thing happened to the Muncie church, Ind., when Bro. W. H. Cooper presented the members with the mortgage that had heretofore rested on the church property. All debts are now fully paid, and the general expenses of the church are provided for.

Such of our congregations as may still be debarred from holding public services, should by all means continue to receive all their Sunday-school supplies, distributing the periodicals and quarterlies to the houses, and having the lessons studied as thoroughly as possible within the family circle. In that way the interest may be maintained until the school is ready to resume its regular sessions.

A definite financial system of giving will always bring satisfactory results, so far as congregational needs are concerned. Haphazard methods can not possibly meet the expected requirements. One of the western churches closed its last fiscal year with a balance of over $100 on hand, because it adopted a practical financial plan. Other years, when no systematic plan was employed, there was always an annoying deficit.

The new church, near Mossyrock, Centralia congregation, Wash., is almost completed, and will be dedicated Jan. 12. Bro. D. B. Eby is to deliver the address for the occasion.

After last week's issue had gone to press and almost wholly printed, we received a telegram, announcing the Bible Institute of Southwestern Missouri and Northwestern Kansas, to be held in the Peace Valley church, Mo., beginning Jan. 7. Had the announcement reached us two days earlier, it might have been inserted in the issue of Jan. 4, and served its intended purpose. We take this opportunity of again reminding our readers that important announcements should reach us not later than early on Monday morning preceding the date of issue. The "Messenger" that reaches you on or before Saturday, closes its columns on Monday, and the press starts operations next day. It is obvious, therefore, that notices, arriving later than the time mentioned above, can not be inserted in that week's issue.

One of our correspondents writes us that his church adopted "an amendment to its constitution which would give the church direct and full control of the Sunday-school." To most of our readers such a move may seem uncalled for, but closer investigation will reveal the fact that in too many congregations the church and Sunday-school are measurably moving along separate lines of action. In a Sunday-school of that sort the organization is effected within its own ranks, the church having no direct control. Whatever supervision the church, above referred to, decided to exercise, by means of an amendment, is wholly proper. As a matter of fact, the Sunday-school is clearly a department of the church, and as such should be directed in its work and general policy by the officers duly elected by the church. In that way only can the close cooperation between the Sunday-school and the congregation in general be fully maintained.

For some weeks past our correspondence has contained references to an unusually large number of cases in which the needy or afflicted have suffered neglect at the hands of their fellow Christians. We are made to wonder at the meaning of this. Is our religion becoming mere formality, as one of our informants concludes? This writer tells of an afflicted one who, as he puts it, is "sneered at by the elder and others of the church members, and is left to suffer, while there are at least $15,000 worth of automobiles surrounding the church every Sunday." That sounds pretty bad, doesn't it? Our correspondent says, too, that these members are very faithful in attending church services and in the other usual church obligations. What can be the matter? We should like to believe that he has overdrawn the picture, but we are more than half afraid there is too much truth in it. What is the substance of our religion? Or is it only shadow?

"The Friendly Church."—A recent issue of the Urbana, Ill., "Courier" speaks of the death of a minister of that city, and emphasizes the fact that he caused his church to be known as "The Friendly Church," because he had the power of imparting his personality, which was the very soul of sociability, to his entire membership. He was not offensively friendly, nor condescendingly friendly, but simply friendly in the real sense of the word, without guile, and without other purpose than being helpful in whatever way he could. It was natural with him, and so genuine that its influence unconsciously affected his entire membership. The stranger who happened to drop into that church was so forcibly impressed by the hearty welcome accorded him, that ever after he thought of that church only by the name unanimously accorded to it, "The Friendly Church."

An Entire Church at Work.—While contemplating the missionary phase of the "Forward Movement," the Bystander was forcibly impressed by the thought that in several ways we might learn a greatly-needed lesson from the zeal of the Moravians, so far as missionary activity is concerned. That church, as few others, since the days of the apostles, has caught the New Testament conception of things, and from first to last has held it steadfastly. The entire membership constitutes an organized missionary body. It lives only to establish and maintain evangelistic undertakings in the lands of darkness. It has no other errand so important upon earth. As Bishop Levering so admirably explains: "Whenever men or women unite with us in church fellowship, we endeavor to make them feel that they are entering a great missionary society." A wonderfully large proportion of the members is actually toiling upon pagan soil. But what is even more remarkable,—those who remain at home by no means count themselves free from responsibility, and at liberty to look on without concern, and to be at ease. They hold themselves subject to call, and by warm sympathy, by constant and fervent prayer, as well as by liberal gifts of money, which cost no slight self-denial, lend inspiration and courage to the sorely-burdened toilers at the front, and hence are able to forward the work quite materially.

India Distressed by Famine

Late cable messages fully confirm earlier intimations by our own missionaries, that India is facing a serious famine. Unpleasant as such news may be, to all of us, it is the part of wisdom fully to inform ourselves as to actual facts, and then to do the best we can under the circumstances. A letter from Bro. Stover, earlier in the season, indicated a serious lack of rain, and apparently the apprehensions, then entertained, have been fully confirmed by the latest cable reports. While a little rain has fallen in some parts of the land, the larger part of the country will be in great straits for six months at least, and probably more. Latest authentic information, direct from our workers, will be published at an early date.

President Wilson in Italy

Jan. 2 our nation's Chief Executive crossed the Italian frontier, and was given a most enthusiastic reception at various points, and especially in the city of Rome. A seven-day tour of Italy will be made. Incidentally, President Wilson will have an opportunity to reconcile the conflicting claims of the Jugo-Slavs and Italians, both of whom lay claim to the same strip of coast territory along the Adriatic. The situation is aggravated by so many complexities that it presents one of the greatest puzzles to be worked out in the final peace settlement. President Wilson is to be given full opportunity to study the situation in all its bearings. It is to be hoped that his ready tact will be able to pour oil on the troubled waters.

The Helping Hand

While every sympathetic heart of our country is nobly responding to the call for help in the Bible Lands, it is encouraging, indeed, to learn that those who have been helped and enabled to care for themselves, are, in turn, anxious to assist in the great work of relief. At the Red Cross Orphanage in Jerusalem a number of young men are learning carpentry, shoemaking and other trades, their pay being but thirty cents a day. And yet these young toilers,—like the believers of apostolic days,—are willing to give "out of their poverty," to help those who are in sore distress. Many of the women of Palestine, earning but a pittance each day, willingly give even beyond their real ability, in order that some one may be kept from starving.

The Miner's Greatest Foe

One of the largest coal operators in the United States estimates that intoxicating liquor is costing the country, at the very minimum, 8,000,000 tons of anthracite annually. Other operators,—of hundreds who have been asked, —estimate a loss of twenty and twenty-five per cent. Every mine located in license territory, is losing two days' labor after each pay-day. Now, while many miners are constantly complaining about this or that feature of their work, they fail to see that the greatest enemy of their real prosperity is one of their own creation,—strong drink. Benjamin Franklin at one time said that "the highest tax we pay is the one we voluntarily place upon ourselves." Liquor is the miner's highest tax, and also his most inveterate foe.

Making the Church Really Efficient

A new spirit of higher aspirations and greater efficiency seems to permeate practically all denominations of our country at the present time. With very few exceptions the call of the present-day opportunity has come to them with an irresistible force, and preparations are being made to meet it as adequately as possible. One of the largest churches in St. Louis, Mo., is making use of a unique plan to have every member employed at a definite task. To this end the membership is divided into companies of ten, each of which is in charge of a captain responsible for the general activity of those assigned to him. Definite lines of work are confided to the members of each group, and the captain makes sure that each one sticks to his post. As a result, every member does his allotted task.

Momentous Times

While, with the signing of the Armistice, the great struggle of over four years came to an end, it will be many months before any true estimate can be prepared, showing what has been gained and lost in this world war. The price paid in men, in money, and in devastation and distress, has been beyond all computation. Will the result measure up to the cost of attainment? That other countries of Europe, of America, and, in fact, throughout the world. Should such a result be accomplished, it would do away with the perpendicular division between nations on the line of national and racial ebaracteristics. There would be established, instead, a horizontal division between the different classes of men,—in brief, capital against labor!

Great Britain's Masses Want Demobilization

So far as the great bulk of Great Britain's population is concerned, there seems to be a great pressure for the speedy demobilization of the British army. The people are war-weary, and determined to get down to a normal basis of living as soon as possible. Lloyd George, the country's great leader, has during the recent election been given unmistakable evidence by the votes of the people, that they are in full harmony with his views on leading questions. He has clearly put himself on record, so far as his opposition to conscriptive military service and ultra-militarism in general is concerned, and his utterances have struck a responsive chord.

Momentous Difficulties

As the war has been the greatest in all history, so the Peace Conference must on a vast scale redraw the map of the greater part of Europe, Africa and Asia,—a problem of infinite difficulty and delicacy. The members of the august tribunal are facing a task of the most terrifying perplexities. Germany's future will be whatever the peace dictators are pleased to make it. If they are actuated by principles of fairness as well as strict justice, the permanency of peace may be reasonably certain. Should there be, however, a disposition utterly to crush that country, as well as to deal selfishly with the smaller nations, there are bound to be future wars in plenty. In view of this, due consideration should be given to the urgent plea on the part of many, that fervent prayers be offered for Divine Guidance of the Peace Conference.

The United States Wholly Altruistic

European nations, vitally concerned in the pending deliberations of the Peace Conference, find it difficult to comprehend that the representatives of the United States will not insist upon any material reward for the share taken by this country in the war. So long have European nations looked upon war as a lawful means of gaining spoils for the victor, that it is difficult for them to realize how any one could be animated by a wholly unselfish motive. Following the Boxer uprising in China,—during which the principal nations of Europe, together with the United States, participated in the task of restoring orderly conditions,—large indemnities were assessed against the Chinese Government. Only one country,—the United States,—refused to accept the proffered funds,—later on dedicating them to the noble task of educating Chinese students in the colleges of the United States.

The Y. M. C. A. Not to Blame

While during the war, and even since the close of hostilities, a most remarkable work has been done by the Y. M. C. A. for the comfort and well-being of our soldiers, both in the United States and in Europe, not a little criticism has been indulged in. This is partly due to a lack of information, but some of it is doubtless a deliberate attempt to belittle the work done by the Y. M. C. A. Dr. John R. Mott, replying to some of the criticisms in a recent comprehensive statement, clearly proves that the Association has not, as charged, financially profited by the operation of canteens; that it has furnished many articles to the soldiers wholly free, besides all their writing paper and envelopes; that the overseas secretaries have not been discourteous and impatient in their dealings with the soldiers. Dr. Mott's statements seem to be well substantiated and reflect creditably upon the Y. M. C. A.

The Need of Sober Thought

Just now, while leading diplomats in Paris are still talking about sinking Germany's surrendered navy as the safest and most effectual plan of disarming it and rendering it harmless, a clamor is being made to spend six hundred million dollars for additional battleships for the American navy. To those who had fondly hoped that after the declaration of peace there would be general disarmament, the proposition above alluded to is decidedly disappointing. Are we to continue as before,—to place heavy burdens of taxation on the nation, especially when the indebtedness of the recent war is still upon us? Our beloved Chief Executive has given us glowing assurances concerning the benefits to be derived from the "League of Nations." Shall we spurn all that Virtue, love, gentleness of spirit, purity and a cultured mind are the priceless jewels that are to be worn by the Christian. The lack of these are often seen in the body displaying ornamentation.

While we send missionaries to convert the heathen, many of us are bowing down to the God of Fashion. Why waste our money for all these things entirely useless? Think of the sorrow and suffering. Many are starving for food to sustain the physical body and many are starving for food for the spiritual body. Our Government called for men, and many responded. There is a call from our great King in heaven to which all should respond with greater zeal and deeper responsibility than to any Government call. God hates even a proud look. "He resisteth the proud, but giveth grace to the humble."

In reading God's Word we see where he brought severe punishment upon women because of pride and extravagance in dress. Let us take warning. To whom am I the most loyal,—Christ and the church, or the world? This question is good for each of us to think on. "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." Let us consider this seriously and adhere strictly to the simplicity of the Gospel. Let us do everything, great and small, with a single view of pleasing God. If we please him, no matter about pleasing the world.

The Gospel is the study which prepares for eternal life. Let us study the Word more, that we may not drift worldward. And those of us who profess Christianity, let us meditate upon the Gospel truth and meekly submit to its plain and simple teaching. The more we know the great facts in the life of Jesus, and meditate upon them, the more our characters are transformed into the same beautiful image. Where, in the light of such a life, is there room for worldliness! Where is there excuse for following the frivolities and foolishness of the world! Christ did none of these things and neither can we if we are his followers.

FROM CAMP de MEUCON, FRANCE

Thanksgiving Day here, at the Y. M. C. A., is being observed with many different ceremonies. At 7 A. M. the Catholics held their early mass; at 9 A. M. we, C. 139 F. A., held Thanksgiving services. Chaplain Brundage was the speaker of the morning. He brought a very impressive message to the soldiers, crowded in the big Y room.

In his address he emphasized the fact that this Thanksgiving was like the first, inasmuch as we were ready to explore a new age and new conditions. The world, he said, would be new to us from this time on, because after seeing what we have, the world would seem to us like new,—just as it was to the pilgrims when they landed at Plymouth, before going out into the wilderness,—the land of forests, where wild beasts and savage Indians abounded. He showed how the originators of Thanksgiving Day builded an altar and thanked God for the blessings bestowed by him, before attempting to go farther; and that we, just before embarking for our homes, had met to thank God for his blessing to the world.

Since leaving Camp Shelby we haven't had a very good chance to carry on our Bible Class, but we met last Sunday with a good attendance, and splendid interest was manifested. I find it rather surprising to see the change that takes place in the boys, after seeing the horrors of war and its desolation. After leaving home and friends, one would think they would have a tendency to harden their hearts and ignore what is right, but from my observation it seems that they think more seriously of the finer things of life, pertaining to the soul. I was talking to a man this morning after services. He said: "I tell you that was a wonderful address. The tears ran down my cheeks like water."

So it seems, when the conditions about us are unfavorable and the soldiers' spirits have fallen, the Spirit of God speaks peace. Then it is that Christ is our Counselor and Guide, to carry us through and sustain us. Then it is that we find we are not tempted alone, that we are not left alone to overcome the evil one. Christ's words come to us: "Lo, I am with you alway."

I thank God for the consolation of One who is ever ready, though "other helpers fail." . . . I believe that the greatest means of drawing men from a life of sin to the fold of God is to show them their need of a reserve power,—a power that can be depended upon, and a power that has met the test and proved its value. In my estimation nearly two million soldiers are ready to say and are saying: "This Power, this Friend is found in Christ."

Then let us mobilize every available power to bring the world to Christ. "Let the Spirit and the bride [the church] say, Come, and let him that heareth [the Christian] say Come, and whosoever [everybody that recognizes God] will, let him take the water of life freely."

It will take time for the working out of this plan, but let it start in America. The world is looking to see what America will do now. America stepped in and interceded for humanity, for the weak and helpless. Now the world is ready to follow our example. We must give them the very best things possible,—the best in our lives, our services and our all. J. Ralph Williford.

THOUGHTS ON INGRATITUDE

Yesterday, while looking over the last number of the "Gospel Messenger" (Dec. 14), I was much impressed by the short write-up by "D. W. K." on the subject of "Gratitude." To me it is very fitting. Since then many thoughts along that line have been running through my mind. The one uppermost is this: "Have I always remembered to thank my Heavenly Father for the many favors and mercies received?"

Then I thought of the first time I ever prayed. I was just past my seventeenth birthday and some one had conferred on me a favor which, at that particular time, I very much appreciated. After expressing my heartfelt appreciation, I retired to my room, closed the door, and knelt and thanked God for putting it into the mind of that person to confer the favor. I remember how humble and utterly dependent I felt, in the sight of a kind and all-wise Father who had, from my earliest existence, guided all my ways,—had protected and cared for me when I ofttimes would have fallen into the depths of sin and shame.

But to the subject of "Ingratitude." It does seem that nothing so chills and fairly freezes our inmost soul as not to be appreciated, especially by those whom we serve most. A few months ago, while teaching the Bible Class in our country Sunday-school, I was feeling somewhat discouraged because of the lack of interest and the small attendance, and so expressed myself. One of my pupils remarked: "Jesus Christ himself was not appreciated when he was here on the earth and did so much for the people. Why should we expect it?"

Sure enough! But why do so many of us accept so many blessings without returning to show our gratitude or appreciation? In our prayers, instead of continually asking for more favors and blessings, let us cultivate the habit of praise and thanksgiving. Let us take time to "count our blessings" once in a while, and especially now, at this particular time of the year, while the sacred associations of the recent Christmas season are still fresh in our minds. Anna Reed.

Myrtle Point, Oregon.

TIMBERVILLE, VIRGINIA, ORPHANAGE

The old year is almost spent. Christmas is already in the past. Many sad hearts are mourning the loss of loved ones. Many are waiting to hear from their boys, to know they are safe. Many homes have empty chairs, yet, in the midst of all the sorrow, we have many reasons to rejoice. At last we have peace,—not only national peace but the peace and good will that Jesus brought. Many sacrifices have been made that we might be able to help feed the oppressed and starving children in foreign lands. Truly, it has been well said that "this is not a time of self but of sacrifice."

We have nineteen bright, happy, lovable children in the Home at present. There has been very little sickness and as yet none of the influenza epidemic. We feel very grateful to the Great God who has cared for us.

The children were very liberally remembered on Christmas Day by several individuals and Aid Societies; also two Sunday-school classes. Such gifts bring happiness and joy into these little lives. Some time before the great day came, boxes began to arrive. Little hearts were beating fast. Many questions were asked. Little feet were running here and there,—all were willing to help make the day a success. One little boy, who, with his two sisters, recently came to us, said they never had an orange nor a toy, and only knew of having one stick of candy. Can you imagine what a pleasant Christmas meant to them, when I tell you they had never been taught of the things that mean so much to us? They are only little, but they have already learned that they have missed much. They are not willing to go back to live as they did before. When we see the homes from which such children have come, it makes us feel that we want to do more. It makes us work with renewed energy.

O, yes, they are worth all the trouble, all the care and expense. We must give them better homes, we must reach out more. There are many more such children who need our help. Let us rally to the great need,—that of receiving the children. Then we shall receive the reward of "inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these."

CLOSING OF SANTA FE MISSION, LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The District Mission Board and the Santa Fe Avenue workers have for some time been contemplating a change of location, as the industrial district is crowding out the resident population at our present location. A number of years ago the "Channing Street Mission" met with a similar fate, and was merged with our present work. The work at the two places has covered nearly twenty years, and the good accomplished will only be revealed in eternity. Scores have been baptized, many of them have passed to their reward, and others are widely scattered.

At a recent meeting, in which the Mission Board met with the Santa Fe workers, they requested the Board to be allowed to move the work to Boyle Heights. The Board granted the request, to try out the work there for six months, agreeing to furnish half the support for the pastor if the workers of Santa Fe and Boyle Heights would furnish the remainder, and secure permission from the First Los Angeles Church to make the change. Within one week the balance of the support was pledged, and unanimous permission granted by the church.

In accordance with these plans, we closed our services at the Santa Fe Avenue Mission on Sunday, Dec. 22, with the Christmas services and the usual gifts to the Sunday-school. Next Sunday, Dec. 29, our work and workers move to Boyle Heights, 234 North Record Street, and unite with the Mission there.

We have appointed a chaperon to accompany the children to our new location and return, paying their car fare both ways. Thus we will try to care for those who have been with us in former years. An all-day meeting has been planned for next Sunday, at which time the organization of the Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meeting will be effected. A series of meetings is contemplated in the near future. The writer is retained as pastor. C. W. Guthrie.

THE SOUTHERN MOUNTAINS

People who have traveled through the southern mountains often speak of this section as the log-cabin country, and well they have a right to give it this name, for wherever you may chance to be, while in the mountains,—look whichever way you will,—and you will see these little log-houses dotting the sides and tops of the mountains. These little cabins are of all sizes and all degrees of excellence, but they usually consist of a single room, rough-floored and ceiled, with a big stone chimney at one end, one door at the front and another at the back, with, possibly, a window or two.

As prosperity attends him, the mountaineer may add another log-room or two, alongside the first, covering them with one roof, and usually leaving an open passageway between. The chimney, often built of hewn stone, hides a greater part of the end of the cabin. The house itself is built of hewn logs, that is, hewn on two sides, one to face inward for a somewhat smooth wall, and one to face outward to give an appearance of finish to the building. Few take the trouble to square the log on all four sides. The round sides are turned towards each other and the cracks made by their failure to meet are chinked with wedges of wood and wet clay or mortar. The larger crevices, which appear in time, may be plugged up, but the smaller ones only help in the ventilation, in which the wide fireplace and the open door are the most important. It is customary, with these mountain people, to have the door of the cabin open throughout the day. This is a habit that was born both of hospitality and of a desire for light and air. At night the door is shut and fastened,—a precaution that dates from the days of Indian warfare.

Hospitality is a cardinal virtue of the mountaineer. He usually has a spare bed for company. If not, and he knows you can not fare better at a neighbor's, he will make sure that you are accommodated, though the children, or his wife and himself, have to sleep on the floor. The farther back in the mountains, the truer this is. Nearness to cities and the railroads have made the mountaineer both more suspicious of his ability to please the tastes of the stranger, and more greedy of the stranger's money.

Travelers from the homes of the well-to-do or from restaurants of the cities may find the mountain fare rather meager. It is always the habit of the mountaineer to offer his hospitality with an apology for its plainness: "You-all are sure welcome if you can eq'al our fare." What the mountaineer eats, for the most part, he raises on his own land,—"hog and hominy" being the most

Sure enough! But why do so many of us accept so many blessings without returning to show our gratitude or appreciation? In our prayers, instead of continually asking for more favors and blessings, let us cultivate the habit of praise and thanksgiving. Let us take time to "count our blessings" once in a while, and especially now, at this particular time of the year, while the sacred associations of the recent Christmas season are still fresh in our minds.

TIMBERVILLE, VIRGINIA, ORPHANAGE

The old year is almost spent. Christmas is already in the past. Many sad hearts are mourning the loss of loved ones. Many are waiting to hear from their boys, to know they are safe. Many homes have empty chairs, yet, in the midst of all the sorrow, we have many reasons to rejoice. At last we have peace,—not only national peace but the peace and good will that Jesus brought. Many sacrifices have been made that we might be able to help feed the oppressed and starving children in foreign lands. Truly, it has been well said that "this is not a time of self but of sacrifice."

We have nineteen bright, happy, lovable children in the Home at present. There has been very little sickness and as yet none of the influenza epidemic. We feel very grateful to the Great God who has cared for us.

The children were very liberally remembered on Christmas Day by several individuals and Aid Societies; also two Sunday-school classes. Such gifts bring happiness and joy into these little lives. Some time before the great day came, boxes began to arrive. Little hearts were beating fast. Many questions were asked. Little feet were running here and there,—all were willing to help make the day a success. One little boy, who, with his two sisters, recently came to us, said they never had an orange nor a toy, and only knew of having one stick of candy. Can you imagine what a pleasant Christmas meant to them, when I tell you they had never been taught of the things that mean so much to us? They are receiving the children. "

MOUNT MORRIS, ILLINOIS

The Mount Morris church has had her share of churchless Sundays during the fall and winter. Twice we have had to suspend services on account of the epidemic of influenza. Each time we were unfortunate in losing one of our number by death. Conditions have cleared up now until we are enjoying unrestricted service privileges again. We are thankful for the relief that has come.

Our hearts rejoice in the return of the boys who had gone to answer the Nation's call. Already a few have come back, and more are soon to be at home. May it never occur again, that men shall be called upon for such a service!

Our Thanksgiving offering to the General Mission Board was $245.56.

The Christmas offering for the Armenian children is not yet complete, but stands at $245.60. This offering is being held till Jan. 1, in order to give those who could not be at the Christmas service a chance to give with us who were there.

We are looking forward to a revival in February and are hoping that we will not have to postpone it, as so many have had to do in the months past.

HOW THE AID SOCIETIES GAVE CHRISTMAS CHEER

The Aid Societies of Michigan and some from Northern Indiana sent many good and useful articles of clothing to us for distribution in needy homes. Herewith we give an illustration of the joy that was brought to one of the homes by your gifts.

A few days before Christmas several pieces of clothing and a few toys were sent to a widowed mother, and two days later we received these letters:

From the Mother.—"I wish you could have seen the children last night. It would surely have made you happy. The little brown dress is a little large, but it will do fine. I can use everything nicely, but the rubbers I will bring back. I told the children: 'I wonder if Papa knows. I believe he does.' He had such a wonderful vision of what God would do for us. How it pays to be a Christian when everything goes well, but, oh, in time of trouble, how dear the Lord gets to any one! Love from us all to all. Pray for us!"

From Her Crippled Boy, Who Can Not Walk.—"I was sure glad to get the things. I needed the knife, as Mamma burned my other one with some onion peelings. Many thanks for all the things you sent."

From Her Girl of Eleven, Who Sends Her Thanks.—"How surprised we were when Mamma got home with her big load of presents! I thank you very much for all the things. I am wearing the shoes already; they just fit me. When we tried the baby's dress on she said: 'It do looks nice, don't it?' And she hugged up the dolly and asked if it was hers. Brother has been wearing his gloves all evening. He cut his thumb with his new knife, but he didn't mind that."

We thought these letters of thanks should be made known to the sisters of the societies, that they may learn something of how their work is appreciated.

Any other societies, that feel led to help in the work here, may rest assured that it will be appreciated.

May the Lord bless the work of our sisters in the Aid Society! Sister Roy E. Miller.

THE NEED OF BETTER SINGING

I spent most of the year 1918 in teaching vocal music in Virginia, Tennessee and North Carolina, and find a great need for more and better singing in the church and Sunday-school services. I taught in three churches where I had conducted classes twenty-five years ago. It was surprising to see how few of those, having formerly sung, were in the classes at this time. Some have gone to their reward, others have lost interest, and a few seem to have forgotten that the young people must be taught if we are to keep up our singing.

Very few people sing by note. I find the young people, as a rule, are interested in music, but the erying need everywhere is leadership. There is not as much singing now in the home and social circles as thirty years ago. This, to my mind, is one cause for the lack of interest in so many churches. Unless we, as a church, wake up and give more attention to having music taught in our congregations, three things will happen within the next thirty years: (1) We will have instrumental music in our services. (2) The spiritual and devotional side of music will, to a large extent, be lost sight of. (3) Congregational singing will be a thing of the past.

Instrumental music will not supply the need. It is only a substitute, and a poor one at that. There is nothing more inspiring than a congregation singing with spirit, understanding and grace in their hearts. Singing is an expression of the emotions. We sing as we feel. There seems to be a drifting away from the old standard hymns and spiritual songs. One reason for this is the introduction of some of the popular songs into our devotion. Think, for instance, of trying to worship God by singing "Keep Sweet," "Brighten the Corner," "Keep on the Sunny Side," etc. These songs can be sung with profit to those who are out of humor and have the blues, but there is no worship in them,—not a word that lifts the heart toward God. Contrast these with such hymns as "Holy, Holy," "Break Thou the Bread of Life," "'Tis So Sweet to Trust in Jesus," and many others of varied expressions, which stir the emotions and lead one away from the things of earth, to stand on higher ground where the soul is refreshed in the presence of God.

It is very gratifying to recall an incident in connection with the closing of one of my classes in Page County, Va. When making an appeal for workers, and urging better preparation for singing in the world to come, six stood for Christ, and four young people were baptized.

Many a conscience has been awakened by the influence of sacred song, and inspired to live a higher and nobler life. This should encourage the teacher of sacred song to make his work largely evangelistic. There is too much of the mechanical in our singing and too many songs with only a "jingle." Pray for more teachers and a revival of sacred songs,—songs that appeal to the devotional and spiritual life. "For it is good to sing praises unto our God; for it is pleasant; and praise is comely" (Psa. 147: 1). D. M. Glick.

FIVE THOUSAND NEW SUBSCRIBERS FOR THE "MESSENGER"

There are certain elements that enter into the success of any undertaking. A disregard of these essentials will inevitably spell failure. Perhaps this neglect, on the part of some of the agents, is one of the reasons why the promoters of the "Forward Movement" insist upon the speedy realization of the slogan: "Five Thousand New Subscribers for the 'Messenger.'"

Aside from the pastor and the evangelist, there is no better medium of communication between the church and its members than the "Messenger." For that reason no home in the Brotherhood should be without the official church paper. The important question, therefore, is: "How shall we make the five thousand new subscribers an accomplished fact?" The answer is: "Through efficient agents, working conscientiously in each congregation of the Brotherhood." Note a few of the essentials:

1. Let each agent go carefully over his field, checking up such families of his congregation as are not, at present, subscribers for the church paper. Then let him visit these families personally,—not at the church or some other unsuitable place, as is the custom of some of the agents,—but in the home of the prospective subscriber, where everything is favorable for an appropriate presentation of the question. It is much easier to obtain a subscription when the solicitation can be attended to in the privacy of the home, than in a crowd, where an embarrassing situation, at times, is created.

2. It is a good plan to read the agents' letter to the entire congregation at church, on some Sunday previous to the individual soliciting. That will pave the way very nicely. As the agent starts out, let him not become too easily discouraged. When a member says "No" the first time, when approached, perhaps he has not had sufficient time to consider the matter. He should be called upon a second and, occasionally, a third time before taking the "No" as final. Usually, however, by this time, the prospective subscriber is ready to yield to the well-put argument of the faithful agent.

3. The agent should see to it that all members of the congregation, financially unable to subscribe for the "Messenger," are provided with the paper. This is a point of importance. No congregation can afford to have a single family unsupplied with the "Messenger."

4. After the "Messenger" has been placed in every home of the congregation, let the agent solicit friends and acquaintances outside of the church. In this way the "Messenger" may be introduced into many homes. The writer of these lines has thus succeeded in placing the "Messenger" in many homes of nonmembers. In addition to that, many of our premium books, such as "The Other Half of the Globe," "Saturday Night," "New Testament Doctrines," and others, have been advantageously introduced.

5. The agent should also see to it that a copy of the "Messenger" is placed in the Public Library, or other places of the kind, where it may breathe its Gospel message to countless other readers not otherwise reached. By the help of the Naperville and Elgin congregations the writer has been enabled to send thirty copies of the "Messenger" a year to the Joliet Prison. Who can estimate the far-reaching influence of the good seed thus dropped into some sin-sick soul? The chaplain reports that "the boys" appreciate the paper very much. In addition to this, the writer is also furnishing fifteen cottages of the Girls' State Home at Geneva with copies of "Our Young People." I do not make mention of this in a spirit of idle boasting, but simply to show our agents the extent of the field to be covered.

If "a drop of ink will make a million think," it is time and money well spent to distribute good literature. If only a single soul, even, is touched and saved through our efforts, how great is our reward! I know of no better way to reach a large majority of people, than through the reading of the "Messenger."

I was much impressed by a paragraph in Bro. O. D. Buck's "Reflections," written while he lay sick in one of our hospitals. He says: "As I have read the 'Gospel Messenger' and 'Missionary Visitor' quite thoroughly, while in the hospital, I am impressed with the fact that those who do not take these publications, or take them and do not read them, are missing a great source of instruction and inspiration."

In closing, I desire to express my fervent hope that every agent may be prepared to do his share in reaching the proposed goal: "Five Thousand New Subscribers for the 'Messenger.'" S. E. Netzley.

PEACE RESOLUTIONS

WHEREAS, We, the teachers and students of the Twelfth Annual Bible Institute of the Eglon Conference of West Virginia, in session assembled this 28th day of December, 1918, feeling keenly the tremendous issue and far-reaching importance of the approaching International Peace Conference, and

WHEREAS, We are very desirous and prayerful that the religious conscience regarding peace principles be amply protected and guaranteed in all nations,

THEREFORE, Be It Resolved,

1. That we petition the General Peace Committee of the Church of the Brethren to use every wise measure and strenuous effort within their province, to the end that the World Treaty may furnish this protection and guarantee;

2. That the Peace Committee of the First District of West Virginia be petitioned to indorse this paper; and

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the "Gospel Messenger" for publication.

Institute Committee: Obed Hamstead, James W. Beeghly, Jonas Fike, W. L. Teets, Ezra Fike.

District Peace Committee: Emra T. Fike, Chester Thomas.

SOME RESOLUTIONS TO ADOPT FOR ANOTHER YEAR

We can look back over our past life and see wherein we have failed. We have let many opportunities go by for accomplishing good. But these opportunities are gone never to return. Now we have passed the portals of another New Year. Let us not be dilatory. Let us, with new energy, lay our hands to the Gospel plow, and see if we can not do better work in the interest of the great world field. Some of us have become dull and need enlightenment. Our eyes have become dim, and our vision needs to be improved. We need to be stirred up, to take on a higher life, to make us more vigorous and energetic.

Some of us are almost at a standstill. Now is the time to come out of our state of lethargy, for time is too precious to be trifled with. The Lord's work is something we should be greatly concerned about. We should see where we are standing, and what the results will be if we do not rouse up and put on the whole armor of God, working while it is day, for "the night cometh when no man can work." BIBLE INSTITUTES

How they have grown! About twenty-two or twenty-four years ago the first one, from a District standpoint, was held at Holmesville, Nebr. How the people did crowd that house to see what it would be like! It was published as being the first one of the kind held in the Brotherhood. The work was largely elementary. Since that time the writer has attended many District, County and State Conventions.

A four-day Institute has just closed at Huntingdon, Pa. I am safe in saying that, in its spiritual teaching, clearness in presentation of the abundant life in Christ Jesus, and the characteristics a disciple of Jesus will manifest with the abundant life, this Institute has not been surpassed by any I have attended. And why? Is it not because we are beginning to recognize the talent, experience and ability of those who have made a special study of the vital things which make for Christian character, outside of our denomination as well as in it?

In this Institute was a State Sunday-school worker, Mr. Johnson, and Charles G. Trumbull, editor of the "Sunday School Times." Both of these men, with those of our own church, made their audiences long for and reach up by faith for that abundant life as it is in Christ Jesus. Brethren, let us throw down the human bars of selfishness and move upward, outward and onward to perfection. J. E. Young.

Notice to the Southern District of Indiana.—The Trustees of the Aged Persons' Home met at that institution Jan. 2, to discuss plans for its further development. This is the oldest Home of its kind in the Brotherhood and recently became the property of the District. The farm consists of 148 acres. There are two buildings, of sixteen rooms each. This was the gift of our fathers more than thirty years ago. The buildings are not modern in equipment and do not meet the legal requirements of the Board of Charities. In harmony with District Conference we will, in the near future, make a personal canvass of the churches of the District, so that the coming summer we may be able to make such improvements as are Oak Grove church met in council Dec. 21, with Eld. M. I. Whitmer presiding. Two letters were granted. The following officers were elected for the coming year: Bro. M. I. Whitmer, elder; Bro. Ober, Sunday-school superintendent; Sister Roused Naragon, "Messenger" agent. At the Christian Workers' Meeting, on Sunday evening, Bro. Russel Clark was elected president. Our Thanksgiving offering amounted to $10.—Harry Miller, North Liberty, Ind., Dec. 26.

Pleasant Valley church met in members' meeting Dec. 21, with Eld. J. H. Fike presiding. One letter was received and three were granted. We decided to raise all money for church and Sunday-school expenses through the Sunday-school collections, one treasurer paying all expenses. We also elected officers for the following year: Bro. J. L. Mishler, elder; Bro. Wm. Bowman, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Lester Kindy, Christian Workers' Meeting president. On account of the failing health of our elder, Bro. J. L. Mishler, he and his wife are spending the winter in Florida.—Mrs. A. C. Kindy, Middlebury, Ind., Dec. 21.

Plunge Creek Chapel members met in council Dec. 28, with Eld. John Wright in charge. Bro. Geo. Frantz was elected Sunday-school superintendent and Sister Lydia Landes, president of Christian Workers' Meeting. Bro. I. B. Book, of the West Manchester church, was chosen an elder for the coming year, and Bro. Murray, of Manchester College, as our pastor. The report of the Aid Society was read and accepted. One letter was received and six granted. Dec. 29 a collection was taken for Armenian Relief. Bro. Wright filled the pulpit on Sunday morning.—Mrs. Leona Poland, North Manchester, Ind., Dec. 30.

Rock Run congregation met in council Dec. 28, with Eld. Hiram Forney presiding. The yearly reports of the treasurer and secretary were read and approved. The total receipts of the church were $750.91; Sunday-school, $273.77; Christian Workers' Meeting, $35.97; Aid Society, $145; grand total, $1,214.65. Our membership numbers about ninety at present. Quite a number have died and a number have moved away during the past year. Dec. 29 was Missionary Day. Bro. Kurtz, from the West Goshen congregation, preached, after which an offering of $31.67 was lifted. We also had our Installation service for our new officers and teachers.—Edith Cripe, Goshen, Ind., Dec. 30.

South Whitley church met in council Dec. 14, with Bro. Geo. E. Swihart presiding. Two letters of membership were granted. Bro. Walter McConnell was reelected Sunday-school superintendent for the coming year, and Sister Henry J. Neff, "Messenger" agent and correspondent. Dec. 22 our Sunday-school rendered a Christmas program. Bro. J. A. Snell preached a fine sermon, which was much appreciated. Bro. S. Burger, of Howe, Ind., began a series of meetings Dec. 1, but owing to the epidemic, he only stayed one week. We expect to continue our meetings later.—Mrs. Henry J. Neff, South Whitley, Ind., Dec. 30.

Topeka church met in council Dec. 28, with Eld. I. S. Burns in charge. The writer was elected Sunday-school superintendent and Bro. Judson Vincent, Christian Workers' president. The Christmas program was well given Dec. 21. The work has been hindered considerably on account of the Spanish Influenza.—Mrs. Sarah E. Yonts, Topeka, Ind., Dec. 31.

Union Center church met in council Dec. 21, with Eld. D. H. Augleuyer presiding. One letter was received and seven granted. Our church, Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meeting were reorganized for the coming year: Elder, Bro. John D. Frederick; Sunday-school superintendent, Homer Weldy; Christian Workers' president, Harvey Frederick.—Chloe Weldy, Nappanee, Ind., Dec. 31.

Walnut church met in council Dec. 21, with Eld. J. F. Appleman in charge. The church, Sunday-school and Christian Workers' officers were elected as follows: Bro. Levi Puterbaugh, leader of prayer meetings; Bro. Ira Burbridge, president of Christian Workers' Meeting; Bro. D. R. Rohrer, superintendent; Bro. J. F. Appleman, elder. Bro. Geo. Neher gave a good report of our Thanksgiving offering for the Mission Board. Sister Sarah Rohrer gave the treasurer's report. The meeting closed with a short talk by Bro. Appleman.—Helen Mowlser, Tippecanoe, Ind., Dec. 28.

West Goshen (Pine Creek House).—Dec. 22 we reorganized our Sunday-school, with Bro. Lewis Miller, superintendent. A number of our members have moved away, but others are moving in and we believe that with new changes will come new opportunities. We trust the work will continue to grow as it has in the last six years. Dec. 22 a Christmas program was given by the children and young people. The offering for the Armenian Relief fund was $30; $9 was also sent to the Mission Board. Sister Sanford Frame was chosen "Messenger" correspondent.—Mrs. A. V. Shultz, Goshen, Ind., Dec. 27.

West Marion church met in council Dec. 28, with Eld. Geo. Swihart presiding. He remained with us over Sunday and gave two very interesting sermons. Officers for the coming year were elected, with Bro. Dan Gresh, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Mathias, Christian Workers' president; Bro. Welmer, clerk; Brethren Bates and Roy Hileman, trustees, and the writer, correspondent. While our attendance has not been as large as we should like, we have been enjoying some good spiritual sermons by our pastor, Bro. Obed Rife.—Della Hileman, Marion, Ind., Dec. 31.

IOWA

Fernald congregation met in council Dec. 27, with Eld. D. W. Wise presiding. Officers for the coming year were elected as follows: Sunday-school superintendent, Sister Junie Handsaker; Christian Workers' president, Bro. Wilbur Gerlach. Bro. D. W. Wise was reelected elder. Our Sunday-school and church services this fall have been hindered on account of the epidemic. The ban has now been lifted, and we hope to enter upon the new year with renewed energy.—Onnie Stevens Sell, Nevada, Iowa, Dec. 31.

Garrison church met in council Dec. 21, with Eld. H. A. Gnagy presiding. Our Sunday-school was reorganized with the writer as superintendent. Our Thanksgiving offering for World-wide Missions amounted to $170.80.—Mrs. Minnie Gnagy, Dysart, Iowa, Dec. 29.

Kingsley church met in council Dec. 20, with Eld. H. H. Wingert presiding. Officers for the coming year were chosen, with Bro. Earl Wilson, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Dewey Van Gundy, president of the Christian Workers' Society; Sister Kathryn Whigert, president of the Sisters' Aid. Bro. Nebor was chosen as "Messenger" correspondent. It was decided that we centralize our work,—meeting only at one place instead of alternating at the two houses, as we have been doing for several years. Bro. S. S. Neher came to us from Twin Falls, for church and Sunday-school. Bro. Rolston was chosen elder by unanimous vote. Our services have been resumed again after being closed first on account of scarlet fever and then influenza.—Mrs. A. C. Woodward, Callender, Iowa, Dec. 30.

Spring Creek church met in council Dec. 28, with Bro. Harvey Gilham presiding. Bro. Gilham was chosen elder for the coming year, Sister Will Elliott, superintendent; the writer, "Messenger" agent and correspondent. Our series of meetings and love feast were postponed on account of influenza. Our church was only closed a few Sundays. Owing to the inclemency of the weather we did not meet for Thanksgiving services. An offering of $11.55 was taken later for World-wide Missions. Our Sunday-school gave a Christmas program Dec. 22. An offering of $27.87 was taken for Armenian and Syrian Relief.—Mrs. Fannie Long, Fredericksburg, Iowa, Dec. 27.

KANSAS

Lawrence congregation met in council Dec. 27. Our pastor, Eld. F. E. McCune, presided. The communion and series of meetings were postponed until spring, owing to the prevalence of influenza in our city. As church officers the following were elected: Bro. H. W. Hyre, Trustee; Sister Elsie Forney, Clerk and Sunday-school Secretary; the writer, Sunday-school superintendent and president of Christian Workers' Society. A good Christmas program, consisting of songs, recitations and an address by Prof. L. W. Elkenberry, was rendered and enjoyed by all present.—J. H. Hoover, Lawrence, Kans., Dec. 28.

Ottawa church held its annual election of officers Dec. 27. Bro. R. F. McCune was chosen as elder in charge for the coming year. Bro. J. E. Throne was elected Sunday-school superintendent and Bro. Jesse Carney, president of the Christian Workers' Society. Two years ago our church decided upon a definite financial system of giving, which has proved quite successful. This year we closed our books with a balance of $111.25, instead of the usual deficit. Our Thanksgiving offering for World-wide Missions amounted to $157.66. Our fall series of meetings, as well as our other church activities, were given up on account of the epidemic. We are now looking forward to the coming of Bro. Jesse Emmert, of Garden City, Kans., to begin a two weeks' series of meetings Jan. 26.—Olive M. Wheeler, Ottawa, Kans., Jan. 1.

MARYLAND

Brownsville.—Dec. 8 Eld. Wm. E. Roop, of Westminster, Md., began a series of meetings in the Brownsville church and continued for three weeks. Four were received by baptism and four were restored. Bro. Roop preached with power and did much teaching each evening before the preaching services. We expect great results to follow these meetings. Bro. Roop also did a splendid work in the homes. Our love feast was held Dec. 21. Though small in comparison to our usual crowds, we had a very spiritual gathering. Bro. Roop officiated. Christmas services were held at the three churchhouses Dec. 25 and 26. The total collection taken at these places for the Armenian and Syrian Relief was $77.63. Our Sunday-school was reorganized, with Bro. S. F. Spitzer as superintendent.—Mrs. Nellie S. Kaetzel, Brownsville, Md., Dec. 31.

MICHIGAN

New Haven church met in council Dec. 28. Eld. Jos. Robison presided. Bro. Trnfford Wilkins was elected superintendent of the Sunday-school, Sister Grace Sherrick, "Messenger" agent. Eld. Robison remained and gave us an inspiring sermon on Sunday morning. Eld. C. C. Wilkins, of Grand Rapids, and Bro. Floyd Bollinger, of Carson City, also assisted on Sunday morning. Bro. J. Edson Utrey was to begin our meetings Jan. 1, but because of the epidemic we decided to postpone them for the present.—Alta L. Emrick, Middleton, Mich., Dec. 31.

MISSOURI

Warrensburg church met in council Dec. 28, with Eld. D. L. Mohler presiding. Bro. Mohler was reelected elder. Bro. J. J. Wampler was elected as superintendent and the writer church correspondent and "Messenger" agent. We are to organize a Teacher-training Class on Sunday evening. Sister Rebecca, elder of the South Warrensburg church, assisted with the meeting. Bro. Mohler gave us a splendid sermon on Sunday morning, which was enjoyed by every one. We decided to postpone our love feast and spring communion on account of so much sickness. Our services, during the past two months, have not been largely attended, owing to the prevailing epidemic.—Rowena Wampler, Warrensburg, Mo., Dec. 30.

NEBRASKA

Afton church, on account of the epidemic, has not been permitted to meet for public church services for three months. During this period the ban was removed at one time for a few days between Sundays; then put on again. Dec. 29 the church doors were opened again. Quite a number in our community have been sick, but no deaths have resulted. We have many things to be thankful for. During our vacation from church services we were made to reflect on what the condition of the world would be if, for a generation or two, the Bible and religious services were removed. Would the world finally revert to barbarism? It is not an accident that Paul wrote: "Neglect not the assembling of yourselves together." "Life and religion are one; otherwise neither is anything."—J. L. Snavely, Alvo, Nebr., Dec. 30.

NEW YORK

Lake Ridge.—Our church met in council Dec. 14 and elected the following officers for the coming year: Clerk, R. A. Nedrow; Trustee, Henry Campbell; Missionary Committee, E. F. Nedrow, C. J. Welby, Florence Slaght. Sister Martha Welby was elected correspondent. Our Sunday-school was also reorganized, with R. A. Nedrow as superintendent. Dec. 15 our Junior Mission Band presented the results of their labors for the year, amounting to nearly $25 from an investment of a little over $2. It was interesting to hear the children state in what they had invested. An excellent Christmas program was rendered on the evening of Dec. 24. The children had unanimously decided to dispense with their usual treat, and send the money thus saved to the war orphans. The offering taken amounted to $17.80. As a little surprise, the Sunday-school superintendent and his wife presented each child with a sack of popcorn and candy as a personal gift, which was much appreciated. We were glad to welcome home, recently, the only one of our number called to camp, Bro. Gordon Oeshee.—Clara Funderburg, Lindlowville, N. Y., Dec. 30.

NORTH DAKOTA

Surrey church met in council Dec. 22 and elected officers for another year: Elder, Bro. D. T. Diedrorff; Sister Vesta Lambert, "Messenger" agent; Bro. J. H. Burus, Sunday-school superintendent. Our regular services were discontinued for seven weeks on account of the Spanish Influenza. Public schools are closed until after the holidays.—Nora E. Petry, Surrey, N.

financial report was read, showing a balance in the treasury of $6.93. The church decided to put $5 into the Sunday-school treasury for our next quarterly meeting. We have decided to use the Sunday-school envelopes for our current expenses for the coming year. Bro. Ira Shively was elected treasurer. The writer was reelected clerk and correspondent; also delegate to Conference, who is to attend, if possible, the Ministerial Meeting, holding regular services at Bethel church, Dec. 24, and at Mt. Olive, Ohio, Dec. 25.

Cincinnati Mission.—We will have a Christmas tree and program, with the order of exercises being as follows: Song, No. 13; Prayer, by Bro. H. A. M., sermon by Bro. S. Z. Sharp; Secretary service, with sermon by Bro. D. M. Garver; 7:30, song by the congregation, "Shall We Gather at the River?"; Recitation, by Norn Shively will be the subject of the sermon by Bro. Garver; Songs No. 2." We would appreciate it very much if all the members of the church here on that day, and all others who can, would be present. Those coming by auto will please take the Old Cincinnati Pike all the way of the Big Four shops. Those coming by train will leave Springfield at 8:05 A. M., arriving at Clifton Place at 10:08 A. M. common staple. This expression, as far as I can learn, is only another term for corn bread and hacon.

Occasionally a small cook-stove is a possession of even a far-back mountaineer, but the fireplace is the stand-by oi perhaps the majority of the cooks. The iron pot of our great-grandmothers' time still swings on the crane in the mountain fireplace, and the "Dutch oven," or "bake kettle," as it is most commonly called in the mountains, still does its duty amidst the glowing coals on the hearth. The corn bread, or pone, is made of corn meal, cold water and salt, patted into a long, thick cake and deposited in the hake kettle to remain until it comes out a golden brown. When wrapped in a greased paper and covered with live coals in the fireplace until haked, this pone is called "ash-cake."

In the corner, or on the porch, of many a mountain home, stands the spinning-wheel. Its hours of duty today are not so many as in generations past, and carding and spinning are confined more generally to the needs of socks and mittens than to shirts and dresses.

I have seen fields that are too steep for any plow to cultivate or any beast to walk upon, and there no farming is done except with the hoe. Such fields are usually good for only one or two seasons of cultivation after having been cleared of their forest growth. The one-horse turning-plow has taken the place of our grandfathers' wooden share. Many discarded specimens of these plows may still he found in the mountains. A plow, known as the "bull tongue," which I may describe as a single-toothed cultivator with wide flaring wings, with many mountaineers is their sole horse tool, heing used first to scramble the ground two or three inches deep for the planting, and afterward, along with the heavy iron hand hoe, to cultivate the crop. Add to these implements the ax and the gun, and you have fairly represented the complete mechanical equipment of the far back mountaineer.

The very poorest mountaineers live in the gorges or "coves" on the mountain sides or mountain tops, and in the rough hill land. They are usually housed in a ragged relative of the log cahin, though sometimes more forlornly in a slatternly plank hut. In such a house the chimney has degenerated into a cohhlestone and mud daub, or even, perhaps, into a stick chimney, sometimes carried little above the height of the fireplace. A patch of corn and beans, and a hog or two, make up most of their worldly goods.

MUNCIE, INDIANA

The Muncie congregation is closing one of the most successful years in the history of the church. The average attendance in the church services has increased seventy-five per cent during the last two years. Twenty-one were baptized and five reclaimed during the last year. Bro. W. H. Cooper made the church a Christmas present of a mortgage on the church property. The finance committee reported all debts paid, as well as the general expenses of the church met. The Sunday-school has also had a prosperous year. The average attendance has been ninety, with an average offering of more than $5. Sunday, Dec. 22, a special offering of $38.07 was lifted for Armenian and Syrian Relief. We are much interested in the Forward Movement, and hope to he able to do our part in reaching the goal for 1919. What shall the record be?

At a recent council the church decided to elect all new officers for the coming year. Brethren D. W. Bowman, L. L. Teeter and Jonathan Greenhalgh were called to assist, and the following officers were elected: Eld. Geo. L. Studehaker, hishop; Brethren Henry Roger, E. W. Garrett, J. O. Winger, J. C. Arnold and Jacob Dugan, trustees; Brethren J. O. Winger, Eld. W. Carl Rarick and E. W. Garrett, pastoral committee; Bro. Esta Arnold, clerk; Sister Dora Nixon, "Messenger" correspondent; Sister Mary E. Studebaker, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. J. O. Winger, Christian Workers' president; Sisters Rachel Rarick, Viola Mahoney and Bro. W. Carl Rarick, missionary committee; Brethren J. O. Winger, John Roeger and M. E. Studebaker, auditing committee. Other workers were also appointed. We are now ready, we trust, to do more effectual work. We hope to "attempt great things for God and expect great things from God."

Bro. Hugh Miller will be with us, beginning Feb. 2, in a series of revival services. A religious campaign is to he waged in our county during the month of February. May we do our part in reaching the unsaved!

Muncie, Ind., Dec. 27. Geo. L. Studebaker.

REDCLIFF, ALTA., CANADA

After being under quarantine for seven weeks because of Spanish influenza, we are permitted again to hold regular church services. Dec. 15 a Thanksgiving service was held. In the evening an informal meeting gave the opportunity for a number to express their gratitude for various blessings received during these seven weeks. Every one seemed truly grateful that not one fatality saddened our church circle. After this service two, a father and daughter, were received into church fellowship by the ordinance of baptism.

Several new families have located among us, at least for the winter, and we greatly appreciate their help in the various church services. At present about forty-eight members are living in and near town. Before this epidemic broke out, our Sunday-school had reached an attendance of seventy-five and we hope to regain this number, and even more, in a very short time, if health conditions continue favorable.

A members' meeting was held last Monday evening at the home of Bro. Zigler. A goodly number being present, plans were inaugurated for more efficient work. Bro. J. H. Ardinger was elected as our Sunday-school superintendent. Sister Elsie Ardinger was chosen as our Christian Workers' president.

A committee was also appointed to arrange for a place in which to hold a series of meetings. The hall in which our regular services are held is also used for lodge purposes and can not be secured for continuous service during the week. We feel the need of a churchhouse very much and it might prove the part of wisdom, to plan for this in the near future, before property values increase.

Just now the manfacturing interests of the town are on the increase and this, no doubt, will attract some of our people who are looking for locations in towns of this kind. These conditions can be made the nucleus for permanent church activities, if conserved at the opportune time.

A kindly greeting awaits all who may come this way.

Dec. 26. Catharine Hollinger.

Brant, Bro. David, was born near Covington, Ohio. He enlisted three times in the service of the Civil War in 1861, and was honorably discharged in 1865. He united with the Church of the Brethren Aug. 31, 1909, remaining ever faithful. He died Dec. 18, 1918, at his residence one-half mile north of Pettt, Tipjecanoe Co., Ind., due to the infirmities of old age, being 82 years, 11 months and 23 days old. He was married to Sister Henrietta Weigle June 14, 1882. Bro. Brant is the last of a family of eight children to yield to the death summons. He leaves a widow, a number of nephews and nieces and five stepchildren. Services in the Pyrmont church. Interment in the old cemetery near by.—Mrs. Lulu E. Root, R. D. L. LaFayette, Ind.

Brown, Esther, daughter of John and Esther Bousman, born in Darke County, Ohio, died Nov. 2, 1918, aged 79 years, 8 months and 11 days. In 1861 she married Reuben Brown, who preceded her twelve years ago. To them were born four sons and nine daughters. She united with the Church of the Brethren at the age of twenty-three. She leaves two sons, eight daughters, twenty-two grandchildren, two great-grandchildren, three brothers and two sisters. Services by Bro. D. M. Garver, assisted by Brethren Bookwalter and Sharp. Interment in the Cedar Grove cemetery.—Mrs. E. S. Hollinger, New Paris, Ohio.

Brown, Martha E., nee McFarlin, born in Franklin County, Ind., died of pneumonia following influenza, at her home in Washburn, Ill., Dec. 19, 1918, aged 76 years and 28 days. In June, 1860, she married Bernhard Brown, who preceded her twenty-six years ago. To them eight children were born, all living. Services at the home by the undersigned. Sister Brown was one of the charter members of the Oak Grove church.—J. W. Switzer, Roanoke, Ill.

Brumbaugh, Sister Angeline, nee Fenstermaker, born in Berks County, Pa., died in the bounds of the Tuscarawas church, Stark County, Ohio, Oct. 29, 1918, aged 82 years, 4 months and 29 days. She married Bro. Silas Brumbaugh in 1859. To them were born six children. She became a member of the Church of the Brethren sixteen years ago. She is survived by her husband, two sons, four grandchildren, mother, two sisters and one brother. Services at the family residence by Bro. Adam Miller, assisted by the writer. Interment in the Zion cemetery.—Ora De Lauter, Canton, Ohio.

Burgard, Bro. John, born in Adams County, Pa., died Dec. 16, 1918, at the home of his daughter, aged 74 years, 8 months and 22 days. He married Emma Saurbaugh in 1868. To them five children were born, three of whom survive, together with three brothers, six grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. Bro. Burgard has been blind for the past six years, but was always very patient. He was a consistent member of the Church of the Brethren for about forty-eight years. Services by Elders C. Bucher, C. A. Gruber and the writer, at the South Fulton house. Interment in South Fulton cemetery.—A. H. Lind, Astoria, Ill.

Butterfield, Mrs. Bula, nee Stoner, wife of F. W. Butterfield and the youngest daughter of Brother and Sister E. C. Stoner, of Morrill, Kans., born near Morrill, Kans., died at her home, in the same place, of heart failure, caused by influenza, Dec. 20, 1918. She was united in marriage to F. W. Butterfield April 23, 1917. To this union one child was born. She is survived by her husband, little son, father, mother, two sisters and one brother. The passing away of this young mother was sad. She was reared in a Christian home and a regular attendant at Sunday-school. About three years ago, during a revival meeting, she expressed a desire to become a Christian and applied for church membership, but for some cause failed to take the last step. Her death was a shock to the community. She retired in the evening, feeling as well as usual. She was found dead in bed next morning. Judging by all appearances, she end came without the moving of a hand. Services at the home by the writer. Burial in the Morrill cemetery.—C. B. Smith, Morrill, Kans.

Corder, Cecil Ruth, wife of Amos Corder, died of Spanish influenza at Cambridge, Nebr., Dec. 22, 1918, aged 20 years, 4 months and 19 days. She leaves her husband and infant son. Corder, Pauln Fay, daughter of Amos and Cecil Corder, died at Cambridge, Nebr., Dec. 22, 1918, aged 2 years, 3 months and 15 days. Death was due to pneumonia. Services at the home by Bro. J. B. Moore.—Constance Snell, Oranno, Nebr.

Easton, Joel S., born in Franklin County, Pa., died at Quinter, Kans., Nov. 16, 1918, aged 69 years, 5 months and 9 days. He became a member of the Church of the Brethren when about twenty years old. He married Mary S. Shock in 1874. To this union were born eight children, one of whom died in infancy. Services by Eld. D. A. Crist. Interment in Quinter cemetery.—Mary E. Crist, Quinter, Kans.

Fetty, Sister Emma May, born in Logan County, Okla., died from complications, following influenza, at the home of her mother at Pomona, Kans., Dec. 20, 1918, aged 26 years, 5 months and 8 days. She united with the Church of the Brethren in 1914. She is survived by her mother, seven sisters and four brothers. Services at the home by the writer. Burial in Woodland cemetery.—J. M. Ward, Pomona, Kans.

Frasier, Issbelle, daughter of Frank and Bertha Frasier, died at her home, at Donald, Wash., of pneumonia, Dec. 19, 1918, aged 7 years, 5 months and 19 days. Services at the Zilch cemetery by the writer.—C. A. Wagner, Outlook, Wash.

Fuller, Edna Rebecca, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Fuller, died of influenza, Dec. 23, 1918, aged 19 years, 3 months and 23 days. She leaves parents, three sisters and two brothers. Services by Bro. J. H. Brumbaugh and the writer. Interment at Christ Church.—Rebecca L. Snavely, Hudson, Ill.

Henricks, James Rufus, son of Elisha and Hannah Henricks, born in Woodford County, Ill., died of heart failure in Caldwell, Kansas, Dec. 19, 1918, aged 59 years, 6 months and 19 days. He was married to Christena Waggoner Jan. 18, 1880. This union was blessed with ten children, two of them dying in infancy. His wife preceded him to the spirit world two years and ten days. Two sons, six daughters, four brothers and sisters, and nine grandchildren survive. He united with the Church of the Brethren at the age of twenty-one. At twenty-two he was elected to the deacon's office, and lived a most exemplary life. He faithfully performed the duties of this office until the Lord called him home. He was never so happy as when busily engaged in the work of the Lord. Services by the writer from the Church of the Brethren in Wichita, Kans. Text, Rev. 14: 13. His body was laid to rest beside his wife in Highland cemetery, Wichita, Kansas.—M. S. Frantz, 1532 Pennsylvania Avenue, Wichita, Kans.

Hoover, Sister Elizabeth Guyer, wife of Bro. Eli. B. Hoover, and daughter of Jacob S. Guyer (deceased) and Sister Esther Guyer, of Roaring Spring, Pa., died at her home near Martinsburg, Pa., Dec. 4, 1918, aged 43 years, 1 month and 2 days. She is survived by her husband, four daughters, two sons, mother, four sisters and one brother. Services at the church at Martinsburg by Bro. W. H. Holsinger, assisted by Brethren Fred Zook, M. J. Weaver, S. I. Brumbaugh, and J. K. Brown.—Jno. Fetter, Barboursville, Pa.

House, Sister Effie, nee Holloway, born near West Point, Ill., died at her daughter's home near Knobnoster, Mo., Nov. 1, 1918, of pneumonia following influenza, aged 31 years, 2 months and 1 day. She married J. F. House in 1904. To this union were born four sons and two daughters, one of whom died some years ago. She also leaves her husband, father, four brothers and five sisters. She united with the Church of the Brethren in her youth. Services at the home by Eld. Amos Wampler, assisted by Eld. J. M. Mohler, of Leeton, Mo., and Rev. West, of the Christian church.—Lulie Holloway, Knobnoster, Mo.

Kaltenbaueer, Mrs. Geo. W., daughter of Sadie and Wm. Boltnott, born near Maxwell, Iowa, died Dec. 9, 1918, at her father's home, south of Elwell, aged 18 years, 1 month and 29 days. She united with the Church of the Brethren in 1917. She married Geo. W. Kaltenbaueer Jan. 24, 1917. To this union was born one daughter. She leaves husband, daughter, father and mother, seven brothers and two sisters. Services at the grave by the writer. Text, 2 Cor. 6: 17; 7: 4.—J. K. Eikenberry, Maxwell, Iowa.

Kennedy, Polly, died Dec. 20, 1918, aged 84 years and 9 months. She lived a consistent Christian life, having been a member of the Church of the Brethren for over forty years. Services by the undersigned, assisted by Bro. S. I. Flory.—J. B. Kindig, Waynesboro, Va.

Lindsey, Sister Mabel Evelyne, born at Kinross, Iowa, died at her home at Phoenix, Arizona, Dec. 5, 1918, of Spanish Influenza, aged 14 years, 8 months and 10 days. She was the daughter of Brother and Sister Ed. Lindsey, of Phoenix, Arizona. She leaves her father, mother and three sisters. Her brother preceded her in death about a year and a half. Mabel was sick only two days, before the summons came. It was a painful shock to her parents, sisters and many friends. At the age of twelve she confessed Christ as her Savior, uniting with the Church of the Brethren at North English, Iowa, of which she was a faithful member at the time of her death. She was laid to rest in the English River cemetery, near South English, Iowa, by the side of her brother. Short funeral services were conducted at the cemetery by Bro. D. P. Miller.—A. W. Miller, South English, Iowa.

Marteeny, Chauncey, son of Brother and Sister Geo. Marteeny, died Dec. 9, 1918, of Spanish Influenza, aged 31 years. He is survived by his wife, three children, parents, two brothers and one sister. Services at the home by Rev. Hoffmier, of the Reformed church. Interment in Husband cemetery at Somerset, Pa.—J. W. Wegley, Somerset, Pa.

Marteeny, Lloyd, son of Brother and Sister Geo. Marteeny, died of influenza, Dec. 9, 1918, aged 28 years. He is survived by his wife, four children, parents, two brothers and one sister. Services at his parents' home by Rev. Petrea, of the Lutheran church, and the writer. Interment in the Lavansville cemetery.—J. W. Wegley, Somerset, Pa.

Miller, Sister Margaret Ann, daughter of Eld. Daniel (deceased) and Sister Bettie Miller, died Dec. 11, 1918, aged 54 years and 18 days. She had been an invalid for several years. She was a faithful member of the Church of the Brethren. She is survived by her mother, one brother and two sisters. Services at the home by Eld. Peter Garber. Interment in the Pleasant Valley cemetery.—Ruth E. Williams, Mt. Sidney, Va.

Mongold, Bro Geo. W., died of Influenza Oct. 23, 1918, aged 26 years, 3 months and 13 days. He is survived by his wife. Services by the writer.—S. W. See, Mathias, W. Va.

Morey, Bro. Charles, of Ireton, Iowa, died Dec. 12, 1918, aged 27 years. Twenty-four hours after his wife, Sister Ada Woods Morey, died at the age of 24 years. They were buried in the family lot at Rawarden, Iowa. Services by the writer, assisted by Rev. Stuart, of the Presbyterian church.—J. E. Rolston, Sheldon, Iowa.

Myers, Sister Mary, daughter of John and Barbara Wherley, born in Preble County, Ohio, died Dec. 19, 1918, aged 80 years, 6 months and 8 days. She married Samuel Myers in 1855. Her husband died twenty-three years ago. To this union were born seven children. She leaves four sons, one brother, one sister and seven grandchildren. Services by Bro. J. Franklin Brubaker. Interment in Lexington cemetery.—Mary Bowser, West Alexandria, Ohio.

Nurshbal, Ieshubhal, died at his home in Vali Mission, India, Oct. 18, 1918. On Friday preceding his death he was sent to an out-village in apparently good health. On Tuesday he returned with an attack of lung trouble. Sister Hlummelshaugh did all she could for him until the Lord called him home on the following Friday evening. He was baptized in the early days of the mission in Raj Pipla State, was called to the ministry several years ago, and until recently was one of our only two Indian Elders. He completed the Bible School course under Bro. Blough two years ago, and had since been the chief helper of the inexperienced missionaries in Raj Pipla State. He leaves his wife and five children to mourn his loss. We feel it a great loss to our whole mission. Such capable workers are only too few, but the Lord's will be done.—S. Ira Arnold, Post, Umalla, via Ankleswr, India.

Shank, Sister Olive, daughter of Michael and Lizzie Bitner, born in Fostoria, Ohio, died of bronchial pneumonia, following influenza, Dec. 10, 1918, aged 20 years, 1-month and 26 days. In 1909 she married Elmer Shank. She is survived by her husband, three children, father, mother, three brothers and four sisters. She was a faithful member of the Church of the Brethren. Services from the home by Eld. Newton Binkley. Burial in cemetery near by.—Mary Weisenburger, Lauru, Ohio.

Shaw, Bro. Dell F., born in Gage County, Nebr., died at Beatrice, of Spanish influenza, followed by pneumonia, Dec. 6, 1918, aged 24 years, 7 months and 14 days. Services by the writer at the South Beatrice church. Text, John 14: 2.—W. W. Blough, Beatrice, Nebr.

Sherman, Bertha Mary, wife of Geo. Sherman, and daughter of Jonathan Plunkett, died of influenza, at her home near New Carlisle, Ohio, Dec. 18, 1918, aged 32 years and 6 months. She is survived by her husband, four children, father, three brothers and two sisters. Services by the writer at the home.—D. D. Vanderburg, New Carlisle, Ohio.

Snell, Paul Galen, son of Brother and Sister Jacob Snell, died at the home of his grandparents at Cambridge, Nebr., of pneumonia, following influenza, Dec. 8, 1918, aged 0 years, 3 months and 18 days. Services by Bro. J. B. Moore. Interment at the Afton cemetery.—Constance Snell, Orafino, Nebr.

Snider, Sarah, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Weldy, born in Adams County, Ind., died of acute indigestion at her home in Wells County, Ind., Dec. 6, 1918, aged 60 years. In 1876 she married James Snider. She was a member of the Church of the Brethren for a number of years. She leaves her husband, one daughter and five sons, one of whom is in France. Services at the Emanuel church, near Tocsin, by Eld. D. M. Byerly. Text, Joshua 1: 11.—Emma Miller, Decatur, Ind.

Snyder, Sister Ida, daughter of Elias and Alice Snyder, born near Cedar Rapids, Iowa, died of influenza and pneumonia, Dec. 25, 1918, aged 35 years, 7 months and 11 days. She united with the church in 1912. She leaves her parents and one sister. Services by the writer. Interment in the Dry Creek cemetery, near Toddville, Iowa.—S. B. Miller, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Tyson, Sister Sarah J., born in Bordentown, N. J., died in Norristown, Nov. 13, 1918, aged 69 years, 6 months and 24 days. Sister Tyson was a devout Bible student. Services from the home by Bro. G. E. Yoder. Interment at Morris City cemetery.—Emma N. Cassel, Norristown, Pa.

Whetzel, Margaret Ann, wife of B. Whetzel, died Dec. 14, 1918, aged 26 years, 9 months and 14 days. Services by the writer at the New Dale church. Interment in the New Dale cemetery. Text, John 6: 28.—S. W. See, Mathias, W. Va.

Whitney, Willma Orville, born at Galt, Grundy Co., Mo., died Dec. 20, 1918, at Wichita, Kansas. Death was due to complications. His age was 27 years, 8 months and 18 days. He is survived by his wife, one daughter, his mother, several half brothers and one half-sister. He united with the Church of the Brethren in 1914, and remained faithful until death. Services by the writer. Text, Rev. 22: 14.—M. S. Frantz, 1532 Pennsylvania Avenue, Wichita, Kans.

not begin our meetings Nov. 2. We also postponed our love feast until spring. At our church service, Nov. 24, we lifted an offering to provide a Thanksgiving dinner for some of the poor in Chicago. We held a union service with the United Brethren church on Thanksgiving evening. An offering was taken for the Belgian Relief Fund. Dec. 28 our church met in council. We elected church and Sunday-school officers for the year. Our pastor was retained for another year. Bro. Percy Beery was elected trustee; Lily Adrock, "Messenger" agent; Bro. Harvey Stoner, superintendent of the Sunday-school; the writer church correspondent.—Mrs. E. B. Ridgwell, Bremen, Ohio, Dec. 30.

Sidney.—During the fall our pastor, his wife and the Sunday-school teachers have put forth an earnest effort to keep our Sunday-school and church rec ed up to normal. While many were sick, and several have died, we have succeeded in holding good attendance and interest, and our collections, at present, exceed all others in the history of the Sidney Mission. On Thanksgiving Day union services were held at the High School Auditorium. In the evening we held services at our church. Bro. Wm. J. Tinkle and wife, of Bellefantaine, were with us. Bro. Tinkle gave us a fine message. An offering of $24 was taken and sent to the General Mission Board. On Christmas evening Bro. Ira Frantz, of Loramie, gave us a splendid message. Our pastor made a strong appeal for Relief and Reconstruction work and an offering of $40 was taken. Because of the epidemic we have had to postpone our special effort for ingathering, but during the past six months four have been baptized.—Bessie P. Schmidt, Sidney, Ohio, Dec. 31.

Sugar Creek congregation enjoyed a sermon on Christmas Day by Eld. Samuel Driver, Bro. Dan Thomas, of Lotty, Ohio, preached Dec. 22. We gave Christmas baskets to some of the poor people of Lima. The baskets were distributed by Brethren S. I. Driver, John Brady and R. H. Rex.—Carrie B. Early, Lima, Ohio, Dec. 31.

Sugar Hill church met in council Dec. 17, with Eld. J. Franklin Brubaker presiding. Two letters of membership were read. Oct. 19 had been appointed for our communion, but on account of the influenza it has been postponed until spring. Sunday-school officers were elected for another year, with Bro. Harry Erbaugh as superintendent at the Toms Run house, and Bro. Isaac Bowser at the Sugar Hill house. Bro. John Good was chosen as "Messenger" agent. On Christmas Day Bro. John Garst gave us a very interesting sermon.—Mary Bowser, West Alexandria, Ohio, Dec. 26.

West Milton.—Dec. 22, with sacred song and story, our Sunday-school celebrated the birth of our Savior. Well may our hearts rejoice and sing for joy, for no greater gift or blessing can the infinite God ever bestow upon the world. The entire offerings of the day, amounting to $92.20, were given to the Armenian and Syrian Relief. Thus we end the work of the year.—a year of joy and sadness, of sacrifice and blessing, a year that will never be forgotten as long as the stories of earth's conflicts and victories are rehearsed among the children of men. May God give us peace!—J. Henry Showalter, West Milton, Ohio, Dec. 26.

OREGON

Portland.—Our Christmas program was rendered on Tuesday evening, Dec. 24. Bro. Reed had charge of the opening services. The Sunday-school pupils gave recitations and songs. The decorations were in keeping with the Christmas season. All present were remembered by the Sunday-school with a treat. We were sorry that a number of our Sunday-school girls were absent on account of sickness, but we hope for their speedy recovery. The teachers of these pupils were appointed to look after their treat.—Grace W. Hewitt, Portland, Oregon, Dec. 26.

PENNSYLVANIA

Lancaster.—Our Children's Meeting, Dec. 1, was interesting and well attended. Bro. John C. Zug, of Palmyra, Pa., and Bro. J. G. Meyer, of Elizabethtown, Pa., addressed the school. In the evening we enjoyed a spiritual love feast with about 160 communing. Several visiting ministers were with us. Bro. John C. Zug officiated. The night before Christmas many homes of the unfortunate ones of our city were made happy on receiving baskets of provisions. Our exercises were held on Christmas Day.—Josh N. Phillips, Lancaster, Pa., Dec. 30.

Ligonier.—After eight weeks without services on account of the epidemic, we are enjoying church privileges again. Nearly every member was afflicted but there were no deaths. After preaching last Sunday, two more were added to the church, making five for the year. Bro. Roy Wolford was elected Sunday-school superintendent, and Sister Ruth Wolford, Christian Workers' president. Dec. 15 we listened to a fine sermon by Bro. A. Klein Wolford, of Santa Ana, Cal. We have preaching every Sunday instead of twice a month.—Clare Wolford, Ligonier, Pa., Dec. 31.

Morrisville.—Dec. 22 an interesting Christmas program was given by the Sunday-school. Notwithstanding the disadvantages under which the program was prepared, because of the epidemic, the result of the effort was highly gratifying. A unique feature of the occasion was the surprise which had been planned for the pastor, Bro. C. C. Sollenberger. At the close of the service a Christmas gift of $150 was presented by the church as an expression of their appreciation and good will. The gift is valued for its material worth, but more especially for the spirit of confidence and coöperation which it signifies. —Mrs. C. C. Sollenberger, Johnstown, Pa., Dec. 30.

Mexham congregation met in council Dec. 17. Brethren Waldo Harshberger and Chalmer Gardner, who had previously been elected to the deacon's office, were installed, our elder, Bro. Levi Harshberger, conducting the service. Bro. Harshberger having resigned as elder, Bro. Clyde M. Horst, pastor of Walnut Grove congregation, was elected for both years. It was impossible to hold our love feast this fall, because of the epidemic of influenza, so we decided to hold it Easter Sunday. We also decided to have Sister Marguerite Stifler Garrett conduct the singing during our revival, in which Bro. C. D. Bonsack will assist us, beginning Feb. 10. The election of officers for church and Sunday-school was held and Bro. Irvin Hoover was elected Sunday-school superintendent.—Mrs. J. C. Flora, Johnstown, Pa., Dec. 31.

Notice to the Elders and Pastors of Western Pennsylvania.—Bro. J. B. Deeter, Annual Meeting Treasurer, calls for three cents per member this year, instead of one and one-half cents as formerly. This money is now due. Please get it to me before the last of March, so as to have it appear in the Business Booklet of the District Meeting. Sending it with the delegates to the meeting is not satisfactory.—Jerome E. Blough, Treasurer, 1309 Franklin Street, Johnstown, Pa., Dec. 31.

Pottstown.—Dec. 22 we met for the purpose of electing officers for the church, Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Society. The present pastor, Bro. G. K. Walker, was reelected pastor and elder for one year. Bro. Chas. Crosby was reelected Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Wm. Wadsworth, Jr., president of Christian Workers' Society. Two of our organized classes recently held a joint meeting. Officers and teachers were elected and the necessary committees for organized work were appointed. Both classes are beginning the new year with renewed interest and with prospects for an increased enrollment. The Women's Bible Class has organized as Aid Society and will begin sewing soon after the new year. Our Sunday-school has shown a steady growth. The recent epidemic interfered greatly with the work, but at present the school is about normal. Recently the members of the church came to the home of the pastor to spend the evening. The Young People's League rendered an interesting literary program, at the close of which one of the members, in a very unique manner, presented the pastor with a small Christmas package, containing $50, as a token from the church.—Mrs. G. K. Walker, Pottstown, Pa., Dec. 29.

Tyrone.—There was a very unique Christmas service enjoyed in the Tyrone church Dec. 22, the chief feature being an untrimmed tree. Christmas hymns were sung by the audience and the children sang, "Away in a Manger." The pastor delivered the Christmas message and made an appeal for the starving Armenians. At the suggestion of the children to trim the tree with money it was trimmed with bills. This was entered into very enthusiastically and notwithstanding the stormy night and small audience, an offering of $51.05 was lifted. Dec. 27 the church met in council, effected the reorganization of the Sunday-school and elected some officers for the church. A different method of work is being worked out for the Christian Workers.—Mrs. W. M. Ulrich, Tyrone, Pa., Dec. 31.

TENNESSEE

Pleasant Valley.—Dec. 15 Bro. W. R. Argabright, of Fairview, Mo., began a series of meetings. Each service was well attended. There were no additions to the church, but it was greatly strengthened by Bro. Argabright's good sermons. Bro. Smiths Chapel, W. Va., where he will conduct a series of meetings. As a result of a recent visit of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Swadley to our church, a strong teacher-training class was organized.—Pearle Sellers, Pleasant Valley, Tenn., Dec. 27.

VIRGINIA

Mt. Zion.—After being deprived of church privileges for several weeks, we feel that we can more fully appreciate the great blessing that comes from assembling together. The epidemic has raged in our community for several months, but so far we have had no deaths, for which we are very thankful. Nov. 16 we met in council, with Eld. D. N. Spitler presiding. The report of the visiting brethren was very satisfactory. Our love feast was held Nov. 23. We very much appreciated having Bro. J. M. Kagey, of Dayton, Va., with us. He officiated at the meeting. He also preached an able sermon on Sunday morning following. Bro. D. M. Glick was also with us, having been in the community some time, giving his stereoptican views of the Holy Land and holding several singing classes, for which we are very grateful. At this writing our church and Sunday-school services are being closed again, much to our regret.—H. J. Sours, Parry's, Va., Dec. 23.

Topeco.—After being closed two months on account of the influenza epidemic, our Sunday-school reopened Dec. 1. Our Thanksgiving service was held the Sunday following. An offering of $24 was taken. We also met today. An offering of $10.15 was taken for the needy. Meetings have been discontinued again for the present.—J. W. Weddle, Floyd, Va., Dec. 25.

WASHINGTON

Centralia church met in council and elected officers for the new year, with Bro. E. L. Whisler, elder; Bro. J. L. Whisler, superintendent of Sunday-school; Bro. Ernest Gregory, Christian Workers' president. One has been received by baptism since our last report. We had expected to have Bro. Hutchison, of Chewelah, with us for a two weeks' series of meetings to begin Jan. 5, but on account of so much influenza, these meetings, as well as those at the County Farm, have been postponed. The new church at Rock Lake, Idaho, is completed and will be dedicated Jan. 12. Bro. D. B. Eby, of Olympia, will preach the dedicatory sermon. Sickness has hindered and delayed the work, but we have been willing to endure it. The people of Richland Valley are well pleased and are grateful for the help given. We hope to give them a two weeks' series of meetings after dedication and to close with a love feast.—Ida McNamara, Centralia, Wash., Dec. 31.

Outlook church met in council Dec. 28, with Bro. A. H. Partch in charge. Bro. C. A. Wagner was chosen elder for the ensuing year, and Sister C. A. Wagner, "Messenger" agent and correspondent. Two were received by letter, three by baptism, length of time, and Sunday-school and Christian Workers' officers for six months. Dec. 29 our Sunday-school offering amounted to $20, to be used for Armenian and Syrian Relief work. Following Sunday-school, Bro. Wagner preached for us.—Mrs. Arthur A. Myers, Outlook, Wash., Dec. 29.

WEST VIRGINIA

Clifty.—Dec. 19 Eld. J. S. Zigler began a series of meetings which closed Dec. 27, on account of so much influenza in the community. Bro. Zigler held sixteen meetings in all. We met each morning for Bible study, using the Book of Hebrews. We had preaching services at night. The people were greatly interested in the Bible study, and we believe that good impressions were made. Bro. Zigler visited in quite a number of homes in the community and made many warm friends. We have had an evergreen Sunday-school since April 1, 1913.—Mary Crist, Clifty, W. Va., Dec. 30.

Greenland.—Dec. 7 Bro. B. B. Ludwick, of Mt. Pleasant, Pa., began a series of meetings at the Brick church and continued until Dec. 23, preaching in all twenty-one splendid sermons. The best of interest was shown. Two young people were added to the church by baptism. The members at this place have been much encouraged and strengthened. We did not have services on Thanksgiving Day on account of bad weather, but Bro. Ludwick preached our Thanksgiving sermon Dec. 21. An offering of $18.18 was taken for relief work. We also gave an offering of $6.37 for Armenian and Syrian Relief.—Myrtle Ideman, Masonville, W. Va., Jan. 1.

Pierce.—We came to this place, which is a mission point in the Maple Spring congregation, in June. In July we tried to organize a Sunday-school which, we think, has been very interesting, but the attendance is small. On account of inclement weather and poor attendance we have closed for the present. Bro. Emra Pike, of Eglon, W. Va., comes every second Sunday and preaches. If he can not come, he usually sends some one. We would be glad for any minister, layman, or Sunday-school worker, to visit us. We were much encouraged when three of the Volunteer Mission Band from Blue Ridge College, Bro. Gebner, Prof. McDott and Sister Bertha Pike, gave us a very interesting program Dec. 24. They discussed three subjects: "Gifts," "Which Way?" and "Habits." We hope they can arrange to visit us again.—Homer C. Kight, Pierce, W. Va., Dec. 31.

Something That Lasts and Costs

ADDRESSING a body of earnest young people, the speaker suggested two questions, among others, which they ought to ask about their contemplated life-work. The questions were: "Will it last?" and "Does it cost?" A negative answer to either question would be sufficient ground, it was held, for rejecting the proposal under consideration. How could one afford to put his life into something which would not last? And how could he expect his accomplishments to be worth anything if they did not cost?

These are first-class questions for people, young or old, to ask about their work, especially if they would lay any claim to being Christians. It is hard to understand how anyone of normal mentality can be satisfied to give his chief thought and strength to objects which, even if attained, endure for a short time only, when he might just as well devote himself to something that can never perish. And for a Christian,—well, the thing is inconceivable.

Any reader who wishes to test himself on this matter will find a convenient method in the Forward Movement which the Church Boards are launching with the opening of the new year. It will enable him to find out whether the thing his heart is set on is something that will last. By comparing what it costs him, with the cost of participation in the Movement, he can also judge where the greatest value lies. Things worth having cost something.

Some people may not understand how the Kingdom of God can be "without money and without price," and yet be the costliest proposition in the world. They would, if they would take the advice of Jesus, and seek it first.

Making the Preacher Free

HERE is the story of a preacher and his two sons that might well have more than one good moral. The preacher is a successful evangelist and loves his work. part of the work. Go where you please, stay as long as you think you are needed, never stop to think whether the people can pay you or not. We don't care whether you preach in a rich city church, in the slums, or in the remotest country church. We will pay all your expenses and a good salary besides."

The proposition was gladly accepted and for a number of years this evangelist has been holding meetings on this basis, going where he is most needed and leading hundreds of lives out of darkness into light.

Isn't that fine? What sincere ambassador of Christ would not rejoice to be thus freed from all concern about a living for himself and his family, while he pours out his energies unreservedly in the Master's work? But some preachers do not have rich sons, and some of those who do, have not succeeded in impressing them with the desirability of such an arrangement as we have described.

Make as many applications as you like, so they do not all miss yourself, but please give a special thought or two to these facts: (1) Many ministers,—perhaps most,—are compelled to consider the financial side of the question in choosing their field of labor. (2) That a pastor or evangelist should feel obliged to make his choice of a field depend on its financial strength rather than its spiritual need and his fitness to minister thereto, is a very grievous evil.

Having considered these facts, consider also this question: What should be done about it? Shall we be satisfied with pouring out our wrath on the preacher who accepts the call with the most money behind it? He decides wrongly sometimes, no doubt. His temptation is such as is common to mortals. Other people than preachers have been known to choose locations, and even vocations, solely because of their money-making possibilities,—a thing no Christian has a right to do.

The root of the trouble is in the system which makes the preacher's support entirely dependent upon the local community to which he ministers. The remedy must be sought in a wider distribution of burdens and resources, a plan that will free the preacher from the dominance of the pocket books of his own parishioners and enable him t... count for the most. The Question of Salvation and

NOT long since we read a statement to the effect that the most dangerous teaching in all this country is the doctrine of salvation by works. The writer then went on to show how the sinner is saved by faith and not by works, that works cut no figure whatever in the scheme of human redemption. The writer did not say what he meant by the term "works,"—or "good works," as he now and then put it,—but one could readily discern, by reading between the lines, that he was driving at the obedience of the Gospel, or performing the external duties set forth in the New Testament teachings.

And, by the way, most of those who preach and write against what they designate as "salvation by good works," are careful not to define the term "good works." They quote freely what Paul says about a Wesleyan doctrine of j... faith alone. John Wesley ... is justified by faith alone ... and very full of comfort ... justified by faith, but it ... alone. The faith that sav... invariably associated wit... have faith without obedie... as James puts it. Refer... James then adds: "Can fa...

When writing of justifi... law," Paul had no refere... set forth in the New Te... were, in the days of the ap... to blend the requirements ... requirements of the Gospe...

Christ Jesus. Those accepting Christ in faith, accepted all the duties and responsibilities for which that faith called. It meant a complete separation from the Mosaic law, with all its rites, ceremonies, and sacrifices. To every Jewish convert it meant the end of the Mosaic law, along with all its works. The doctrine which Paul taught was fully confirmed when the apostolic conference convened in Jerusalem, for there it was clearly set forth, as recorded in Acts 15, that obedience to the law of circumcision, and other Mosaic requirements, should not be demanded of Gentile converts. This decision placed the church in the right light before the world, with the Gospel as her rule of faith and practice, and the law of Moses serving as our schoolmaster to bring us to Christ, that we might be justified by faith (Gal. 3: 24),—that is, living faith in Christ Jesus.

When we listen to a minister endeavoring to convince his genteel congregation that a man is justified by faith and not by works, and appeals to what Paul has written, respecting the works of the law for proof, he impresses us as one who is beating against the air, for there is not one chance in a thousand that he may have in his audience even one person who believes that the works of the Mosaic law cut any figure in justification. If by "works," or even "good works," he means the duties set forth in the teaching of Christ and the apostles, let him come out squarely and say so. Then we will know where to place him. The man who teaches that obedience to the Gospel cuts no figure in salvation, comes as near flatly contradicting Christ and the apostles as it is possible for a human being to do. When Jesus says, "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven" (Matt. 7: 21), and some preacher stands before his audience, saying that "we are saved by faith only, and that other duties play no part in the plan of salvation," what is that but a contradiction?

Another ringing proof on this point: In Matt. 25: 31-46 we read about a lot of disappointed people who were denied an entrance into the kingdom everlasting, just because they refused to help and encourage the needy and unfortunate, and yet there are those who are saying that good works, or doing good, have nothing whatever to do with the salvation of either men or women, Jew or Gentile.

If there is anything that is made plain in the teaching of the Master and his apostles, it is the doctrine of faith and obedience, and never one without the other. To be "doers of the word, and not hearers only" is a characteristic teaching of the whole Sacred Record. It comes marvelously near being the last thing that the Spirit ever transmitted to the human race: "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city" (Rev. 22: 14). Paul, writing of Jesus, would have us take this view of it: "Being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him" (Heb. 5: 9). Jesus is the Author of eternal salvation, not for those who stop at faith, but for those who obey him in faith, doing whatsoever he has commanded us.

The Brethren built better than they, at first, thought, when they made the doctrine of faith and gospel obedience their own. They were among the very first to plant the doctrine on the new continent. They still cling to the same line of teaching. Only now and then will one so far lose sight of this fundamental point as to endorse the "faith-alone" doctrine,—a doctrine that disparages what the Master says about loving him and keeping his sayings. Now is the opportune time for us to make a speciality of the doctrine of salvation by the faith that calls for the doing of the things that Jesus commanded. We need to teach people the importance of doing, of obeying from the heart the form of doctrine delivered us. The importance of hearing and doing, and not hearing only, can not be too strongly emphasized. We need, more than ordinarily, to impress the fact that faith without works, or faith without obedience, is dead, not only in religious matters, but in everything else.

The "faith alone" doctrine tends to underrate the true value of repentance, baptism, the church ordinances, the works of charity and everything that contains in it the element of doing. It is doing that we need to teach more in the family, in the school, in the church and in the nation. Love and faith, standing alone, and advocated alone, is a menace to the church, as well as to the family and state. It is only when associated with obedience and the good works, that God has ordained for his people (to walk therein), that the full benefit of faith can be realized and appropriated.

Instead of emphasizing "doing less," we need to emphasize "doing still more," and then see to it that the spirit, which should enter into obedience, is equally impressed on the minds of believers. Faith alone is dead, and work alone is hypocrisy. Together they mean life and loyalty, whether we apply the principle to church or state. In faith, the Master did the will of his Father, and in the same faith all the true children of God will both love and keep the sayings of his Son. True, by grace are we saved through faith, but this is said of those who obey the Gospel, and not of those who single out the one item of faith, and hinge their salvation wholly on that. Or, as Jesus puts it: "Whosoever heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them" (Matt. 7: 24). J. H. M.

For a League of Nations

[The following "Declaration," adopted by the Executive Committee of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, is commended to the earnest consideration of all lovers of peace.—Ed.]

THE war crisis of the world has passed, but a world crisis is upon us.

"Shall there be a common standard of right and privilege for all peoples and nations," President Wilson inquires, "or shall the strong do as they will and the weak suffer without redress?"

"Are we to lapse back," asks Lloyd George, "into the old national rivalries, animosities and competitive armaments, or are we to initiate the reign on earth of the Prince of Peace?"

The time has come to organize the world for truth and right, justice and humanity. To this end, as Christians, we urge the establishment of a League of Free Nations at the coming Peace Conference. Such a League is not a mere political expedient; it is rather the political expression of the Kingdom of God on earth.

The church of the Living God rightfully calls for the creation of agencies adequate to enforce law, to keep order throughout the world, and to preserve the rights of the weak and helpless. Selfish and lawless nations must be restrained. Security and fair economic opportunity must be guaranteed to each by the united power of all. "The impartial justice meted out must involve no discrimination between those to whom we wish to be just and those to whom we do not wish to be just." These are matters fundamental to the rule of the Prince of Peace.

The world is now so small, the life of nations so intertwined, the mastery of nature's titanic forces so complete, and the power of selfish, economic or nationalistic groups to enslave whole peoples and to bring tragedy to the entire world so dangerous, that the reestablishment of the old-world order of irresponsible states has become intolerable.

We must have a governed world in which the security and rights of each shall rest upon the combined strength of all. Humanity must be organized on a basis of justice and fair dealing. The law of brotherhood must supersede the law of the jungle.

A League to attain these results must be democratic in spirit and in form. It must be capable of continuous adjustment to the advancing life of separate nations and also of the world. It must be directed by the enlightened conscience of mankind. The heroic dead will have died in vain, unless out of victory shall come a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness.

The church has much to give and much to gain. It can give a powerful sanction by imparting to the new international order something of the prophetic glory of the Kingdom of God. What is the Kingdom of God, if it be not the triumph of God's will in the affairs of men, "righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit"? And what is this vision of a world-federatim of humanity, organized on a basis of justice and fair-dealing, for the effective and impartial maintenance of peace, if it be not of the Kingdom of God?

The church can give a spirit of good-will, without which no League of Nations can endure. Nations have been held together by the vivid perils and gigantic tasks of war. New bonds must be forged that will still hold them together. This is the special function of the church.

The church can give the driving power of faith, without which no great ideal can be realized. To doubt is to fail; to believe is to conquer.

The church has much to gain. Its message will encounter less opposition from selfish nationalism. Its missionary enterprise will prosper as never before, freed from the blight of unchristian conduct of the nations of Christendom.

The church will, moreover, recover its international character and consciousness. National churches will find themselves linked in a world brotherhood. A new era of fellowship and coöperation will dawn.

The League of Nations is rooted in the Gospel. Like the Gospel, its objective is "peace on earth, good-will toward men." Like the Gospel, its appeal is universal.

Let us implore our Heavenly Father, God Almighty, that the Peace Delegates of the Nations may be guided by the Divine Spirit and enlightened by the Divine Wisdom to the end that they may embody, in the new fabric of the world's life, his righteous, loving and holy Will.

We call upon all Christians and upon all believers in God and lovers of man, to work and pray with whole souls, that out of the ashes of the old civilization may rise the fair outlines of a new world, based on the Christ ideal of justice, coöperation, brotherhood and service.

The Minister as Shepherd

This is the title of a small volume, written by Charles Jefferson. It has recently been offered to our ministers through the Gish Fund. The members of the Gish Fund Committee are to be most sincerely congratulated for giving us this book, for no better book have they ever put on the list.

Every minister of the church should read it. If it should so happen that every one of our ministers should study and inwardly digest this small volume, it would mean a revolution in the progress of the church. I wish, personally, to extend my thanks for the book, in the most heartfelt way. It is a long time since I have read a book that has taken so deep a hold on my heart.

For another thing, this volume is very small. The pages are small; the print is large; there are 229 pages, all told. Some of our ministers, I feel sure, will get so interested in it that they will read it in an evening or two. Personally, I have read it mostly while going back and forth on the street car to my work, day by day. But after awhile, I became so intensely interested that I could wait no longer, but simply finished it up one evening before retiring, in spite of having a lot of other things that were clamoring for attention.

Again and again, I rather anticipated that the author was steering for dangerous waters, and might go where I could not follow him, and endorse his teaching. But each time I found that the pilot knew the course he was taking.

What Dr. Jefferson here says has the more weight, because of his own phenomenally successful pastorate, in one of the large and difficult churches of New York City. Mr. Jefferson is also the author of some other books which are of exceptional value. His volume on "The Character of Jesus" is one of the very best on that subject that have ever been written. Early in the present war, he wrote a volume, entitled, "What the War Is Teaching," which comes nearer speaking the real sentiment of our own people than any pronouncement I have read on the subject.

In fact, Mr. Jefferson is fast forging his way to the very front ranks of the best religious writers of the English language. He is spiritual; he is progressive; he is conservative; he is literary; his words beat with heart-throbs; his counsel is born out of experience; his theories have been put to the test; he speaks from what has borne fruit in actual success. Again, let me hope that every aspiring minister among our people will read this book, will re-read it, will study it, will digest it, and will be more faithful as shepherd of the flock because of the reading.

Death?

BY MYRA WELCH

(Written on the Death of Esther Martin (Nee Miller), La Junta, Colo., Nov. 18, 1918)

Just a length'ning of the shadows,
Just a short'ning of the breath,
Just a graying of the features,—
Is this dying? Is this death?

Just a rest for weary footsteps,
Just a folding of tired hands,
Just a glimpse, across the river
Where the Holy City stands.

Just a closing of the eyelids
Just a hush,—why mourn and weep?
So it is the Heavenly Father
Giveth his beloved sleep.

Death? Ah, yes, we call it dying,
When six feet of earth is thrust
O'er the temple of our loved ones,
And the dust returns to dust;

But when all the mists have vanished,
And we meet on yon bright shore,
We shall know 'twas but the entrance
Unto life forevermore!.

The National Security of Trust in Jehovah

BY JAMES M. MOORE

2 Kings 18: 13-19: 37

When Hezekiah became King of Judah, he found a sad state of affairs, religiously. His father, Ahaz, while on the throne, had revived, to a very large extent, the idolatry and evil that had ever been a menace to peace and prosperity. Sacrifices were offered and incense was burned in the high places,—on every high hill and under every green tree.

There had been trouble with Syria, which resulted unfavorably to Judah. Desirous of revenge, Ahaz had made a league with the powerful nation of Assyria, far to the east, against Syria. This resulted in reducing Syria to a position of a tributary to the eastern nation.

As a result of these circumstances, Ahaz had gone to Damascus for a conference with Tiglath-pileser of Assyria. While there, he was attracted by a heathen altar he saw. Upon his return he had a similar one made for Jerusalem, and caused it largely to take the place of the brazen altar erected according to the instructions of Jehovah. Thus the good results of earlier reforms were largely destroyed, and the task that confronted the new king was a most difficult one.

Reforms in Judah

Hezekiah had convictions, and to such the tenacious resistance of evil is but a provocation to stronger efforts. The high places were removed, pillars broken down and everything pertaining to idol worship felt the force of the righteous king's determination.

He even found that the brazen serpent, made by Moses hundreds of years before, had become an object of worship by the people. Valuable as this relic was, as a reminder of God's healing power upon those bitten by the serpents in the wilderness, it became a curse when considered an object of worship. The only remedy was to dispose of it, and it was, accordingly, broken to pieces.

In general, Hezekiah strongly placed his trust in Jehovah. The yoke of Assyria, which his father had voluntarily taken, he threw off. A threatened invasion caused his confidence to waver somewhat, but only for a time. He settled down with his faith strong in the power of God to protect, and would acknowledge allegiance to no earthly authority.

Assyria's Defiant Message

The Assyrian king was unwilling to lose any of his authority, and sent three of his best generals with a great army, to bring Judah into subjection. The spokesman was Rabshakeh, and the first part of his message was directed to Hezekiah. It opened with an attempt to over-awe him with the immense power of the army before Jerusalem. That move was followed by the false claim that Jehovah had ordered this assault on the part of Assyria.

The next part of the message seems to have been meant for the soldiers guarding Jerusalem and the people in general. It contained a promise of peace and prosperity, on condition that they would turn away from Hezekiah's plea to trust in Jehovah, and submit to the king of Assyria. There was also a recount of the heathen gods conquered, and an effort to belittle the protecting power of the God of the Jews.

Upon hearing the message, Hezekiah was much distressed. He went for refuge to the house of Jehovah, and sent for the prophet Isaiah. His only hope was that there would come a divine rebuke against the words of Rabshakeh, which, in reality, were uttered in defiance of the Living God. To this end they prayed. An assuring answer came through Isaiah, that there was no need for fear, for the Assyrian army would be withdrawn.

The Assyrians were called away from Jerusalem by other pressing conditions, and that eased the situation for a time. There came, however, a letter that brought new concern. It contained a great boast of the destruction that had come upon all the nations around, and a renewed threat that the same result would soon come upon Jerusalem.

The Letter Spread Before Jehovah

The letter was received and read,—its defiant message being enough to disturb the peace of mind of any king. It was rather a singular method of handling such matters that Hezekiah adopted when he spread the letter before Jehovah.

The prayer offered was simple, yet sublime. There was a recognition of the absolute sovereignty of Jehovah over earth and heaven, in that he had created them. Then followed an earnest plea that notice be take of the words that were sent to defy the living God. Hezekiah recognized that the Assyrians had triumphed over the gods of the nations around, but that was easily explained in that they were merely the work of men's hands. The final plea was that God would save his people from the hand of the enemy, to the end that all the kingdoms of the earth might know that Jehovah is God alone.

The prayer brought its answer, first in the form of an assurance through the prophet Isaiah, that Judah would be given absolute protection. The King of Assyria was not to shoot an arrow or cast up a mound against Jerusalem, but by the way he came, should he return.

Victory without Human Violence

True to Jehovah's promise, the victory came. In the dead of night a hundred and eighty-five thousand were slain,—the backbone of the Assyrian army. The king himself returned to his own land, and there met a violent death at the hands of some of his own people.

A more sweeping victory has never been realized, and yet there was not a blow struck by God's people. They had done no wrong to Assyria, to deserve the disgrace and oppression that was planned for them. They stood for the right, and trusted the fighting of their battles to him who is always prepared and abundantly able to deliver.

The saddest day in any nation's history is when the leaders and the people begin to forget God. Many a downfall has thus started. It is unfortunate that people and nations will suffer the agony and distress of oppression and tyranny when the way is ever open for that security in Jehovah that forbids interference from outside enemies.

Secret Societies and the Lodge

BY I. J. ROSENBERGER

My theme above named is no new one, but the objectionable features thereof must grow in the judgment of conscientious, considerate minds. I do not know of an organization of intelligent, brainy men, whose creed, principles and doctrines evolve so many dark and horrid inconsistencies as do secret societies. They profess to be religious, yet reject the name of Christ, as in their manual lying before me. Christ warned: "He that honoreth not the Son, honoreth not the Father. . . . Whosoever denieth the Son hath not the Father.". Hence, a religion that has no God nor Christ in it, is a heathen religion.

Secret orders administer oaths,—extrajudicial oaths,—which impose unwarranted penalties, hence they are lawless in this. These orders keep some orphans and support some widows, but this is all by previous contract, for which they have already been paid, hence it is not at all charity, but a business transaction. It is worth remembering that to do good, there is no need of joining an oath-bound, secret society, and to hold secret meetings behind closed doors with some secret password. These gatherings are commonly held in rooms after night, with window-curtains closely drawn. Listen to the following texts that forbid such fellowship:

"Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful" (Psa. 1: 1).

"Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? And what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you" (2 Cor. 6: 14, 15, 17).

"Jesus answered him, I spake openly to the world: I ever taught in the synagogue, and in the temple, whither the Jews always resort; and in secret have I said nothing" (John 18: 20).

"Be not ye therefore partakers with them. And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them. For it is a shame even to speak of those things which are done of them in secret" (Eph. 5: 7, 11, 12).

"And they were more than forty which had made this conspiracy. And they came to the chief priests and elders, and said, We have bound ourselves under a great curse, that we will eat nothing until we have slain Paul" (Acts 23: 13, 14).

"If a soul swear, pronouncing with his lips to do evil, or to do good, whatsoever it be that a man shall pronounce with an oath, and it be hid from him; when he knoweth of it, then shall he be guilty in one of these. And it shall be, when he shall be guilty in one of these things, that he shall confess that he hath sinned in that thing" (Lev. 5: 4, 5).

Under Southern Skies

The Trip

BY J. H. B. WILLIAMS

Secretary-Treasurer of the General Mission Board

In compliance with instructions of the General Mission Board, it was the writer's privilege, recently, to visit portions of the Southland. This was done for the purpose of investigating conditions in the churches, and opportunities for further advancing the Master's cause.

A few days of October were pleasantly spent with the brethren of Southern Missouri and Northwestern Arkansas, in their District Meeting at Springdale, Ark. Though the attendance was not large, the spirit of the entire Conference was the most commendable, tempered with love, sympathy and kindness. Springdale church is located in the growing city of the same name. Apple-growing is one of the principal industries, and it was a rather unusual sight to see the red fruit being hauled to town by the wagon load and scooped into the cars that were waiting to distribute it over less favored regions.

Southern Missouri has suffered much in loss of membership through emigration. Her membership is not as large as some years ago, but the spirit and ambitions of the members, as expressed in their District Conferences, will, if put into practice, bear abundant fruitage.

We had planned to visit several of the churches in this territory, but the prevalence of influenza prevented this.

We much appreciated the hospitality of the splendid brethren of this District, at the Conference of which so many were gathered, and regretted that we could not tarry longer. Bro. C. H. Brown is the elder in charge of this church, faithfully assisted in the ministerial labors by Brethren Wyatt and Harader. Though Bro. Wyatt's sight is now gone, we are led to believe that this has only clarified his spiritual view of the heavenly city, the contemplation of which he so much enjoys.

In November and the early part of December we visited a number of the churches in Texas, Louisiana, Alabama and Florida.

Stopping first at Nocona, Texas, we were met by Bro. Sam. Molsbee, President of their District Mission Board. In this neighborhood influenza had left its evidences,—some being sick, and others just recovering. We were pleased to meet a number of the brethren in Conference, and regretted that some of the most active of the church were ill with the epidemic.

To this territory Bro. Abe Molsbee migrated with his sons many years ago, and hard by the Nocona church he and his faithful companion now sleep. Patriarch that he was, his sons, with their families, are now among the most active of the church.

The church here is prospering under the leadership of Bro. D. G. Brubaker, who is supported as its pastor. Besides the home church, Bro. Brubaker, with his two or three active colaborers, cares for four outside appointments. The latter fact we would especially impress upon our Northern ministers, a number of whom often live in the same congregation,—not infrequently almost rusting out,—and yet, in whose territory there live isolated members that seldom have opportunity to enjoy public worship.

We stopped over Sunday with the Father's children at Fort Worth. The little band of members here had made arrangements for an all-day's meeting, the day closing with a love feast. The Fort Worth church is small. The members are scattered over the large city, and the field is large. Bro. A. J. Wine is the only minister. Sister Cora Leicht, living close by the church, and with the cause at heart, is nobly standing by the Sunday-school. She opens the church doors, rings the bell to summon the school together, teaches a class and wins her way into the homes and hearts of the neighborhood. This city, of more than 120,000 souls, is one of the great gateways to the South. It is destined to grow rapidly. As our sons and daughters go into this large city, this congregation, with its churchhouse, imperatively needs a live pastor. A short visit with Bro. Brillhart, of Dallas, only thirty miles distant, and a call on the boys at Camp Bowie, completed our visit.

The members of the Live Oak congregation live in and about Weatherford, Texas, about thirty-five miles west of Fort Worth. Here Bro. K. G. Tennison spent the best years of his life, sowing the seed of Gospel Truth, much of which remains unharvested. No minister resides here now, and preaching is seldom enjoyed by these members. Through the kindness of Bro. E. A. Frantz we were enabled to visit a number of the members. We found them steadfast in the doctrines of the Brethren, and were much disappointed that through the inclemency of the weather we could not visit more. We feel sure that the brethren and sisters of Weatherford would appreciate a good, live minister locating among them, where there are opportunities for a livelihood. A good, live, tactful pastor at Fort Worth could be of assistance to the Live Oak church and perhaps build it into a strong working body.

From Fort Worth we went down, through splendid fields of cotton and well-arranged plantations, to Hufsmith, Texas, near which place is located the Pleasant Grove church. Here was scheduled the District Conference for this territory. Pleasant Grove, in reality, is a mission church, fathered by Bro. J. A. Miller, who has been preaching here for years.

In true Southern spirit, the few Pleasant Grove members entertained the District Meeting royally. We shall never forget our evenings in the home of Bro. Long, nor the music, the social evening, and the old fireplace,—so unusual to us,—that we enjoyed in the home of Bro. Bond here.

The churches were all represented by delegate,—a fact that we commend to our Districts whose members are living close together. Note the distances that these delegates had to come,—350 miles from the East, 350 miles from the North, 270 miles from the West. Think what a treat it is to these brethren, living so far apart, in small churches, to be together for these three days.

Others, likely, will detail these meetings for the Messenger readers, so we shall desist. The spirit of the meeting, the immensity of the District, the problems that loom large, and the small number of members, often with limited resources, enabled us to understand something of the needs and problems of this District, in a far different light than we had ever been able to grasp. The entire territory in which half of our Brotherhood live,—Pennsylvania, Virginia, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois,—could be placed in this one great District and yet enough land would be left over to make nine Districts the size of the three Districts of Maryland combined.

Three days were spent in Conference. Most of the speakers appointed were present, and the addresses by them showed thought and careful preparation. The District Conference was aggressive and evidenced a strong desire to further the interests of the Kingdom. The music for the entire Conference was in charge of Bro. J. Wm. Miller, of San Antonio, Texas, a good singer and a splendid organizer for song. Bro. Miller should be known as a singing-school leader more than he is, for surely he can get people to sing. We could not help wishing that scores of churches in the Brotherhood could have his services.

With regret we left this little church and the whole-souled members gathered here, among the stately pines, moss-covered and graceful, and go on down to spend the Sabbath with the Manvel church.

Manvel church is one of the oldest in the State, and at sundry times in the years past has been the home of many of our brethren, now residing in other places. Bro. M. H. Peters is the present elder of this congregation, ably assisted by Brethren Samuel Badger and J. A. Miller. However, Bro. J. A. Miller, who is the elder of every church in the District with the exception of this one, is busy nearly all the time in his large "parish" and has little time to be at home. The membership of this church is not so large, but is active. Especially does the church appreciate its young people, so earnest and helpful in every way. It gave us much pleasure here, in the devout home of Bro. Badger, to have a conference with Brethren Peters and Moore,—two members of the District Mission Board. With their help we were enabled to understand what it means to finance a large District with a scattered membership.

A night's ride brought us to Taft, Texas, the home of the Portland congregation. Bro. D. H. Blocher and family are the only members residing here at this time, though there are others living scattered, far off from them.

Here the soil is black. The cattle in December browsed in green oats, half-knee-high. The cotton stalks were high and spreading, revealing the place whence came the millions of dollars' worth of cotton seen about the gins. Many Northern people have moved to this place, and the opportunity for our church should be splendid for those who would want to farm. Cotton is the main industry, and this year's crop has paid for the land in many instances.

A night and half a day, and we were met at Roanoke, La., by Eld. J. F. Hoke. Only a day could be spent in this country, so prosperous with its rice, and looking so familiar with its nice cattle and good homes. The church here is prosperous, the young people are members and interested in spiritual things. Much Gospel seed has been sown in this territory, and the church surely has splendid opportunity, with its three young and active ministers, to impress itself upon the community. Here again, as at most places visited, was presented to us in a forcible manner, and in a way that we will not soon forget, the fact that our members in the South feel lonely, and are of the opinion that the church "up North" should look toward the South more than it does. There is a good churchhouse in Roanoke, and seven miles distant is the town of Jennings, where we have another house. This house is for sale, as the automobiles carry the membership to Roanoke.

On a Friday morning we landed at the depot at Fruitdale, Ala., and were greeted by several brethren. Here is the home of the Fruitdale-Citronelle college venture, of years gone by. The buildings have been sold and appropriated to other good uses. In this territory, located about sixty miles north of Mobile, are to be found four organized churches, Fruitdale being the mother of the others. Five ministers care for these four churches, Bro. Madison Wine being elder of them all. In addition to caring for these, eight other appointments are kept up. A very considerable impression has been made upon the resident peoples here,—many of them finding spiritual peace and association in the Church of the Brethren. We met a number of these good, hospitable members and only regret that we could not remain longer with them. We left this place, feeling happy for the privilege of worshiping even for a time among such warm-hearted folks.

A long, wearisome journey,—waiting for trains, missing connections, and disappointing brethren who were looking for us,—finally brought us to Sebring, Florida, and we were almost immediately in the congenial home of Brother and Sister J. H. Moore. We were tired, but with a tempting supper, such as Sister Moore knows how to serve, our tongue loosened and we enjoyed a most royal evening visit.

The next day we were introduced to Sebring. Situated on the shores of Lake Jackson, this young town of six summers is rapidly growing. The population is quite largely composed of winter tourists, though likely the permanent residents will increase, as industries multiply and develop.

A very commodious church has been built here, and our brethren have it conveniently located. When we were there, the tourists were coming, and Brethren Moore and Garst were in their glory, helping prosperous Northerners, on an errand of comfort bent, to get located.

The soil is sand, and in this were planted thousands of acres of orange and grape-fruit trees. Most of these are young, though here and there an orchard gleams out golden, revealing the marked possibilities of the country. The church is composed almost exclusively of the tourist element. It is yet young. Few native Southerners were to be seen, and with such a prosperous tourist constituency we saw no missionary problem that the brethren can not handle.

Here our journey was brought to a sudden end. News from home, of illness, and influenza seemed to demand our return. We regretted much that we did not get to call, as we fully intended, on the Brethren of Arcadia, Tampa, St. Petersburg and Middleburg, but it was not to be so.

We learned, however, that these places are looking forward to bigger things in the church. It is hoped that Tampa may some day become the location of a congregation of the Church of the Brethren, with a minister to pastor it. Opportunities in plenty there are in Florida, but no one will warn you against the "land man" quicker than our brethren who are already located.

We must always pay tribute to the hospitality of the South. Maybe it is in the climate, maybe it is in the soil, possibly the influence of the watermelon and the sugar-cane and the oranges leaves its impress, maybe it is because folks can live close to the Father's hospitality in his great out-of-doors. Can it be that he is more hospitable to these people with his warm sunshine and snowy cotton? We would not attempt a solution of the question but thank all for the pleasures of the trip.

In another article we shall try to state a few of the problems, drop a few lines of good cheer for those located, and advice to those thinking of a change,—a commodity which is always cheap, especially from those who are always giving it.

the pulpit: "I do not say that all the members of our denomination are going to be saved, and I do believe that many people in other denominations will be saved." Again the same minister said: "You know, we simply have to sin a little, but if we repent, we can be forgiven."

"Going to be saved." WHEN? If they are not saved now, when is it that they are going to be saved? "Sin a little today; pray a little tomorrow," is his doctrine. Is that the teaching of the Christ, who was God manifest in the flesh, that we, being in the flesh, by following his example might grow like unto God in spirit and in truth?

This was not a Brethren minister, but, nevertheless, many Brethren are led into a spirit of indifference by many forms of this malicious doctrine, under whose influence we all come more or less, as we meet it in varied forms and various places. Of all the verses of Scripture that are wrested to the destruction of immortal souls, perhaps none suffers as much as 1 John 1: 8, for it is often used to justify a sinful life though intended for no such interpretation.

We do not say that the finite mind can ever be perfect in judgment, but the human heart can be cleansed from sin. The Scripture does not say that Jesus was manifested to take away the consequences of our sins, but to take away the sins themselves,—to take out of our hearts the love of sin, the desire to sin. When all the lusts of the world, that hinder the Spirit from making the soul perfect before God, are removed, the same heart can be filled with holy affections and ambitions, and a desire to work only those things pleasing in the sight of God. When we are saved, we will not sin wilfully nor carelessly. More sins are committed through carelessness than through willfulness. Both are subject to condemnation.

It has often been taught that if your conscience does not condemn you, no sin will be laid to your charge. Don't believe it, friend. Your conscience, of itself, is not infallible. Somewhere in your town is a clock, upon which you depend for perfect time. At certain intervals you compare your watch with that clock, and set it accordingly. Unless you set your conscience daily by the Word of God, it is not to be depended upon. It would do you no good whatever to look at the clock unless you also compared your watch with it at the same time. It does no good to read the Word of God daily, or even hourly, unless you examine yourself at the same time, and compare the two.

I speak from experience. Once I believed my conscience to be a safe criterion, and I wish no man to duplicate the sorrow that came to me. The greatest sorrow that a human being can know, is to feel that you have lived and taught an error by precept or example, and thereby caused the downfall of some one. Such a sorrow was mine, and the blame may be placed largely upon an unenlightened conscience.

But God has taught me a better way,—the way of truth, the way the Lord died upon the cross, to establish the glory and beauty of righteousness, of a life free from the old desire and affections. It is not given to all to suffer the sorrow of a great repentance, and yet we must all get a vision of Gethsemane (where the burden of sin seems piled upon our hearts) and of Calvary (where we crucify the flesh and die to sin) before we can come to the Mount of Olives, the Christian's tower of hope.

The pangs of repentance must precede the joy of salvation. Can a man repent a little every day? No, for true repentance is one of those things we never wish to experience but once, so we seek a way to avoid it. Jesus provides the way. He takes away the sins, that, resting in his care, we may not commit them again.

It is essential that young people especially be kept various theologians. I like the advice given in Jer. 6: 16: "Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls."

Jesus said: "Be ye also perfect." Now "perfect" means "completed" or "filled up," so we may say that we have obeyed that command only when our salvation is complete and we are filled with the Holy Spirit. He tenants no temple that is partly or intermittently given over to the pleasures and lusts of earth. Salvation is not for the next life. "Now is the accepted time." We should not get in the habit of simply looking forward to heaven, but must let God make it a part of our present experience. Jesus died on the cross that we might have that experience and have it NOW. Unless we have accepted that gift in all its fullness, we are denying ourselves a blessed privilege. Unless we preach it and teach it with all our mind and strength, we are not fulfilling our obligations to God and to the church. Jesus did not teach that we "must sin a little every day," but that we must not sin. What are we teaching,—not alone by word of mouth but by example?

Shall We Have Universal Compulsory Military Training?

[The following article, from the "American Friend," is of vital interest at the present time, and should be given considerate attention.—Ed.]

AMONG the important questions, claiming attention at once, is the one stated in the above title. Although the great questions of the conditions of peace, and the steps to be taken in reconstruction both at home and abroad, properly occupy a large place in the minds of all our citizens, it must be remembered that the policy which is to be adopted in our own nation, respecting compulsory military training, is in process of being determined. We may each have some share in deciding what that policy is to be. As furnishing some information, bearing on the question, we give below extracts from various sources, presenting important considerations which should be emphasized just at this time:

England Rejects Compulsory Military Training in Her Schools

"Detailed reports from London regarding the great new Education Act which Parliament has passed, remodelling from the ground up England's entire educational system, show one striking omission, an omission upon which Americans may well ponder:

"The act contains no provision whatsoever for compulsory military training.

"From one point of view it is a magnificent tribute to the sound English spirit. Even in the midst of war, with Germany a stone's throw away, England can study her educational problems coolly and decide quietly to keep her schools as training centers for individualism plus service, rather than, in a panic, to sacrifice them to the Prussian system of military drill.

"And it is all the more striking because England, like America, has had various strenuous organizations dedicated to the job of fastening military training upon the school system. They have been well financed and have held meetings and distributed literature showing the horrors of life without military training; they have had questions 'put' in the House, and, in general, have betrayed a fine zeal on behalf of their propaganda. But H. A. L. Fisher, the Minister of Education, told a delegation from the Miners' Federation some months ago, that the Government had canvassed the question of compulsory drill for the secondary schools and had decided that the innovation had neither educational nor military value and would not be adopted.

"Mr. Fisher has proved as good as his word. The Education Act, which sweeps out of existence eleven Educational Acts and repeals parts of eleven others, provides for compulsory education up to fourteen years. Between the ages of fourteen and eighteen all English boys and girls must attend either the regular schools or, if they are obliged to work, then they must attend continuation schools and their employers must help to make that school attendance possible. Physical training is provided with-

THE ROUND TABLE

The Brevity of Human Life

BY S. Z. SHARP

We were forcibly reminded of the shortness of human life by the statement that Jacob made to Pharaoh, as given in a recent Sunday-school lesson. Life seems long or short according to the standpoint from which we view it. In our early teens, the time seemed very long, as we looked forward to the time when we should be twenty-one years old,—the time when we could cast our first ballot, and be our own master. Now, in our eighty-fourth year, when we look back to the period when we were a boy, the time seems very short. We can remember an incident that occurred eighty years ago as vividly as if it occurred only yesterday, and the space covered seems very short.

This reminds us of what Job says: "Man that is born of woman is of few days and full of trouble. He cometh forth as a flower and is cut down. He fleeth also as a shadow and continueth not." The Psalmist says: "The days of our years are threescore and ten, or even by reason of strength, fourscore years; yet is their pride but labor and sorrow."

Jacob said to Pharaoh: "The days of the years of my pilgrimage are a hundred and thirty years. Few and evil have been the days of the years of my life." To Jacob his lifetime seemed very short. This seems to be the experience of all aged people. Besides, these years are beset with much evil. The disappointments, obstacles to be overcome and the losses sustained, cast a shadow over a great portion of our lives.

Christian Stewardship

BY D. C. MOOMAW

Among the many essential obligations, resultant from our alignment with our Loving Lord, there is none more vital than that of our caption, "Christian Stewardship."

There are at least two features of the subject that make it vital, one of which is God's ownership of our so-called possessions, and the other the need of these possessions in carrying on the work of the church.

The former is testified to in the passage: "The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof," and the latter: "Upon the first day of the week let everyone of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him." Under the law one-tenth was required and those who failed to obey were punished accordingly. Under grace, that is our law,—all is required, even ourselves personally.

We are seemingly loyal to our Lord's teachings in most things, and while some of these things are of minor importance, yet, in the matter of stewardship, we are gravely delinquent. I may not be amiss in my accusations if I say we do not give as much under grace as those gave who were under the law, and I will say further that our punishment will be proportionately greater. We suffer, at the least, immeasurably in spiritual development, spending or wasting our lives waddling about like "babes."

In the first place, every man and woman, who is loyal to the Lord, will give to the limit,—not one-tenth, but as much as the church requires to carry on its work. One who will stand by and see the church suffer in its activities when he has the means to meet the demands, is not the friend of God.

In the second place, all of the larger concerns of the Lord's Kingdom should receive their share of our holdings in bulk, that is, if we are possessed of a large measure of the Lord's goods, it is our paramount duty to give without stint, thousands, tens of thousands, hundreds of thousands.

Were the members of the Church of the Brethren to measure up to the Divine Standard, they would be able and willing to give millions each year for the equipment of all the agencies now engaged in spreading the Gospel tidings through all the nations.

Of quite recent times the American people have shown the possibilities of financing great movements by voluntarily subscribing billions of dollars in support of a bloody war. How much more should we be willing to subscribe millions to bring peace and good will to the lost nations of the world!

A mercenary objector says that our first duty is to "provide for our own household," in order to escape the penalty due an "infidel." This is true, in a limited sense, but not true when we give all to the household and practically nothing to the church.

Our church has won the distinction of punctilious observance of certain forms and ceremonies not specifically emphasized in the New Testament, and has lost immeasurably in spiritual development by neglecting the weightier matters of the law, to wit, "judgment, mercy and faith."

Under the Mosaic law the people were called "robbers," who withheld the Lord's portion, and the like fate awaits us if we do not fulfill the obligations of Christian stewardship.

Sincerity

BY L. H. PROWANT

"And whatsoever you do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him" (Col. 3: 17).

To be right in life we must be sincere. A lie can never be right. It is always a sin, for Satan is a liar and the father of lies (John 8: 44).

We can look upon these bodies but we can not see each other. The real person dwells within the body and is only known by signals we give out from time to time, as our words, deeds, actions. After we are gone, it is not so much how we looked but what we did by which we are remembered. Then let us be sure our signals are true ones, for "if the light that is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness" (Matt. 6: 23)!

It is easy for us to pretend to be something which we are not, in order to appear well in the eyes of others. If we are doing such things, we are giving out false signals and show at once to others that we are not sincere.

Jesus said: "I do nothing of myself; but as my Father hath taught me, I speak these things." There we have Jesus' standard, and he was the most deeply in earnest of any. He never needed to be ashamed of anything. He was found doing because he always was about his Father's business. Is it possible that we sing, pray, give and preach to be seen of men and forget the Master who seeth in secret and will reward openly? Perhaps David forgot this great truth when he numbered Israel with such awful results. Later Ananias and his wife Sapphira forgot God and lost their possessions as well as their lives. Joseph remembered his God when he said, on being tempted to sin: "How then can I do this great wickedness, and sin against God" (Gen. 39: 9)?

That we live right lives in the sight of our God, is the only true test of our sincerity. And in loving and obeying God, we will be found loving and serving others. O Lord, help us to be true!

"Love the Brotherhood"

BY NOAH LONGANECKER

1 Peter 2: 17

Love is that which satisfies, hence it is the factor that makes for happiness. Love is the essence of the Christian religion. It is the life of the soul. Hence, to love the Brotherhood implies that we are satisfied with her as a body,—that her rules, methods, faith, teachings, principles, etc., are all so dear to us that they satisfy us. We love them all. We love the Brotherhood. Any one who does not love the Brotherhood is dissatisfied and, of course, not happy. Such are not a blessing to the church. Such always bring about an unrest in the church.

Paul, like our Master, was willing "to spend and be spent" for the church, because she was dear to him. He loved the brotherhood. Hence, he was a blessing to the church. So were Peter, John and others. But how about those who are members of the Church of the Brethren in this age? Such are still among us and are a great blessing to the church, but one by one they are passing over. We all know that Brother Quinter loved the Brotherhood, or he would not have said: "If I die, I wish to die right among the Brethren." But our aim is here to pen a few lines about our dear brother, Samuel Sprankel, who, not long since, passed over.

Permit a few clippings from the "History of the Church of the Brethren of Northeastern Ohio": "He was noted, all along his life's work, for his punctuality at all church services. For fourteen consecutive years he missed only two Sundays, and on one of those his mother lay dead." He had charge of the Lake Shore church where "he missed only two meetings in fourteen years, and three Sundays in twenty-one years." The last services he attended were in the Tuscarawas church, of which he had charge. On his way to a special council he consulted a physician in Canton. He was advised to go home as quickly as he could. But he went ten miles farther to said council. He returned with Bro. Strausbaugh to Canton. There he was till his physician sent him home in an ambulance. He still lived a few days.

"How could he do all this?" the reader at once will ask. He loved the Brotherhood: Like Brother Quinter, "he loved the brotherhood" and was willing to "spend and be spent" for the church. "Supreme love to God, and universal love to man" is Christ's message to us all. Would I be satisfied and be happy, and be a blessing to the world? If so, I must "love the Brotherhood."

The First Emancipation Proclamation

BY DAISY M. MOORE

There are many people still living who remember President Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation, with its far-reaching consequences. Slaves had been imported from the far African shores and were being largely used by Southern planters. Man was not intended by the Creator to be a slave to man, and so divided was opinion on that question, in the union of States, that a division among them became imminent.

The story is familiar to all, as is the final announcement by the President, which freed all the slaves held in the seceded States, restoring them to a state of independent manhood and womanhood.

Over 2,000 years ago the first Emancipation Proclamation was issued from the cross on Calvary. Christ had seen much of the bondage of man to sin,—in fact his birth was a direct consequence of man's slavery to Satan, since he came to earth to combat that very evil.

His entire life was a preparing and an approach to the Emancipation Proclamation, which was to make freedom from sin possible to every class and condition of man, regardless of "race, color, or condition of servitude." His few years upon earth were devoted to the dissemination of this one idea. His teaching was permeated by the portentous truth that man must no longer remain in slavery.

It rested with him to loosen the shackles, to shake off the fetters which, from the beginning of time, had held man a prisoner to earth. The ultimate process of rending the bond of those seeking a new freedom of spirit, was not brought by a mere setting down in print of the fact, that, from thenceforth, every man, for all time, might find his spiritual serfdom done away with.

The first Emancipation Proclamation went into effect when the three words, "It is finished," were spoken by the dying and atoning Christ. He had lived for this ideal; he died for it. In offering his life as an atonement for all mankind, he made us free.

Betrayed, mocked, tortured,—yet his three words ring down the centuries as the herald of a new spiritual liberty.

Paul says: "Thanks be to God that whereas ye were the servants of sin, ye became obedient from the heart to that form of teaching whereunto ye were delivered, . . . being made free from sin."

CORRESPONDENCE

"Write what thou seest, and send it unto the churches"

GREENWOOD, DELAWARE

Sunday, Dec. 15, was the day set for the dedication of the First Church of the Brethren in the State of Delaware. Eld. A. L. B. Martin preached the dedicatory sermon, which was very good. Owing to the fact that the day was very rainy, the attendance was small, but the offering was large, considering all things.

Heretofore this little band worshiped in a schoolhouse, but, realizing that we needed a more appropriate place, we decided to purchase a building which was then for sale in the town of Greenwood. After some remodeling, this building makes us a very comfortable churchhouse. Greenwood is located on the main line of the Pennsylvania Railroad. There is also a railroad running from Chesapeake Bay to the ocean, which passes through the town, making it convenient for brethren traveling through here to stop, also for the brethren of Denton, Md., to be with us in our services. As we are part of that congregation, it is necessary for them to be with us often.

It was decided to have Bro. Martin preach for us Dec. 17. He will hold a series of meetings for us some time in the future.

Dec. 27, with Eld. W. M. Wine presiding, we organized our Sunday-school, electing Bro. Harry Pressel as superintendent. We also elected a business committee and a Sunday-school Board. With Bro. Wine as our elder, we feel much encouraged to go ahead. Although he lives some twenty miles north of Greenwood, he is faithful in his service. Clara Selders.

Farmington, Del., Jan. 1.

SOUTH ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI

Hnsband and I arrived at this place one month ago to take charge of the work under the direction of the Mission Board of the Northern District of Missouri. We find a broad field and are gratified that a little group of faithful and willing workers has "kept the home fires burning" by having their Sunday-school and Bible Study class in good order, although without a pastor for the past year.

We are now having Sunday-school at 10 A. M., preaching services twice each Sunday and all services well attended. Christmas night a program was rendered for the benefit of the Armenian and Syrian sufferers and an offering of $23.68 was given.

We will begin a series of revival meetings Sunday, Dec. 29, to be conducted by the pastor, Eld. G. W. Ellenberger. Last Sunday night Bro. E. Slater, of Springfield, Mo., preached for us acceptably. Friday, Dec. 27, we held our first quarterly council, Eld. J. S. Kline officiated as moderator. Church and Sunday-school officers were elected as follows: Trustee and Sunday-school superintendent, Bro. Geo. Miller; clerk, Bro. E. N. Huffman; Christian Workers' president, Bro. C. S. Garber; "Messenger" agent and church correspondent, the undersigned. We were glad to have with us also, at this meeting, Bro. M. R. Murray, of St. Louis, who assisted in the closing devotions.

In behalf of the work here, when so much needs to be done, and when so many obstacles present themselves to the workers, we request the prayers of the brethren and sisters, especially those who live in the Northern District of Missouri, that the work may prosper and that the workers fail not in their duty. Mary Polk Ellenberger.

6035 Pryor Avenue, St. Joseph, Mo.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

The Los Angeles church met in regular council Dec. 27, with Eld. C. W. Guthrie in charge. On account of sickness in his family, our presiding elder, Bro. D. W. Crist, could not be present. A number of Sunday-school and church officers were elected for the ensuing year. The writer was elected correspondent. The influenza epidemic prevented us from holding our love feast at the appointed time. We decided to postpone it until spring.

At the request of the workers of the Santa Fe and Boyle Heights missions, within the bounds of this church, and by the consent of the church, the Mission Board of Southern California and Arizona took over the Boyle Heights mission, and merged the two. On account of the Santa Fe district rapidly becoming a factory center, Boyle Heights was chosen as the more desirable place for worship and missionary activities.

Dec. 29, at 2 P. M., the members of the united missions met to organize Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meeting. This resulted in the election of a band of earnest, consecrated workers for the various offices. Brethren L. M. Davenport and C. F. Smith were elected superintendents of the Sunday-school.

At 3:30 P. M. Eld. G. H. Bashor, of Glendora, delivered a very appropriate discourse to a well-filled house. In the evening Eld. C. W. Guthrie, pastor of the united missions, delivered an illustrated lecture on "The Nativity of Christ."

On the evening of Dec. 24 a Christmas program was held in the Chinese Mission in Chinatown. Influenza has made its presence keenly felt in this mission. Two of our very promising workers, Bro. Wayne Chung and his sister, Mary Chung Wong, fell victims to the disease.

We are glad to report that a bright young Chinese woman has recently been added to our number by confession and baptism. She and her sister, who has been a member of the church for more than a year, are high school graduates. They speak the English language fluently. They promise to be very helpful factors among the women of Chinatown. Della Lehmer.

DETROIT, MICHIGAN

On Wednesday evening, preceding Thanksgiving Day, we listened to a splendid discourse by our pastor, Bro. John F. Dietz. The meeting was well attended.

Dec. 7 we met in council. Officers for the ensuing year are as follows: Bro. John F. Dietz, pastor; Sister Olive Dietz, church clerk; Bro. Ed Weisenberger, financial secretary; Bro. John P. Guthrie, superintendent of the Sunday-school; the writer, superintendent of the Chinese Sunday-school; Bro. H. E. Wagner, president of the Christian Workers' Meeting; Sister Annie E. Pifer, "Messenger" agent; the writer, correspondent.

Dec. 8 we had a full day,—Sunday-school and church service in the forenoon; the baptism of four of our young people in the afternoon; then our love feast in the evening. Fifty-four communicants were present and we enjoyed a real love feast, conducted by our pastor. The members of the Chinese Sunday-school were present and on the following Sabbath five of them, who are now beginning to speak English quite well, applied for baptism. Dec. 22 five Chinese and two Americans were baptized.

The Chinese Christmas program, which began at 5 P. M., Dec. 22, was composed of readings, recitations and music. Bro. Moy Wing spoke on "What Christ Means to Me." The pantomime, "Rock of Ages," was very impressive. The largest crowd we have ever had, was present at these services.

Since our readers are coöperating with us, we are locating quite a number in the city and visiting them. We are glad to help. M. B. Williams.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 2.

SELMA, VIRGINIA

Bro. J. H. Wimmer has accepted the call of the Selma church as her pastor and elder. We rejoice to have him as a shepherd of our little flock. Often we have pressed on under discouragements, remembering the scripture which says: "Upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." Bro. Wimmer used that same text the first Sunday.

Dec. 25 one of the best programs ever given in the town was rendered in our church. It consisted in part of a splendid short talk on the birth of the "Babe of Bethlehem," by our pastor, and a pageant, "The Cross Beside the Flag." An offering of $43.30 was taken for Armenian and Syrian Relief.

Dec. 29 Bro. Wimmer gave us the outline of a strong Bible course and suggested our taking it up to make our Bible study more systematic. Dec. 30 a council meeting was held in the Selma church, with Bro. Wimmer presiding. Letters of Bro. Wimmer, wife and son, Wilber, were received. The treasurer's report was read and accepted. Then officers were elected for the year as follows: Bro. F. A. Carter, clerk; the writer, correspondent; Bro. Wimmer, "Messenger" agent. Bro. D. L. Carter was appointed to seenre an evangelist for a series of meetings. Bro. L. M. Carter, chairman of finance committee, suggested the envelope system of giving. Bro. C. D. Hylton was retained as advisory elder. Sunday-school officers were elected, with Bro. D. L. Carter as superintendent. The meeting was very inspiring and we feel that God will use our pastor to awaken our congregation to a realization of its mission in this place.

VYARA NOTES

The Monsoon rains in India, this year, are generally from one-third to one-half of the normal, with rare instances of more than the normal. But up to date, Oct. 1, the latter rains have not come. In many places rice was not put out at all, for lack of sufficient rain. Where it was planted, it has ripened, burned up early, and will produce only one-fourth crop and less. Some places the farmers will not get as much as the seed sown. But if it should rain even yet, there would be bumper crops of juwar, cotton and other winter crops, thus saving the situation greatly. Juwar is one of the staple food grains, together with rice.

The Christians of the Bombay Presidency have been in much prayer for rain, and God has often heard our prayers in this behalf really, for which we are very grateful indeed. But this time we seem to cry in vain, for rain does not come, though India is so needy. No, not in vain, for he does hear and answer, surely, but his answer must be something better than we now know. Oh, we do pray to be fully resigned to his will, without murmuring. And we do pray to be made able to perceive his will and his hand in all times of distress and need. If famine or the hard times, sure to result from not having more rains, will result in bringing India more fully in sympathy with our Savior and Lord, then, with all our hearts, we can praise him even for the famine and the consequent sorrows.

Today, as some of our teachers were sitting eating, I heard them say to one another that if rains do not come within a month there will be looting here and there, and times will be serious for the women and children. One said: "Women will not be safe at all in my village." The teachers say that in some villages near the jungle the people even now have no food, no grain having matured, and people are living off wild roots, shoots of trees, etc. The cattle have even trodden down the jungle reeds, which normally they never touch, but which grow ten or more feet high, and are used to make walls for village houses.

Our teachers say that the poor can pull through very well for one month yet, generally, but after that, if no rains come, God only knows what will happen. Never,

Suggestions for the Weekly Devotional Meeting Or for Prayerful, Private Meditation

Love's Power for Ourselves and Others

1 Cor. 13: 13 (Am. Rev.)

For Week Beginning January 26, 1919

1. Introductory.—(1) Love's nature: "It is that kind of love which God has for us. It is that desire to give and to bless which is ready to bestow itself even where it meets with no response." (2) Love's preëminence: "The greatest of these." (3) Love's cultivation: "By meditation upon God's love to us."

2. Love a Foundational Principle.—If our religion is to be real and spiritual, it must be rooted and grounded in brotherly love. "He that hateth his brother can not know God," nor can he know man. The precious, Heaven-approved quality of love will open the eyes of every true child of God to the abiding beauty of every human soul, to the temptations resisted, as well as those we have conquered, to the aspiration after something higher, struggling like a plant in a dark dungeon toward the light, to the glorious possibilities hidden in the being of every child of God. Clearly to recognize the good concealed within our brothers and sisters will help us to catch some bright glimpses of our Father in heaven. It is human selfishness which hides the true nature of God's children,—however degraded they may have become by their own fault or the fault of others,—from our sight. It is the same deep, deadly shadow which deadens our own perception of God. Through brotherly love, filial affection to God is born in human hearts, and when that sacred emotion has once filled our whole being, spiritual religion is known and loved.

3. Love the Test of Discipleship.—The world looks in vain for that one mark of discipleship which the Master laid down: "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." The world holds aloof from the church, not because the world is wholly lacking in the religious spirit and temper, but because that distinguishing note of love is lacking in Christ's professed followers. The world has well-nigh lost respect for God's people on that account.

4. Love as a Herald of Joy.—This is the positive aspect of love,—the doing of something good to every one, whenever an opportunity presents itself. No one is in such a position but that he can do something to help others,—if it is only by being pleasant and cheerful in manner. We may not all be able to help others with our influence and money, but we can help with our sympathy, our good will and kind words, if nothing more.

5. A Blessed Privilege.—We are commanded to love one another, and how are we to do it? Is love a matter of will, or is it a passion of the heart? Can we, by mere formal determination of mind, change dislike to love? Can the hatred of enemies be suddenly and by mere force of volition turned into the warm regard of friends? It is, and must ever be, a gift of Christ's nature.—a love that passeth understanding. By it enemy and friend are drawn together into brotherhood, and glorified in the splendor of infinite Christian sympathy.

6. Suggestive References.—Do what love suggests, Matt. 5: 41, 42. Love's mission, Matt. 25: 34-40. Love's test, John 15: 12, 13. Love must be sincere, Rom. 12: 9, 10. Love as Christ loved, Eph. 5: 2. Let love abound, Philpp. 1: 9. Have the same love, Philpp. 2: 2. "Knit together in love," Col. 2: 2. "The bond of perfectness," Col. 3: 12-14. "Increase and abound in love," 1 Thess. 3: 12. "Taught of God to love." 1 Thess. 4: 9 "The royal law," James 2: 8

CALENDAR FOR SUNDAY, JANUARY 19

Sunday-school Lesson. The Passover.—Ex. 11: 1 to 12: 30.

Christian Workers' Meeting. God's Letter to the World. —Matt. 4: 4, 7, 10.

MEETINGS IN PROGRESS

Bro. D. R. McFadden, of Smithville, Ohio, at New Carlisle, same State.

Bro. A. I. Heestand, of Wooster, Ohio, in the Akron church, same State.

Bro. H. S. Replogle, of Scalp Level, Pa., in the Huntingdon church, same State.

CONTEMPLATED MEETINGS

Bro. G. O. Stutzman, of Burr Oak, Kans., to begin Feb. 2 in the Sterling church, Colo.

Bro. E. F. Caslow, of Grand Rapids, Mich., to begin about March 1, in the Glendale church, Ariz.

Bro. Thomas Patrick, of Penbrook, Pa., to begin Feb. 1 at the Mt. Hope house, Chickies church, same State.

GAINS FOR THE KINGDOM

One was recently reclaimed at Schoolfield, Va.

Two were recently baptized in the Ligonier church, Pa.

Eleven were recently baptized in the Detroit church, Mich.

Two were received by baptism at Indianapolis, Ind., since the last report.

One has been reclaimed in the Allison Prairie church, Ill., since the last report.

Eleven were baptized at New Enterprise, Pa.,—Bro. C. D. Bonsack, of New Windsor, Md., evangelist.

One was baptized in the Turkey Creek church, Ind.,—Bro. Reuben Shroyer, of North Canton, Ohio, evangelist.

Fifteen were recently baptized in the West Conestoga congregation, Pa.,—Bro. H. B. Yoder, of Lancaster, same State, evangelist.

Five accepted Christ and were baptized in the Copper Creek church, Ind.,—Bro. Walter Gibson, of Goshen, same State, evangelist.

Sixty-nine confessed Christ, of whom thirty-six have been baptized at Basic, Va.,—Bro. A. S. Thomas, of Bridgewater, same State, evangelist.

PERSONAL MENTION

Bro. J. C. Murray, whose address in the Yearbook is given as Wenatchee, Wash., is now located at North Manchester, Ind.

At last reports Bro. D. L. Miller was engaged in a largely-attended meeting at Live Oak, Cal., without being hindered by the influenza, as had been the case at other places. Lindsay, same State, was the next point on his schedule.

We regret the necessity for further delay in the publication of the biographical sketch of Sister Nora Arnold Lichty, referred to last week. This has been unavoidable, but we have good reasons to believe that we shall be able to give it in our next issue.

Bro. J. F. Britton, of Bristow, Va., has decided to continue his evangelistic labors during the present year, and is ready to consider calls from congregations that may desire his services. As some engagements have already been entered into, early application will be necessary to secure a favorable date.

The Secretary of the General Mission Board is attending a Missionary Conference this week at New Haven, Conn. This is a conference of the Mission Boards of the various denominations, at which matters of interest to all the Boards are considered. Bro. Otho Winger, Vice-Chairman of the Board, and Bro. D. J. Lichty, now in America on furlough from the India field, have also planned to attend the conference.

Bro. Reuben Shroyer, of North Canton, Ohio, is in a position to serve several churches in revival efforts at the present time. On account of the prevalence of influenza, a number of the churches have postponed the series of meetings arranged for, and some have deferred them indefinitely. Those who desire to secure Bro. Shroyer's services just now, while several desirable dates are still open, should address him without delay.

Bro. A. J. Culler, of McPherson, Kans., called at the "Messenger" rooms on Thursday of last week, as he was on his way to Chicago to attend a committee meeting. He is a member of the committee appointed by the last Conference to draw up suitable formulas for installing church officials, and to revise certain minutes, as recommended by the Committee on Revision of Annual Meeting Minutes. Bro. Culler says the college work at McPherson is moving along prosperously again, since the passing of the influenza epidemic

Bro. Edgar Rothrock, Secretary of the District Mission Board for the State of Nebraska, asks us to announce that the Omaha church is looking for a new pastor, to begin his labors March 1, the present workers, Brother and Sister M. R. Weaver, having resigned after ten years of faithful service. The congregation has sixty-five members, a new churchhouse and a new eight-room bungalow parsonage. Correspondence should be addressed to the clerk, Bro. J. W. Rasp, 210 Keeline Building, Omaha, Nebr.

ELSEWHERE IN THIS ISSUE

The District Meeting of Southwestern Kansas and Southeastern Colorado, to be held at Hutchinson, Kans., has been deferred from the date previously assigned to April 26-28. A schedule of the various sessions is given among the Notes.

Have You Seen the Yearbook?

After sundry adventures, the 1919 Yearbook has at last escaped from our hands and now rests secure in its regular place in thousands of homes. If you have not seen the Yearbook, ten cents in silver or stamps will bring you a copy all your own.

The 1919 Yearbook is corrected up to November, 1918. All changes since the first of November are to be printed in the "Messenger" as they come in, and, if noted in the Yearbook, will keep the lists up-to-date.

Just remember that the Yearbook or Almanac contains some special features this year, notably the articles by Brethren J. H. Moore, D. L. Miller and Jno. S. Flory. Ten cents will bring your copy of the Yearbook.

MISCELLANEOUS

The Basic church, Va., announces her love feast for Feb. 1.

The Deshler church, Ohio, will rededicate their house of worship on Sunday, Jan. 19, at 10 A. M.,—Bro. Otho Winger delivering the address for the occasion.

The Roaring Spring church has purchased a parsonage adjoining their church grounds, which will be a provision of great convenience to the pastor and family. We have often wondered why more of our churches, while erecting a house of worship, do not provide for a parsonage also, on an adjoining lot. It would prove to be a decided advantage in a number of ways, and an excellent investment.

Special Notice to Western Pennsylvania.—Bro. M. Clyde Horst, Clerk of the District just named, desires us to call attention to the following: "In order that all business for District Meeting be printed in the Program, all papers from the churches, and all reports of committees and treasurers, should be in the hands of the District Clerk on or before March 1, 1919."

We were impressed by the recent report of the Akron church, Ohio. While the expenses of the congregation have been unusually heavy, generous donations have been made for various benevolent purposes. Those who may wonder as to the secret of such unwonted liberality, are given an insight into the matter by the correspondent. All is ascribed to the potency of prayer,—five groups having made ample use of this most excellent means of grace.

Our contributors, when reporting news from the churches, will please bear in mind that our room for communications of that sort is necessarily limited. For some years we have made it a rule to report only the leading officers elected at church councils, confining ourselves to the following only: Elder, pastor, Sunday-school superintendent, Christian Workers' president, "Messenger" agent, "Messenger" correspondent, church clerk, church trustees, Local Temperance Committee, Local Missionary Committee. We trust that our correspondents will kindly remember these restrictions, when sending church news, thus avoiding needless correspondence regarding the matter.

A BYSTANDER'S NOTES

The Need of Today: Men of Faith.—Loyally entering upon the tasks and obligations of the "Five Year Forward Movement," there is need of enlarged vision, but even more so of abounding faith,—the secret of abiding strength. The man of faith is the Lord's steward. He is the Lord's mouthpiece. God uses him because the man of faith puts himself entirely within the Master's hand. For such men the world waits, for such men God yearns, that through them he may hasten the time when the wickedness of ungodly men may be curbed, and when universal righteousness will fill the world with its jubilant song. Never was there a time when moral heroes were more needed. The world waits for such. The pulse of the race throbs fast with the expectancy of mighty movements for social betterment. The atmosphere of the nations is tense, with stupendous national upheavals and reshapings. The heart of the church of God may well quiver with prophetic anticipations of the mightiest baptism of love and power it has ever known.

A Pastor's Motto.—A recent communication to this office was written on a sheet that bears the letter-head of a busy pastor. We were specially attracted by the motto, prominently displayed: "Friend of the Troubled; Counselor on Life Problems." As we pondered over the significant words, we were forcibly reminded of the fact that they concisely state two very important phases of pastoral efficiency,—features that were especially emphasized by the Great Teacher. The consecrated pastor's mission is ever one of consolation and cheer to the troubled, just as his counsel should point out a way of peace and safety through the bewildering maze of life's problems.

"The Unplumbed Depths."—A current writer recently made this observation: "Every nation has its unplumbed depths, in which lie strange and terrible possibilities." The thought impressed us with its far-reaching significance, not only as applying to nations, but equally pertinent as to individuals. In a very real sense each person has his "unplumbed depths,"—a realm of mystery,—but we are glad that the "possibilities" need not, necessarily, "be strange and terrible," but that they can be, indeed, "wholly pleasing and truly wonderful." Have we not all seen the musician who, with the hand of a master, can draw sweetest melody from the instrument that hitherto has been rather disappointing? And so, thank God, it may be with any one of us, if we allow the Great Master to sound the "unplumbed depths" of our hearts, to bring forth therefrom unexpected treasures, precious and rare,—unknown even to ourselves.

Putting Something into the Prayer Meeting.—A writer in one of our exchanges pertinently remarks that no one should expect to get anything out of the weekly prayer service if he neglects to put something into it. That is true enough. No business man can hope to make a success of his business without putting into it the best that is in him. How common to hear people exclaim, after a prayer meeting: "I didn't get anything out of it"! Was the meeting at fault, or did the critic fail to go in the right frame of mind? A brother met an aged deacon on the morning after the weekly prayer meeting, and enthusiastically remarked: "We had a fine meeting last night." Wonderingly the deacon asked: "What was there about it, so especially fine?" "Well," said the brother, "the leader asked me to say something, so I did some earnest thinking about the subject, before going to the meeting, and, really, all that was said wonderfully appealed to me." The brother unconsciously uttered a great truth. Thinking beforehand about the subject to be considered, and then prayerfully and briefly presenting one's testimony, is sure to make any prayer meeting a most interesting one.

Making the Most out of the Home Department.—A writer in a recent issue of the "Sunday School Times" advanced an idea with which the Bystander is much pleased. As he says: "Getting members for the home department is a fine thing, but getting them to promote themselves into the visible Sunday-school is better." Many of the best Sunday-school workers are urging a double enrollment,—once as a home department member; secondarily as an honorary member of the class to which he or she would belong if a regular attendant. This brings them more or less in touch with the school, includes them, by special invitation, in any social occasions or special services, and links them up, in personal acquaintance and friendship, with those of their own age. Much, of course, will depend upon the tactfulness of the class to which such home department members are coördinated. The teacher as well as the members should feel a special responsibility for the honorary classmates, considering them, on the quiet, as a sort of home mission field. It should be their definite aim to bring them into active membership. While the double enrollment has worked most successfully in some of the schools, undoubtedly much depends upon the class in question, to win the home department members for the regular class work

ANOTHER APPEAL

At sundry times the duty and privilege of special prayer and special thanksgiving have been urged on our people. The Central Service Committee again appeals to all our people that earnest prayer and supplication be made in the congregations, in the families and in the shut-in places, in behalf of the Council of Nations, now meeting to decide the terms of peace, and to adopt measures and plans for the prevention of wars in the future.

The importance and far-reaching significance of the work, in the hands of these men, can not be exaggerated. The affairs of all nations are dependent on the outcome of this Council. The interests of the entire human race, of every tongue and nation, will be affected. One of the greatest responsibilities ever laid upon a human council rests upon these men. Every believing soul should pray that wisdom from God Almighty may be manifest in the minds and conclusions of these men.

The Central Service Committee desires to lay this matter upon the earnest attention and faith of every member of the Church of the Brethren. Pray that the basis of settlement, established in the present case, may be just and right to all, and that justice and peace for the future may be secured.

W. J. Swigart, Chairman.

AROUND THE WORLD

The World's Sunday School Convention

With the restoration of peaceful conditions throughout the world, it may be possible to arrange for the World's Sunday School Convention in Tokyo, Japan, originally scheduled for 1916, but deferred on account of the war. Officials of the World's Sunday School Association recently convened in New York, and a message of inquiry was sent to the Sunday-school workers of Japan, asking them to name the date when the Convention is to be held. Meanwhile detailed plans are developing for this great gathering of the Sunday-school forces of the world. It is justly regarded as a supreme opportunity to present the claims of Christianity for the most advantageous consideration of the Oriental world.

Silence and Desolation

An American newspaper correspondent, who recently visited the battle-scarred areas of France and Belgium, reports that an uncanny silence now broods over that vast scene of desolation. He describes it as the strangest landscape the world has ever seen. As far as the eye can sweep the horizon, there are ruined villages, blasted woods, shell-torn and pitted fields. Circling over the great area of horror and destruction are great flocks of crows and vultures. The picture is strongly suggestive of "the end of all things." A few villagers are beginning to creep back to their former homes,—now naught but a mass of ruins. But the rigors of the winter must pass before any reconstruction on a large scale can be attempted.

Facts That Tell Their Own Story

Already North Dakota is reaping some of the favorable results of entering the prohibition fold. Its State penitentiary now has only about 100 inmates, and if this most desirable decrease of convicts continues, that State will soon take steps to quarter the few remaining prisoners in some other institution. Another phase of prohibition economics is reported from the State of Oregon. One of the great plants, formerly used as a brewery, is now manufacturing furniture, and another one is engaged in the manufacture of shoes. In former years Oregon had to send to Michigan for its furniture, and for more than seven decades had to buy its shoes in far-off Boston. Now the two brewery plants, instead of being a curse to the people are proving to be real blessings.

Pastoral Helpers

More and more is the fact being recognized in congregational circles throughout the land that a pastor should not and need not do all the pastoral work that requires attention. He can not manage all of it, to begin with, and, furthermore, it would not be wise to attempt the task, granting that he were able. A Dayton pastor, we understand, has formed an association of workers, known as "Pastoral Helpers." Regular monthly meetings are held by this body. This association has a president, secretary and a corps of district workers. The latter visit new members, distribute literature, take subscriptions for the church paper and attend to whatever other work may have to be looked after. No task is too menial, and none is too large. The plan has great possibilities.

Archæologists Still at Work

New discoveries have recently been made among the ruins of Nineveh, bringing to light an entirely new lot of tablets. According to the records on the tablets, they date back to a period more than 2,000 years before Christ. Besides the historical data there are also crude pictorial representations. One of these pictures presents the flood, as the designer would have conceived it, had he read the Bible account. The stories of the early days of the race must have been commonly-circulated household tales of Chaldea, four thousand years ago. These tablets also show accurate representations of "The Temptation of Adam and Eve," "The Serpent," "The Apple Tree," and a number of other Scriptural scenes. All told, they faithfully attest to the absolute authenticity of the Bible.

Poison Gas to Be Sunk in the Ocean

According to a recent report, the Government is going to take sixty-eight million dollars' worth of poison gas out to sea in iron tanks, drop it into the water, and let it sink to the bottom. Only thus can it be safely disposed of. This gas had been manufactured by order of the War Department for the Allied spring drive, and would have constituted the greatest gas offensive of the war, bringing death to thousands and laying waste vast stretches of soil. It was recently learned that in some way the proposed invasion of Germany, as above referred to, came to the knowledge of the Central Powers, and made the German peace delegates exceedingly anxious to sign the Armistice. While such an absolute destruction of the poison gas, whatever its original cost, is the only safe way of escaping its evil effects, we are wondering if a like summary procedure might not be applicable to other well-known objectionable things. Destructive as they are to mankind, physically and otherwise, they well deserve a like fate.

Profiteering on Child Labor

Recent findings by the Government's Child Labor Committee indicate that more than 910 children between six and ten years of age, are working in five industrial plants in North Carolina,—so far as investigations have been made. Those in the cotton mills work regularly on eleven-hour shifts. These industries are presided over by two men who solemnly had assured Congress that without a Federal law North Carolina would protect her own children. "The Charlotte Observer," a newspaper of that State, naively states that "cotton manufacturers exclude five-year-old workers from their mills, and that children of six to ten are employed ONLY eleven hours a day." Note the "only," and then do your part to have Congress, by a strong enactment, protect the child workers of the nation against the profiteers.

The Passing of Theodore Roosevelt

Just after closing the columns of our last issue, on Monday, Jan. 6, the sad tidings of Col. Theodore Roosevelt's departure were heralded far and wide by the daily press. He died at his home at Sagamore Hill, N. Y., at the age of sixty years. For seven years he was President of our great nation, discharging the important duties assigned him with great faithfulness and skill. He was a consistent exponent of the "strenuous life," doing with his might whatever he conceived to be his duty. It is generally conceded that his death came at a time when his country could least spare his services. His intimate friend, Major General Leonard Wood, paid this tribute to the departed one: "Unselfish loyalty, honest and fearless criticism, have always characterized the life and work of Theodore Roosevelt, and he lived and worked always for his country's best interests."

The President in the Pulpit

It was thoroughly characteristic of the nation's Chief Executive that, with filial regard for his ancestors, he should, during his stay in England, visit the old Congregational church at Bristol, where his mother's father, Thomas Woodrow, was pastor from 1820 to 1835. That the President complied with the urgent request to enter the pulpit and to address the congregation at the place where his mother spent her girlhood days, is as pleasing to Americans as it was unusual for the English. We quote a brief section from the address: "It is from quiet places like this, all over the world that the forces are accumulated that presently will overpower any attempt to accomplish evil on a great scale. . . . Out of communities like these come streams that fertilize the conscience of men, and it is the conscience of the world we now mean to place upon the throne."

Why Girls Go Astray

Social workers are still struggling with the old problem of devising best ways and means of preventing and overcoming the social evil. A leading worker among delinquent girls of the United States assures us that the number of new girls who take the first step in the downward path is at least 60,000 a year. That means 5,000 a month, 1,200 a week, 165 a day, seven every hour, one in every eight minutes. They come from every walk of life, but probably not more than one in ten of the girls enters a life of shame by her own choice. Some of the reasons why girls go astray, are summed up in the following: (1) Lack of proper home instruction in morals and in sex relations. (2) Improper environments, where suggestive and corruptive conversation sows the seeds of unlawful desires. (3) Inducements held out by men of evil design, promising promotion in business, and even a possible marriage.

A Challenge to the Temperance Hosts

Three hundred distillers of the United States met in Chicago Jan. 7, pooled their interests, amounting to a grand total of $1,000,000,000, and decided to fight the dry forces in every State of the Union and also before the United States Supreme Court. Questions never before raised in the country's history will be put up to the Supreme Court. One is the constitutionality of the Constitutional Amendment itself, which aims at a dry nation. The highest court of the nation will be asked to pass on the question as to whether thirty-six or any number of States, can impose a rule of personal conduct on other States that are not included in the combine. Another point to be raised is, whether the Federal Government can force a State to surrender its inherent right to handle exclusively matters that pertain to the personal liberty right of the individual citizen of a State. The distillers, while admitting during their convention that the Prohibition Amendment will receive the indorsement of the thirty-six States, are taking steps by which the fight will be carried on in the courts. Mr. Levy Mayer, chief attorney of the distillers, has been instructed not to spare any expense, as long as the billion dollars hold out. It is to be one of the biggest legal fights in the nation's history. A number of "technicalities,"—the bane of honest enforcement of judicial decisions,—will also be urged. The distillers further claim that large accessions will be gained by the Socialists if the United States rules against the manufacture, sale and use of intoxicants. It will be seen from the above that the temperance workers have to deal with a thoroughly aroused and most determined foe. It is to be a fight to the finish, and unlimited sums of money will be made use of to achieve their ends. This is a direct challenge to every temperanee worker in the United States. "The King's business requireth haste." Let it not be said that the manufacturers of strong drink are more active and self-sacrificing than the children of light!

Jerusalem Gives Thanks

When British forces took possession of the City of David, they did not content themselves with the glory of that achievement, however remarkable it was, but they also took steps to supply the city with greatly-needed modern conveniences. Surveyors were detailed to look into the question of supplying the ancient city with clean, fresh water. Repairing some of the old aqueducts, dating back to the time of Solomon, and adding a complete system of piping, they soon secured an ample supply of water, invoking, thereby, the profound gratitude of all the citizens. The installation of a sewer system is also making good progress, and has done much to eliminate diseases. Fully 10,000 of the people have been given work on the streets and roads in and about the city, and the result of this is most gratifying.

Seventy Thousand Industrial Casualties Annually

Justly the entire world looks with horror upon those who brought the late war upon us, since, for every million men, mobilized upon European battle-fields, there resulted an annual casualty list of 50,000. But shall we, as Christians, be oblivious to the still more appalling fact that for every million men, women and children, mobilized for service in the industrial establishments of our land, there is a casualty list of 70,000 each year? At first glance it would hardly seem possible that such inexcusable conditions should prevail, but reliable statistics assure us of the truthfulness of the statement. While safety measures are demanded by the authorities, in many cases they are not wholly complied with by the employers. The desire for increased output and larger gains are too often allowed to militate against the proper safeguarding of human lives.

The Crafty Buddhist Missionaries

Fifty years ago no one would have predicted the possibility or probability of Buddhist missionaries endeavoring to gain a foothold in the principal cities of the United States. From recent reports, however, it is quite apparent that these emissaries and propagandists are not only here in considerable numbers, but it is also evident that they are fully determined to make their work count in every way possible. In most instances they have brazenly adapted the Christian hymnology to their own system of worship, using the tunes as we know them, but changing the wording to suit their idolatrous belief. Thus, instead of singing, "O, for a thousand tongues to sing my dear Redeemer's praise," they paraphrase the latter part to "My holy Buddha's praise." And so they proceed to do with many other hymns, sacred and dear to us by their association with sanctuary services for many years. It seems most distressing to see these old-time songs prostituted to the furtherance of a heathen cult.

Prayer as an Adjuster of Difficulties

From a recent issue of the "Missionary Review of the World" we glean particulars of an incident that shows most admirably the power of prayer in the adjustment of a perplexing situation. In a mission station in India, a disagreement among the native workers threatened great harm to the work, and to cast reproach upon the cause of Christ. Finally matters assumed so serious a phase that an American missionary was prevailed upon to settle the dispute. He came unannounced, put up his tent, entered it, closed the tent curtain, and began to pray. The natives on one side of the controversy approached the tent, ready to state their side of the case. Looking into the tent, and seeing the missionary engaged in prayer, they quietly withdrew. A later visit showed him still praying. The other contestants in the controversy next drew nigh, and found the situation of affairs precisely as their opponents had discovered it. Successive visits, stealthily made, revealed the missionary still absorbed in his protracted season of prayer. Thus the visits went on until, at last, both parties happened to meet at the tent simultaneously. Then it was that they discovered the missionary even more devoutly engaged in prayer, for he was prostrate on the ground. So great was the influence of the missionary's prayer upon his little audience that a great conviction of wrong-doing smote all participants in the quarrel. Penitently they confessed to one another, their hearts deeply stirred. Forgiveness was sought and given, and their troubles vanished. The reconciled Christians then withdrew to wait for their missionary friend. The latter, however, after taking down his tent, quietly went away. His task was done.

HOME AND FAMILY

The Old Home

BY JULIA GRAYDON

The house is standing, but 'tis empty now
And still as death itself, save when the mice
Go scampering o'er the rotten floors, in search
Of food which is not there, but which once was
When Ann her pantry stored with tempting sweets
That sometimes mice with but two legs would steal.
No merry voices ring throughout the halls,
And in the open grate no fire burns,
Though cold the day, and snow upon the ground.
The old gate swings on broken hinge, and creaks
With mournful sound, while I stand here before
Our home, where once we lived and loved and did
Not dream of separation,—which will come
To all. Do I behold the light shine out,
As once it shone in years long gone? No, 'tis
The sun's reflection on those broken panes.
Would my reflections were as bright, and yet,
My heart is thankful such a home has been.

A Revival of Family Worship

BY S. S. BLOUGH

"And thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house. . . . And thou shalt write them upon the posts of thy house, and on thy gates" (Deut. 6: 7, 9).

THUS spoke the Lord God unto his people concerning his commandments in the former times, and because they neglected his precepts, they came into an evil way. The proper consideration of these things in the home would have constituted worship, or would have led to worship. We can easily see what God's desire was. He always knew what he desired to accomplish by any commandment of his. He knew that the reading of the Word would have a helpful influence upon the people. The spiritual discussion of Bible truth is always helpful to the righteous man. Then, too, connected with the study of God's Word is the institution of prayer. How strengthening, uplifting and enlarging is prayer!

It must have been a pleasing sight to God, to have all his people gather the family together and spend time reading his commandments and teaching them to those who were growing up. Had Israel continued to do this there would have been no captivity, but the continuance of a nation as a blessing to the whole world.

Those fortunate enough to have been reared in a home where the family altar was established, remember with pleasure the blessed experience of the hour of devotion. At the close of the day, or perhaps before the work of the day was begun,—in some homes at both times,—the family was called together. Any hired help or visitors in the home were included in this worshiping circle. Even now, when you recall those sacred experiences, you are moved by the remembrance of them. That old family Bible is sacred to the memory of some who long ago have left us. Sometimes a hymn was sung in connection with the reading. After this the entire family knelt, and the father poured forth earnest petitions, praise and thanksgiving to God in behalf of that united family. As the children went out into life, one by one, these prayers would follow them in strong petition, that they might be kept in the way of righteousness. How our hearts were united in those petitions! What lasting benefit came to all who thus engaged! Shall these benefits and pleasures be denied the coming generations?

Judging from what others say, and what we ourselves have discovered, the family altar is greatly neglected at the present time. If we were to seek the reason for this we would find various excuses. Let us hope that our own people have not gone so far away that there is no hope of returning. The daily worship of the family should not be neglected. God's blessings have always rested upon it. How sad that this inspiring practice should be lost sight of! We fail to count family devotions of first importance and let other things step in their way. So, once in a while, we forget and after a time it becomes rather easy to drop it all together. When the family worship is gone, much of the private devotion will soon go with it. Further, may we not say that the reason why it is so hard to maintain the weekly prayer meeting is due to the fact that there is so little worship in the home. Too many homes lost entirely that which did so much in moulding their lives when they were in the homes of their parents.

There is some hope that the practice of observing the "Morning Watch" may lead us back again to the family altar. It is a splendid practice within itself, and if it should restore family worship, as well as establish the secret prayer vigil, it would be doubly blessed.

If prayer becomes an habitual experience in the Christian's life it will naturally become his vital breath. If God had a more definite place in our inner lives, he would be restored to his rightful place at the family altar about the fireside. He would likewise have again his place of power in the prayer service of the church. When family worship is properly kept up, men and women will not need to be urged to attend the weekly prayer meeting. When those who have learned to enjoy the prayer hour in their homes, press earnestly into the weekly prayer meeting, it will again become the power of God in the living church. Let us not forget Jesus' words: "Greater things than these shall ye do."

In the words of another, on this important subject: "It has a natural foundation and reason, in the unity of the family, the close and tender relations of the household, and the sanctity and love of the Christian home; suggesting and inviting the family acknowledgment of mercies and petitions for Divine presence and blessing. Upon the family altar, continued through the ages, has always rested the blessing of God. It honors God, the Giver of all good, the Source of all happiness. It makes the home a sanctuary of God's dwelling. It binds the household together in a more hallowed love. It pleads the grace of covenant promise. It instructs and unites all hearts in the truth and love of Christ. It builds a wall of defense against error and evil of the world around us. It bears witness of God, our Savior, to the stranger within our gates."

What home training are our young folks getting in the exercise of religion? Do we ever ask our children to exercise in prayer in the home? How can we do this when we have no prayer hour? What can we expect of them when they should become the pillars of the church? Shall the church of the future be a praying church? But how if we do not do our duty in our homes, will there be a future church?

We are now starting out on the "Five-year Forward Movement." We have a large work before us. There is no one who can not find something to do. Are we in real earnest about the matter? How much of a place shall prayer have in this matter? "The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." Yes, some one must do heavy labor for Christ, but let us not lose sight of the place of prayer in this work. If you feel that you can not do much work, train in Christ's school of prayer. Build up the broken down family altars.

May I point you to a vision? The Church of the Brethren,—a united church in this matter. What a power if, during the next five years, every member would engage in daily private devotion alone with God, if, in every home, the family altar would be erected, if, in every church, the weekly prayer meeting would be flourishing! If this body of people in dead earnest, having cleansed themselves of sin, were to prostrate themselves before their God, pleading for strength, wisdom and power, what might not be accomplished! The family altar must play a large part in this victory for Christ.

The Best Things We Can Give

BY IDA M. HELM

PETER'S words to the lame man at the Gate Beautiful convey to us a message of the best things we can give today. The great needs of life do not require silver and gold, and that is fortunate, for many of us do not have the silver and gold to meet the demands of charity.

The deepest poverty is soul poverty. The greatest need is spiritual need. The cruelest hunger is heart hunger. If we are rich in spiritual wealth,—rich in the things of God,—we can give that which the millionaire, who has nothing but silver and gold, can never give.

The most pitiable beggars are those who are living in luxury,—tempted, worried, suffering heartache and ingratitude and disappointment. They are living without hope, having never laid hold of the Promised One, hungering for kindness, sympathy, love, and appreciation,—longing for some one who cares. The call for help comes to us from these splendid, gloomy mansions of the rich. Are we ready to bestow sympathy, kind deeds, encouragement,—spiritual alms?

"They starve who have not love to bear them up:
They freeze who know not Love's divine caress:
The want of love! It gives life's hitterest cup its bitterness.

"Yet, lo! Love's voice, so long hy strife kept dumb,
Shall wake earth's millions with resistless call;
I hear her cry: 'Ho! brother, sister, come! I claim you all.'"

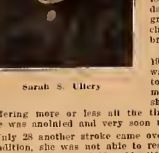
IN MEMORY OF SISTER SARAH S. ULLERY

Sister Sarah S. Ullery, nee Hilderbrand, was born June 11, 1845, died July 28, 1918, at her home in North Liberty, Ind., aged 73 years, 1 month and 17 days. She united with the Church of the Brethren early in life, living faithfully until death. She was an active Sunday-school worker until age demanded a rest.



Sarah S. Ullery

She was married to Stephen A. Ullery Sept. 1, 1865. Four daughters and one son came to the home. The eldest daughter preceded her mother Nov. 1, 1898. The aged husband, three daughters, one son, eleven grandchildren, six great-grandchildren, one sister, and two brothers survive her.

From a paralytic stroke, May 10, she never recovered. She was never able to talk enough to express what was on her mind. The last sixteen days she was confined to her bed, suffering more or less all the time, but enduring it patiently. She was anointed and very soon resigned to God's will.

After 28 another stroke came over her which, in her weakened condition, she was not able to resist, and within thirty minutes she had peacefully laid aside life's burden and fallen "asleep in Jesus." In accordance with her wishes, the funeral services were held at the home, Bro. H. B. Dickey in charge. Interment in the Fair Cemetery which, in her childhood, was a part of her father's farm.

in famine times, were prices so high as now, we hear. Prices of certain grains and goods are several times the normal, and many things, formerly thought needful, are not obtainable at all. Railway cars for transporting grain from one province to another are often not obtainable, and the boats, too, seem to be employed in Government service, so that, at any rate, it is clear that a very hard winter is ahead of us. The cry of real famine may be wired to you long before this reaches the homeland.

A very dreadful malady, called "influenza," has been spreading over our Presidency during the last few months. Lately pneumonia develops along with it, and is proving very fatal. Daily now, in Bombay, a city of a million souls, some 500 to 700 deaths are reported. In Poona, a city of a little over 100,000, about 150 deaths are reported daily; and even village people are stricken down by it. As many as twenty and twenty-five deaths are reported on one train, in one trip, going from Bombay to Ahmedabad, 310 miles. Years ago, when plague was at its worst, only from 300 to 400 died daily in Bombay. Two of our little girls and two women from our immediate community were taken. Besides, this is, the regular fever season. One of our better grade of teachers is seriously ill at Bulsar, just now.

When all our teachers came in for their pay, we met for a Bible reading and prayer. All were reminded of the failure of the rains, the awful war in Europe, the soaring high prices of everything needful, and the unpreecedented amount of sickness all about us. There was an evident softening of hearts, a feeling of utter helplessness, and need for reliance upon our Good God. Such an attitude does the suppliant good. In prosperity we are apt to forget him. In need and distress we have no other resource, so we call upon him. It is given to us, not only to believe on his name but also to suffer for his sake. Whether hard times or good days be ahead of us, we are earnestly praying for great blessing in the Master's vineyard this touring season. To him he the praise and glory! I. S. Long.

TIMBERVILLE, VIRGINIA

During the year 1918 the Unity congregation has enjoyed many spiritual feasts. During the month of May Bro. S. 1. Bowman, of Harrisonburg, Va., held a series of meetings for us at the Union Chapel house. There were four added to the church.

During the month of July Sister Eva Trostle, of Chicago, visited among some of the churches in Virginia, giving her excellent talks to mothers and daughters on dress reform. We believe her visits did much good.

In August Bro. C. G. Hesse, of Philadelphia, Pa., preached for us at the New Dale house for two weeks. The interest was good, and fifteen were added to the church. At our council meeting in August, Bro. John M. Roller was elected to the ministry. He is now in Bethany Bible School.

Bro. Moy Gwong was with us during the latter part of August and gave several very interesting talks on the customs and life of the Chinese people. Bro. Ernest Wampler, our missionary to China, was with us the first of September and gave several interesting talks on missions and mission study.

Owing to the inclemency of the weather, our Thanksgiving service was not very well attended. Bro. C. E. Nair gave us a helpful lesson. The collection amounted to $72.62 for World-wide Missions. Our love feast, at the Fairview house, was fairly well attended by the home members, only a few from the adjoining congregations being present. The home ministers officiated. Bro. W. C. Hoover, of the Timberville church, was with us on Sunday and gave an excellent sermon.

Dec. 6, 7 and 8 a Sunday-school Institute was held at the New Dale house. Bro. Paul Bowman and Bro. Willar, of Bridgewater, gave some very helpful instructions.

Because of the epidemic in our midst, we did not have any Christmas service. May God be praised for the many blessings that have come to us during the past year and may we enter the New Year with greater zeal!

Anna R. Roller.

CHRISTMAS CHEER AT THE BRETHREN'S HOME

Christmas Day brought cheer and gladness to every member of the Home. At 8 A. M. all the old people, children and helpers assembled in the large sitting-room, where the children sang several songs, after which apples, oranges and candy were distributed among the older brethren and sisters. The children then returned to their own house, to receive their treat. Three of the leading merchants of the city furnished the fruit and candy. The New Carlisle Sunday-school and the Sunshine Class of the Trotwood Sunday-school donated to our children books, dolls and toys,—such as make glad the hearts of little children. This class has, for a number of years, brought sunshine to the little people of the Home on Christmas Day. The Price's Creek Sisters' Aid Society donated a comforter, which is very acceptable these cold winter nights. The President of the Board of Trustees presented us with a hundred pounds of whole wheat flour. A week before Christmas individual boxes began to arrive at the Home, some members receiving a number of them. Almost every one was remembered by some special friends.

May the Lord richly reward all those who assisted in bringing cheer and happiness into the Home! At this time we have twenty-three old people, five brethren and eighteen sisters. The oldest is ninety-two and the youngest forty-eight. We have thirteen children, three boys and ten girls, ranging in age from one year to fourteen. Every member of the Home was well and able to partake of a bountiful Christmas dinner and to enjoy the blessings of the day. Sarah E. Minnich.

FROM WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA

The eighth Bible Institute of Western Pennsylvania, held in the Scalp Level church Dec. 31, 1918, to Jan. 3, 1919, was the best one for several years. Notwithstanding the influenza situation, the attendance was normal, and the interest keen and appreciative. The character of the regular work given was of a very high order.

Eld. Galen B. Royer, Professor of Missions at Juniata College, gave most excellent instruction in "Missions," "Sunday-school Pedagogy," and "General Church Economy." Because of his wide experience in missionary activities and foreign travel, as well as in general church work, he has a message such as few, if any, in our Brotherhood can give.

Dr. Paul H. Bowman, Professor of Biblical Literature and Theology at Bridgewater College, and President-elect of that institution, lectured on the first eleven chapters of Genesis, and the epistles of Paul to Philemon and to the Philippians. This was his second visit to Western Pennsylvania, and he has a standing invitation to come again. His work is unusually rich and practical. He certainly is worthy of the increased confidence that is being placed in him.

Addresses were also given by Eld. A. U. Berkley, of Johnstown, Eld. C. Walter Warstler, of Pittsburgh, and District Sunday-school Secretary, F. B. Statler. Mid-year meetings of the Mission Board, Peace Committee, Ministerial Board, and Sunday-school Board were held also,—the latter having charge of one period on the program. M. Clyde Horst, Secretary.

Johnstown, Pa.

DAYTON, OHIO

We have had difficulties, but West Dayton is now looking forward to greater activities. Every one is putting his shoulder to the wheel and coöperation is the watchword. We are still working at some disadvantage, because of the influenza, but indications point to improvement and we pray God that it may soon end.

Thanksgiving Day a very inspiring sermon was given by Rev. Love. A general offering of $41 was taken for the City Mission. Our communion was held in the evening, Bro. Warner officiating. The attendance was not large, because of sickness, but it was a real inspiration to be there. An offering of $57 was taken at this service.

Sunday, Dec. 1, Bro. Homer Bright, a returned missionary from China, gave an interesting illustrated talk on the great work being accomplished by the missionaries in China. An offering of $18.50 was taken for foreign missions.

The classes in teacher-training and home missions are proving very interesting, under the able instruction of the pastor.

The regular annual election was held Dec. 5. Bro. Harry McPherson was elected superintendent. A collection of $20.49 was taken for foreign war sufferers. The money will be given to our committee who has this matter in charge.

Sunday evening, Dec. 22, the young people rendered a cantata under the able direction of Rev. L. A. Weimer. The theme of the Christ-child ran through the entire service. Lieut. Horner also gave a very interesting talk.

West Dayton is heartily in favor of the Forward Movement, though we think the standard should have been set even higher. If ever an opportunity presented itself, it is now. The Church of the Brethren never faced a more promising future. Every minister and worker should be abreast of the times,—up and doing. The need of soul-emancipation is paramount. Our constant aim should be to bring souls to Jesus. If we pray more, if we are earnest and sincere, surely the Lord will bless our efforts for good. May we not start the New Year with a firmer determination to bring more souls to Christ? That thought should be ever present in our minds. May the Lord Jehovah help us to that end! N. B. Wine.

FROM WEST MANCHESTER CHURCH, INDIANA

Because of the influenza epidemic our Sunday-school and preaching services have been greatly interfered with for the last three months.

Bro. William Buckley, of Bradford, Ohio, was to have been present at our love feast, appointed for Oct. 12, and to begin our series of meetings the next day, but as there was a State-wide ban on all public gatherings, our meetings were deferred indefinitely.

We again attempted to begin our series of meetings Dec. 1. Bro. Buckley was present and gave us two good sermons, but the church thought it wise to abandon all services, as influenza conditions were becoming serious. For about three weeks, following Dec. 1, there were scores of cases,—in several instances whole families being sick with the disease. But the Lord has blessed our church even in these afflictions, there being only a few deaths.

We resumed our regular services Dec. 29, hoping that we may be able to continue the work. Bro. Russel Weller, of Copemish, Mich., preached a good sermon in the forenoon. Our last quarterly council of 1918 was not held until Jan. 2. The business of the meeting was disposed of very pleasantly. A full corps of officials for 1919 was elected, with Eld. I. B. Book in the chair.

The church decided to hold a series of meetings some time in the spring, and hopes to secure the help of Bro. Buckley. Today, with an attendance of 105, the Sunday-school raised an offering of $162.42 for the Armenian sufferers. Calvin F. Eiler.

North Manchester, Ind., Jan. 5.

SOUTH LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

Our services were discontinued from Oct. 6 to Dec. 8, on account of the prevailing epidemic of influenza. The first Sunday after the ban was lifted, the offering for foreign missions was $103.62. Sunday morning, Dec. 15, we held memorial services for one of our Sunday-school pupils, who died with influenza.

Friday evening, Dec. 13, was our regular business meeting for the election of officers for the coming year. Bro. Geo. F. Chemberlen met with us in a special council on Wednesday evening, Dec. 18, for the purpose of electing two deacons. The selection was unanimously in favor of Brethren A. B. Crist and D. E. Smith. They, with their wives, were duly installed the same evening.

Sunday morning, Dec. 22, Bro. B. F. Masterson, of Long Beach, gave a very interesting illustrated talk to the children. Sunday morning, Dec. 29, Bro. Otto Minnich preached for us.

Our pastor, Bro. R. H. Miller, has accepted a call to become the pastor of the church and College at La Verne, Cal. Although we feel the loss keenly, yet we are glad to make the sacrifice, knowing that Bro. Miller is entering a field of much larger opportunities, and that he will have a congregation whose assets are unlimited. There are few young men who possess the rare and noble Christian characteristics of Bro. Miller, and we feel sure that his future will be one of much usefulness to the church. He labored with us just eighteen months, and during that time our congregation made a marked improvement in every way. We held two revivals, during which twenty-one were baptized, one restored and twenty-one received by letter. Thirteen were granted letters. All of our indebtedness was paid during the past year, and we are looking forward hopefully to the work of the new year. Lena Irene Swank.

A FEW CLOSING THOUGHTS

No doubt the year 1918, as it closes, will go down on the pages of history as having eclipsed all other years in human suffering and in devastation. It has witnessed shattered and crushed homes, lamentation and weeping, because fathers, mothers and children have gone down through the Valley of the Shadow of Death. It occurs to the writer that it might go on record as the "death year." No tongue will ever tell, nor pen describe the deprivations and the sorrows our country has been forced to endure. Hence it exceeds, in significance, any year in the annals of our country.

But the old year has now closed, with all its carnage, ravages, ordeals, plagues and epidemics. Why should we mourn and weep, as the apostles did, when the sun was shrouded in darkness, when the people felt the earth quake and shake, and when they heard Jesus cry out: "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" Then his loved ones saw him taken down from the cross and placed in the sepulcher. The door was closed with a great stone and the seal of the governor was placed upon it.

Reader, can you imagine the gloom, the sorrow and darkness that hung, as a great pall, over the world at that momentous time? But thanks be to God, that, amidst all that gloom and commotion, while the people were yet agonizing by reason of the great sacrifice it required to redeem a lost world, God sent an angel down on the third morning. The seal was broken and the stone rolled back, that the Savior of the world might come forth and arise, triumphant over death, hell and the grave. The gloom was dispersed and the dark clouds gave way to the Sun of Righteousness who arose "with healing in his wings," to give new life. The world radiated with his glory and love.

Thus we see that there was, so to speak, a new world ushered in. This is the new world or kingdom that Isaiah saw: "And the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away" (Isa. 35: 10).

And now, as 1919 dawns upon our country, should we not realize that we are standing at the sunrise of a new era that will largely revolutionize our country? We will be confronted with many new ideas, issues, problems and possibilities. The writer believes that the Church of the Brethren should awake to her great possibilities and adapt herself to those conditions, that she may move forward in the great mission of evangelizing the world and receive the great harvest that awaits her in the future.

These thoughts were brought to the mind of the writer on Christmas Day, as he sat alone in his home, eating a scanty, cold dinner. The only warm thing he had was a cup of hot water. There was no one to express a word of cheer or comfort, except "George," the pet cat. Thinking of the gloom that had come into our home and country, my heart filled with sadness. My eyes were brimming with tears, but as I further meditated, a ray of cheer came into my heart. I thought of the twelve series of meetings in which I had the privilege of laboring, and the 216 sermons preached during the year. I called to mind the 453 visits made in our evangelistic work in homes where we tried to talk about Jesus and his love, and then worshiped with the family. While many of our young men were being called to the service of the Stars and Stripes, we had the joy of seeing quite a number enlist under the blood-stained banner of King Emmanuel.

"From victory unto victory
His army shall he lead,
'Till every foe is vanquished
And Christ is Lord indeed."

The writer is greatly interested and pleased with what has been announced as the "Five-year Movement." In order to make this movement a grand success, we should strive to make a long step during 1919. And this could be all of the money spent by the members of the church for "the lust of the flesh and the lust of the eyes and the pride of life," were given for the extension of Christ's Kingdom. "Wherefore, lay apart all filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness and receive with meekness" the "whole armour of God, that ye may be able" to go forth to meet our great possibilities in the new fields that are opening to us.

The writer has decided to continue the evangelistic work for 1919, and is ready to consider calls from congregations that may desire his services. As there are already a number of calls, I would suggest that you write soon, so that I may arrange for the meeting, stating time, etc.

In closing, I want to thank the dear brethren and sisters and friends for their kindness and encouragement. May the grace of God and the communion of the Holy Spirit be with you all till we shall meet again.

Bristow, Va. J. F. Britton.

THE WORK IN AKRON, OHIO

The work here has prospered under the pastorate of Bro. H. A. Brubaker and wife. In a city the size of Akron, where the membership is large and greatly scattered, it is no small task to care for the flock. We have members in East Akron, Cuyahoga Falls, Kenmore, Barberton and beyond.

During the year, thirty-three were received by baptism, and two pastoral letters were sent out to each member of the church. Nine anointing services were held. At the present time God is graciously raising up some of our number. Only one member has been claimed by death.

The Sunday-school attendance may fall a little below that of the previous year, but the offerings have been larger. Two classes are each supporting a native worker on the field, two classes of boys and girls are jointly supporting an orphan in India, and two young ladies' classes contributed $30 towards purchasing Christmas gifts for the India Orphanage. We had the "white gift" Christmas service again this year,—the children contributing $30 worth of staple groceries which were given to nine needy families. The older ones gave $60 for Armenian and Syrian Relief.

A Junior Christian Workers' Society has been organized and is doing excellent work under the direction of Bro. Theo. Brumbaugh. They rendered a Christmas program on Sunday evening before Christmas, and also gave one number in the morning exercises. During the past year the Senior Christian Workers supported a native worker in China, a bed in the China hospital, and donated $100 to furnish the dispensing and dressing room of the Hospital.

Eighteen of our young men were called to the colors, and seven of them were overseas. One was in trench service for sixty-four days and received a wound in the knee from shrapnel. He has been returned to the United States and will soon be with us again.

Jan. 4 we met in business meeting, with Eld. A. F. Shriver presiding. Five letters were received and one was granted. The church decided to retain our pastor for another year. On account of the epidemic Bro. A. I. Heestand did not conduct a series of meetings, as previously announced, but expects to begin them Jan. 11.

Although our expenses were heavier this year than last, yet more was contributed to missions than ever before, and the year was closed with a surplus in the treasury. We attribute the success of the work here to the "much time spent in prayer,"—five group meetings being held each week. May the Lord continue to use the band of Akron workers! Alice Tippy Klinger.

ROANOKE SUNDAY-SCHOOL INSTITUTE

The third biennial joint District Sunday-school Institute of the First and Southern Districts of Virginia was held in Roanoke Jan. 3 and 4.

The committee had arranged a very choice program of four sessions. Elders Galen B. Royer, Virgil C. Finnell, and D. J. Lichty were the chief speakers. They are men of pleasing personalities, cultured minds, and well-ripened experience.

Brethren T. S. Moherman, C. S. Ikenberry, Walter H. Kahle, and Sister Bessie Barnhart also contributed largely to the success of the Institute by their respective parts on the several programs.

The meeting was under the immediate supervision and management of Brethren Ikenberry, Bowman, and others. In the business session the treasurer's report showed a balance of $564.72 cash on hand. An offering was then taken, making it $80 more.

This District Institute has been supporting a missionary, Sister Rebecca S. Wampler. Brother and Sister Leland Moomaw offered, of themselves, to support a missionary in the foreign field. This beautiful offer of service was accepted by a rising vote of thanks. This offer so fired the Institute with enthusiasm that, on resolution, it was decided thus to support three missionaries in the foreign field.

The Institute took the important step of sending a petition to our General Peace Committee. The following report from the committee was offered and adopted:

Inasmuch as the entire world, at present, is deeply interested in the establishment of a righteous and permanent peace; and inasmuch as the decisions of the present World Peace Conference are to affect all nations, we, the delegates of the joint Sunday-school Conference of the Southern and First Districts of Virginia, in Institute assembled this fourth day of January, 1919, do hereby petition our General Peace Committee to take such immediate steps as will tend to secure absolute liberty of religious conscience, so far as peace principles are concerned, to the citizens of all nations.

Committee: D. C. Naff, E. E. Bowman, W. M. Kahle.

The Institute was attended by a good delegation and more especially by a good local patronage. The general sentiment was that the Institute was a decided success.

The Roanoke City church, in charge of Eld. P. S. Miller, opened their homes and their hospitable hearts to the eminent satisfaction of everybody. They took excellent care of the people. The Institute gave a rising vote of thanks to the Roanoke church. Mrs. J. H. Shickel.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

ARIZONA

Glendale church met in council on New Year's Day, with Bro. Arnold presiding. Three letters were received and two were granted. The following officers were elected: Wm. Platt, elder; O. E. Gillett, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Harold Kuntz, president of Christian Workers' Meeting. Bro. Caslow, of Grand Rapids, Mich., will have charge of our series of meetings, to be held about March 1, followed by a love feast. A teacher-training class has been organized, with our pastor, Bro. C. W. Ronk, as teacher.—Emma T. Whitcher, Glendale, Ariz., Jan. 7.

CALIFORNIA

Chico.—For four Sundays we were not permitted to have services on account of influenza, but Nov. 24 we again were allowed to meet for worship. Thanksgiving evening our pastor, Bro. C. E. Davis, gave us a splendid sermon, after which an offering was taken. Dec. 14 we held our love feast. Bro. Blocher, of Rio Linda, officiated, and the next morning he gave us an excellent sermon. Dec. 20 we met in council. All church officers were elected for the coming year. Sunday-school and Christian Workers' officers were elected for six months. Brethren Arnie Wright and G. W. Swisshelm were chosen superintendents of Sunday-school, and Sister Grace Davis, Christian Workers' president. In January our Sunday-school will take a special offering for relief work.—Sorah E. Rife, Chico, Cal., Jan. 4.

Pasadena church met in council Dec. 31. All officers for the coming year were elected. Bro. W. E. Trostle was again chosen as our pastor. The hen having been left out of the count time, we are thankful that we can assemble again in God's house. We praise the Lord for his goodness to us and pray that this terrible plague may be stayed, and that our church work may continue.—Mrs. Alice Yaman, Pasadena, Cal., Jan. 2.

Ralsh church met in council Dec. 14, with a good attendance. Bro. J. Harman Stover presided. After the reading of the minutes and hearing of committee reports, our pastor, Bro. A. O. Brubaker, was unanimously elected to the eldership. The candidation service was conducted by Bro. Bolsinger, of Easton, and Bro. Edgecomb, of Fresno. Officers were elected for the coming year, with Brethren J. O. Kimmel, J. E. Young and H. S. Sheller, trustees; church correspondent, the writer; Sunday-school superintendent, J. E. Young; president Christian Workers' Society, Sister Lottie Ross. The budget of expenses for the coming year was increased and the church decided to purchase a parsonage. The outlook for the future is very promising. On Christmas Eve on excellent program of music was given, which was much appreciated. An offering of $64.58 was lifted for Armenian and Syrian Relief. It was presented as a White Gift at the Christmas Eve family gathering.—Eld. C. D. Bonsack, Dec. 29.

Waterford.—Like many other congregations, we had to discontinue our services for over a month on account of influenza. No deaths have resulted among our members. Thanksgiving evening we met in praise and prayer service. Dec. 6 we had a similar service. Our Christmas program was rendered Dec. 20. We are very grateful for the interest that the children, especially those outside of our own denomination, took in making the service a success. Dec. 26 we met in council with Eld. Levi Winklebleck in charge. Church officers for the coming year are: Brethren J. W. Deerdorff and Levi Winklebleck, elders; Bro. R. M. Price, clerk and treasurer; Bro. Willie Dinsmore, "Messenger's" agent. Sunday-school officers were elected, with the writer as superintendent. Bro. Sam Winklebleck was elected president of the Christian Workers' Society. About half of our officers are young people, and we are glad to see them take hold of the work. Our series of meetings and our communion service have been postponed until spring. Dec. 29 Bro. Wilbur Weimer preached his first sermon on the subject of "Light."—Hattie B. Deerdorff, Waterford, Cal., Dec. 31.

Santa Ana congregation met in council Dec. 23, with Eld. S. O. Lehmer presiding. The following new officers were elected: S. G. Lehmer, elder; Sister Dorcas Wolford, president Christian Workers; Sister Ruth Wolford, Sunday-school superintendent. We were glad to welcome into our congregation Bro. S. M. Miller and family.—A. Klein Wolford, Santa Ana, Cal., Dec. 28.

COLORADO

Sterling church met in council Jan. 1, with Bro. Nickey presiding. Bro. Nickey was chosen elder for the year. Officers were elected, with Sister Ollie Ellery, clerk; Bro. D. B. Miller, Sunday-school superintendent; Sister Mary Countryman, church correspondent; Sister Alger, Christian Workers' president. Bro. Stutzman, of Burr Oak, Kans., will hold a series of meetings for us, beginning Feb. 2. Our love feast will be held at the close of the meetings.—Mrs. C. W. Griffin, Sterling, Colo., Jan. 6.

IDAHO

Moscow church met in council Dec. 21, with Eld. A. I. Mow presiding. The following officers were elected for the coming year: Bro. A. I. Mow, elder; Sister Susie Mow, church clerk; Brethren Floyd Lyon and D. J. Montgomery, Sunday-school superintendents; Sister Susie Mow, Christian Workers' president; the writer, church correspondent. This was the first meeting held since Oct. 6, on account of the influenza. We expect to begin our regular meetings Dec. 29, when Eld. A. Flory is to remain with us as pastor for the coming year, and we look forward to a prosperous year. On account of the epidemic, our revival, which was to be held by Bro. B. J. Fike in January, will be postponed indefinitely.—Arde Lyon, Moscow, Idaho, Dec. 31.

ILLINOIS

Allison Prairie church met in council Dec. 28, with our elder in charge. Bro. N. H. Miller was reelected as elder for another year. Sunday-school and church officers were elected for the year, with the writer as superintendent of Sunday-school and also on one of the church trustees. Sister Miller was elected Christian Workers' president. It was decided to have Bro. Burton hold our revival meeting in August. One has been reclaimed since the last report.—Ernest Fry, Lawrenceville, Ill., Jan. 1.

Coal Creek church (Canton House) has just passed through a very interesting and profitable series of meetings, conducted by Bro. J. Edwin Jarboe and wife, of Carlock. Sister Jarboe led the singing, which was appreciated very much. Thirty-three confessed Christ. The meetings closed Dec. 23 with a love feast. On account of influenzas a number of the members could not be present. During these meetings a baptistry was installed in the church and dedicated, Sunday morning, Dec. 22, eighteen were baptized, and on Monday evening, before the feast, seven others were baptized. We feel that the meetings were a real success.—Susie Yanaykel, Canton, Ill., Jan. 3.

Decatur.—Our people rejoice to have Eld. J. W. Orater, of Nappanee, Ind., with us as pastor. He arrived Jan. 3, and immediately took up the work which had suffered somewhat in not having any one in charge since last fall, when Eld. J. W. Lear and wife left us to attend school. In spite of our handicap, however, several precious souls have cast their lot with us during the interim,—one lady especially being marvelously led to our faith and practice through earnest prayer and a desire, on her part, to find a people who "earnestly contend" for the whole "faith once delivered to the saints." Eld. W. T. Heckman, of Cerro Gordo, filled our pulpit in a commendable manner for the past few months, supplying the speaker when he himself was unable to be present. Bro. Heckman presided at our members' meeting, at which time workers were appointed for various offices during 1919. We are glad for the presence of these in our midst who recently retired from active rural life. We extend a hearty welcome to any of our brethren and sisters in locate with us, and enjoy the hallowed associations of Christian service in our city.—Orley Glen Davis, 251 East Olive Street, Decatur, Ill., Jan. 7.

Dixon church met in regular business meeting on Monday evening, Dec. 30, Eld. John Heckman presiding. One letter of membership was received. Bro. Heckman was reelected as elder, and Mrs. Thos. McWethy as Sunday-school superintendent for the coming year. We held services on Thanksgiving Day, and had a basket dinner at the church. An offering of $34 was lifted for the General Mission Board. A small box of provisions and some cash were sent to the Chicago mission. The Sunday-school pupils gave an interesting program on Sunday evening prior to Christmas. At this time a Christmas offering was lifted, amounting to $13.41 which, with the birthday offerings of $12.50, was sent to the Relief and Reconstruction Committee.—Mrs. Ella M. Johnson, 215 Madison Avenue, Dixon, Ill., Jan. 3.

Hickory Grove.—There are only a few members here, but Sister Canfield and myself have been pinced here by the Mission Board, to do the best we can to build up the church. They tell us it was formerly a strong congregation and our only hope is that we may do so again. Our present Sunday-school force is such that we must use some teachers of other denominations. We regret very much that, on account of failing health, Sister Crouse can not continue her work in the Sunday-school. Our members have purchased a parsonage about one and a half miles from the church and paid about one-third of the purchase price. Our neighbors are helping to pay for it, too, which shows that the people have a mind to work. Sister Canfield and I both received some very substantial Christmas gifts from our Sunday-school classes, which were appreciated very much. We crave the prayers of the churches that our work here may be crowned with success, and much with the many that need him.—G. G. Canfield, Mt. Carroll, Ill., Jan. 8.

Kaskaskia.—Influenza has taken one from our midst,—Sister Pearl Taylor. After eleven weeks we are glad to be permitted to go to the house of the Lord again. A collection was taken for the Armenian and Syrian Relief.—Edith Engleton, Beecher City, Ill., Jan. 7.

West Branch church met in council Jan. 2, with Eld. S. S. Plum presiding. One letter was granted. Officers for the coming year were elected, with Bro. H. Crodell as elder-in-charge and the Sunday-school. The Christian Workers' officers are the same as last year. Bro. S. S. Plum was elected as elder and pastor for another year. We also elected a Missionary Committee. Our evening meetings were discontinued for the present. None have been taken from our number by influenza, for which we are thankful.—Mary Fry, Polo, Ill., Jan. 4.

INDIANA

Bauco church met in council Jan. 4, with Eld. H. M. Schwalm presiding. Brethren Harvey Schwalm, Hiram Rooss and Wm. Hess assisted. Two deacons and three elders were elected for 1919. Bro. C. C. Kindy, of Naperville, Ill., was chosen elder and pastor, to take charge in March. Bro. Weybright and Sister Emley were chosen superintendents; Sister Rosella Shock, "Messenger" agent; Sister Grace Hummert, "Messenger" correspondent; Sister Rosella Shock, Christian Workers' president. Our Sunday-school and church attendance has not been what we would like, on account of the influenza. The last was on the three weeks we are having services again. Our Christmas exercises were postponed. We took an offering of $21.85 for the Armenian and Syrian Relief. Our Sunday-school decided to support a French orphan child. Some of our Sunday-school boys have reclassified. Camp, and others are expected soon. Our missionary, home department and Aid Society meetings are all busy.—Mrs. J. B. Bailey, Huntington, Ind., Jan. 6.

Copper Creek church began a series of meetings Dec. 14, with Bro. Walter Gibson, of Goshen, Ind., as evangelist. The church has been built up and strengthened. The song service, in charge of Bro. Riley Kendall, of Topeka, Ind., was enjoyed by all. Five were baptized, members received, and Jan. 5 arrangements were made for Brethren Olson and Kendall to return, and begin another series of meetings June 1. We expect to hold the meetings in a tent, as our house is too small to accommodate the people.—Sherman Kendall, Bennetts Switch, Ind., Jan. 8.

Elkhart Valley church met in council Dec. 28. Bro. Frank Kreider was again chosen elder. Other officers were also elected. We are starting the year with new zeal, endeavoring to give God our best.—Mary Ellen Scott, Elkhart, Ind., Jan. 4.

Indianapolis church met in quarterly council Jan. 4. Owing to the extremely cold weather, our elder, Bro. W. Carl Barlek, of Muncie, Ind., could not be with us. Matters pertaining to the development of the church were discussed at length. Since our last report two of our Sunday-school scholars have been received into the church by baptism. Five letters have also been received. Owing to the influenza, our church was closed for several Sundays, which has had a bad effect on our attendance. The Sunday-school raised a special offering on Christmas Sunday, which amounted to $50.05. This is to go for the Armenian and Syrian Relief.—J. J. Kintner, 30 N. Holmes Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 6.

Killbuck church met in council Dec. 21, with Eld. V. B. Browning in charge. Officers were elected for the next six months, with Bro. Gussie Lechgton, superintendent at Sunday-school, and Bro. Chester Garner, president of Christian Workers' Society. It was decided to appoint a committee to secure a resident elder for this congregation. Our Mission Study Class is doing good work, with Bro. Ira T. Hiatt in charge.—H. E. Millspaugh, Muncie, Ind., Jan. 7.

Loon Creek church met in council Jan. 4, with Eld. D. W. Paul presiding. Two letters were granted and two received. Bro. Samuel Funderburg was reelected Sunday-school superintendent and also church treasurer. Our pastor, Bro. R. D. Hirt, and family, have moved here and are ready to take up the work. Owing to influenza, we had to dismiss services for several weeks, but are now having them regularly. We are hoping to see good results from the work during the coming year.—Miss Hoover, Huntington, Ind., Jan. 8.

Logansport church met in council Dec. 26. Officers were elected for the new year, with Sister Bertha Oberlin, clerk; Bro. Harry Murphy, Sunday-school superintendent.—Dora Hirt, Logansport, Ind., Jan. 2.

Maple Grove church met in council Jan. 4, with Bro. Neff presiding. Officers were elected for the new year as follows: Bro. Rollo Neff, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. James Peters, Christian Workers' president; Bro. Manly Dexter, elder. Three letters were granted and two were received. The quarterly collection was $59.20. We have made new resolutions to work and obey the Master as he can bring. Since most of the world is at peace, we should rejoice.—J. Galen Whitehead, New Paris, Ind., Jan. 4

Mexico.—After having our church closed for three months on account of influenza, we reopened for Sunday-school and preaching services Dec. 29. Roughly speaking, a number of people in this community, no fatalities have occurred in our congregation. On account of a few cases of scarlet fever, and also influenza, our services are not very well attended as yet, but we feel the joy of once more meeting in the Lord's house was evidenced by all present.—Bertha I. Fisher, Mexico, Ind., Jan. 1.

Middlebury church met in council Dec. 27, with Eld. J. H. Fike presiding. One letter was received. The deacons gave a favorable report of the quarterly visit. A number of good suggestions were made for the spiritual growth and development of the church. We decided to hold our spring communion May 31, to be preceded by revival meetings. We elected our officers for church and Sunday-school; also Christian Workers'' Meeting. Bro. J. H. Fike was reelected elder; Elmer Kaufman, superintendent for Sunday-school; Clarence Troyer, president of Christian Workers' Meeting. Dec. 29 we had a good attendance at Sunday-school and church. We elected our teachers for Sunday-school. Afterward the children gave a short Christmas program. The offering for Armenian and Syrian Relief was $30.—Mrs. Desale Hochstetler, Middlebury, Ind., Jan. 6.

New Paris.—On Thanksgiving Day Bro. David Metzler, of Nappanee, gave us an inspiring sermon. Our missionary offering for that day was $72. We reorganized the Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Society, with Bro. Mervin Mishler superintendent and Bro. Ildon Evans, president. A Christmas program was given by the Sunday-school Dec. 22. An offering of $41 was lifted for Armenian and Syrian Relief, and $300 for World-wide Missions. Dec. 25 Sister Ida Fields gave a reading: "The Prince of the House of David." Jan. 2 we held our first members' meeting, with Eld. Chas. Arnold presiding. Two letters were received. Bro. Eldon Evans was chosen church historian. We decided to have a home coming and a good public roll in our Sunday-school.—Levi Arnold, New Paris, Ind., Jan. 7.

Plevna church met in council Dec. 28, with Eld. Elsworth Weimer presiding. Our pastor was reelected as elder for the coming year. We reorganized our Sunday-school with Bro. Earl Kendall as superintendent. Our Thanksgiving offering was $16.68 for General Missions.—Tena Smith, Kokomo, Ind., Jan. 6.

Pyrmont.—We met in council Dec. 14, with Bro. D. L. Barnhart presiding. Brethren Floyd Smeltzer and Ben Metzger were elected superintendents. The writer was chosen correspondent. Our Sunday-school has not been very well attended on account of influenza. Many of our members have been ill, but we rejoice in the fact that all have been spared. Dec. 29 an offering of $100 was lifted for Armenian and Syrian Relief.—Mrs. Claude Cripe, Flora, Ind., Jan. 6.

Rossville.—The influenza epidemic has brought sorrow to many homes and several have been taken from our midst. The ban was lifted Dec. 28, and we are having Sunday-school and preaching services again. We were obliged to cancel our Bible Institute and series of meetings. We also held our quarterly council, with Eld. W. L. Hutcher presiding. Three letters were received and one was granted. All officers were elected for the coming year, with Bro. Amos Cripe, clerk; Bro. Jesse Bydley, pastor; Bro. Ira Tryton, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Floyd Wagoner, Christian Workers' president; Sister Lillian Hufford, church correspondent.—Ella Hutcher, Rossville, Ind., Jan. 0.

IOWA

Greene.—We have not held services for six weeks on account of the influenza. Several of our number have been taken by death. Many others have been very ill, but have recovered. We are hoping it may be possible for us soon to begin services again. Our Sunday-school received the banner for having the largest enrollment of new members of the schools of the District during the third quarter of 1918. Our home department has been self-supporting the last year and, in addition, gave $10.50 to missions.—Dista A. Pyle, Greene, Iowa, Jan. 8.

Salem.—Since our last report we have had a feast of spiritual things. Our District Meeting convened Sept. 18, 19 and 20, and was followed by a ten days' Bible Institute, conducted by Bro. E. B. Hoff, of Chicago. There were ten sessions a day. On Thanksgiving Day we planned for services, but the day being very stormy, our services were held on the following Sunday. An offering of $60.20 was taken for the Bible Missions Fund. Our services during the year have been hindered very much on account of the influenza. We held our council Dec. 4. The outlook for the future is bright. Brother and Sister Wagner are better acquainted with the work now, and have consented to remain another year. Sister Mettie Caskey was chosen as Sunday-school superintendent. Two letters of membership were received. We look forward to the homecoming of two of our Sunday-school boys, Bros. Ross Caskey and Bro. Christie Sterling, both stationed at Camp Dodge, Iowa.—Mrs. Minnie Wray, Prescott, Iowa, Jan. 4.

KANSAS

Notice to the Churches of Southwestern Kansas and Southeastern Oklahoma.—There will be a short District Meeting held at Hutchinson April 20-28. Saturday, 2 P. M., Elders' Meeting; Sunday, 9 A. M., Sunday-school Meeting; 1:30, Ministerial Meeting; 7 P. M., Missionary Meeting. Monday, Business Meeting for the District. Program Committee to announce program later.—J. E. Crist, Moderator; O. H. Feller, Clerk.

Omawkie church met in council Dec. 28. Sunday-school and Christian Workers' officers were elected, with Bro. Guy Bramwell, clerk; Bro. Roy Bramwell, Sunday-school superintendent; Sister Pearl Smith, Christian Workers' president. Our services were closed from Nov. 10 to Dec. 22, on account of the epidemic. It is all stamped out now and we had no deaths in our church or neighborhood. We certainly rejice to have services again. Dec. 29 we had a short program, after which all the Sunday-school scholars were given a treat. A collection of $43.83 was taken for Armenian and Syrian Relief.—Ella Statler, Ozawkie, Kans., Jan. 6.

White Rock church met in council Dec. 30, with Bro. S. L. Myers presiding. Election of officers was held for the year. Bro. S. L. Myers was reelected elder. Sunday-school officers were also elected, with Bro. Geo. Baringer, superintendent. On account of influenza, the White Rock congregation had no meetings for four weeks.—Irene Shuler, Lovewell, Kans., Dec. 30.

MARYLAND

Meadow Branch.—Dec. 29 the Junior Christian Workers of this congregation rendered a splendid Christmas program in the Westminster church. The Scripture readings, recitations and special songs were pretty, both in costume and delivery. The attendance was exceptionally large. Unusual offerings have been lifted by this congregation for Relief and Reconstruction Work. So far the amount raised is more than $700, which, with additional donations, will later be forwarded to the General Mission Board. Brethren Garner and Nail were reelected Sunday-school superintendents at Meadow Branch and Bro. Harry Yingling at Westminster. Our next love feast is set for May 17.—W. E. Roop, Westminster, Md., Jan. 4.

Monocacy congregation met in council in the Thurmont house Jan. 4. Eld. T. S. Fike presided, assisted by Bro. Walter Thomas. Bro. Arthur Rice was elected to the ministry, and will be installed in the near future. Our Sunday-school will be held March 29.—Allen D. Hoover, Graceham, Md., Jan. 6.

MICHIGAN

Homestrad.—Jan. 2 friends and members of the church, to the number af twenty-one, took possession of the parsonage for a while. The good 'women got busy and soon a bountiful dinner was ready. Even the pantry shelves were overflowed, but were well filled. After dinner we returned to the sittiog-room. First we had some selected readings. Then we listened to the testimonies which made us feel that we were sitting in heavenly places. We also had prayer, followed by song. Then good-bye were said,—our friends wishing us a prosperous and happy New Year in our work here. May God bless them, and may we help them to a deeper consecration of heart and enlist others under the banner of the King. We ask the "Messenger" family to remember in prayer the little band of members here at Homestead.—A. B. Hollinger, Benzonia, Mich., Jan. 5.

Zion congregation met in council Jan. 4, with Eld. Samuel Bowser presiding. Officers for 1919 are as follows: Elder, Bro. S. Bowser; Sunday-school superintendent, Bro. M. L. Mentz; Christian Workers' president, Sister Ola Bowman; "Messenger" agent, Bro. Ira Bowman; correspondent, the writer. On account of the epidemic, our Sunday-school could not render a program for either Christmas or New Year's Day.—Neva R. Mentz, Prescott, Mich., Jan. 6.

MINNESOTA

Monticello.—Dec. 15 we were again permitted to open our church doors, after seven weeks' quarantine. A Thanksgiving service was held in the M. E. church that evening. New Year's Day was spent in members' meeting, which should have convened in December. Considerable business was transacted and the meeting was enjoyable. The church adopted the Missionary Forward Movement. Eight letters were granted and five received. Jan. 5 Bro. E. H. Stauffer, of Rock Lake, N. Dak., gave an address. At noon a basket dinner was served in the basement. The afternoon was spent in Sunday-school workers' meeting. Plans were discussed and adopted for making the standard of the Sunday-school higher. The influenza epidemic has broken out again, and as this writing the public schools are closed for another two weeks.—Mrs. W. S. Sink, Monticello, Minn., Jan. 7.

MISSOURI

Oak Grove.—Bro. J. W. Deeter, of McPherson, Kans., who is working in the interest of the Sunday-school Board, began a series of lectures on Sunday-school problems in our church Dec. 18. During the week that followed, we organized the home department and the cradle roll. One young people's class was also organized. A teachers' training class was started with an enrollment of twelve. Bro. A. W. Adkins was chosen as teacher. A survey of our community was made, which revealed the fact that there is a possibility of multiplying our enrollment by 2. On an offering of $18.30 we talked to the Brethren in his work. Dec. 28 we met in council. Bro. A. W. Adkins was appointed agent for the Mutual Aid Society, and the writer, correspondent. On account of influenza, our series of meetings has been postponed.—May Killingsworth, Collins, Mo., Jan. 6.

MONTANA

Grandview.—A number of members have had the influenza and some homes have been visited by death. The epidemic, apparently, has not yet run its course. We pray the kind Father to prepare us all to meet whatever seems best.—Katie E. Keller, Froid, Mont., Jan. 4.

NEBRASKA

Omaha.—First Church of the Brethren met Dec. 31, at 8 o'clock, in regular council. Eld. L. L. Meek, of Octavia, presiding. Officers for the coming year were elected: Elder, L. L. Meek; Sunday-school superintendent, J. W. Ross; "Messenger" correspondent, Miss Madge Bucebard, 4016 N. Thirty-fifth Street. As a means of meeting our current expenses it was decided that hereafter each member, receiving an income, pay three per cent from any check into the church treasury. Gifts were "strictly Biblical, "as the Lord hath prospered." It was also decided, that, owing to the influenza conditions still prevailing, the Omaha church should not attempt to have the District Meeting, owing to the difficulty of lodging the people; also in view of the fact of changing pastors in the spring. After the business session a very pleasant social and watch meeting was held—M. R. Weaver, 2615 North Twenty-second Street, Omaha, Nebr., Jan. 6.

South Loup.—We have just closed a two weeks' series of meetings, conducted by Bro. J. Perry Prather, of McPherson, Kans. Although sickness and cold weather were a hindrance, those who could attend the meetings were built up spiritually. We were sorry Bro. Prather could not be with us longer.—Susie McLellan, Litchfield, Nebr., Jan. 5.

NEW JERSEY

Amwell.—Our revival meetings were postponed, on account of the influenza, from Oct. 27 to Dec. 8. They continued two weeks, Our pastor, Bro. Horace, was assisted by Bro. C. F. McKee, of Oaks, Pa. The meetings were very helpful and we hope that some good has been done—Mrs. Hannah D. Hoffman, Dunellen, N. J., Jan. 6.

NORTH DAKOTA

Kenmare church met in council, with Eld. D. M. Shorb presiding. Two letters were granted. The various reports of the year's work were read and accepted. Church and Sunday-school officers were elected for 1919, with Bro. Ira Michael, elder, and Sister Ina Mitchell, superintendent of the Sunday-school. Bro. Shorb preached an inspiring sermon on Sunday morning, Dec. 29. Sunday evening being exceedingly stormy, no services were held. We held services on Thanksgiving Day, and lifted an offering for general missions.—Elsie Larsen, Bowbells, N. Dak., Dec. 30.

OHIO

Announcement.—The first Sunday of September the writer began meetings in what is known as the Plevna church, located in Howard County, Ind. The interest was good throughout. The first Thursday in October I began meetings in the Union Center church, Ind. After preaching four sermons, influenza broke out and the meetings closed. The second week of November I began meetings in the Turkey Creek church, Ind. The interest grew nicely until the second week, when influenza broke out there also. One had made the good choice and the meetings closed. On account of influenzo some meetings have been postponed until another year, some indefinitely, so that now I am in a position to serve any church that wants want my services. The docket is clear until late spring. Surely there is need of earnest effort to save the lost, to redeem the time, because the days are evil.—Reuben Shroyer, North Canton, Ohio, Jan. 1.

Bradford church met in council Dec. 11, with Eld. J. M. Stayer presiding. Officers for 1919 were chosen as follows: Sunday-school superintendent, Orn Stover; church clerk, Harry Royer; "Messenger" agent, Laura Reiff; church correspondent, the writer. On account of the influenza, our revival meeting, which was to have been held in the fall, was postponed indefinitely.—Prudence Eby, Bradford, Ohio, Jan. 4.

Eversole.—Our congregation at present has a prosperous outlook and is in splendid working condition. Sunday-school has been making rapid strides in both attendance and collection. Eld. Wm. Minnich, of Union, Ohio, has had charge of this congregation for the last four years, and his efforts have been much appreciated. He also has charge of a large congregation.—Salem, —and he felt he could not give up the time that we needed or that he desired to give. For this reason he requested to be relieved. Bro. John Stout, a young elder of our congregation, has been elected to take charge of the work here for two years. We also elected Sunday-school officers, with Bro. Harvey Landis, superintendent. Church officers were also elected. Bro. Parker Colin is our trustee. On Christmas Day Eld. J. O. Christ gave us a splendid discourse.—Clare Erbaugh, New Lebanon, Ohio, Jan. 1.

Harris Creek church is once more enjoying regular Sunday services after being without them for nine weeks because of the influenzo epidemic. We met in council Jan. 4, with Eld. Chas. Flory presiding. Four letters were received and two were granted. The pastoral committee reported having secured Bro. D. G. Berkebile for the next fourteen months. Officers for the year were elected, with Bro. Roy Waggoner as Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Henry Dollinger, church clerk; Sister Cassel, "Messenger" agent; the writer, correspondent. On Sunday a collection of $206.30 was taken for the Armenian and Syrian Relief. Of this amount $20 was given by the Sisters' Aid Society, $10 by the Danner Class of Juniors, and $51.25 by the Good Cheer Class.—Mrs. H. C. Dollinger, Ashland, Ohio, Jan. 6.

Ross church met in council Jan. 4, with Eld. Jas. A. Guthrie presiding. Church and Sunday-school officers were elected, with Bro. Ahron Coil as superintendent. Bro. Guthrie was retained as elder for another year. The writer was chosen "Messenger" correspondent. Bro. A. D. Wolfe is our delegate in District Meeting. We have arranged with Bro. B. F. Petry, of Eaton, Ohio, for a series of meetings in May. We are also planning to secure a song leader, to give us instructions for two weeks preceding the meetings.—Mrs. Gertrude Guthrie, Spencerville, Ohio, Jan. 4.

Sand Ridge.—We reorganized our Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Society for the coming year with Bro. W. F. Rohrer, superintendent, and Sister Ida Rohrer, secretary. We are having interesting Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meetings, although the attendance is not large on account of influenza. On Sunday, Jan. 5, we took an offering for the Armenian and Syrian Relief.—L. H. Prowant, Hamler, Ohio, Jan. 6.

Upper Twin church met in council, with Eld. Aaron Brubaker in charge. Two letters were received. We decided not to close regular services on account of the epidemic unless requested to do so by the Board of Health. The series of meetings at Wheatville has been deferred for the present. A committee was appointed to look into the care of our cemetery regarding the assistance to the Brethren Home. A collection for the poor fund was taken, and a report of this fund was read and accepted.—Mrs. A. M. Rinehart, Eaton, Ohio, Jan. 4.

West Milton.—Again our church enjoyed a gracious outpouring of favor from our Heavenly Father on the occasion of the installation, or consecration, services which were held Jan. 5. These impressive and very helpful services were conducted by Eld. A. Plasaing, of Dayton, Ohio. A. W. Vaniman's address delivered the address and charge to the officers and teachers of the Sunday-school. Following this service, Bro. Fidler preached an excellent sermon on "The Promise of the Father." In the evening, after a most spiritual song service, the ordinances were assisted by Prof. J. A. Atkins, of Cincinnati, Bro. Blessing preached one of his best sermons on the subject of the New Year.—J. Henry Showalter, West Milton, Ohio, Jan. 6.

PENNSYLVANIA

Chickies church met in council Jan. 1, with Elders Henry S. Zug, Samuel B. Fahnestock, Jr., Harper and Samuel S. Eshelman present. Officers for the different church activities were elected as follows: Bro. Samuel S. Eshelman, elder in charge for three years; Morris B. Zug, superintendent; assistant superintendent of Chickies Hill Sunday-school; S. N. Becker, of Mt. Home Sunday-school; B. G. Stauffer, president of Christian Workers' Society; Emma Zug, President of Sisters' Aid Society. We expect to start a series of meetings in the Hope house Feb. 1, fulfilling the promise of Thos. Patrick, of Dauphin County, to conduct the same.—P. C. Gelb, Manheim, Pa., Jan. 4.

Codorus church met in council in New Day's Day, with Eld. J. Y. Brillhart presiding. Bro. S. B. Myers was reelected to the eldership and with his wife duly installed. Elders J. A. Long and E. S. Miller assisted. We intend to hold two love feasts in the spring,—one at the Fairview house May 11, the other at the Codorus home May 25. Bro. S. K. Hartman was reappointed church trustee.—S. C. Godfrey, Red Lion, Pa., Jan. 2.

Georges Creek.—Fairview church met in council Dec. 28, with Eld. Jasper Bornthouse presiding. We elected the following officers for 1919: Bro. C. M. Driver, elder; Brethren Ira Merryman and F. F. Durr, Sunday-school superintendents; Bro. J. W. Deholt, Christian Workers' president; Bro. F. F. Durr, church correspondent. A splendid Christmas program was ren-

SISTERS' AID SOCIETIES

MUNCIE, IND.—Report of the Sisters' Aid Society of the Killbuck church, Antioch house: We held fourteen meetings during the year. We did Red Cross work, made sun-bonnets, prayer coverings, served one-half day on children's clothes and served lunch at one sale. We donated $5 to the minister's wife who was with us in our revival; $3 to the Mary Quister Hospital; gave 1 pair of blankets to the Old Folks' Home; made 2 comforts and gave $30 to the Armenian and Syrian Relief Fund. Notes From Our Correspondents dered and all were remembered with the usual sweetmeats. A collection of $74.75 was taken for Armenian and Syrian Relief. The Sunday-school added $30, making a total of $104.75.—Grace Merryman, Masontown, Pa., Jan. 7.

Hanover church met in council Jan. 1, with Eld. Daniel Bowser presiding. Church and Sunday-school officers were elected, with Bro. Daniel T. Forry, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Jacob E. Myers, president of the Christian Workers' Society; the writer, correspondent. Two letters were granted. We decided to hold our love feast on Sunday, May 4. A constitution and by-laws for the government of the Christian Workers' Society were adopted. Since our last report our Sunday-school rendered an interesting Christmas program and gave $35 for Armenian and Syrian Relief.—Mary A. Rhinehart, Hanover, Pa., Jan. 6.

Ligonier church opened for services Dec. 15, after being closed for eight weeks on account of the influenza epidemic. Most of our number were sick, but all recovered. Bro. A. Klein Wolford, a young minister from Santa Ana, Cal., preached for us in the morning, and Bro. J. W. Sanner in the evening. Dec. 29 two young people were baptized after services.—Opal Wolford Leonard, Ligonier, Pa., Jan. 2.

Lower Conewago congregation met in council at the Wolgamuth house Nov. 23, with Eld. O. W. Cook presiding. We had a very pleasant meeting in discussing many questions concerning the welfare of the church. We decided we would expend both in home and foreign missions. One trustee was elected for the Wolgamuth house.—R. D. Cook, Dillsburg, Pa., Jan. 1.

New Enterprise.—Our series of meetings, conducted by Bro. C. D. Bonsack, were very well attended, considering health conditions. At the end of two weeks we closed with eleven accessions by baptism. We also held our love feast, which had been postponed since Nov. 5. Dec. 27 our Sunday-school successfully rendered a Christmas program. The church was filled. An offering of $27.91 was taken for the Armenian and Syrian Relief. The school also desired the money that would have been expended for Christmas candy to be donated to the same work. This amounted to $45; individual organized classes gave $15.32, making a total of $88.23. The quarterly members' meeting was held Jan. 4, with Eld. D. T. Detwiler presiding. Our local ministers were appointed a committee to secure an evangelist to conduct our meetings in the fall. Our pastor, Bro. H. Stover Kulp, who wishes to take up school-work in the fall, preparatory to his work in the mission field, has asked to be relieved. Sunday-school officers were elected, with Bro. Oscar Beach as superintendent.—Margaret Replogle, New Enterprise, Pa., Jan. 4.

Pittsburgh.—We held our Christmas exercises Dec. 22. The program was very well rendered to a good-sized audience. We used the "White Gift" program, which brought a large number of useful gifts for the needy families of the city. Our offering amounted to about $63. The work here is progressing slowly and we are looking forward to a year of good things.—E. H. Hertzler, Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 2.

Roaring Spring.—Dec. 8 we held our Rally Day services. Brother and Sister Galen B. Royer were with us and gave some very interesting and instructive addresses. Dec. 20 we met in council, with Bro. M. J. Weaver presiding. At this meeting we adopted a constitution and elected officers of the church and auxiliaries. Our Sunday-school department gave a very interesting Christmas program, under the supervision of our primary superintendent, Sister Elizabeth Barnett. The chorus also rendered some appropriate selections. We will meet in council Jan. 30, to elect officers for 1919, and to make plans for the new year. The church has purchased a parsonage adjoining the church grounds, and in the spring will secure possession of the same.—Lena M. Hoover, Roaring Spring, Pa., Jan. 6.

Rummel church having been closed on account of influenza since Oct. 6, with the exception of one Sunday (Nov. 24), had the privilege of holding our love feast Dec. 7. We assembled in council Dec. 30. Our pastor, Bro. H. B. Heisey, is retained. Two letters were granted. Bro. Jas. E. Murphy was reelected Sunday-school superintendent. Other church and Sunday-school officers were elected. Our treasurer reported a balance of $300 in the treasury, although we incurred the additional expense of equipping the parsonage with electric lights and a heating system.—Mrs. Jas. E. Murphy, Rummel, Pa., Dec. 31.

Scalp Level congregation, which includes Windber and Scalp Level, met in council Dec. 30th. Officers and committees were elected for the coming year, with Bro. J. H. Lehman as "Messenger" agent, and Sister Harvey Knavel and the writer as correspondig secretaries. Bro. H. S. Replogle, our pastor, was reelected for another year. A letter from Sister Grace Clapper was read. Brother and Sister Replogle were appointed to send a reply to Sister Clapper's message.—Amy Manges, Scalp Level, Pa., Jan. 1.

Spring Grove church met in council Dec. 29. Eld. I. W. Taylor presided. Sunday-school officers were elected for the coming year, with Bro. Frank Weldas superintendent. Our delegate to Annual Meeting is Eld. I. W. Taylor; to District Meeting, Bro. Amos M. Martin and the writer. Our series of meetings, which was to be held in Meyersville church, was canceled for the winter, on account of the epidemic. We elected Bro. I. W. Taylor as elder for a term of three years.—Florence L. Mobler, New Holland, Pa., Jan. 4.

Three-mile church, of the West Johnstown congregation, met in council Dec. 19, and elected officers for the coming year. Bro. Clyde M. Horst, elder in charge, presided. The following officers were elected: Bro. Arthur Rummel, clerk; Bro. Henry Hefacker, trustee for a term of three years; Brethren Geo. L. Peterson, Jacob S. Stutzman and Henry Hofecker, a committee to secure a pastor. It is also their duty to keep the pulpit supplied each Sunday until a pastor is secured. Two letters were granted. Bro. Louis Fritz has returned from Camp Lee, having been discharged from service. More of our boys are expected in the near future.—Mrs. Charles H. Stutzman, Johnstown, Pa., Jan. 6.

Walnut Grove.—We celebrated the birth of our Lord on Sunday evening, Dec. 22. Though the church had been closed for a number of weeks, the committee worked hard, and a very appropriate and interesting program was rendered, in connection with the White Gift service. An offering of over $250 was lifted for charitable and relief work. The Teacher-training Class in the first Standard Course graduated with an appropriate service Dec. 8. Another class is in progress now. Seal Course classes, hindered by the influenza epidemic, are planning to begin work again. Dec. 29 a financial rally, in the interest of the new church debt, was held. The Sunday-school offering amounted to over $650.—Elizabeth W. Howe, Johnstown, Pa., Jan. 6.

West Conestoga congregation has closed a very interesting and helpful series of meetings, conducted by Bro. H. B. Yoder, of Lancaster, Pa. He preached twenty-six sermons in all. Three were baptized the first day of the New Year. We hope there may be still more.—A. O. Fahnestock, Lititz, Pa., Jan. 2.

VIRGINIA

Basic.—It is with great joy that I send this report, as we have been enjoying many rich blessings. Dec. 1 Bro. A. S. Thomas began a series of meetings to continue for two weeks, after which the writer took charge. There were sixty-nine confessions; thirty-six have been received and twenty-five await baptism. Dec. 27 we met in council and elected our church and Sunday-school officers. We decided to hold our love feast Feb. 1, and would be very glad to have our neighboring brethren come. The work here is very encouraging. May the Lord bless his work and workers everywhere.—L. S. Yoder, Basic, Va., Dec. 29.

Elk Run church met in council Jan. 4, with Eld. W. H. Zigler presiding. Three letters were granted. Bro. Caleb Smith was appointed "Messenger" correspondent. Some repair work is being done on the church, preparatory to District Meeting, to which we are looking forward the coming spring. Our Sunday-school was reorganized with Bro. E. D. Smith as superintendent.—Carrie V. Huffer, Staunton, Va., Jan. 7.

Greenmount.—After having been without services for five weeks, we were glad for the privilege of again assembling together. Nov. 15 we met in council. Superintendents of the different schools in the congregation were chosen, with Bro. W. F. Carter over the Greenmount school. Dec. 29 Greenmount church again met in council, with Eld. J. W. Wampler presiding. One letter of membership was granted. Committees were appointed and church officers elected. Bro. D. C. Myers was chosen Christian Workers' president and Sister Effie Sims correspondent for the Mt. Zion church.—Annie Miller, Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 2.

Harrisonburg.—Bro. E. S. Coffman came to us Sept. 1, as pastor of the Bridgewater church. The work is progressing nicely, in spite of the epidemic. Almost every family has been afflicted by the disease. Through the help and inspiration of Bro. Coffman we raised more than $700 toward the debt on the Sunday-school annex. Our Christmas program was rendered on the morning of Dec. 29. An offering of $15 was taken for Armenian and Syrian Relief. We met in council Jan. 3. Officers were elected, with Bro. D. L. Thomas as elder, and Bro. E. S. Roller, Sunday-school superintendent.—Mary Blosser, Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 7.

Peters Creek church met in annual Thanksgiving service in the Peters Creek house; also in the Oak Grove house. After recounting the blessings of the year, an offering of $158 was taken for the General Mission Board, to help in raising the $350,000 asked for. We also had services Christmas Day. Bro. C. E. Eller preached. Bro. Eller impressed upon us the spirit of true worship and how that our gifts constitute a part of that worship. Dec. 26 our Christmas program was rendered. At our last council it was decided that our congregation establish a relief fund of $1,000, and the program a strong appeal was made by Bro. Levi Garst and an offering of $1,078 was lifted. The following Sunday, at the Oak Grove house, $212 was raised, making a total of $1,290. We expect more to be added to this fund. In addition to this our young people are giving half of their Christmas money for relief work.—Mildred Neff, Roanoke, Va., Dec. 31.

Schoolfield.—From Dec. 26 to 29 our elder, Bro. H. J. Woody, delivered a series of five sermons. We met in council Dec. 28. Bro. Woody was elected as elder for 1919, and Bro. A. T. Prather, superintendent of Sunday-school. We had a New Year's service Jan. 1, conducted by the writer. At this service one confessed Christ.—W. H. Swift, Schoolfield, Va., Jan. 2.

WASHINGTON

Loomis church met in council Dec. 27, at the Britain Flat schoolhouse. Our services here all been closed for about eight weeks because of the influenza epidemic. Having had no service on Thanksgiving Day, we recently took our offering for World Relief, which amounted to $15.50. Two letters were received. Bro. Geo. Shamberger was elected as elder in charge, with our other four elders as his assistants. Bro. C. E. Holmes was reelected clerk. The building of our churchhouse has been deferred till the next council.—Mrs. Alice Rothrock, Tounaket, Wash., Jan. 4.

Wenatchee Park church met in council Dec. 21, and elected officers for the coming year. Bro. A. B. Peters was present to assist. Sister J. Weimer was elected Sunday-school superintendent; the writer, elder in charge and "Messenger" correspondent. Dec. 23 Bro. Warren Slabaugh commenced a Bible Institute, which continued until Dec. 31. The attendance was not large, on account of sickness being present, but I feel much benefited by having Bro. Slabaugh with us. He presented the truth in such a forceful manner that it made some very lasting impressions.—C. F. Bupel, Plain, Wash., Jan. 2.

WEST VIRGINIA

German Settlement.—Dec. 22 we began our twelfth Annual Bible Institute, which continued until Dec. 29. Eld. I. N. H. Beahm gave us a thirty-five minute talk each morning on "The Acts of the Apostles." In the afternoon he gave us a forty-minute talk on "Sunday-school Pedagogy and Homiletics." He also preached each evening. Eld. Jesse Ziler assisted in the Book of James. Bro. J. C. Beahm and his two daughters were here to assist. Prof. Beahm led the singing during the week, and gave us several interesting talks on "Church Government." Sisters Ruth and Stella Beahm gave several readings. Bro. Oren Gorner and Prof. F. L. Malott assisted by giving talks. Other home workers also took part in the program. Two letters were received. Bro. J. C. Miller was installed the first ministry. The program for Dec. 29 consisted of a prayer and missionary program. These meetings have been very helpful to all.—Della Rudy, Salem, W. Va., Jan. 1.

Mt. Union church met in council at the Miles Hill house Dec. 28, and elected officers for the coming year, with the writer as elder and pastor; Bro. Jos. Hamilton, Sunday-school superintendent. It was decided to hold a Bible Term in the near future. Our church and Sunday-school are doing fairly well. Both attendance and interest are good. Bro. Wm. Hamilton and wife come on Christmas Eve, and we were very glad to have them with us. Bro. Hamilton preached on Sunday evening following. Bro. Francis Hamilton, wife and daughter, from Northeastern Ohio, are also here.—Solomon Bucklew, Morgantown, W. Va., Jan. 2.

WISCONSIN

Worden church met in council Dec. 31, with Bro. J. M. Myers presiding. Church and Sunday-school officers were elected, with Bro. Willard Henderson, Sunday-school superintendent, and Sister Mira Cripe, superintendent of Christian Workers' Society. Two letters were received. The writer was chosen correspondent and "Messenger" agent. On account of the epidemic we discontinued Sunday-school and preaching services for a time, but we are now meeting regularly, with renewed interest.—Melvin Turner, Stanley, Wis., Jan. 1.

Why We Are So Few

"But numbers are no mark
That men will right be found.
A few were saved in Noah's ark
While many millions drowned."

You remember the old hymn, don't you? At least the lines quoted above. They state the truth. But it is one of those truths which lend themselves so easily to selfish uses. The amount of pious laziness which these lines have soothed to sleep is beyond all estimate.

If we could really believe that this little product of the rhymester's art is an adequate explanation of our failure to achieve numerical success, we might take some just comfort from it. But who can believe this? Who will say that more consecration of our hearts and hands and purses to the progress of the Kingdom would not have yielded a much larger fruitage?

Is one hundred thousand the limit of our possibilities? Is that a charmed figure that for a generation past we could only say, when asked how many there were of us: "Oh, about a hundred thousand"? What magic is there in that number that we can not go beyond it?

None, but the "magic" of easy contentment with our own comfortable circumstances, and the "magic" of selfish unconcern about the rest of humankind. Let us be honest about this thing! It is no time now to quiet our guilty consciences with poetry. The proper mood is that of confession, humiliation and penitence, that God may forgive our slothfulness and use us from this time on in pushing the Kingdom FORWARD.

Religion and Pure Religion

JAMES tells us what pure religion is, but what would you say religion is, just religion, without any qualifying adjective? Here is a definition that may start you on a line of profitable thinking: "Religion is the reaction of the soul to the impulse of God."

Does that "reaction" bother you? The idea is that every human being feels somehow the impact of God upon his soul. God "speaks" to him in some way, perhaps in many ways. Now the thing the man does, or refuses to do, in response to the divine impulse within him,—his attitude, whatever it is,—that constitutes his "reaction" and that is his religion.

What is your reaction? What does the "impulse of God" cause you to do, or think, or feel? That is your religion. Have you examined it lately to see if it is "pure"?

Child Guidance and Mule "Drivance"

"I will instruct thee and teach thee in the way which thou shalt go: I will counsel thee with mine eye upon thee. Be ye not as the horse, or as the mule, which have no understanding" (Psa. 32: 8, 9).

ONE of our popular proverbs is: "Experience teaches a dear school, but fools will learn in no other." In our text, the Psalmist tells the same story from another point of view, so far as it relates to God's children, and his methods of dealing with them.

There are two pictures in this scripture. The first is that of the guidance of a child, with the parental eye always upon it, watching the child, to help it at the proper moment. The child in the home is, as a rule, never out of the mother's sight, always under her watchful eye. The child is uneasy when he loses consciousness of the mother's presence, and the mother is uneasy when she does not know where the child is.

Being thus in the constant presence of each other, the mother is able to counsel the child at every moment of need. At every new turn of events she can give the proper teaching and instruction. This is the picture of "child-guidance" which is suggested by the words: "I will counsel thee with mine eye upon thee."

Contrasted with this is the other picture of a horse or a mule, with a bit in his mouth and a bridle on his head,—jerked first this way and then that by a driver. It is a picture not of guidance, but of "drivance," if one may be permitted to use that term. It is the kind of management that a mule must have. And so, also, mulish dispositions among God's children must be handled in the same way.

God's preference, of course, is to deal with us always as with little children, and not as with mules or donkeys, which have to be driven with a stick or club here or there.

The same truth was expressed in a little different way to Saul of Tarsus, when the Lord met him and said to him: "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? It is hard for thee to kick against the goads." Evidently something was goading on Saul,—goading him in his conscience. And he, smarting under such goadings, was kicking at the goad,—thus hurting himself more than ever. But finally, Saul was willing to yield and say: "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" And ever afterwards he was very amenable to the Lord's guidance. Let us beware lest we, too, fail to respond to the gentle instruction of our Heavenly Father, and must suffer the rough handling of adversity to keep us in the path of duty and rectitude.

Standing on the Promises

THE value of a promise depends partly on the nature of the promise itself but chiefly on the nature of the one who makes it. In the case of those promises which Peter describes as "exceeding great and precious," we have been accustomed to think mainly of the first condition. And this condition is indeed abundantly fulfilled, since these promises involve "all things that pertain unto life and godliness."

But even such comprehensive promises would be valueless without the requisite ability and sincerity back of them. It is only when we think of this aspect of the matter that we begin to realize what it is that really makes God's promises so "precious." And as this realization grows upon us, we do not think so much about the promises as we do about the love and wisdom and power which the promises express.

Children like to exact promises of their parents and good parents like to promise good things to their children. But as the children grow older and become better acquainted with their parents, and understand the constant concern of their parents for their welfare, they are less anxious about striking bargains with them. They know they can trust their parents' love for them.

Standing on the promises of God is good. Standing on the character of God, as revealed in Jesus, is still better.

Congregations Changing Conference Decisions

A GOOD, faithful sister writes, asking if it is the right of a local congregation to change by vote the decisions of our General Conference. Reference is made to the fact that such action had been taken and that it is under contemplation by others. A very earnest request was made that the subject receive attention in our church paper.

There can be but one answer to this question. No congregation has a right to change or set aside a decision of our Annual Conference. Admit this right, and it at once destroys our form of church government, and not ours only but every other form of union in government. If a congregation has the right to change a decision of Conference, then the individual has the right to change decisions of the congregation, and individualism results. The story is told of a church in Scotland that fell into individualism. A good man and his faithful wife stood together for some time. Finally a doctrinal difference arose between them. After a lengthy discussion, the deacon said to his companion: "Weel, Janet, I am sure o' mesel, but I dinna ken aboot you!"

Our church has held, from the beginning, that the counsel of the Brotherhood, in Conference assembled, should be accepted by the entire membership. We have the best form of church government in the world. Our national government is based on the same lines. There is no ruling ecclesiasticism among us. Each congregation manages its own local affairs. It elects its own officials and has the right to determine the ordination of bishops. Each one elects delegates to represent them at District and Annual Conferences. The delegates to District Meetings elect members of the Standing Committee and these, with the delegates from the congregations, become the voting body in the Annual Meeting. If a query, after discussion by this body, receives a two-thirds vote of the delegates, it becomes the counsel and rule of the Brotherhood. Ours is essentially a representative, republican form of government. If we are to have a Christ union in our Christian Brotherhood, no better form of government could be adopted. And this means that we must give assent to the decisions of our Conference.

Suppose that, in our national government, some of the States were to assume the right to change and set aside the decisions of our National Congress, signed by the President, what would result? Anarchy, and the destruction of government. Once men fought for State rights, but were overcome, and now our Union is stronger than it has ever been in the history of the United States. If we want our church union to be strong, we must abide by the counsel of our General Conference.

A query, to pass legally, must first receive the assent of a local congregation and pass the District Meeting. It then goes to the Annual Meeting, where it is fully discussed and voted on. In the discussion of questions, full liberty is given, and sisters have the same right as the men, to speak. If the query, after full discussion, receives a two-thirds vote of the delegates, it passes; otherwise it is lost. If it passes, it becomes the rule of the Brotherhood.

As already indicated, for a local congregation to assume authority to change or set aside a decision of Conference, means the setting aside and breaking up of our form of church government. What is the use of holding an Annual Conference, paying out tens of thousands of dollars for railway and other expenses, having delegates assemble from all parts of the country, discuss and pass queries and then have them set aside by individuals and local congregations? If this sort of thing prevails, it can have but one ending,—the breaking up of our form of church government.

It is safe to say that this movement did not start in with congregations but with individuals. Some began setting aside Conference decisions that did not happen to suit them. Some leaders in the church did the same thing. If a decision did not please them, they ignored it. Here is an illustration: Conference wisely decided that no solicitation for money for church purposes be made by individuals. These calls should come through District and the General Mission Boards. Prior to this, the Brotherhood was flooded with individual solicitations for various purposes and some of these proved failures. A good, influential brother wanted a churchbouse in bis new neighborbood. This was a good desire and he should have followed the advice of Conference, but he ignored it and made a private solicitation. One brother received a letter from him, and sent him a sum of money; also a letter, calling his attention to the fact that he was violating a decision of Conference. His reply was: "Oh, this is only a very small matter." Since this leading brother assumed the right to violate a decision of Conference, others followed his example, and this has grown until we hear of such things to which our sister refers.

We repeat again, these considerations bring forcibly to the front the important question: "Are we to continue to hold Annual Conferences, spend large sums of money, discuss and pass upon queries, only to have them set aside by individuals and local congregations?" Will you consider this question carefully and prayerfully, and answer it in accord with the Gospel and in line with common sense and sound reason.

It would be a sad day for the Church of the Brethren to set aside her Annual Conferences. So much good is done in the fine, spiritual meetings, held these times, in connection with the Conference. It would be an irreparable loss to the church. Better let us, as individual members and local congregations, live up to the decisions, and if they do not suit us, let us bring up queries to have them changed. This is the only way in which we can successfully carry out our Gospel form of church government. D. L. M.

The Novelty in Life

In Luke 3: 23, according to the Revised Version, we read that Jesus was about thirty years old when he began to teach, or when be entered upon his public ministry. This was also the age of John the Baptist when he began his preaching in the wilderness.

In the New Testament no reason is given why the work of the Kingdom should be thus delayed. Not a few commentators suggest that, since thirty years was the age when the priests entered upon their official duties, that fact had some bearing on the action of John and Jesus. This age was reckoned by both the Greeks and the Jews as the period of full maturity of the mental and physical powers of men for either sacred or civil duties. As regards the law, it probably played no part in determining the time when the two men of prophecy should enter upon their missions. They were not priests, and, of course, were not governed by the regulations intended solely for the priesthood.

Nor do we think that time for mental and physical preparation cut any special figure. Jesus at twelve knew enough to distinguish himself among the Jewish doctors of the law. He was only a boy, and in a way he had boyish habits, and yet he was an intellectual marvel. However, at the age of twenty-one he was in a position to make a better impression on the people as a man, and this increased as he grew older. At the age of thirty he was looked upon as a well-matured man, a man among men and as such, capable of commanding the respect of men. Had he begun his preaching at the age of fifteen, he would have been looked upon as a boy, and the novelty of the situation would have attracted more attention, and would have drawn more people to his meetings than the doctrine he taught. Thirty was probably the psychological time for Jesus, as well as John, to make his mission known. Both were to do the work of men and not of boys. They went about their work as men,—and marvelous men, too.

If there were, in those days, people looking for the mere novelty in public work, Jesus made no special effort to gratify their curiosity. True, the masses marveled at the miracles performed, but the thinking men and women saw something more than curiosity in the wonders they beheld. Miracles were made to mean something, and this something was to prove that Jesus is the Christ, the real Son of God. What was done and said gave men and women a bigher conception of the man and his mission. The novelty was lost sight of and the real question to decide was whether Jesus is the Christ, and whether he taught the doctrine that God authorized him to teach. It was looking at things from a plane higher than that pertaining to the novelty.

In this age we are a novelty-loving people. Men and women will go for miles to listen to a sermon delivered by a man one hundred years old. It is not a question as to how well the man can preach, or what doctrine he may set forth. It is the age of the speaker that draws. It is the same of the fifteen-year-old boy, who, by chance, occupies the pulpit. As a rule, he is a better drawing card than the most profound preacher in the State. The girl of twelve, who feels impressed to preach, can almost empty the best churches in town and fill some out-of-the-way audience room. She may not know as much about the Bible as the most inefficient preacher in the community, but she can get a better hearing than all the ministers in town put together.

The time was when a woman preacher could easily fill the most spacious assembly hall to be had. Hundreds would go to church early, in order to be sure of a seat, just because a woman was going to preach. On such occasions the sound church-going sleepers would never think of taking their accustomed nap in the pews. The woman in the pulpit could do more than any of the gifted ministers. She could keep her audience awake. What she said may have been fine, and her methods of presenting truths may have been above the ordinary. But it was the novelty of the situation that brought the people to the meetings. In these days, when it is common for women to fill pulpits, they do not draw like they did fifty years ago. The same thing is true of the boy preachers. We see more of them and the novelty of the situation has disappeared.

Fifty years ago an Oriental traveler came into the town where we lived. It was announced that he had visited the ruins of Babylon, had written a book concerning his researches in the Bible Lands, and that on Monday evening he would lecture on his travels. When the evening came the house was packed. We were there too, and on one of the front seats. We would never think of missing an opportunity of hearing something about the ancient metropolis of the Euphrates region. Scores came out of curiosity. The novelty of the thing drew them. Scores sought information, and those who had cars to hear got the worth of their money. In our day a few Bible Land travelers can still command fine audiences, but only about one in ten is succeeding. Oriental travelers are becoming common. We get used to them and they fail to attract more than ordinary attention. The novelty has disappeared and the people are looking for something new.

The preaching of Jesus may have been new in the beginning, but during his earthly sojourn it never grew old. What he taught is not old even now. It is still new and will remain new as long as time may last. The Master did not depend upon mere novelty to secure an audience. It was what he did and what he said that moved the people, and the grand truths he uttered are still relished. We may even now be influenced by the novelty, and finally grow tired of the things that are merely fascinating, but somehow the great fundamental truths of Christianity remain by us, and by them our lives are shaped. Excursions in Bookland

Making Good in the Ministry. Robertson, $1.00

The successful minister's life is much more than a series of chicken dinners. Only those who have been preachers, or who are acquainted with the habits of a preacher, appreciate the hard work that lies back of "making good in the ministry." In its way the work of the minister is not less exhausting than the work of the farmer or of the business man. Preaching is a profession demanding an energy, application, and an indifference to monetary rewards that is equalled by few other callings in life.

Like every other man whose heart is in his work, the minister is a worker who desires to succeed. Deep down in his heart every minister desires to make good in the ministry, although he may be compelled, for a season, to make tents or sell real estate. It is for this reason that the story of John Mark, of New Testament times, makes a book of interest to all preachers. John Mark had no little difficulty in getting under way, and in this he was not unlike the average minister. His experience will serve as a sample of some of the problems that confront the average minister. Professor A. T. Robertson has taken all the facts that have come to light with reference to John Mark and woven them together into a biographical narrative which he calls: MAKING GOOD IN THE MINISTRY. It seemed to the Bookman, however, that the author did not quite measure up to the promise of the title and the chapter headings of the book; and yet it may be that the Bookman expected too much for his dollar.

Pedagogy for Ministers. Hobart, $1.00

A somewhat different approach to the problem of "making good in the ministry" is suggested by Professor Hobart's "Pedagogy for Ministers." There is much that the minister can appropriate from psychology and pedagogy. The main wonder is that there has not been a more conscious effort to profit from these other fields of knowledge.

It seems to the Bookman, who happens also to be a minister, that there is altogether too much emphasis placed on the public side of the work of the preacher. There is a tendency to regard the public delivery of a message as the sum and substance of the work of the minister. But the preacher is more than an orator; the successful preacher is also a teacher. Where the preacher is nothing more than an orator, the congregation is very apt to go home and do as it pleases after a brief season of mutual congratulation. Perhaps this undue emphasis on the oratorical side of the minister's work has helped to fix the gulf that too often exists between Sunday religion and week-day living.

There is a way, too, in which the overemphasis, so often put upon the public side of the work of the preacher, tends to give us weak and scattered churches, continually crying out for pastors but receiving none. When ministers go here and there, preaching the Word, but do not provide for proper follow-up work, there is apt to result a whole string of little shepherdless flocks. Sometimes the isolated flocks arise from the migratory habits of members, but often they arise also from the roving preacher who has not discovered that the preacher must also be a teacher. Such preachers can not claim to be true to the Pauline practice unless they return to visit and encourage the churches they have started. Even then, such scattered churches do not begin to have the chance to grow as do those churches in which the preacher settles down and, becoming a leader in the community, carries on the work thus begun to its logical conclusion.

Because we think of the preacher as an orator and not as a teacher, when it would be more proper to think of him as both, we are inclined to overemphasize the importance of the work of the evangelist. The spectacular work of the evangelist too often blinds us to the fact that the series of meetings will do the congregation little permanent good unless the home ministering body continue the work thus begun on throughout the year. Of course the occasional special evangelistic service has its place in getting new blood into the church, and yet such efforts do not mean much unless the new converts are properly cared for. We need to cultivate as well as to sow the seed.

There are still other complications that arise out of a narrow conception of the work of the minister. If, as a result of our conception of the minister as orator only, we give undue importance to the work of the evangelist, we need not be surprised if people come to think that the only time to join the church is when a series of meetings is on. This sometimes gets to be the case, unless death threatens and haste must be made. Then, too, magnifying the work of the evangelist tends to make people feel that the evangelist should do all of the work at the time of a series of meetings. The congregation is apt to lean back with the air of one who says: "Go to, now; get us a lot of people."

Sometimes the evangelist accepts this challenge and a still further complication arises. The evangelist brings in the people all right, but he does it in such a way that they look to him and not to the church. This last happens when the evangelist fails to realize that the finest thing that he can do is to leave the new converts thoroughly loyal to the local leadership.

The Bookman may have strayed a good way from "Pedagogy for Ministers," and yet he feels that he has not used the book as simply a spring-board text. A book that puts the emphasis on the minister as teacher, and thus neutralizes some of the over-emphasis on the minister as orator, is really dealing with the questions we have just been discussing. Our aim has been to show that the preacher who thinks that his work is done when a convert has been baptized, is mistaken. The work has really only begun, for he who said to baptize, also said that we should teach them to observe all things. Of course "Pedagogy for Ministers" seeks to apply some of the simpler laws of pedagogy to both the oratorical and the teaching phases of the ministry, but we have chosen to notice the last, because it is the part most commonly overlooked. CONTRIBUTORS' FORUM

Is Anybody Happier?

Is anybody happier because you passed his way?
Does anyone remember that you spoke to him today?
This day is almost over and its toiling time is through;
Is there anyone to utter now a kindly word of you?

Did you give a cheerful greeting, to the friend who came along?
Or a churlish sort of "howdy" and then vanish in the throng?
Were you selfish, pure and simple, as you rushed along your way,
Or is some one mighty grateful for a deed you did today?

Can you say tonight, in parting with the day that's slipping fast,
That you helped a single brother of the many that you passed?
Is a single heart rejoicing over what you did or said?
Does a man whose hopes were fading now with courage look ahead?

Did you waste the day or use it; was it well or poorly spent?
Did you leave a trail of kindness or a scar of discontent?
As you close your eyes in slumber, do you think that God would say,
You have earned one more tomorrow by the work you did today?

The Forward Movement

BY J. M. BLOUGH

JAN. 1, 1919, should mark the beginning of a new era of aggressive evangelism in the Church of the Brethren. We have passed our Bicentennial and yet our membership is but 100,000. It would seem (to an onlooker at least) that there has been something vitally wrong with our evangelism in the past. Not that success or progress is measured by numbers, but, faced as we were, with a heathen world of accessible millions and a large percentage of non-Christians in America, there is absolutely no justifiable reason for our lack of growth in the past. So, first of all, let us come humbly before our God and confess our failure to obey his great command. Yes, let us confess it with shame and penitence.

A year ago the General Mission Board, Sunday School Board and Educational Board together adopted a Five-Year Program and set it before the Brotherhood as a goal to be reached in the "Forward Movement." It is a splendid program, excellent, and worthy of the most earnest and prayerful support of every member of the church. It filled with praise the heart of the foreign missionary, and made his nerves tingle. Every advance in the home church fills us with satisfaction.

But what has happened? We have not heard of any ready and enthusiastic response on the part of the Brotherhood. Our church papers do not seem to have caught the inspiration.* So far as we have heard, the program is merely on paper but not in the hearts of the people. Why this lethargy? In fact, we have been informed that instead of beginning with 1918 we propose to begin with 1919. Why this delay? One precious year of God's grace gone without any special advance. Can it be? Moreover, we must confess to a great disappointment when we read the brief report of the late Annual Meeting. We searched for some mention of the Forward Movement, and some enthusiastic meeting in its behalf, but all that we found was one speech by the Sunday-school Editor. We have not had a full report yet, so we trust there was more.

Brethren and sisters, these Boards have outlined an excellent program for us. It is a most commendable move, and a most needful one, but let us not think that since they launched it, it is theirs to carry out and we will look on to see how it goes. This program is large and demands the very best help of every member. Half of the church can not carry it out; the whole church must do it. Look at the program! Study it! There is work for every one; something each one can do. That is the glory of it. See, it calls for the conversion of sinners, for young men for the ministry, for new Sunday-schools, new scholars in the Sunday-school, for money for mission work and for the colleges, for daily Bible study, for more students in our colleges, and more of these for Christian service, for more subscribers to our church periodicals, for an increase in mission work at home and abroad. Excellent! Is there not enough to keep us all busy? Let us not be satisfied with doing only one of the things mentioned, but let us help each cause represented in these requests by doing our best in the congregation where we live. We can all be soul-winners, and we ought to be. We can all give money. We can all bring new scholars into the Sunday-school. Come, let us all set to work with a holy enthusiasm, and outdo the program. It can be done and it ought to be done, but unless you do your best, it will not be done.

But from the beginning let us fix it definitely in our hearts that a mere effort will not accomplish the end. "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord." No amount of trying or sweating or striving will bring the result, unless it is Spirit-directed. Human efforts alone are useless. Without being endued with power from on high we are not fit for service in the Lord's great harvest field. "Man is God's method" of evangelizing the world, but it is man "full of the Holy Spirit." We should undertake nothing in this program except for God's glory and the evangelization of the world. Love for Christ and obedience to his last command should prompt our every effort. The Holy Spirit fills us for this very purpose.

Notice this sentence in the introduction to the program: "That this great opportunity may be effectually embraced, every member of the Church of the Brethren is called upon to deepen his spiritual life through systematic Bible study, the restoration of family worship, and the adoption of intercessory prayer in behalf of the world." This touches the mainspring of the Christian's life, and consequently of the Christian's service. It is to be hoped that throughout this entire year every member has been making this heart-preparation, without which there can be no forward movement pleasing to our Master. Notice the three points: Bible study, family worship, intercessory prayer. Grand! These three, done in the Spirit, will certainly accomplish the object, i. e., deepen the spiritual life. In Bible study we feed the spirit as faith appropriates Christ's fulness, and in intercession this faith works out in love, in behalf of the lost. Should any one have neglected this heart preparation till now, then let him give himself to it with all diligence during the remaining days of the year, so that a complete and united church may be ready for the Forward Movement, even as a whole army moves forward at the order of their general.

And now, at the close, may I suggest that by written word and spoken word this Forward Movement be continually kept before the Brotherhood. Every pastor and bishop should present it to his church and urge it upon his flock. Every Sunday-school superintendent should lay it upon the heart of his school. Every teacher should emphasize it to his class. Every college should enlist its whole student body in this great enterprise. Every church paper should abound in enthusiastic messages in its behalf. Every District Mission Board, every Mission Study Class, every volunteer band, every prayer meeting should throw its full force into the movement. Who dare neglect?

Ahwa, Surat District, India.

*The reader will not forget that Bro. Blough's article was written many weeks ago. By the time his earnest and splendid appeal gets back to India, we trust he will have discovered, along with other readers of the "Messenger," at least some evidence of the paper's interest in the Forward Movement.—Ed.

Will a Man Rob God?

BY IRA J. LAPP

"Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon the earth, where moth and rust consume, and where thieves break through and steal: but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth consume, and where thieves do not break through nor steal; for where thy treasure is there will thy heart be also" (Matt. 6: 19-21).

A PLAIN, positive command and yet it is dead, void. It might as well have been left untranslated, in the original Greek, for all the heed we give it.

Money is concentrated energy. A dollar represents that much of our muscle, brain and brawn. A proper conception of our stewardship will prompt us to put ourselves under the burdens of this old world. Why should we rob God by passing down, to future generations, farms, stocks, bonds? If I interpret the Book correctly, each generation will be supplied with the necessary equipment to meet its own needs.

Recently an old gentleman died, and his heirs quickly, by mathematical calculation, apportioned the shares which would be theirs. A nephew, who was to receive $250, sighed as he remarked: "Just enough for one night's blow-out." How much better if the uncle would have turned the money over to the Mission Board, rescued some orphan, or educated some struggling young person! This world would mightily move onward if men would get a vision of their dollars converted into Kingdom energy.

It is a matter of statistics that wealth only remains in the family three generations. The progress of men is made by struggle, and when the necessity of struggle is removed, decadence sets in. If some of the men, who amassed great fortunes for their heirs, could return from their graves and take a look into their office, scan through their books, we imagine they would receive the severest shock of disappointments. The biggest dividends are not realized in investments of brick and mortar, but in human potentialities.

Confession

BY R. H. MILLER

"I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips" (Isa. 6: 5).

A PARTICULAR interest attaches to the narrative of which these words form a part. It records the initial event of a great and useful career.

Isaiah's confession is a model. He speaks of uncleanness of lips. It is both in himself and his countrymen. But where it is found is of no concern to him. He displays the same aversion for it in himself as in others.

Now it is not easy to do this. Many a man has a very acute discernment of evil when it comes to the world outside of himself. But once his field of vision is drawn to this side of the boundary line of self, his discriminating aptness disappears. His vision is reliable only at long range.

How may this failure be overcome? There is only one way to open the inner field of self to this necessary scrutiny. Jesus announced it in John 12: 25, "Hate your life in this world." The broken Wolsey echoed this truth in his pathetic "Love thyself last." Self-love will forever exclude from self this all-important and true evaluation of good and evil.

U. OF ILL. LIB.

Is it rightly called all-important? Yes. This internal separation of ourselves from evil, by its recognition and confession, is an indispensable prerequisite to God's cleansing. The latter is impossible without it. On the other hand, it is the guarantee of God's cleansing.

Let us suppose ourselves in God's stead (Heaven forgive the supposition). Two men, have splendid ability to discern and evaluate good and evil. They are alike unsparing in their condemnation of evil. One, however, when he finds it in bis own door yard, when it serves his own ends, when it would impugn his own character to expose it, is diligently silent. Now we, in God's stead, would rightly reason thus: "He is no bona fide enemy of evil. By his silence he condones it in himself. He is an enemy only of that evil, the exposure and destruction of which imperils none of his selfish interests. We shall never cleanse him." But the other has the same holy severity and aversion for evil, no matter where found. The location of the sin does in no way modify his regard for it. And consistently he does all he can to eliminate it. With regard to him we reason: "He is indeed a bona fide enemy of the evil. He is deeply averse to it, be it in himself or elsewhere. His willingness to confess is not behind his readiness to condemn. We will add our power to bis, and cleanse him of it."

God, in fairness to men, can cleanse only those who are averse to that which is averse to him. He who allows any sin to hide behind the fact that it is in himself, refuses God's cleansing. But a disinterested, unbiased aversion for sin, which spares not one's own self (to use the figure of Isa. 6), will invariably put the seraph on the wing towards us, by way of the altar.

"If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness" (1 John I: 9).

A Mighty Responsibility

BY J. S. SHERFY

RESPONSIBILITY for lives is man's universal obligation. Yet few of us comprehend the extent of this responsibility. It is only wben peculiar circumstances force upon our attention the fact how responsible we are, that we cry out beneath the burden which so nearly crushes us.

Such was the cry of Judah in the very captivating story of Joseph and his brethren. Josepb bad come into great popularity and power in Egypt. He was the wise food administrator who had conserved the food surplus of the full years, so there was sufficient for the famine, not only for themselves, but also for their neighbors.

Joseph's brethren had come for food, and Simeon had been held as a pawn, that he might prove his brethren. They must not come before Joseph again if they failed to bring Benjamin. Also, there was the mysterious return of their money.

However, venerable Jacob was not to be bereft easily of his youngest son. Reuben pleaded, even offering the lives of his two sons, if he should fail to bring the lad home safely. But Jacob's life was bound up in the lad's, and so he did not consent.

Then Judah made his beautiful plea,—eloquent, pathetic, irresistible. He says that, should he fail to bring the lad back safely, he will bear the blame forever. So Benjamin was sent. But, as a further proving of the integrity of his brethren, Joseph brought Benjamin under censure and into prison as a spy. He was to be retained as an Egyptian slave while the ten brethren returned to their father Jacob. This brought to Judah a keener consciousness of his responsibility than he had yet experienced. He realized that if this decree were unchanged, his father would die of sorrow, and throughout his own remaining sad years he must bear the constant consciousness of having brought upon his aged father the fatal shock.

Under such a stimulus he made that memorable, eloquent and touching appeal to the Egyptian ruler, concluding, triumphantly, with the words, "Now therefore, let thy servant, I pray thee, abide instead of the lad a bondman to my lord; and let the lad go with his brethren. For how shall I go up to my father, and the lad be not with me? lest peradventure I see the evil that shall come on my father."

But Jacob is not the only father of sons, both obedient and otherwise, whose "life is bound up in the lad's life." The Divine and Eternal Father has many dear children, whose lives have been intrusted for a time to the care of some brother or sister. And his life is literally bound up in the lives of these children. Nor was Judah the last brother who has become surety for another, and who must "bear the blame forever" if he fails in his stewardship of lives.

Human interrelationships are such that it has been well said that "none of us liveth to himself and none dieth to himself." Each person possesses a power of influence and is very responsible for its use. The brother or sister in a home is responsible,—at least in a measure,—for the lives of those who live under the same roof. And if, through any failure of theirs, those lives shall fail to return to the Father, then that brother or sister must "bear the blame to my father forever." Could we but feel how mighty is our responsibility, we, too, might cry out: "How shall I go up to my Father if the lad be not with me?"

The Sunday-school teacher is called to teach a class of young lives. When once he has accepted the sacred charge, he is responsible for the righteous and eternal lives of the "lads," or "lassies," as the case may be, and should he fail to use fully every ability and opportunity to influence for good each individual life, he must certainly "bear the blame forever."

When the attendants have announced to the parents the safe arrival of a healthy son or daughter, that same announcement should mean to each parent a responsibility to their God, even in excess of that which Judah sustained to Jacob. And heaven pity that parent who does not feel sufficiently keenly his or her responsibility for the righteousness and eternal salvation of their children, to cause them sometimes to cry from an agonizing heart: "How shall I go up to my Father, if the lad be not with me? lest I see the evil that shall come on my Father!"

Yes, we have varied relations with others. It may be but a classmate. Or it may be one who is under our instruction five days a week. It may be an intimate friend or associate. But whoever it is, we are responsible to the extent of our influence and ability to lead that one back with us to the Father. And, my brother, my sister, how can you go up to your Father if that one,—brother, sister, son, daughter, father, mother, classmate, pupil, friend or associate,—be not with you? How can you bear to see the evil that shall come upon your Father? How can you look upon his sorrow, disappointment and pain of heart because you have been untrue to your trust and have failed to bring back the beloved child?

Then there are thousands and millions of the created sons of God, far away in the homeland and across the sea. For these we are responsible, because, by the rightful use of our time, talents and means, very many of these shall be brought safely back to the Father's house. And let us not fail to see "that his life is bound up in the lad's life."

If we have experienced the saving grace of the Lord Jesus, we are expecting to return from the Egypt of this world to the heavenly Canaan. But how, O my brother, my sister, shall I, or shall you go up to our Father if the lad,—the one toward whom we sustain a possible saving relationship—be not with us? "Lest I see the evil that shall come upon my Father."

Tapers

BY AGNES M. GEIB

TWILIGHT was falling. The cathedral was dark and gloomy. Beautiful frescoes, paintings and statues were all unseen. The chancel door opened and a priest appeared, hearing a taper. As he lit the lamps, all the glories of the cathedral were revealed. The taper was but a feeble flame, and in the glow of light that flooded the cathedral, its tiny light was lost.

Many tapers are needed to light the lamps that reveal the beautiful things in life,—tapers that shall kindle the flame in ministers, reformers, philanthropists, teachers, authors, poets, artists, musicians, statesmen, —in all who help to make the world better. It may be a mother who kindles the flame,—a wife, a husband, a friend, or a passing stranger.

One of the greatest lights in American history gives the credit to his mother. The Apostle of the Reformation had a pious mother who kindled in her son a flame that defied Catholicism. The influence of an industrious, patient wife caused the tiny spark of manhood, left in John Bunyan, to burst into flame. A friend served as the taper in William Wilberforce's life. Talented, but easily influenced by congenial companions, he was leading a gambler's life. He was saved, to become the emancipator of slaves in England. John B. Gough was traveling fast to a drunkard's grave, but a young man induced him to sign the temperance pledge. He, in turn, has helped to kindle a flame of determined resistance in others who were traveling the road he once followed. While in prison, Jerry McAuley heeded the pleading of a former associate in crime. What a powerful flame was kindled there,—one that has helped to light thousands of sin-darkened souls.

Just as the light of the taper was lost in the glow of the lamps, so the human taper may be surpassed by the flame it has helped to kindle.

> "One taper lights a thousand,
> Yet shines as it has shone,
> And the humblest light may kindle
> A brighter than its own."

It takes a big, unselfish life to be content with being only a taper. "Don't spurn to be a rushlight because you can not be a star." So many are striving to be a star, no matter how they accomplish it. Some one found it necessary to give this advice: "Don't be a shining light at the expense of some other person's oil."

Every act,—no matter how insignificant it may seem to you,—may serve some soul as the taper did the lamp. On the other hand, it may destroy the divine spark in some soul. Some of us shirk responsibility by assuming indifference, but "your indifference turns a damper upon the fires in other hearts,—fires that would warm and light the world."

To those who are content to be tapers, Daniel promises this reward: "And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever."

A Justified Existence

BY W. O. BECKNER

WHEN my father used to farm the yellow, rocky hillsides in East Tennessee, it was my job, when the spring crops were being put into the ground, to "sprout" the fields, cutting out the sassafras and locust sprouts. They were needless, and for the ends to be sought, they had no justified existence. Their presence did not contribute to yielding desirable results, and therefore they were taken away.

When the tender stalks of corn popped their points through the ground, they were given different treatment. They were nurtured and cultivated that they might grow up to yield the desired fruits. Their existence was justified by what they yielded.

In the late issue of the Missionary Review of the World there is an article about the Christian College which gives some startling figures. These certainly justify that Institution's existence as a powerful agency for good in the church. I wish every member of the Church of the Brethren could read that short article again and again, and get the full meaning of its wonderful figures. In the past, too many of us have thought of our colleges as "sassafras" and other needless sprouts in our church field, and that because the first chapters of Genesis do not give any record of where God asked Adam to name them, therefore they were not justified in existing at all.

But for the figures. One small college in New England recently celebrated the centennial anniversary of its existence and has never had at one time to exceed one hundred students. Yet among its graduates there are 542 ministers and 70 foreign missionaries, to say nothing of more than 100 college teachers and 32 college presidents.

De Pauw University, a Methodist institution, has sent out 448 ministers of the Gospel at home and abroad.

One Christian university, name not given, has sent out more men and women into the foreign mission field than all the State universities put together.

In a recent five-year period, eighty-two per cent of all missionaries to the foreign field came from Christian schools, while only thirteen per cent came from State and city universities.

In a three-year period ninety-two per cent of the ministers of the Methodist church who had college training, came from Methodist schools. State institutions contributed only four per cent.

In 1915 the Presbyterian colleges in America reported a total of 28,445 graduates, of whom more than twenty per cent were in the ministry of the Word at home, and an additional two and one-half per cent were in the foreign field. Such a record is little short of marvelous.

Figures are not given as to how many devoted and loyal lay church workers have come from these same schools, but the records of all show that the student who takes his training in Christian schools, comes away from them with a devotion and loyalty, for the particular church supporting the school, that stays with him throughout life. The Church of the Brethren has hundreds of heart-breaking examples of those who have been lost to us entirely, both in membership and in love for the church, through having taken their training in State schools.

I do not know that any one has compiled statistics to determine where the graduates from our Brethren colleges are working, but any one acquainted with them, in a general way, will get a good idea by looking over the Ministerial list in our Yearbook and the list of missionaries for the foreign field in the Missionary Visitor. In the few short years during which we have been aggressively fostering Christian colleges, we have seen them justify their existence by the fruits they have borne.

The unanswered call for scores and scores of prepared pastors in the church today, and a simple look into the next twenty years, are surely enough to stir us to attempt the "impossible" for our cause. Our program for our "Five Year Forward Movement" for our colleges is none too big. Big tasks challenge us to attempt big things, and under God we shall succeed.

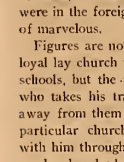
The Passing of Nora Arnold Lichty

BY J. W. LEAR

When the information that Brother and Sister D. J. Lichty, of India, were to spend a part of their furlough at Mt. Morris, was made known among both the faculty and student body, there were evidences of satisfaction and anticipation.



Nora Arnold Lichty

They were with us but a few weeks,—long enough to be greatly appreciated,—when Sister Lichty came down with influenza. When, later on, the news of her death gained publicity, a gloom, difficult to throw off, enshrouded the school.

Sister Lichty was born Jan. 17, 1880,—the oldest child of Eld. John Arnold, of La Place, Ill. She had the privilege of being ushered into a Christian home atmosphere, and as a consequence she became, early in life, a devout Christian. Soon she developed into an enthusiastic church worker. By nature she possessed a remarkable degree of determination.

Sister Lichty had a strong desire for an education, and after finishing the grades at the country school, she entered the Academic Department of Mt. Morris College, from which she graduated in 1902.

During these years she joined the Missionary Reading Circle and became so much interested in the unfortunate people of India that she resolved to spend her life in bringing the Gospel Message to them. Accordingly, in the autumn of 1903, she bade adieu to her friends and embarked for far-away India.

Not so long after her arrival in India, however, she was stricken with a virulent attack of enteric fever and for weeks her life hung in the balance. The physician advised that she return to the States, because he believed that she would not live a year. This was a crisis in the life of Sister Nora, but with her accustomed resolution she said: "If I am to die, I will die in India."

Bro. Lichty, to whom she was betrothed, and who had preceded her to India, proposed matrimony that he might the better assist in caring for her. She demurred for his sake, but finally consented, and the marriage was consummated.

While Sister Lichty never fully recovered her former strength, by the grace of God they were permitted to spend fourteen years among the people she had chosen to help. And while she could not do as much field work as some others, she so ordered the affairs of the home, that her husband could devote the major part of his time to the help of others.

Brother and Sister Lichty were spending their second furlough in the homeland. It was her only thought to return to India, and when it seemed evident that she would not be permitted to do so, she wished that her husband might return. Then she meekly resigned her own case to the care of the Heavenly Father, and said: "His will be done!"

On Saturday, Nov. 7, she contracted influenza, which developed into pneumonia, and at 9:20 P. M. on Thursday following, her spirit took its flight to the land of pure delight. She could say with Paul: "To me to live is Christ, but to die is gain."

She leaves, to mourn her departure, her husband, a father and stepmother, and two sisters, Etta and Stella. Their loss is but temporary, however, and to it they willingly resign themselves.

The remains were taken to La Place, Ill.,—her father's home,—Dr. L. S. Shively, of the College, accompanying the stricken husband.

On Sunday afternoon, in the presence of a large concourse of people, an appropriate service was conducted by Eld. Geo W. Miller and Dr. Shively. The body was laid to rest in the cemetery near by, where her mother was buried when Nora was but a child.

The finger of God touched her and she slept. It was God's will, and we are satisfied.

Resolutions of Respect

WHEREAS, It has pleased our Heavenly Father to call from service below to service above, our highly esteemed student, Sister Nora Arnold Lichty; and

WHEREAS, Mount Morris College has lost a kind, sympathetic, self-sacrificing helper; and

WHEREAS, the Church of the Brethren has sustained an irreparable loss on the India mission field, on which field she has labored for more than fourteen years; therefore

RESOLVED, That we, the faculty of Mount Morris College, extend to the sorrowing husband, parents and sisters, who for many years have been loyal supporters of this institution, the expression of our deepest sympathy in this hour of their sad bereavement; and

RESOLVED, That a copy of these resolutions be given to the husband, and to the parents and sisters, and that they be published in the "College Campus," "Mount Morris Index" and "Gospel Messenger."

Committee: M. W. Emmert, Mrs. Ira R. Hendrickson, Miss Charlotte Easton.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

ALABAMA

Fruitdale church met in quarterly council Jan. 4. Sunday-school officers were elected, with Bro. S. E. Miller as superintendent. Bro. W. Wine was chosen elder for the coming year. The writer was reëlected correspondent. It was agreed to send a petition to the General Mission Board, asking for help in filling the appointments for preaching in this part of the South. There is great need for mission work and until this country is worked like the foreign field, nothing much can be done. Brethren come sometimes and hold meetings, but what we need is ministers to locate here.—J. Z. Jordan, Fruitdale, Ala., Jan. 14.

CALIFORNIA

Fresno.—On account of influenza few services have been held lately. Dec. 10 we met in business session. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Bro. J. H. Stover, elder in charge; J. Ed. Bowser, Sunday-school superintendent; Miriam Rhoads, Christian Workers' president.—Mrs. O. N. Whitlow, Fresno, Cal., Dec. 29.

Lindsay.—Dec. 22 a Christmas program was given to an splendid audience. At the close of the program an offering of $141.02 was taken for the war-stricken countries. At our December council the church unanimously decided that Bro. M. S. Frantz, of Wichita, Kans., should be our pastor. He is not a stranger to our congregation, having held a series of meetings for us two years ago. We consider ourselves very fortunate to get such a leader, and are looking forward to his coming not later than Sept. 1. This is the fifth week of the revival meetings at Woodville, conducted by Bro. P. E. Robertson. In this little village there are no churches, but no religious service of any kind. About two years ago the church helped to organize and maintain a Sunday-school there. As a result of Bro. Robertson's effort six have confessed Christ.—Mrs. Emma V. Yoder, Lindsay, Cal., Jan. 9.

Long Beach.—Our last business meeting was held Dec. 27, at which time officers for the new year were elected, with Bro. E. K. Beckley, superintendent of the Sunday-school, and Bro. H. H. Vaniman, president of the Christian Workers' Society. Our love feast was postponed until after our next council. The usual Christmas program was not given this year, on account of influenza. However, the members of the primary department were remembered with a treat. Jan. 5 an impressive installation service was conducted by Bro. J. W. Cline, of Los Angeles, for the officers and teachers of the Sunday-school. An illustrated lecture of his trip abroad, given by our pastor, Bro. Boas, was much enjoyed recently by a large audience. Two letters of membership have lately been received.—Blanche L. Frantz, Long Beach, Cal., Jan. 10.

McFarland.—Our regular services have again been discontinued on account of the influenza. Although few of our families have escaped the epidemic, so far all have been spared except one. Our Sunday-school enjoyed its Christmas program Dec. 23. An offering of $184 was given for the Armenian Relief. At our December council Bro. Andrew Blickenstaff was elected elder; Bro. Elde Blickenstaff, Sunday-school superintendent.—J. Ross Hunawalt, McFarland, Cal., Jan. 7.

CANADA

Bow Valley.—We have our church and Sunday-school in good working order again, after the epidemic of influenza, and are very thankful to our Father for the Protecting Hand that has been over us all the while. We met in council Dec. 14, with Bro. J. S. Culp presiding. Officers for the coming year were elected. Our five resident elders were elected as overseers of the church, and Bro. C. M. Miller, who served us so well as Sunday-school superintendent, last year, was reëlected. With our basement now arranged for Sunday-school purposes, and with the Lord leading, we hope to do more efficient work the coming year.—Maude Pobst, Gleichen, Alta., Can., Jan. 7.

Lessard church met in council Dec. 21. This was our first public meeting since the outbreak of the influenza. All were glad to be permitted to meet again, and the business passed off pleasantly. Elders Culp and Shatto, from the Bow Valley church, were present. Bro. Culp officiated. We retained Bim as our elder for another year. Bro. Geo. Long is our Sunday-school superintendent for the coming six months. Two letters were received and one was granted. The committee in charge of the erection of the new church building reported favorably, and work has begun on the basement. The next day being Sunday, Bro. Shatto gave us two helpful sermons. Jan. 5 we took our annual Christmas offering for the relief of suffering. It amounted to over $50.—Pearl Cawley, Irricana, Alta., Can., Jan. 14.

COLORADO

Bethel.—We have closed our Sunday-school during the winter months, on account of the cold weather and long distances some have to go. We have had on average attendence of forty-five during the summer months and all seemed interested. Bro. Fitz, of Denver, came over several times a month Sunday and preached morning and evening for us. We greatly appreciate his efforts. We enjoy having members stop with us, especially ministers. We are still trusting that a minister will locate here. Others, as well as ministers, are invited.—Elnora B. Switzer, Arriba, Colo., Jan. 11.

Colorado Springs.—After an interruption of ten weeks we were permitted to meet again for public worship, but not till three weeks later were we permitted to reopen the Sunday-school. None of our members was taken from us by the epidemic. We trust that normal conditions will prevail again in the near future. A special effort will be required to bring into the services again those who have become accustomed to staying at home, especially children whose parents are non-members. Our contemplated series of meetings and love feast were postponed indefinitely. At our recent quarterly meeting all church, Sunday-school and Christian Workers' officers were elected for the year, with Katie Rueb, church clerk; John Truesdell, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Alfred Campbell, president of Christian Workers' Society. We have recently installed a set of maps and new blackboards, which will help greatly in the teaching of the Sunday-school lessons. We have cottage prayer meetings each Thursday evening. A singing class meets on Tuesday evening. One was recently received on confession of faith.—Nettie Root Crist, W. Colorado Springs, Colo., Jan. 13.

Grand Valley.—First Church met in council, with Bro. J. E. Bryan presiding. He was reëlected as elder for the coming year, with Bro. J. D. Coffman, assistant; Bro. Homer Vonpelt, Sunday-school superintendent and church clerk; Bro. Chas. Henry, president of Christian Workers' Society; the writer, "Mesenger" agent and correspondent. We had no church services from Oct. 6 to Jan. 5, and it was a great pleasure to meet again. Jan. 5 our birthday offerings amounted to $4.31.—Mrs. Minerva Hixson, Grand Junction, Colo., Jan. 14.

Hesston church met in council Jan. 11, with Eld. S. O. Nickey presiding. Bro. Nickey was elected elder for another year; Sister Mary Hinzie, church clerk. Bro. Wm. Hinzie will be our Sunday-school superintendent for the next six months, and Bro. Irvin Buckingham, president of Christian Workers' Society. We have decided to improve our church grounds by the planting of some trees. New members are locating among us, one being Bro. Moyo Heiny, whose services in song will be appreciated. Our Sunday-school and church attendance has been small, owing to the deep snow.—E. L. Lapp, Fleming, Colo., Jan. 12.

IDAHO

Notice to Churches of Idaho and Western Montana.—As our Writing Clerk, Bro. S. S. Nebo, has moved from the District, as Retiring Moderator of last District Meeting I have appointed Bro. Fred A. Flora, 234 N. Washington Avenue, Moscow, Idaho, to fill his unexpired term of office. Correspondence for District Meeting should be in his hands at least thirty days before District Meeting.—M. Alva Long, Weiser, Idaho, Jan. 13.

Weiser church met in council Dec. 21, with Eld. M. Alva Long presiding. Seven letters were granted. Bro. Harry Beckwith was elected superintendent; Sister Adia Beckwith president of Christian Workers' Society. Dec. 22 the Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Society rendered a Christmas program. The children enjoyed the blessing of sacrificing their treat. Their offering besides was $8.85. This, with the offering taken up the following Sunday, for Armenian and Syrian Relief, made a total of $86.27. In the absence of our pastor, Bro. Bolinger, of Parkland, very ably filled the pulpit Jan. 5.—Mrs. Cora B. Long, Weiser, Idaho, Jan. 7.

ILLINOIS

Batavia church met in business session Jan. 6, with Eld. G. H. Heagley presiding. The yearly reports of the various committees offered much in the way of encouragement. Our pastor's report, especially, showed that both he and his have been diligent. Among a multitude of other duties they made 316 pastoral calls during the year. The Sisters' Aid Society also deserves a word of praise. Although few in number, they raised over $100 during the year. Over $50 of this amount was sent to the Chicago missions. The home department has also offered to donate a part of its fund to mission work. The Orphanage Committee, which has been in existence only three months, has been instrumental in placing one child in a good Christian home. Owing to the influenza epidemic we decided not to hold our usual series of meetings at this time.—Nellie K. Ketzler, Batavia, Ill., Jan. 10.

Girard church met in council Jan. 14, with Eld. W. H. Shull presiding. On Thanksgiving Day an offering of $117 was taken for World-wide Missions. Recently the Sunday-school took an offering of $126 for Armenian Relief. Because of health conditions the Sunday-school did not give its usual Christmas program. We are thankful that none of our membership was taken by the epidemic, and that our Sunday-school and church are now busy at work again.—Ethel Harshbarger, Girard, Ill., Jan. 15.

Woddams Grove.—At our last quarterly business meeting in December the congregation made out its program for the coming year, looking to the following as its goal: It was realized that doing things counted for more than simply talking about them. It was unanimously decided to remodel and make modern the old churchhouse at Louisa, and make it a more

The Surgeon's Prayer

BY MRS. J. Z. GILBERT

RECENTLY one of our dear sisters was called upon to undergo an operation in a hospital of this city. After being anointed, she entrusted her all into God's keeping Next morniog Bro. Gilbert and the writer left home early for the hospital, as promised, in order to greet the sister with a few cheery words before the time of the operation.

Some minutes after our arrival, the doctor and a brother from our college came, and in a short time the nurses, having completed the necessary preparations, started with the patient toward the operating room. We followed down the long corridor, at the end of which is a small, quiet room. Here the nurses left the patient and, at the invitation of the surgeon, we entered the room. He closed the door behind us, saying, as he did so: "This is a private room, and it is my custom to have prayer before undertaking an operation."

We shall not soon forget the circumstance. The sister lay upoo the stretcher and we, with bowed heads, stood near her, while the surgeon offered a prayer most earnest and appropriate. How good his words sounded to us, and how glad we were to join in such a service!

During the last few years we have gone to a number of our city hospitals upon similar occasions, but never before have we seen or heard anything just like this. In our experience, at least, it is no ordinary occurrence to hear one of the chief surgeons in a large hospital offer prayer.

It was with renewed assurance of God's care that the patient passed into the operating-room. Reader, would such conditions not make the thought of hospitals and operations less dreadful to you?

"The Man With the Hoe"

BY D. W. SHOCK

Hoe-Men

HOE-MEN are great benefactors of the race. We may oppose them, as the stone or baked earth opposes the progress of the hoe, but they will cut up weeds in spite of all opposition. Their mission is to cut weeds. In defiance of unpopularity, they continue to uproot error, and mellow the soil about truth. Men will often defend their vices much more than they will their virtues. I am not sure that any of us enjoy seeing other people slashing around in our gardens, even though they profess to be cutting down weeds. We prefer to do it ourselves, but the trouble is we often neglect it.

This process of hoeing only mellows the soil, to be sure, and weeds will spring up again with renewed vigor, but we are likely to get hoed again by some one, if we are not wise enough to do it ourselves. In the meantime the plants are getting a good start by being hoed.

Our best and most frequent hoeings come in youth. Almost any one is willing to give us attention at this period of life. The plants are small and tender, while the weeds are hardy and vigorous. We probably need hoeing most at this time. As the summer of life advances, the gardeners get weary, or, it may be, gain a great respect for us, and so do not quite dare to do their duty. This often happens. It is very unfortunate for a man to be habitually wrong and not know it, while he is hedged about by a kind of false dignity that no one dares to tell him of his faults. It is well, for the misbehaving boy or girl, if people do not hesitate to be quite free in correcting evident misdoings. Another reason why we neglect hoeing later in life, is because our gardeners see that corn, potatoes, and onions, have gotten a good start, and they think themselves sure of a good crop without further trouble. The difficulty of getting at the weeds at this time of the year has some consideration. The vegetables have become large and hide them. At first the hoers look for plants among the weeds, but now they look for weeds among the plants. In this way many weeds are allowed to grow, and as summer passes on to autumn, these weeds become tall and rank, and the vegetables are once more hidden from view. In fact, such a garden looks like one that has not been hoed at all. A casual observer might not be able to observe the difference at all. But there is a difference. If a garden has been thoroughly hoed during the early part of the summer it will more readily bear some neglect during the latter part. And if the boy has been faithfully trained, the man will not need so much attention.

In an unhoed garden there may be as many plants as in one that is thoroughly-hoed, but they are tall, pale, and fruitless, hardly distinguishable from weeds, and practically no better than weeds. On the other hand, the garden that has been hoed in early summer, although apparently full of weeds, is likewise full of fruits. Down among the weeds, if we will only look for it, there is a rich, ripe harvest. Don't you recall that man, digging potatoes by the roadside, though he first, with a scythe, was compelled to mow down a rank growth of weeds that was overtopping the potatoes?

It often happens that old men's minds are very weedy,—allowed to become so late in life,—after the plants have all matured. Offensive habits become fastened on them. Wrong views of life cut them off from all sympathy with the present. Forbidding tempers repel all who approach, and they are looked upon as gardens containing nothing but weeds. If, however, we will take the trouble to enter fully into their acquaintance and history, if we will work our way in among the weeds, though we may get pricked by thistles, and covered with burs, we shall find an abundant harvest of good works.

Missionary Sacrifice

BY HERMAN J. GROVE

SURELY a missionary does not undervalue the commission which is put into his hands. But what is meant by the weeping and wailing among the friends,—of his immediate circle of friends? The tears which are shed might be excused if he were going to some heathen island. But sometimes the missionary note is pitched on the same key. The mountains and hills of the native land become dear to one who never loved them before. There is a wringing of hands and never-ending talk of missionary "sacrifice." Surely, the man is going to be executed,—we would suppose,—instead of going to serve in the name of our Lord and Master, Jesus Christ. But he who was rich and became poor for our sake, deserves better service than this.

There is so much in the giving. Some bestow their favors so graciously that the value is doubled, while the gifts of others are as a blow in the face. Are we not guilty of treating our fellow-men better than Jesus, though he deserves our loving service much more than any other being? How often we say: "So many charities,—we can not afford them." The word is applied to the Lord Jesus, as though he were a poor beggar and unworthy. The cattle on a thousand hills, and all the silver and gold are his. We treat the Master niggardly. The eastern magi fell down and worshiped the Babe in the manger. They opened their treasures and gave him gifts of gold, frankincense and myrrh. It is not right for us to magnify the little we do for him, and to call it sacrifice. All he asks is a willing mind and cheerful obedience. Can we not give that to him, who came down from his throne in heaven and made his Father's will his meat and drink?

Every year hundreds of young men leave our shores on various errands. Thousands of people rushed to California when gold was discovered. Husbands left their wives and families. Hundreds left everything, to suffer, toil, starve, and even perish from cold, on the overland trail. Many sank from exhaustion on the banks of the Sacramento River. The same was repeated when gold was discovered on the Yukon River. But there is no word of sacrifice there. And why should we regard as a sacrifice what little we do for our Blessed Lord, who died that we might live? Is not our talk of sacrifice ungenerous and heathenish?

"In peace let me resign my breath,
And thy salvation see;
My sins deserve eternal death,
But Jesus died for me."

Our Relatives

BY ELIZA POPE VAN DYNE

"Our relatives are the friends nature gives to us, our friends the relatives God gives to us."—George Sand.

THOSE priceless people who are kin to the mind and the heart! They satisfy,—a hunger and a thirst and a great longing. For as the child's imperative need is its parent, so the man's essential demand is his friend. He needs him.

And whether he comes in the form of an aged man or a little boy; whether she comes as a mother, a comrade, a sweetheart or a wife; whether it be chum, or inferior, or superior, that is just the manner of their coming. It's the fact that they have come that counts. God has given his gift to you.

So often they reach you suddenly, circuitously, from quite the opposite direction to the one in which you are looking; as the angels, "unawares." And the current of your life is redirected, and of your thought, and of your feeling. Things are different.

The rest of your world may be kind, but if it's not kindred, the hunger's still there, and the longing. But there is an element in your fellow that appeases that craving, as substantial and appetizing food stills the insistent cry for it. And that element is comprehension first, and reliability all the time. You feel secure in the thing that he will do, or say, or think. For the hearts in you beat from the same motive power; on the inside you work alike.

And the charm that holds these two so closely bound together is sincerity, every moment, everywhere. Artificial methods can wreck their tie as surely as a volcanic eruption, and as completely.

Emerson explained that "the only way to have a friend is to be one." One couldn't ask for anything more, nor anything easier. It's just a habit, really, being candid, and being fair. And little honest praises and little frequent helps, and all the other everlasting small things that we do, or could do, or would do if we only thought in time. It's just a kind of training; a keeping fit for the friend God gives to us. We will be a friend in turn,—that tremendous achievement! "For a friend may well be reckoned the masterpiece of nature."

Without Christ

BY LEANDER SMITH

"For without me ye can do nothing" (John 15: 5)

WITHOUT Christ we would have been without hope. In him alone is immortality revealed. Men have groped for a door into the dark beyond, but have not found the light. The longings of the soul and the instinct of life have kept alive some hope, but there is nothing definite. There is little more than the recoil from death; all beyond the visible horizon is shadowy and unreal. Labor is in vain, for death cuts off from its benefits. The building of years is never completed. Sooner or later life, with all its joy and all its hope, comes to an end. The world has its tradition of a golden age, glorious but lost. Apart from the new life of Christ, it has none in the future. The tradition of the promise of a future life remains, but there is no elevating, cheering, stimulating hope except as it comes from the revelation of God in Christ.

The blessing of Christ to us is like the rain that falls upon all, like the sunshine that illumines the path of even those who do not recognize his presence in the world. There are phases of civilization which are part of the common good which Christ has wrought in the world. There are men of noble character who render good service to the world who do not bow before Jesus as their Lord, but this higher good is due to the diffused knowledge of Christ, who has so entered into the thought and life of the civilized world that none are entirely beyond his influence. Separate him entirely from our life here, and who can depict the condition that would follow? The world would be full of sin and misery.

We see this in individual lives. We see it on a larger scale in communities and nations or races. Left to himself, without the intervention of Christ's redemption, age after age, the evil would have gone down to depths immeasurable.

So we listen again to the words of our Blessed Savior: "Without me ye can do nothing." Have you ever stopped to think what the world would be without Christ? How much are you doing to spread the knowledge of Christ to earth's remotest bounds?

CORRESPONDENCE

"Write what thou seest, and send it unto the churches"

EAST WICHITA CHURCH, KANSAS

We met in regular business meeting Jan. 8. All officers for the ensuing year were elected. Bro. Harlow Brown was chosen as superintendent of the Sunday-school. Bro. M. S. Frantz was reelected as elder. Arrangements are under way for a spring revival meeting, under the leadership of Bro. A. G. Crosswhite, of Rocky Ford, Colo. As the pastor contemplates moving to California, he handed in his resignation, to become effective July 1, 1919. The same was read and accepted. A committee was appointed to take the proper steps to secure some one to take up the pastorate, vacated by the resignation of the writer. Any pastor who is available, or is contemplating a change of location, and would like to accept the pastorate of a church of 140 members, located in the residential district of a city of 75,000, might do well by writing to Bro. H. J. Brown, 1554 N. Grove Street, Wichita, Kans., or to Bro. J. B. Royer, 811 N. Main Street, Wichita, Kansas. The church desires to secure some one to take pastoral charge not later than July 1, 1919.

Outside of influenza interference, all avenues of church work are in good working order, and the opportunity is great for some one to work for the Lord here. During the last two years the writer has taken into the church, by letter and baptism, some over fifty new members. Thirty-five of these were received by baptism. It is to be hoped that some available minister who reads these lines, and is qualified for city work, will correspond with the above-named members of the committee. M. S. Frantz.

ELD. DAVID LEATHERMAN

Eld. David Leatherman was born in Hampshire County, Va., Aug. 4, 1841. At the age of fourteen years he came to Clark County, Ohio, where he resided until his death.

In 1870 he was married to Mary Smith. To this union were born two daughters,—Mrs. George Croft and Mrs. Varner Stockstill, who reside near New Carlisle.

In 1878 he and his wife were baptized at McKee's Mill, an historic place of baptism, near New Carlisle. In 1882 he was called to the ministry in the Donnels Creek church. He was ordained to the full ministry in 1890. He served the Donnels Creek church as presiding elder for a period of eight years, resigning because of a defect in his hearing. When a separate congregation was organized, by the members living near New Carlisle, he was, by unanimous consent, chosen as presiding elder, serving one year.

As presiding elder he was possessed of good executive ability. He was able to grasp clearly the facts of any situation, and was a strong contender for the old ways.

His manner of preaching was largely extemporaneous. He believed in the "instant in season and out of season" method of preaching. He enjoyed seeing the "boys" in the ministry called on unexpectedly to preach.

On many occasions he called for a text from his audience, and quite often he then preached his best sermons.

He possessed a keen, ready wit, which was manifested in conversation, and often in his public utterances.

His labors were largely of the pioneer type. For six years, in his early ministry, he drove to Summerford, in Madison County, a distance of thirty-five miles, going on Saturday, preaching and returning on Sunday. He also drove to Greene County, a distance of twenty miles, and held services among the isolated members.

He believed in a free Gospel. During these years of service for the Master, he was engaged in farming, but the pressing duties of the farm did not keep him from answering the many calls that came for his ministry in the sick-room and on funeral occasions. During his ministry he preached nearly 300 funerals and officiated at about 100 weddings. He continued his farm and ministerial labors until a very brief time before his death. Leaving the farm, he moved to New Carlisle, where he died Nov. 29, 1918.

In his ministerial duties, Sister Leatherman, who still lives, has been a real helpmeet. Together they have cast a strong, helpful influence over the lives of many. The isolated, and those who felt the pinch of poverty, found warm, sympathetic friends in Brother and Sister Leatherman.

Bro. Leatherman's sphere of influence was largely with his own and neighboring congregations. Respected by church and community alike, he passed away at the advanced age of seventy-seven years, three months and twenty-five days. J. Howard Eidemiller.

New Carlisle, Ohio, Jan. 8.

DEATH OF BRO. N. A. CONOVER

Norman Alvin Conover, son of Gilbert and Ida Conover, born near Dayton, Ohio, died Dec. 15, 1918, aged 27 years, 2 months and 18 days. In 1909 he married Artie M. Sollenberger, of Salem, Ohio. To this union were born three children. He leaves a wife, son, father, mother, three sisters and one brother. The body was sent from Kansas City, Mo., to Dayton, Ohio, and laid to rest in the Lower Miami cemetery.

Bro. N. A. Conover

His early education began in the country school. From there he went to the high school in Trotwood, graduating at the age of sixteen. After this he spent one term, preparatory to teaching, which occupation he followed for the next five years. At an early age he showed extraordinary ability as a student. His love for books and knowledge was a marked characteristic and a never-failing source of joy to him.

At the age of seventeen, during a series of lectures given by Bro. D. L. Miller, at Trotwood, he became interested and accepted Christ. Soon after his marriage, when but twenty years of age, he was called to the ministry. Realizing that there was plenty of ministerial help in their home congregation, and seeing the need at many other places, he answered the call of the Mission Board of Southern Ohio, taking charge of the mission at Circleville, Ohio. Here Bro. Conover and wife successfully labored for two years, during which time fifty accessions were made to the church, with a marked growth in Sunday-school and other church activities.

Feeling the need of more preparation, he decided to go to Bethany Bible School, which he entered in June, 1916, remaining one year, when a call came from the Mission Board of the Middle District of Missouri, to take charge of the work in Kansas City. At the time of his death he had charge of the work at that place, and in spite of the many disadvantages, the work was prospering and growing. He had planned to return to Bethany Bible School next year, to complete his college work. During his entire pastorate, here in Kansas City, he had been taking school work at the Trolle School.

During the epidemic of influenza in this city, while going into homes of many stricken with the disease, he himself, was infected. A short time before the end, he called those about his bedside to kneel, and prayed for those with whom he had labored, that they might be steadfast and true to their calling. His loyalty to the church, and concern for the welfare of those round about him, were characteristic. He had an open, frank disposition, genial and considerate, which not only made him many friends, but also was the means of making him a very useful servant for his Master. He was anointed according to the Scriptures. He left us, as he was wont to greet us in life,—with a kindly greeting and a happy smile.

Kansas City, Mo. J. A. Wyatt.

SOUTH BEND, INDIANA

"South Bend, population sixty-eight thousand, the largest city in Northern Indiana and capital of St. Joseph County, is situated on the St. Joseph River, one of the most picturesque inland streams in the world, six miles south of the Indiana-Michigan line. It is regarded as one of the cleanest, best-paved and healthiest cities in America." So states the South Bend Chamber of Commerce.

In South Bend we have two churches. "The First" is located in the southeastern part of the city, on Indiana Avenue and Miami Street. The brethren and sisters there constitute a good-sized congregation. Their elder and pastor is Bro. T. Ezra George.

The "Second Church" is in the northwestern part of the city, on the corner of Cushing and Van Buren Streets. The "Studebakers,"—back of the large corporation here,—were much in sympathy with our people and assisted materially in the building of the combined churchhouse and parsonage in 1903. The church was organized and had its initial shepherding under the joint leadership of Elders S. F. Sanger and George D. Zollers.

Bro. Sanger remained here until 1910; then moved to California. Brother Zollers is well remembered over our Brotherhood because of his extensive preaching and his engaging book of large output, entitled: "Thrilling Incidents and Poetical Musings on Sea and Land." Strange it is that, after passing safely through the many dangers, incident to his three-year whaling tour and his service in the Union Army, he should meet his death as he did,—from a fall amidst the quiet of his home, in 1911. His companion, Sister Sarah Zollers, still resides in the bounds of this church and is one of the aged faithful ones. A daughter is the wife of Eld. J. W. Grater, who was given charge of the congregation in 1912. He moved to Nappanee, but very recently entered upon the pastorate of the Decatur church, Ill.

Bro. R. O. Roose was pastor here for several years, and as late as last summer. He now resides at Naperville, Ill., ministering to the church there, besides pursuing courses of study in Bethany Bible School, Chicago.

Sept. 15 the writer entered upon the work here. For over a week, in the period when the "flu" ban was put on our services, he was out of the city. He returned Nov. 7, accompanied by wife and baby-daughter, and this place has since been accounted as home.

The membership here is not large,—scarcely more than fifty. However, we are very glad for the number of others, —non-members and non-resident members,—who attend our public services. There are a few young members and

Suggestions for the Weekly Devotional Meeting Or for Prayerful, Private Meditation.

The New Life in Christ

Romans 13: 14

For Week Beginning February 2, 1919

1. Introductory.—We enter upon the new life in Christ: (1) By sustaining such close and loving relations to him that unconsciously we reproduce his traits of character. (2) By meditating upon his life, as revealed in his Word. (3) By imitating his Example in going about doing good.

2. What Does the New Life Mean for Us?—There must be the cultivation of personal likeness to Christ and personal fellowship with Christ in this mighty enterprise. We must covenant with him that we will live fully consecrated to his service, being absolutely sure that he is "the Bright and Morning Star," "the Chiefest among ten thousand, and the One altogether lovely." We must fully enter into his purposes for the world, until we are like him in all holy fellowship and in all rich reward. Then we will pray for the world until its redemption rests on our hearts as it rests upon his. This we will continue to do "until all shall know him, from the least to the greatest."

3. Imitating the Divine Pattern.—All true believers are steadily endeavoring to enter into complete accord with the Divine Nature. They are growing up into their Living Head, "from whom all the body, fitly framed and knit together, through that which every joint supplieth, maketh increase in love." They speak the truth in love, and they love the truth. They find a message from God in each of the providential events, however small, of every day, and have so valid a sense of the actual personal presence of the Savior, as to be willing to give the keeping of their souls in his care, obtaining power for the days, and peace for the nights. Their spiritual life takes on ever larger and larger proportions, as their union with its Source grows closer.

4. Paul's Fervent Conviction.—The great apostle fully understood the secret of a blessed and effective life. He had the gracious consolation: "Christ loved me and he gave himself for me." He indulged in no exaggeration when he said: "For to me to live is Christ." It was this secret which he was always striving to communicate to others. When he asked Christians to give of their substance to the work of the Lord, he reminded them of the Gracious Friend who, although rich, had made himself poor, that they, through his poverty, might become rich. When he exhorted them to forgive one another, he turned their eyes to the Blessed Father who, for Christ's sake, had forgiven them. It was his unshakable conviction that it is worth while to endure hardship and to suffer tribulation, for "if we be dead with him, we shall also live with him; if we suffer, we shall also reign with him."

5. "Put Ye on the Lord Jesus Christ."—Not simply the righteousness of our Savior, not simply the beauty of his holiness, nor the graces of his character, are we to put on as a garment. The Lord HIMSELF is our vesture. We are so to enter into him by communion, that men shall see him when they behold us, as they see our garments when they look upon our bodies.

6. Suggestive References.—Christ is willing to do more than we ask or think (Eph. 3: 14-21). Following Christ's example (Rom. 15: 2, 3). Manifesting the life of Jesus (2 Cor. 4: 10). "Put on Christ" (Gal. 3: 27). The Perfect Pattern (Eph. 4: 13, 15, 24). "Walk in love" (Eph. 5: 2). The Mind of Christ (Philpp. 2: 5-8). "The new man" (Col. 3: 10, 11, 13). "Looking unto Jesus" (Heb. 12: 1-4). "Be ye holy" (1 Peter 1: 15). "Sons of God" (1 John 3: 1, 2, 3, 16).

CALENDAR FOR SUNDAY, JANUARY 26

Sunday-school Lesson, Israel Crossing the Red Sea.—Ex. 14: 1 to 15: 21.

Christian Workers' Meeting, The Bible in the World Crisis.—1 Peter 1: 24, 25.

GAINS FOR THE KINGDOM

Seven confessed Christ in the Bartlesville Mission, Okla.

Two were recently baptized in the church at Outlook, Wash.

Four made the good choice at McPherson, Kans., recently.

One was baptized in the West Johnstown church, Pa., Jan. 5.

One recently confessed Christ in the church at Colorado Springs, Colo.

Two have been baptized in the Germantown church, Pa., since the last report.

One has been baptized in the First Church, York, Pa., since the last report.

Five have confessed Christ in the church at Independence, Kans., since the previous report.

Eight accepted Christ at Daleville, Va.,—Bro. Galen B. Royer, of Huntingdon, Pa., evangelist.

Six confessed Christ at Woodville, Cal.,—Bro. P. E. Robertson, of Lindsay, same State, evangelist.

Four were baptized and one reclaimed in the Everett church, Pa., not as yet reported in these columns.

Six stood for Christ in the Hade meetinghouse, Falling Spring congregation, Pa.,—Bro. Rufus P. Bucher, of Quarryville, same State, evangelist.

CONTEMPLATED MEETINGS

Bro. R. N. Leatherman, of Cincinnati, Ohio, to begin in April in the Anderson church, Ind.

Bro. C. B. Smith, of Morrill, Kans., to begin in May in the Larned country church, same State.

Bro. J. Edwin Jarboe, of Chicago, Ill., to begin early in February in the West Wichita church, Kans.

Bro. Nathan Martin, of Rheems, Pa., to begin Feb. 15 in the Richland house, Tulpehocken congregation, same State.

PERSONAL MENTION

Bro. Ira H. Frantz, late of Sidney, Ohio, should now be addressed at Summerfield, Kans.

The correspondents of Dr. J. S. Dorsey, of Baltimore, Md., are requested to note that he has located at 411 Fifth Street, Miami, Fla., for the winter months.

Bro. A. J. Culler, of McPherson, Kans., has been chosen by the Sunday School Board of his State as delegate to the World's Sunday School Convention at Tokyo, Japan.

A cablegram, just received at the Mission Rooms, announces that Bro. J. B. Emmert and family left Bombay, India, early in the morning of Jan. 20, making their homeward voyage by way of the Paeific Route.

Bro. Fred A. Flora, 234 N. Washington Avenue, Moscow, Idaho, has been chosen as Writing Clerk, pro tem., of Idaho and Western Montana, to fill the unexpired term of Bro. S. S. Neher, who has moved out of the State. All matter for District Meeting should be in the hands of Bro. Flora at least thirty days before the convening of the District Meeting.

Bro. R. W. Quakenbush informs us that he has moved from Fredonia, Kans., to R. D. 1, Olpe, same State, where he should be addressed hereafter. As this removal leaves the Fredonia church without ministerial help, any of our ministers, contemplating a change, will find an open and needy field at that point. Further information may be had by applying to Bro. W. H. Sell, Olpe, Kans.

Among recent visitors at the "Messenger" rooms was Bro. Geo. K. Miller, of Cando, N. Dak., who, accompanied by his wife, is spending a few weeks with friends in Northern Illinois. Bro. Miller does not seem to mind shining partly by reflected light in addition to his own, so we mention the fact that he is the youngest brother of the more widely-known D. L. Miller, our Senior Editor.

The Sunday-school Editor left Elgin last Sunday afternoon for Toronto, Canada, to attend a meeting of the Sunday-school Council of Evangelical Denominations, in which body he represents the Sunday-school interests of the Church of the Brethren. Bro. Miller's itinerary also includes New York and Washington. In New York he is to confer with the American Committee for Relief in the Near East, formerly called the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief, concerning the matters of which he speaks elsewhere on this page, and in Washington he hopes to meet Bro. J. M. Henry, Secretary of the Central Service Committee, who is also assisting in the development of the Relief and Reconstruction plans. On his return journey he plans to spend the coming Sunday in a Union Sunday-school Meeting at South Bend, Ind.

Bro. J. H. B. Williams returned from the twenty-sixth annual session of the Foreign Missions Conference of North America, held last week at New Haven, Conn., full of renewed energy and enthusiasm for his work. Fifty-six different mission boards or organizations were represented. The general subject of the conference was the relation of the missionary enterprise to the new world conditions. We have good grounds for the hope that Bro. Winger, Vice-Chairman of our Mission Board, who also attended the Conference, will give the "Messenger" readers the benefit of some of his impressions.

We extend our congratulations to Bro. Andrew Hutchison, of La Verne, Cal., in view of his having passed, on Jan. 15, the eighty-third anniversary of his birth. Though it has become difficult for him to use the pen, Bro. Hutchison writes to extend a few words of greeting to the readers of the "Messenger." His ministerial career has indeed been a remarkable one since he began it, more than fifty-nine years ago, especially so since during all that time, and even from a date several years beyond its beginning, he has not had a day entirely free from physical pain. At one time during this period Bro. Hutchison preached for 440 days without missing a day.

Forward Movement Bulletin

The Periodical Goal set for the year 1919 is as follows:

5,000 new "Gospel Messenger" subscriptions.
5,000 new "Missionary Visitor" subscriptions.
7,500 new "Our Young People" subscriptions.

In order that each congregation may easily determine its share in this part of the Forward Movement program, the following general rule may be used:

Secure two new "Gospel Messenger" subscriptions, two new "Missionary Visitor" subscriptions and three new "Our Young People" subscriptions for each group of forty members or fraction thereof. Of course, these subscriptions must be over and above what is necessary to make up for losses due to the death of subscribers or other causes.

Will your congregation do its share toward reaching the Periodical Goal set for 1919?

Churches of Northwestern Ohio will please note Bro. J. L. Guthrie's announcement among the Notes.

Bro. J. G. Stinebaugh, President of the Mission Board of Middle Indiana, makes an announcement among the Notes, to which the special attention of the churches of his District is directed.

MISCELLANEOUS

The Bethel church, Colo., is greatly in need of a pastor. Sister Elnora B. Switzer, Arriba, Colo., will furnish particulars regarding this opportunity for real usefulness.

The members at McPherson, Kans., have decided upon the location for a new house of worship, and the building committee has been instructed to purchase the site decided upon.

The dedication of the new house of worship, now being erected by the Franklin County church, is to take place June 15,—Bro. A. P. Blough delivering the address for the occasion.

Any minister, desiring a location for either city or country work which would require a part of his time only and for which he would receive partial support, is invited to correspond with Dr. S. B. Miller, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

The Peters Creek church, Va., raised a total of $1,200 for Relief Work. This is a day of great needs, and we rejoice that many of our congregations are measuring their giving by the stupendous requirements of the situation.

The members of the Waddams Grove church, Ill., have caught the vision of greater possibilities. As the first step towards an aggressive movement, they propose to remodel and modernize the old church at Louisa, adapting it to the most approved Sunday-school requirements. A pastor is also to be secured for the more adequate evangelization of the home field.

McPherson College desires to secure several copies of the College Catalog for each of the following years: 1888-'89, '89-'90, '90-'91, '91-'92, '92-'93, '93-'94, '96-'97, '97-'98, '99-'00, 1902-'03, '10-'11, '11-'12, '12-'13, '13-'14. If any of our readers can mail catalogs for any of the years named above to the McPherson College Library, McPherson, Kans., the favor will be appreciated.

Sister Emma Miller, R. D. 2, Decatur, Ind., requests us to make the following correction: "In the 'List of Churches, with Pastors and Elders in Charge,' as given in the 1919 Yearbook, Pleasant Dale church, Middle Indiana, is listed with Bro. D. M. Byerly as pastor, and Bro. Frank Fisher as elder. It should read: 'J. L. Kline, foreman; Frank Fisher, elder.' We have no pastor."

Two city pastors are needed, right now, by the Mission Board of Middle Indiana, and two more will be required in the near future. Applicants for these vacancies are kindly requested to address Bro. J. G. Stinebaugh, President of Mission Board, Camden, Ind.

A BYSTANDER'S NOTES

A Good Answer.—The examining board of a leading denomination at Springfield, Mass., was called upon, recently, to pass upon the qualifications of a lady candidate for the ministry. After a number of the usual questions had been asked and answered satisfactorily, the interrogator propounded the ancient, much-debated question: "What is the relation of faith to works?" The candidate quickly replied: "Answering your question in a way that all can readily grasp, I would say: 'Fifty-fifty.'" Her answer impresses the Bystander as being concise and in perfect harmony with Holy Writ.

Of a minister, who recently was called to his reward, it is said that he believed in the "instant in season and out of season" method of preaching, and greatly enjoyed seeing the younger ministers unexpectedly called upon to preach. Doubtless he recognized that the development of initiative, and a readiness to preach acceptably on short notice, has decided advantages, and therefore he felt like encouraging any effort along that line. As for himself, he frequently called for a text from his audience, and quite often he is said to have preached his best sermons ou those occasions. Possibly his training along a wide range of subjects enabled him to respond to any request that might be proffered,—a procedure not always expedient for the average minister.

What the Mirror Reveals.—While, usually, the mirror is thought to cater to human vanity, it may, as a writer suggests, be made to serve a really useful purpose also. A lady, possessed of an uncontrollable temper, was told by a friend: "If you would only take a look at yourself in a mirror, when you have one of your fits of anger, the mortification experienced, because of your hideous appearance, would help you to control your temper." The suggestion was pondered, and when the next aggravation caused angry feelings to arise, a glance at the mirror brought her to a realization of her changed exterior. It greatly annoyed her that she gave way so frequently to paroxysms of anger, and right then and there she resolved to remain perfectly calm hereafter, no matter how great the aggravation might be. Possibly none of us can afford to disregard what the mirror tells us. It may tell us some unpleasant things sometimes, when we are in an angry mood. Our mean thoughts and ungoverned passions may have spoiled an otherwise fair visage. We read of a mother who makes use of the mirror method whenever her children give way to their tempers. Just one look at the reflection is usually sufficient to bring the erossest child into a more amiable frame of mind. Let it not be forgotten, however, that the real work of grace must, after all, be wrought in the heart, the fountainhead of our thoughts and emotions. The inner man needs to look often into the mirror of Holy Writ, seeing himself therein as God sees him. Unreservedly placing himself in charge of the Divine Keeper, and resting wholly upon the Father's promises, there will be little occasion for angry passions and unkind words.

RELIEF AND RECONSTRUCTION

Yes, our Sunday-schools and churches are responding most liberally to this great need. They feel the need and are doing their part towards the suffering.

Our people respond more generally in gifts for relief than they do in gifts for reconstruction. There is a reason for this. All papers and magazines are full of appeals for money for relief. Immediate needs call louder than needs only a little more remote. But get ready for the great call that is coming to you for money with which to relieve and rebuild. You will be interested in knowing what your Relief and Reconstruction Committee has under way.

Your committee has been hampered because the men composing it have been bound down with other work. But the way is now open to secure the help of some who will be able to give their time to this matter, and these are selecting a number of able assistants, so that all will come into immediate touch with the needs and the work.

All funds received are reported monthly in the "Missionary Visitor." But remember that the "Visitor" reports are published about three months after the date of your remittance.

So far it has cost you but little to handle these funds. Both the Mission Board and the Sunday School Board are represented on the committee, and these boards have kindly allowed their representatives to do your work on the time of the boards. Further, these representatives have volunteered much work, so that the expense has been low.

Support, as you should, your home church and home missions, contribute liberally to the appeals of the General Mission Board, but do not forget that you owe a debt to the starving and homeless. Prepare to meet your obligation in a way that will satisfy your own conscience and your God. When you have done that, funds will not be lacking, and thousands will be rescued. J. E. Miller.

AROUND THE WORLD

Red Cross Helping Russian School Children

Pennies, nickels and dimes, contributed by American school children, may not be regarded by some as a very large factor in relieving dire want, and yet these humble gifts have been providing midday nourishment for more than 2,200 school children of Archangel, Russia. A great majority of the Russian children are in an anæmic condition,—many of them refugees from the interior of the country, where food of all kinds has been practically unobtainable during the last year, because of scarcity or the prohibitive price. Many of the school-teachers are also refugees, and the Red Cross is making provisions for their relief. Truly, our gifts to this worthy society are "bread cast upon the waters."

"Conscientious Objectors" Released

Jan. 11, according to reliable reports, 1,500 "Conscientious Objectors" were dismissed from further service under the military arm of the Government. The above number comprises men whose claims for exemption from combatant service resulted in their being assigned to other duties. Whether the dismissal includes those who, for various reasons, were assigned to the Disciplinary Barracks at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., we are unable to say. The sentences of these vary from ten to thirty years, and at best will entail untold hardship. Recent regulations of the War Department will, however, greatly mitigate the rigor of the treatment meted out to these unfortunate ones, and it is to be hoped that in course of time many may be pardoned.

Eighty Millions for Changing Books

War's demands are multiform, and by and by it will levy a toll on every household that has children in school. As soon as the Peace Conference has ended its sessions, all geographies and histories used in the schools will have to be revised. This means two new books for each of twenty and one-half million school children, or forty-one million new books in all. Each of these books will cost parents at least a dollar each, if not more. In some of the cities and States school-books are provided at public expense, but even there each tax-payer must help to foot the bill. Then all the old books, which originally cost about as much as those mentioned above, must be junked. This makes the total bill about eighty million dollars, and all due to the war.

Distressing Conditions in Russia

While, unfortunately, little of the actual conditions in Russia is permitted to reach the outside world, enough is known to cause considerable uneasiness to other nations. Bolshevism is a real danger wherever its pernicious influences happen to strike. Its demoralizing tendency is clearly shown in a recent ruling of the town council of Petrograd, according to which "all unmarried women between the ages of eighteen and forty-five" shall be provided with husbands selected by the council. Children are not to remain with their parents, but are to be taken to some institution, to be reared and educated by the state. Just imagine what such a destruction of real family life will mean to a country whose moral conceptions are none too good, at best!

A Change for the Better

Recent reports indicate that the great Krupp factory at Essen, Germany, where the giant guns have been manufactured, is to be turned to industrial uses, and will henceforth produce farm implements, or something of that sort. Concerning such a plan, many highly commendatory things might be said. While it would, undoubtedly, be a good thing for Germany, it would be equally good for all other nations also. Laying aside all other theories for war elimination,—the one infallible way to prevent war is to stop making implements of war. As Dr. Frank Crane so pointedly observes: "It is a psychologic certainty that a nation which goes on, for a long time, manufacturing things wherewith to shoot, will, by and by, go crazy and make use of them."

Prohibition Wins the Day

Jan. 16 will long be remembered as the memorable date on which national prohibition was practically assured by the ratification of the Constitutional Amendment by thirty-eight States. Still other States are anxiously awaiting the opportunity to make a like declaration. While prohibition leaders are glorying in their great victory, they realize that the United States will not be bone-dry unless, in some way, the law is rigidly enforced. Past experience has shown that public sentiment must insist upon faithful adherence to any prohibitory enactment, if it is to be made a success. The United States honored itself by being the first great nation to enact a permanent prohibitory measure. With the outbreak of the war, Russia stopped the sale of intoxicants by imperial order, though the restrictions were not fully observed, and, after the Czar's abdication, they were soon wholly disregarded. France adopted a stringent regulatory policy, and other countries did likewise, but none of them took legislative action to stop the sale of liquors forever. Undoubtedly the war gave the prohibition movement in this country overwhelming impetus, and "dry" leaders found little difficulty in getting through Congress the resolution, submitting the Constitutional Amendment, as well as several temporary restrictions.

War Cripples Parade

Citizens of Berlin, Germany, were given an opportunity, recently, to view a most harrowing demonstration. Tens of thousands of war cripples,—men maimed for life,—marched in ranks of four at a pace adapted to cripples unable to walk without crutches. Many were without one leg, many had lost both. These men were followed by cripples without arms. Then came the blind, and men with faces injured so terribly that one woman fainted as she looked at them. Tears filled the eyes of the onlookers. The dismal procession took hours to pass the Ministry of War building. And as this was but a small part of the large aggregate of the crippled, the effect wrought upon the onlookers was most distressing. The tragedies of war are beyond human conception.

"Bone-Dry" Law Is Upheld

Statutes of some of the "dry" States seemingly permitted persons, bibulously inclined, to secure limited amounts of intoxicants for their own use, either by bringing them into the State personally, or importing them otherwise. The decision of a lower court in West Virginia, some weeks ago, exonerated a citizen of that State for carrying a quart of whisky for his personal use into his home town, because the local law permitted it. Then the Supreme Court was called upon to decide whether the "Reed Bone-Dry Amendment," as enacted by Congress, applied to the case in question. A decision was handed down which definitely settles this matter. The Reed Amendment holds, and must be lived up to, no matter what the statute of a State may allow.

Sacrifice of a Moravian Mother

While much has been said of the readiness of mothers to give up their sons for the service of their country, no finer story of sacrifice, joyfully made, can be told than that of a Moravian mother who had given a son to missions. When told, one day, of his death, she said: "Since my son Thomas has gone to heaven through the missionary life, I hope God will call my son John to the service." John was called, became a missionary and also died. When the mother heard the sad message, she exclaimed: "I wish the Lord would call my last son, William." Her prayer was answered. William went and also fell on the field. But the mother's holy courage and devotion to her Lord could not be daunted, for she exclaimed: "Would that I had a thousand sons to give to God."

Helpfulness in the Home Field

We notice that the Friends, despite their great activity in Reconstruction Work in France, are not neglectful of opportunities here at home. In Anderson, Ind., they have undertaken the establishment of a children's boarding home and day nursery,—the latter for mothers who must work. At the boarding home fathers may board their motherless children, so they need not be dependent upon the care of county officials. When county and city officials consulted with Friends on providing for this urgent emergency, the society at once regarded it as an opportunity not to be passed by unimproved. Steps were taken to put the work on a permanent footing,—the plan being to make it eventually self-supporting. Here is a phase of "welfare work" readily adaptable to almost any community, and one that our people may well consider. The more fully we enter into the life of the people whom we meet from day to day, the more readily can we be of real service to them. And that will give the right sort of ring to our Christian profession.

A Substitute Needed

Right now, while the final disappearance of the saloon has been practically assured by the recent victory of the prohibition forces, it is none too early to look at a problem that will have to be faced. When, in obedience to the decision of the majority, the saloon doors will close at the time designated, what provision will be made to furnish a social place of assembly for the former saloon patrons? It is a well understood fact that the strongest attraction of the saloon, for many of its patrons, has always been the social feature,—especially so in the larger cities. Well warmed and lighted, the better grade of saloons provided a convenient center of intercourse. Saloon defenders have urged that, in a very real sense, the saloon is "the poor man's club," and that the closing of these places will debar those men from any opportunity of social commingling. Christian workers along social lines, who have had experience with community centers, feel quite sure that they can furnish a very acceptable substitute for the saloon, affording every facility for agreeable and uplifting associations. Advocates of that movement see in the passing of the saloons a supreme opportunity for expansion of the Community Center Movement, and it can not be denied that their point is well taken. At a recent conference in New York City, leading workers, interested in community centers as a vital factor of national welfare, discussed the very subject above referred to. All agreed that if a substitute for the saloon is to be created, those in charge must first appreciate what social feature is really worth while in the saloon. A social gathering place for men must have an atmosphere of good-fellowship and exalted optimism, encouraging the development of the best,—a place truly worth while. Here is a task for the Christian forces of our land,—a supreme opportunity!

An Evangelistic Campaign for India

As a successful manager of interdenominational campaigns in Oriental lands, Sherwood Eddy probably ranks among the best. This year he proposes to enter upon evangelistic activities in India, taking up that work under wholly interdenominational auspices. His aim is not to hold large meetings, on the plan of the extensive union revival efforts of this country. His purpose is rather to get in touch with small groups of non-Christian men and women who have been under missionary influences, but not yet brought to a definite decision. Theo, too, Mr. Eddy expects to spend much time with the studeots at the various educational institutions, hoping to win many of them for the Kingdom, thus making them a leavening influence to gain others.

Selfishness Must Go

M. Clemenceau, the French Premier, in an address before the French Chambers, recently declared that whatever else came out of the Peace Conference, "France's interests would have to be made safe at all hazards." Though the utterance was made thoughtlessly, perhaps, it was wholly unworthy of the usually level-headed official, and we need not wonder that dissenting exclamations were made all over the chamber, some even saying: "The war has commenced again." We may rest assured, that whatever means, eventually adopted at the Peace Conference, may settle future wars, selfishness can never do it. The safety of France, Great Britain or any nation will never be insured by a purely selfish measure, but rather by a willingness to become factors in the program of general world welfare, by contributing to the success and permanency of the League of Nations.

Unealled for Display

Were a prophet of old suddenly to appear among the devotees of fashion's display and extravagance, he would doubtless find much occasion for severe criticism, and even vehement denunciation. Recent press reports tell us that leading Boston women are greatly incensed over the expenditure of $75,000 for a fur coat by Mrs. W. E. Corey, wife of the "steel king." Rightfully they denounce it as extravagant, and in particularly bad taste at this time, when the mothers of war-devastated Europe are crying for the wherewithal to feed and clothe their children. A leading advocate of greater simplicity in feminine apparel frankly insists: "No American woman should flaunt a $75,000 sable coat in the faces of French women who have sacrificed so much in the war." Another lady rightfully maintains: "American women are spending far more on dress than they ought to." Perhaps the light of a clearer vision is dawning. If God gives us the possibilities and the power to get wealth, to acquire influence, to be forces in the world, what is the true conception of life but Divine Ownership and human administration? "Of thine own we render thee." All that we have should be at the Lord's disposal.

Joyfully Enduring Affliction

Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery, who recently visited the mission fields of the Far East, describes some decidedly interesting incidents and scenes of church life in Korea. While, to most of us, actual persecution and suffering is merely a descriptive term, rather than an actual experience, the earnest Christians of Korea have not been without their testing times by fire and sword. Several years ago a huge conspiracy was alleged to have been started by native Christians, and ever since, the Japanese authorities have laid a heavy hand upon the supposed offenders. Missionaries, even, were accused. Koreans were hurried off to prison, and when they would not confess to charges of which they were wholly innocent, they were tortured to extort an admission of some sort. One man was tortured for seventy days, to make him confess, but in spite of agonizing pain he would not admit the charges, nor would he deny his Lord. In full enjoyment of the comfortable Christianity here at home, and our inclination to murmur and complain at every semblance of hardship, all of us might surely get a new note of actual rejoicing in affliction from the remarkable experience of a Korean student: Maliciously accused of plotting against the officials of the land, he was put in jail as a suspect. Placed in a cell by himself, his chief sorrow was that he was barred from contact with the other prisoners, to whom he might have talked about Christ. Banishment to a near by island followed, but finally he was released. With a shining face he said: "Just think, I longed for a chance to speak of Christ, and mourned because I could not do it in jail. Then God sent me to an unevangelized island, where there was plenty of work, and the Government paid my fare."

HOME AND FAMILY

Winter

BY JULIA GRAYDON

We know thy herald, Winter cold,
We hear his footsteps quick and bold,
He runneth over field and wold
To tell us of thy coming.

We see the dead leaves on the trees,
The little bird far south now flees,
The grass is fading on the leas;
For thy approach all's ready.

To Fall we bid a fond farewell,
And of her wondrous beauty tell,
Then hear through forest, wood and dell
Departing footsteps harrying.

The Minister's Wife

BY FERN M. WAGNER

Her Relation to the Congregation, Her Home and Her Husband's Work

(This paper was read by Sister Wagner at the Ministerial Meeting of the Middle District of Missouri, and is by special request given to our readers.—Ed.)

Among no other class of people bave the wives so much to do with the success or failure of their husbands, in their life-work, as among the ministers. Many of them, by their tempers, their tongues, their bad manners, and their want of tact as well as of piety, have destroyed the usefulness of their husbands. In some instances they have even caused them to give up the ministry.

We are glad, however, that a larger number have been real "help-meets," indeed, to their husbands in their work. They have made the rough places smooth, and inspired their husbands with faith, hope and courage. They have won the love of the members by their kindness, helpfulness and self-sacrifice. They have set a good example by their dress and conduct.

The church needs the minister's wife, for her activities are a vital factor of the church. True, it may not be noticed by the public, but it is of value, nevertheless. The bigbest influence is not always exerted by the one that can stand in public and give a talk. During this meeting, perhaps, many a minister's wife is at bome, charged with the cares of the family, and praying for the success of this meeting.

As a matter of course, the minister's wife should attend all the services and lead in prayer, but there are many other avenues of service. Her secret prayers and ber kind handshakes are of great value. Her hand laid upon the shoulder of one who is discouraged, often means much. By her tact the young people may be interested and kept at work. The minister's wife, therefore, besides carrying the larger burdens of the home and family, may be of untold use to God and the church.

Every minister's wife should try to be a blessing to the church. If she is not, there is something radically wrong. By her untiring faith and prayer she can have a large place in helping her husband. She may help him to do his part in bringing the world to the feet of Jesus.

Her prayers should ascend while her husband is preparing his sermon, and also while he is in the pulpit. This contributes much toward the success of his message.

It is wholly appropriate for the minister's wife to appear neat and clean, but this does not mean a display of unnecessary finery. Too many wives of today are spending their time making things that only add to needless display, while many things are remaining undone for the Master's cause. The wife can be a great help in the proper appearance of the minister, in the pulpit and otherwise.

No one but the minister's wife can see so well the things the minister should not do, when standing before his audience. No one is so greatly concerned about his creditable appearance.

A minister, on one occasion, was telling what a task his wife had in getting him to quit some of his unbecoming habits in the pulpit. She was always afraid that he might do something that is improper. Of course this thing can be carried too far and yet a gentle hint may not be out of place when some inappropriate things are unconsciously done in the pulpit.

The home is a divine institution. God's aim was to have it kept pure and clean. All ministers' homes should be dedicated to God and given over to the advancement of his Kingdom. Much of the responsibility of the home will naturally devolve upon the wife, for the husband is busy with his daily work, besides attending to the ministry of the Word. You should find in that home love, sympathy, welcome, good nature and freedom,—a place where God loves to dwell. A husband going out from a neat, quiet home, where these are found, certainly can do better work in the pulpit.

I am glad that it does not take money to make this kind of a home, and that God is ready, at all times, to help erect such homes. Today, owing to conditions in our country, women have become discontented with their God-given sphere. They are belittling the duties of home, wife and mother, and crying out for larger and more prominent places. They are impatient with their high calling,—the greatest in all the world.

I wonder if there is not a reason for this. Many of our girls think that when they finish high school, they must enter into the business circle of life,—work in some office or bank. Titus 2: 3, 4, 5 tells us that the older women should train the young women to be kind, sober-minded, chaste and workers at home.

In order that their daughter may meet with success, the mother often does all the work at home. The daughter has no time to cook, to bake and to sew. Then, when she enters a home of her own, there are so many things to learn all at once that the tasks seem a burden to her. Little ones come. The mother's health may not be good, and she becomes discouraged with her place in the world. How could a wife like this be a help to her husband and his work?

Good daughters make good wives and good mothers. It is a mother's influence, above all else, that shapes life and moulds character. Nothing can be compared with a mother's influence. The wife and mother contributes to the church's and world's need when she is sewing seams in tiny garments, besides giving the little ones the touch of love.

Woman has been given a fine and sensitive temperament, with sympathies easily touched, and this has fitted her beautifully for the home.

God honored motherhood in choosing a fine, pure, chaste virgin to be the mother of Jesus. This should be an honor to every mother.

One of the saddest blights that can darken a home is the deliberate exclusion of little children from its realms. Would this fact make any difference to the minister's home, his congregation and the world with which he comes in contact? It certainly would, for a minister's wife that does not love the little babe, can not love the children with whom she will come in contact, while helping her husband. If she does not love children, how can she have real love and sympathy for the members of her husband's congregation? The world is expecting much of the minister's wife, and has a right to.

If all churches over the land had more wives and mothers like Mary and Hannah of old, there would be more sons ready for the ministry, more daughters that would be real ministers' wives, more ministers going out with a greater earnestness, having prayers back of their message, and thus God's Kingdom would be enlarged.

a number of aged ones. Some of the latter are physically unable to attend our meetings. Several are octogenarians.

Our deacons are four,—Brethren George A. Sensenman, Frank Bottorff, Wesley W. Zimmerman and John W. Austin. At a recent council, in selecting church officers for the present year, Bro. H. L. Chambers was chosen president of the Christian Workers' Society; Bro. Wesley W. Zimmerman, superintendent of Sunday-school. As presiding elder we have Bro. T. Ezra George. The pastor deems it both a pleasure and a blessing to be associated in the work of the city with Bro. George.

The Ministerial Association of the city meets each Monday. A score of pastors are present on an average, and the sessions are often quite helpful, as items of common interest are considered. We are grateful for the fact that in our daily newspapers we are offered space on Saturdays for the publication of our church announcements. Thus our services are impressed upon the reading public.

Recently, after being in the reading room of the Y. M. C. A., and after examining various magazines and religious papers in the Public Library, the question came with special force: "Why is there not io evidence, at each place, our 'Gospel Messenger'?" The pastor of the Second Church could think of no ooe more responsible than himself for the "Messenger's" absence, so he got immediately busy upon arrival home. As a consequence, there is each week, now, a "Messenger" at each of the places referred to. These extra copies are read by,—who knows how many? The places referred to are frequented by a multitude of persons in a week's time. Beyond our comprehension is the great good that may be done by our faithful "Gospel Messenger."

An excellent Christmas program was rendered by our Sunday-school on the evening of Dec. 22. The little folks did extra well, and the adults also acquitted themselves creditably. An offering of $10 was lifted for our Relief and Reconstruction Committee.

The writer became acquainted recently with Rev. Frank B. Solin, M. A., formerly a Jew, who has been a Christian now for twenty-six years. He now superintends the Christian Mission to Israel, in Chicago. He delivered a message, unique and uplifting, at our evening service, Dec. 29.

Jan. 5, when, by reason of their broken furnace, the members of the First Church could not assemble in their own house, a number of them came over to our church and gave us an agreeable surprise. The Spirit of the Lord was surely present as we worshiped together.

In conjunction with the pastorate of the Second Church is the work of the Berrien church, Michigan. The latter is financed by the Mission Board of Northern Indiana. The pastor regrets that he has been able to give but little service to that field. A number of times he attempted to minister there, but was singularly hindered. It is a hard point to work from here, as every one acquainted with the situation will readily agree. It can only be reached by automobile, and at least forty-five miles must be traversed to complete the round trip.

An outline of the day's work, when the pastor last ministered to both churches on the same Sunday, may possibly be of interest. At South Bend, our Sunday-school convened at 9:30 A. M., where the writer taught a class of young people. Afterwards he delivered the morning message. Dinner was hastily eaten, and then, accompanied by his wife and babe, the auto trip was made through Niles and Buchanan to the Berrien church. There another service was conducted. Upon return to South Bend it was nearly time for the Christian Workers' Meeting. He was leader that night, and, in addition, led singing in the absence of all three choristers. Then came the evening sermon from the pulpit. You need not wonder that there was a sweet night's repose. Ralph G. Rarick.

TRUSTEES' MEETING AT BLUE RIDGE COLLEGE

An all-day meeting of the Board of Trustees of Blue Ridge College and the Board of District Trustees of Eastern Maryland was held Jan. 4. Much business was transacted.

Great interest in the development of the college was shown and a fine enthusiasm for larger things was freely expressed. Plans for enlarging the scope of the Bible Department and the training of church workers, were formulated, and adopted. A program for the renovation and construction of buildings, which are much needed, was outlined and authorized. Steps were taken to increase the number of members on the Board of Trustees, and to extend their distribution.

A resolution was passed, endorsing the Forward Movement of the church as outlined by the various Boards, and pledging their cooperation. The Treasurer's report showed that splendid progress is being made with the Endowment Fund. F. F. Holsopple.

NORTHERN MINNESOTA

Beautiful northern Minnesota, with its lakes and streams and trees, with its ever-increasing number of homeseekers and homemakers, is, as yet, a comparatively new field of labor for the Church of the Brethren. There is fine opportunity here for missionary enterprise. Many communities, both here and elsewhere, have long been, and are now, without any religious influence whatever. In some places union Sunday-schools are held, but these often have no minister to conduct preaching services. The people are, as a rule, open-minded, and anxiously welcome any influence that will better conditions for themselves and their children.

Much of this country is quite new, but is rapidly being developed. Schools are being opened, roads built and other improvements added. This country possesses much of value to the homeseeker. Its wonderfully-invigorating climate and productive soil, coupled with its natural beauty make it an ideal place for a home. It is especially adapted to stock-raising and is rapidly coming to the front as a dairy State. Vegetables and small fruits grow abundantly, as well as small grains and grasses,—this State being the natural home of the red clover.

The town of Nymore is a part of Bemidji, a hustling little city of 8,000, located near a number of fine lakes. Thus excellent facilities are afforded for fishing as well as for securing game, which abounds in the timber close by.

A small group of members is already located near this place. We welcome more, as there is room for all. The land company at Bemidji has very kindly offered to hold all their land in that community for our members, if they wish to locate close together. They are anxious to secure settlers who are good, honest, industrious people. We hope to have a prosperous church in the near future, and will be only too glad to answer any inquiry that may be made. Address either Abner Stone, R. D. 3, Bemidji, Minn., or the writer. Wilbur Brower.

TO THE SISTERS' AID SOCIETIES

The Sisters' Aid Society is one of the working branches of the church. The more we work in the Society, the larger the branch becomes. What are you doing to help make the branch grow? In the past year most Aid Societies were doing Red Cross work, which was well and good. When the call came for help to relieve the suffering, the women from the churches answered the call and did their part. Some sewed, while others knit. In every call for the good of mankind the church has been ready to lend her assistance. By united help, the world war came to an end. Can we not unite in the work of the church and cause a greater work in the saving of souls? Can we, as Aid Societies, make this year of 1919 the best yet in our work? Organize your District and cooperate as one, have one aim, and let that aim be "winning souls for him who died that we might live." In union there is strength.

It is sometimes said: "Their Aid Society." Can we not say: "Our Aid Society," and really feel we belong to it? May we be willing to follow where he leads!

There are many sad and destitute homes by reason of the war and influenza. Can you not go as an Aid Society worker, and take with you sunshine and comfort to these homes? The test of a Christian is serving. What greater joy can one have than helping others! Calls have come to our notice from the Far West, for help in needy families, and should there be those worthy homes in need, you can make it known in this way. Let our motto for the year 1919 be: "Willing Workers."

Mrs. M. C. Swigart, President.

GOSHEN, INDIANA

Goshen City church has been progressing well in her work and the outlook is very encouraging. Bro. David Metzler has been elected presiding elder for 1919. Dec. 29 Bro. Metzler conducted a very impressive service, in which the officers and teachers of the church and Sunday-school were charged, and set apart for their responsible work. At a recent service our pastor preached a splendid sermon, in response to which about forty pledged themselves to become tithers for at least one year. It seems to mark the beginning of new life in our church work, and we are hoping that this spirit of consecration will grow until it includes the whole church membership. Dec. 22 a Christmas program was enjoyed by a full house of appreciative listeners. At this service an offering of $167.01 was taken for Armenian and Syrian Relief.

Our church attendance is increasing, especially at the evening services. We rejoice that six new members have been received into the church by baptism, and one has been reclaimed within the past few weeks. We were not able to hold a series of meetings because of the influenza epidemic.

At our first quarterly council, Jan. 2, our pastor presented a "Forward Movement" program for our church. It is in line with the recommendations of the Conference Boards. The church accepted the program as offered, and begins a new year hopefully. We are planning some improvements on the church, in order to take better care of our primary work in the Sunday-school. The volunteer system of giving supports our work financially. After a budget for the year was made out, the Board of Finance conducted an every-member canvass. The amount of money pledged for the year will cover the budget. Our pastor, Bro. F. A. Myers, has been reelected for another year. Altogether the work of the Goshen City church is very encouraging, and we expect to "press on toward the goal unto the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." Beulah Manahan.

BIBLE AND MISSIONARY INSTITUTE OF BLUE RIDGE COLLEGE

The annual Bible and Missionary Institute will be held at Blue Ridge College Jan. 26 to Feb. 2. The instructors are Bro. D. J. Lichty, Prof. Wm. Kinsey, and Eld. J. M. Henry, of Washington, D. C. Rev. O. R. Palmer, of the Philadelphia Bible School, will deliver four lectures on "Fundamental Bible Doctrines."

Although this announcement was belated because of health conditions, we are glad to report the freedom from influenza in this locality.

All are invited to attend the sessions of this Institute. Over three hundred attended last year, and we hope for a still larger attendance this year. Programs will be sent to all applying for them. F. F. Holsopple.

RIDING THE MULE

It is not an uncommoo thing in the South to see a man riding a mule. Of course there are those who are too proud and would be ashamed to be seen riding a mule.

Dear reader, has God called you and asked you to do something for him? Have you thought you would be willing to work in your own country, in the South? If you have, the door is open. We have Americans, negroes, Mexicans and Italians who would listen to one who would not be too proud to get out of his car and ride a mule.

Remember how the Master rode into Jerusalem. Get the thought? Then decide to come and help to hold up the hands of some who have spent not a few years of their lives, trying to plant the truth in the South, who have seen the church here torn, wounded and bleeding, as it were, almost to death. I know there are those who have the ability and are financially able.

Will you come? C. C. Sheaffer.

AN APPEAL TO NORTHEASTERN OHIO

After a period of eleven weeks' vacation on account of influenza, we are again enjoying public worship. There is new interest and zeal on the part of many, since being deprived of this privilege for so long.

Jan. 10 we held our quarterly council. A full corps of officers was elected for church, Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meeting. We decided to organize a Junior Christian Workers' Meeting to be held Sunday afternoons. We are greatly encouraged because of additional workers but somewhat discouraged because the prospects are not very bright for our new church building, which is so much needed.

Dear brethren and sisters of Northeastern Ohio, let us not grow weary in well doing. We have begun a good work. Let us not cease until it is completed. Our hope, in the New Philadelphia church, as well as in all other churches, is in having the Gospel taught to our boys and girls. And here is where our work is greatly hindered in not having a building adapted to this work.

We have some earnest brethren and sisters here who are making great sacrifices. We have some who have moved here to help build up the Lord's Kingdom. Are we going to let the work be crippled because we have failed to do our duty? Then, too, we should like to have a churchhouse somewhat like our homes, so that we and our children, our neighbors and their children, will find it comfortable and pleasant. Then we can truly say, "How amiable are thy tabernacles, O Lord of hosts!"

New Philadelphia, Ohio. Mrs. Jennie M. Shriver.

MOBILE, ALABAMA

We trust today will be one of the "mile-stones" in church work in the South. Today we met to organize for active work in the city. Sunday-school was organized with the writer as superintendent. Other departments of church work will be organized as soon as we can secure a proper room. At present we must meet at 209 N. Conception Street, about four squares north of the heart of the city.—Bienville Square. We meet for Sunday-school and cordially invite all members and friends to be with us. Any one knowing of members in or near the city, please notify them or the writer. The city is having trouble to house the people coming here, so a room for services is difficult to find, but we trust that the Holy Spirit will guide us to the best way.

One great hindrance is that we must work every day to meet the excessive expenses of city life, so can not give the church work proper care. Personally, we believe the salaried ministry to be the cause of the failure of our popular churches, yet when we see some church work needing to be done, while we are obliged to earn our family support, we feel there must be some middle ground for success. May we be led to see this way!

We now have nineteen members known to be in and near the city and are finding more. There may be others. Help us to find them. Members passing through the city will always find a welcome. Wm. E. White.

THE HEBRON SEMINARY BIBLE TERM

Plans for the Bible Term at Hebron Seminary have thus far not been interrupted by the influenza. The second siege of the epidemic did not strike this section so hard, and soon began to wane when it did come. For this we feel thankful. At present, therefore, conditions are such that we feel justified in going ahead according to arrangements previously made.

We therefore announce that our Bible Term will be held during the week of Jan. 27 to Feb. 2, unless health conditions should prevent it. Bro. A. C. Wieand, President of Bethany Bible School, will be the principal instructor. We also have the promise of Bro. Paul H. Bowman, President-elect of Bridgewater College, for at least several lectures. Among other speakers that will be with us for special addresses are Bro. W. H. Sanger, of Fairfax, Va., and Rev. W. B. Stoddard, of Washington, D. C. There will be regular Bible classes and special lectures, and sermons throughout the Institute.

We feel that we have been fortunate in procuring these men, and we give a cordial welcome to all who can avail themselves of the privilege, to attend the Institute and hear them.

Come, spend the week with us, and be prospered in the Lord. Franklin J. Byer.

THE WORK AT MUSCATINE, IOWA

Since our District Mission Board has refused to accept my resignation, and has unanimously requested that I remain at Muscatine, I desire to say a few words concerning the work here:

At the close of the old year, and at the beginning of the new, I feel it my duty to thank the Mission Board, the churches and the individuals who have contributed to the work here.

Considered from all points of view, the conditions are much better than at any time since I began work here. The spiritual condition of the members is splendid.

God has been gracious to us during the Spanish influenza epidemic. There has not been much serious sickness, and not a single death.

Conscious of the great responsibility, with three years and six months' experience, an intimate knowledge of the members and the details of the work, we enter upon another year's activities, hoping that the hand of the Lord will be with us as in the past, and that great good may be accomplished in his name.

We can not do it without God's blessings and guidance, and the sympathy and coöperation of our members. With these, victory is sure, and the work will be a delight. With each one who reads these lines say: "By the grace of God I will help you to make it so"? I want to say, for the benefit of members who may be in school at Davenport, Iowa: You can attend services with us at Muscatine very conveniently, by leaving Davenport at 8:30 A. M., over the Davenport & Muscatine Interurban. Arriving in Muscatine at 9:50, transfer at the Interurban station to a West Hill Street car; get off at Landis' store. The first door west is the church. Leander Smith, Pastor.

IN MEMORY OF CALVIN J. ROSE

Oct. 1, 1890, the home of David J. and Catherine Young Rose was brightened by the arrival of the fifth born,—a boy whom they named Calvin. That the advent of this boy was a blessing to humanity is not to be doubted. Those who knew him unbesitatingly testify to the happiness he radiated.

At the age of sixteen he responded to the Master's call, and was baptized in his home church,—Rummel, Pa.,—by Bro. J. J. Shaffer. Having accepted Christ, Calvin purposed to be of the greatest possible use in the Lord's service. With this purpose in heart, he entered college, believing that the Lord needed workers who not only were consecrated but well equipped intellectually. He spent six years in Elizabethtown College and one at Juniata, where he received his Bachelor of Arts degree. While a student at Elizabethtown, he served three years as librarian. At Juniata College he was called to the ministry. He then was twenty-six years of age. After graduation he became pastor of the Klahr congregation of Middle Pennsylvania. He served at this place from July 1, 1917, to May 1, 1918. In addition to his pastoral labors here, he taught school for one year. Leaving the Klahr pastorate, he became pastor of the Middle Creek congregation, Western Pennsylvania. Here he served till his death, which occurred Dec. 4, 1918, the cause of which was influenza and pneumonia.

Calvin was the possessor of a sunny disposition. A smile on his face and a song on his lips were often in evidence. In him children found a friend, for he loved them. Had he lived longer, it is likely he would have gone to the foreign field, for this was his desire. Though his life was short, it, nevertheless, was one of service. He accomplished more good than many a man whose life has been longer. He was a dutiful son, a loving brother, a genuine friend and a faithful servant of Christ Jesus. His life was one that brought honor to his family, praise to the Christ he loved, and credit to the church of which he was a member. He has gone to a better world, but the memory of him abides still,—like the fragrance of a sweet-scented flower.

Because of the epidemic at the time of his death, a burial service was all that was given. Dec. 29 a memorial service was held in the Rummel church. Two addresses were given, one by Bro. B. F. Waltz and one by the writer. The text used by Bro. Waltz was John 14: 1, and that used by the writer was 2 Tim. 1: 10.

TWO DEACONS CALLED HOME

"For they that have served well as deacons gain to themselves a good standing, and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus" (1 Tim. 3: 13, Am. Rev.).

By reason of the influenza epidemic there has been much suffering everywhere. Many sad hearts are mourning the death of loved ones. There are mysteries which can not be understood in this world. We can not see why God should take away the heads and leaders in church and Sunday-school, and yet, by faith, we can realize that all is well with those that love the Lord.

Doubtless the experience of the Brumbaugh church, at Rock Lake, N. Dak., has been more severe than that of many other churches. Among those that were laid to rest were two brothers,—J. E. and Chas. F. Deardorff,—both being deacons who carried their share, and sometimes more, of the work of the church. Before their sickness, they were ever ready to lend their aid and assistance to the sorrowing and suffering, and spent much time in driving from place to place, to see where help was needed.

Chas. Franklin Deardorff was born in Wabash County, Ind., and died Oct. 31, 1918, aged thirty-one years, ten months and twenty-three days. In his youth he gave his heart to Jesus and was received into the church of his choice. He was married to Sister Elsie Jane Robertson in the fall of 1908. He was called to the deacon's office Oct. 3, 1915, and served faithfully until called home. He also served as Sunday-school superintendent for a number of years, and worked especially hard during the last few months of his life, to have the standard of his school meet the requirements of a "Front Line" school.

J. E. Deardorff

He was taken sick Oct. 21 with influenza, which soon developed into pneumonia. His suffering was intense, and for many hours he was unconscious. Ever uppermost in his mind was, apparently, a desire for international peace. He seemed to have a proposition of peace to present to the nations, pleading with them to sign it, and to bring about peace. While thus concerned about peace, he received his call, and was home to the heavenly home where all is peace.

His was a happy home. Although there were but ten years of their married life, the home he established was a Christian home, where love and peace prevailed. The same Christian spirit which characterized his home life was carried over into everything he did for the church and Sunday-school. The influence of his work will live on and on.

Not many days after Bro. Charles was taken sick, Bro. Bert took his bed. John Ehert Deardorff died of influenza Nov. 2, 1918, aged 36 years, 3 months and 21 days. He was married Nov. 4, 1906, to Sister Olive Calvert, who is left with four small children,—one infant son having preceded the father nearly six years ago.

As a husband and father he was ever kind and affectionate, ruling his own home in a Christ-like spirit. His loving counsel will be greatly missed by the bereaved mother and children.

Be united with the church in the summer of 1902 and has ever been faithful, holding firm to the cherished doctrines of the church. He was called to the office of deacon Oct. 28, 1906, and creditably discharged the duties of that office. His last day's work was to drive nearly thirty-five miles with Eld. M. L. Huffman, to assist in anointing a sister living near St. John, Kans. He came back by the home of another sister, near death's door, and anointing her also. His work as a deacon was exemplary. Being one of the leaders in this work, he did much for the good of the church.

During the last sickness, a little over a week's duration, his suffering was intense, but it was all borne with patience, which was always a marked characteristic of his entire life. His mind seemed to be continually occupied with things of a better world. During his greatest suffering he sang most touchingly: "Safe in the Arms of Jesus." His countenance expressed the blessed assurance he had. Then he requested his favorite attendance at his bedside to sing for him. Both sang: "Nearer, My God, to Thee." Bro. Bert then became too weak to sing, and a little while later joined the angelic choir in the glory world.

Both of these brothers called for the anointing. While they desired to remain with their loved ones here below, they were fully resigned to the Lord's will. Their deaths occurred only forty-eight hours apart. The Brumbaugh church gave up two of her most faithful workers and the community lost two of its most able men.

As public gatherings were prohibited, the funerals were held on Sunday afternoon, Nov. 3, at the home of Bro. Bert, where four of his family were confined to their beds. Services were conducted by Brethren Geo. Stevens and E. H. Stauffer. Their bodies were laid to rest in the Brumbaugh cemetery.

Brainford, N. Dak. Maude Deardorff.

A FAITHFUL WORKER CALLED HOME

Llana E. Miller, only daughter of J. W. Spitzer and Sister Fannie Long, was born near Mt. Clinton, Rockingham County, Va., Feb. 16, 1880, and died Dec. 31, 1918, in the thirty-ninth year of her age. The first years of her life were spent very pleasantly on the farm. When she was old enough, she went to school at Mt. Clinton. At the age of ten her parents moved to Crimora, Va., where Llana continued her education in the public schools. She never had the advantage of college or high school training, but was permitted to attend a private school, near Waynesboro, Va., for two sessions.

Nov. 26, 1901, she was united in marriage to Bro. B. F. Miller, of Weyers Cave, Va. To this union were born four children, three of whom are living. She spent much time with her children, and her chief concern was to teach and train them, that they would develop strong and useful characters. As a result of this teaching, she lived to see her two older children accept Jesus and unite with the church.

In April, 1902, she heard the Divine Call, and was baptized by Eld. A. B. Early. Llana at once became deeply interested in religious work. She took an active interest in Aid Society work and in the Christian Workers' Meeting, but her chief interest was, perhaps, in the work of the Sunday-school. She believed that the first essential for a strong character is a thorough knowledge of God's Word. As a teacher in the Pleasant Valley Sunday-school, of which her husband is superintendent, she was very successful. For the past six years she was a teacher in the beginner's department and it was largely through her influence that this work was organized and developed.

Her success as a teacher was due largely to her careful and regular study of each lesson. It could be seen by her practice for years to teach the Sunday-school lesson to her own children each Sunday morning before the family worship. What a fine custom this was! No wonder that her pupils loved her, for her whole life was wrapped up in this great work of teaching the children.

On Thanksgiving Day she contracted influenza, which was followed by pneumonia. All that loving hands could do was attended to, but to no avail, as God called her home. All her suffering she bore patiently. A brief funeral service was conducted at the home by Elders C. E. Long and H. C. Early. She was then quietly laid to rest in the cemetery at the Pleasant Valley church.

Her little daughter, aged ten, requested that the hymn, "God Will Take Care of You," be sung at the grave. We will all miss her, but may her life be such an inspiration that others who knew her may strive more earnestly for those things which are first in life, and which are so essential to true Christian character. Minor C. Miller.

suitable place for every department of church activity. The members feel that, in order to have the annual increase in our Sunday-school, as outlined in the Yearbook, we need to heatir ourselves. Realizing that the work is greater and farther reaching than ever before, after thoughtful consideration and spiritual meditation, we decided to assist the home ministry by securing the service of a pastor to coöperate in evangelising this community. One of the features of this meeting was the harmony and Christian spirit which prevailed in all the discussion. A great future is before us. Our young people are religiously inclined, our membership is increasing, and we are planning for greater results in the year 1919 than in any year of the history of the church.—Ezra Lutz, Waddams Grove, Ill., Jan. 12.

INDIANA

Anderson.—Never, in the history of the Anderson church, has there been manifested such a spirit of giving. With a membership of about 115 only, our collections at Sunday-school and church, for Armenian and Syrian Relief, amounted to $122.50. If the war did cause us to grieve much, we cheerfully believe that our grief will count much for the great cause of our Blessed Savior. We are learning that giving to the great cause of Christ does not make us any poorer, but only increases our treasure both in heaven and on earth. We are anxiously looking forward to April, when Bro. R. N. Leatherman will be here in a series of meetings. We feel that the harvest is now ripe. Many new faces are seen at our services!—Levi Wise, 1027 Jefferson Street, Anderson, Ind., Jan. 12.

Bethel Center church, of the Hartford City congregation, has resumed services after a period of two weeks, while the interior of our church was being painted. Jan. 5 we lifted an offering of $24 for Armenian and Syrian Relief. We also pledged to pay $10 for the support of Bro. Adam Ebey, in the foreign mission field. Bro. Chas. R. Oberlin and wife will be with us again this year. They are working earnestly for the good of the Hartford City church, to bring in the unsaved. May we all rally to their support, that more good for the Master may be accomplished in the year just beginning.—Mrs. Lydia Waters, Hartford City, Ind., Jan. 13.

Pine River.—The work at this place has been much hindered during the past three months because of the influenza epidemic. However, we feel thankful that we lost no members. At the present time the work is being resumed with renewed interest. We held our council meeting Jan. 4, when officers were elected for the year, with Bro. Omar Zumbrun, superintendent of the Sunday-school; Bro. Evert Chapman, president of the Christian Workers' Meeting. Jan. 12 an offering of $96.37 was given for Armenian Relief.—Laura Frick, Logansport, Ind., Jan. 13.

Four Mile church met in council Jan. 4, with Eld. J. W. Rarick presiding. Eld. L. L. Teeter was also with us. Bro. Rarick asked to be relieved, after serving as faithfully for five years. Bro. L. L. Teeter was elected as elder for the coming year. Bro. I. S. Hart was reëlected Sunday-school superintendent. All other officers for both church and Sunday-school were chosen. Our work, during the last few months, has not been what we would like, on account of the influenza.—Edna Brower, Kitchel, Ind., Jan. 11.

Manchester.—Dec. 22 a Christmas program was rendered. An offering of $110 was lifted for Armenian and Syrian Relief. The church services of Sunday evening, Jan. 5, were in charge of the Volunteer Mission Band of Manchester College. Interesting and appealing talks were given on the needs, calls and opportunities of foreign mission work.—Ivah M. Grossnickle, North Manchester, Ind., Jan. 13.

Middlebury.—We expect to begin our revival meeting soon, —probably about Jan. 26. We expect Bro. D. R. McFadden to assist us. Bro. Leo H. Miller and wife have located here and taken charge of pastoral work. We recently took an offering of $168 for Armenian and Syrian Relief. Our Sunday-school superintendents for 1919 are Brethren Berl Applegate and Ira Shoemaker; Christian Workers' presidents, Brethren Mark Resch and J. Miller; Aid Society President, Sister Lee Miller.—Alice E. Miller, Gaston, Ind., Jan. 15.

Notice.—Not being able to hold the District Meeting of Middle Indiana, on account of the health conditions, the Mission Board has not had the privilege of presenting its needs or the conditions of the mission churches. The board met in conference Jan. 9 and decided to request the churches to increase their support to the mission work forty cents per member. We also decided to continue the work of our District Missionary Secretary, Eld. Irvin Fisher, in visiting the churches and giving missionary information and developing sentiment. Churches desiring his services are urged to write him, arranging dates. We are also in need of two city pastors now, and two more in the near future.—J. G. Stinebaugh, President Mission Board, Camden, Ind., Jan. 10.

Peru church met in council Jan. 8. Our pastor, Bro. S. T. Fisher, presided. Bro. J. G. Stinebaugh was present. Officers for the church and Sunday-school were elected, with Bro. Chas. Butler, Sunday-school superintendent; Sister Cassie Erb, church clerk. We expect to start a Mission Study Class in the near future.—Mabel Nefi, Peru, Ind., Jan. 14.

Salmonie.—Our services have been somewhat broken up since Oct. 1, on account of the influenza epidemic. They were resumed Dec. 29, with good attendance. Jan. 5 Bro. Moyo Gwamo, of North Manchester College, gave two interesting addresses. Eld. J. W. Norris has moved from the Salmonie church to North Manchester. The Sunday-school has been reorganized for the year, with Bro. Hampton Zook as superintendent. Since the church has been remodeled, we have ample room for all our Sunday-school classes. The rededication and homecoming services had to be canceled; also a series of meetings. An offering of more than $55, for Armenian and Syrian Relief, was taken Jan. 5 by the Sunday-school.—Hampton Zook, Huntington, Ind., Jan. 7.

Wawaka.—Services have again been resumed, after being discontinued for several weeks on account of influenza, for the second time. We had services on Thanksgiving Day. Brother and Sister Wm. Hess, of Goshen, were with us. Bro. Hess preached a very good sermon and Sister Hess led the song service. While the attendance was not large, on account of stormy weather, yet we had a very fine meeting. A collection of $21 was taken for mission work. The members also prepared a Christmas box, which was sent to the Chicago mission, to be distributed among the poor. Jan. 1 the Sunday-school raised $61 for Armenian and Syrian Relief. We held our regular council Jan. 11. Bro. Hess presided. Officers for the ensuing year were chosen, with Bro. Lawrence Conrad, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Hess, elder.—Hellie Miller, Wawaka, Ind., Jan. 13.

IOWA

Des Moines city church met in business session Jan. 8. Bro. P. S. Brunk was chosen elder. The ministerial committee has not yet secured a pastor to succeed Bro. Robinson, who leaves in March. At our last council we elected the writer assistant Sunday-school superintendent. Bro. P. S. Brunk was ordained to full ministry, and Bro. Clyde Smithson was installed to the office of deacon.—Evn Lena Smith, Des Moines, Iowa, Jan. 19.

Franklin County church was permitted to open the church for regular services again Dec. 29, when Bro. Buckingham preached a Christmas sermon. Everybody seemed glad to get out again. Jan. 5, 1919, our pastor preached a stirring sermon on "New Year's Resolutions." Our offering for Armenian and Syrian Relief amounted to $15.45. Our regular quarterly council, held Jan. 11, Bro. Buckingham was chosen elder for another year. We decided to dedicate our remodeled churchhouse on June 15. Bro. A. P. Blough, of Waterloo, will conduct the dedication service. Following this Bro. Buntain, of Greene, will conduct a Bible Term continuing one week, and a two weeks' series of meetings. We expect to close these meetings with a love feast.—Horvey W. Allen, Dumont, Iowa, Jan. 20.

Prairie City.—The second quarantine has been lifted, and we are again worshiping in our church. Most of our members had a siege of the influenza, but we lost none by death. Jan. 4 we met in an all-day council. Eld. John Robinson, of Des Moines, and Eld. Joshua Schechter, of Tredyffrin, were with us. One letter of membership was granted. Sunday-school officers were elected, with Bro. J. B. Bowie, superintendent. Bro. Carl Elrod was elected deacon, and will be ordained. Bro. Joshua Schechter preached Sunday and gave us two splendid sermons. We took an offering in the Sunday-school, last Sunday, for Armenian and Syrian Relief, and expect to take another in our church services next Sunday.—Nellie L. Bowie, Prairie City, Iowa, Jan. 11.

KANSAS

Burr Oak church met in council Jan. 9, with Bro. G. O. Stutsman presiding. Officers for 1919 were elected. The vote to retain Bro. Stutsman, as pastor and elder, was unanimous. Bro. H. L. Detrick was elected Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Milford Porter, president of the Christian Workers' Meeting; the writer, "Messenger" agent and correspondent. The spirit of the Lord was manifested throughout the meeting.—Carrie E. Wagoner, Burr Oak, Kans., Jan. 19.

Independence church is again enjoying regular services, which are greatly appreciated, Jan. 12 Bro. W. O. Beckner, of McPherson, delivered an able sermon. He is visiting the churches in the interest of the Educational Campaign. The afternoon council, with Eld. W. H. Miller presiding, Bro. Miller was reelected elder for this year. Not being permitted to hold our series of meetings last fall, we decided to have Bro. Miller hold a series of meetings as soon as the ban is rescinded. The church made a call for Bro. E. F. Caslow to hold our meetings this coming fall. The writer was reelected church clerk and correspondent; Sister Lizzie Corn was chosen "Messenger" agent; Bro. Wm. Dyer, Sunday-school superintendent; Sister Clara Cline, president of Christian Workers' Meeting; Bro. Chas. Cline, church trustee for three years. Since our last report, five have confessed Christ.—Pearl Wagoner, Independence, Kans., Jan. 19.

Larned country church met in council Jan. 11. Bro. M. Keller was reelected elder for the coming year; Elmer Martin, "Messenger" agent; Luther Hylton, Sunday-school superintendent; Newton Martin, president of Christian Workers' Meeting. At present the condition of the church is not what we could wish we are thankful. We hope to accomplish much during this year. We decided to have a series of meetings in May, conducted by Bro. C. B. Smith, of Morrill, Kans.—Anna Hylton, Larned, Kans., Jan. 13.

Maple Grove church met in council Jan. 4, with Eld. A. J. Wertenberger in charge. We elected officers for the coming year with Sister Estie Bishop, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Arthur Jackson, president of the Christian Workers' Society; the writer, correspondent. We have secured Brother and Sister Austin to hold a series of meetings for us, to commence about the middle of July.—Anna Wagoner, Abilene, Kans., Jan. 6.

McPherson (First Church of the Brethren).—Several dates have been set for our series of meetings, but in each case have been interfered with by health conditions of the community. Our pastor, during the last few months, has been conducting a series of evangelistic sermons, as well as doing much personal work. As a result of his efforts, three have been baptised into the Kingdom. At a men's meeting in the chapel, last Sunday afternoon, seven young men were received into the church. At our quarterly council on Monday afternoon, Jan. 13. Three letters were received and three granted. The date for our spring love feast was set for April 6. Dr. D. W. Kurtz was elected delegate to the Annual Conference at Winona Lake. A location for our new church was definitely decided upon and the building committee authorized to purchase the land. Prof. J. J. Yoder and Dr. D. W. Kurtz recently attended the State Sunday-school Board Meeting, at Topeka, at which time Dr. Kurtz delivered an address at the Shawnee County Sunday-school Convention on the the "Ideals of the Sunday-school." Immediately following the above address, he filled an appointment for Henry J. Allen, Governor-elect of Kansas, at the meeting of the Kansas State Board of Agriculture. The subject of his address was: "Education in Reconstruction." Our pastor, Dr. A. J. Culler, has recently been appointed by the Kansas State Sunday School Board to represent our State at the World Sunday School Convention at Tokyo, Japan, in 1920. Our church and Sunday-school attendance has been very good. Many are contributing to the appreciated since we are again permitted to meet following our second influenza quarantine.—Mrs. R. E. Mohler, McPherson, Kans., Jan. 12.

Mont Ida church met in council Jan. 11. Bro. L. Watkins was chosen elder for the coming year; Sister Stella Watkins, correspondent; the writer, clerk; Sister Nina Sherfy, Sunday-school superintendent. The revival meetings we had planned for had to be canceled on account of the second closing of public gatherings. Our work is suffering for want of young ministers. Will not some one come to help us? We would greatly appreciate other members, too, locating among us.—Anna Sherfy, Mont Ida, Kans., Jan. 13.

North Solomon church met in council Jan. 4, Eld. I. S. Leese presiding. Officers for the coming year were elected, with Bro. Geo. Merkey, Sunday-school superintendent; Sister Alice Bond, president of Christian Workers' Meeting; the writer, church correspondent. An offering of $32.72 was taken by the Sunday-school for Armenina and Syrian Relief. Four letters of membership were granted. For almost three months we were not permitted to have church services on account of influenza. The ban was lifted Dec. 28.—Mrs. Joan Moyer, Portis, Kans., Jan. 6.

Victor church met in council Jan. 4, with Bro. Daggett in charge. Officers were elected for the coming year as follows: Bro. Christian Ikenberry, superintendent of Sunday-school; Cora Elliott, Christian Workers' president; J. M. Brubaker, "Messenger" agent. On account of the influenza our Bible Normal and love feast had to be given up, and we now plan to have a series of meetings and love feast in the spring.—the date to be given later. After being shut in of meetings for weeks, we feel we can more fully appreciate the great blessing that comes from assembling together. Few of our members had influenza and no deaths resulted, for which we are thankful.—Mrs. A. E. Thompson, Wichita, Kans., Jan. 12.

MARYLAND

Baltimore.—Fulton Avenue church met in council Jan. 5, with Eld. W. E. Roop in charge. Prof. H. J. Beechley, of Hardsburg, Pa., preached in the morning, and Bro. W. E. Roop in the evening. On Thanksgiving Day our pastor, Bro. A. L. B. Martin, preached. An offering of $24.75 was lifted for the construction work. Dec. 27 the Sunday-school rendered a splendid Christmas program, using the "White Gifts for the King" service. It was one of the best ever given here. The gifts amounted to $81.42, which amount $50 was sent to the Armenian Relief Fund. Dec. 31 we met for "watch night" service. Brethren I. A. McKenney, B. D. Angle and our pastor were the speakers for the evening, and we had a very interesting meeting.—D. C. Angle, Baltimore, Md., Jan. 9.

Deaton church expressed its Christmas spirit Dec. 20 by lifting an offering of $66 to provide for the adoption of an orphan in the Brethren's Orphanage at Lords Creek, Va. Bro. W. Kesler had charge of the consecration service for the Sunday-school teachers and officers. Our pastor, Bro. Levi K. Ziegler, of Lancaster, Pa., will be with us March 1. We are anxiously looking forward to the time when he will join in the work at this place. —Mrs. C. A. Pentz, Denton, Md., Jan. 8.

West Foint.—Nov. 24 the Sunday-school rendered a special missionary program, at which meeting several members of the District Mission Board were present, giving short talks. At this meeting we lifted an offering of $13.10, which was handed over to the Mission Band,—this having been organized as a result of the special Missionary Meeting. The duty of the Missionary Band, at this place, is to, in any way possible, non-church members to attend our services. Dec. 29 the Sunday-school rendered a Christmas Program, consisting of recitations and songs. At this meeting we received an offering amounting to $15.25, a small treat by the Sunday-school. We met in council on Sunday, Jan. 12, with Eld. S. E. Engler in charge. Eld. Wm. E. Roop was also present. At this meeting Brethren Chas. Wahler and J. H. Lau were elected as delegates to the District Meeting, with Bro. Franklin Zentz and Sister Margaret E. Armacost as alternates. Bro. J. H. Lau was elected to the ministry, after which he was duly installed into office by Eld. Wm. E. Roop. The finish work at this place is now moving along nicely.—Esther N. Eaton, Owings Mills, Md., Jan. 14.

MINNESOTA

Morrill church met in council Jan. 4. Four letters were received. Sunday-school officers were elected for another year, with Bro. Wm. Solt, superintendent; the writer "Messenger" agent. An offering was given for Armenian Day in the sum of $11 was taken for World-wide Missions, and on Christmas Day an offering of $21 was taken for Armenian sufferers.—Mrs. Effie Johnson, Ramey, Minn., Jan. 15.

MISSOURI

Peace Valley church met in council Jan. 4. Eld. P. L. Fike presided. Bro. J. R. Argabright was elected Sunday-school superintendent, and the writer, president of Christian Workers' Society. We organized a Home Department, with Sister Zella Fike, superintendent. At our recent Christmas service an offering of $30.00 was given for Armenian and Syrian Relief. Bro. J. W. Deeter, of McPherson College, came here Jan. 1, and gave us four instructive lectures on Sunday-school work. He also preached two practical sermons. On Sunday, Jan. 5, was given our Sunday-school Rally Day. The Bible Institute of Southwestern Missouri and Northwestern Arkansas is being held here now. Bro. Deeter is the instructor.—Tillie Deeldker, Peace Valley, Mo., Jan. 8.

Sliosl Creek church met in council Jan. 11. Owing to the influenza epidemic, our council had been deferred from Dec. 14. Bro. J. H. Argabright was reelected elder for the year; and the writer, church correspondent and "Messenger" agent; Bro. W. R. Argobright, Sunday-school superintendent.—Virgie Argabright, Fairview, Mo., Jan. 12.

NEBRASKA

Bentrice church met in council Jan. 5. Bro. W. W. Blough was reelected elder. Our services since Oct. 1 have been greatly hindered by Spanish influenza. We were unable to have our fall love feast. Jan. 5 the Sunday-school and Christian Workers took an offering of $32.30 for Armenian and Syrian Relief. The ladies have thus far completed twenty-nine sweaters, forty-one pair of socks, one helmet, one trench-cap and one pair of wristlets. This was done through the efforts of the Aid Society and Kensington. We are planning for a series of meetings this spring or early summer.—Pearl Reiff, Beatrice, Nebr., Jan. 14.

Enders church met in council Jan. 11. Bro. F. E. Miller was chosen as elder and pastor for another year. Bro. Claud Shorps was reelected Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Ira Ewing, Christian Workers' president; the writer, correspondent and "Messenger" ogent. Our series of meetings which was to have been held this month, has been postponed indefinitely, on account of the ban not yet being raised. Seven letters were granted.—Orilla C. Ogle, Enders, Nebr., Jan. 14.

NEW MEXICO

Mimol church met in council Jan. 4, with Eld. Wm. Mohler in charge. An Institute, in charge of Bro. Virgil Finnell, and a series of meetings, with Bro. Manly Deeter as evangelist, were to be held in this church, but had to postponed on account of the epidemic of influenza. It was decided that we ask Bro. Deeter to begin his meetings April 6 and that Bro. Finnell's services be spoken for early in September of this year. Bro. Mohler, who has efficiently served the church for the past seven years, stated that he would prefer not to serve as elder again. The choice fell upon Bro. Jacob Funk, of Wiley, Colo. Bro. R. W. Bolinger was again chosen clerk; Bro. C. C. Lapp, trustee, to serve three years; Sister Gibson, "Messenger" agent; the writer, church correspondent. The enforced vacation in church work has not seemed to cause loss of interest. The Sunday-school, Eld. Wm. Mohler, superintendent, is as active and as lively as ever. Bro. Olin Middlekauf was reelected president of Christian Workers' Meeting. Interest is unusually good. The Ladies' Aid will make up in the amount of garments for the Red Cross during January.—Mrs. M. N. Mikesell, Miami, N. Mex., Jan. 11.

NORTH DAKOTA

Egeland.—Many changes have taken place since our last report. On account of the epidemic, which took three of our number, during the months of October and November, our church was closed. The churches and school reopened, but the influenza broke out again, and among the number taken was our newly-elected Sunday-school superintendent, Bro. Arthur Kahl. During the time that the epidemic had abated, we held our quarterly meeting and elected Sunday-school and church officers, and also held our communion which was one of the best. Bro. J. C. Forney, of the Ellison church, officiated. Our church, during the past summer and fall, raised nearly $800 for church improvement and relief work.—Pearl Crombie, Egeland, N. Dak., Jan. 17.

OHIO

Ashland (Dickey) congregation is beginning the year with renewed Interest in all church work. The attendance is good, considering the the number of people ill from influenza and other causes. The series of sermons by our pastor, Eld. W. L. Deecheerg, on "Addition," was very helpful, as was also the one on the "New Era." One brother was restored to fellowship recently. Our collection for Armenian and Syrian Relief was $73. This, with the Thanksgiving offering of $47, previously reported, makes a total of $120.—Esther Zimmerman, Ashland, Ohio, Jan. 13.

Bellefontaine.—We recently organized a Sunday-school Class, with the writer as teacher. Jan. 5 our pastor preached on the needs of the Armenians and Syrians. At the close he held up the picture of an Armenian orphan boy, and asked for pledges for the support of such children. Seven in all were pledged. Jan. 12 an offering was lifted, which totaled $115. This will support twenty-three children for one month.—Lula R. Tinkle, Bellefontaine, Ohio, Jan. 13.

Castine.—For several weeks we had no services on account of influenza. Dec. 29 we again met and Bro. Jos. Longenecker gave us a good sermon, which was listened to with much interest. Jan. 5 Bro. C. C. Petry gave a splendid talk. We elected as our Sunday-school superintendents Brethren Vernon Bright and Willis Wandle. We took an offering of $150 for Armenian and Syrian Relief.—Mrs. D. H. Funderburg, New Madison, Ohio, Jan. 19.

Covington.—The "Heart-to-Heart" Class of this Sunday-school recently contributed $25 to our Sunday-school treasury. The primary department is also well worth notice. Sister Nettie Bortholomew, the primary teacher in our town school, is doing all she can to make the primary department of our school. She is assisted by an able corps of teachers, capable of sacrifice and who love children. Our Christmas exercises were held on Sunday evening. We have built up a reputation for these special programs, and the house was wonderfully impressed by this service. There were probably 1,400 people in attendance. At our annual council meeting officers were elected for the years. Bro. Geo. Hoover, president. The questions deliberated upon were unanimously decided. A meeting of this kind is very enjoyable.—Elizabeth D. Roseberger, Covington, Ohio, Jan. 11.

Lima church met in council Jan. 12, with Bro. C. S. Lehman presiding. Eld. G. A. Snider was present. Officers were elected for the year, with Bro. Swaim, church clerk; Bro. M. E. Roberts, trustee; Bro. Ed Snider, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Edw. Snider, president of Christian Workers' Society. Five letters were received. We expect Bro. Mahon, of Indiana, to assist in a series of meetings sometime during the coming spring.—Mary E. Roberts, Lima, Ohio, Jan. 15.

Marion church started the new year with a goodly attendance, considering the great amount of sickness among the people here. Great interest is being shown in trying to increase the attendance. We had no Christmas program, on account of the influenza. One of our members has taken her home to please. The church met in council Nov. 23 and elected officers for the first half of the present year, with Bro. George Deardorff superintendent. Jan. 12 an offering of $6 was taken for the war sufferers. We feel very encouraged in the future of our church and his family, for their untiring work in building up the church.—Rachel Bowman, Marion, Ohio, Jan. 15.

Notice to Churches of Northwestern Ohio.—If you have not yet complied with the request of the Mission Board (see Minutes of District Meeting, page 17, Article Two, with Answer), which notice was sent out soon after District Meeting, we kindly ask, if possible, that appropriations be sent in at once to the Treasurer, S. H. Yoder, Box 5, Berlin, Ohio.—J. L. Guthrie, Secretory, Upper Sandusky, Ohio, Jan. 10.

Painter Creek church met in council Jan. 11, with Eld. Wm. Roger presiding. We only had services five Sundays during October, November and December, on account of influenza. Officers for the coming year were elected as follows: Sunday-school superintendent, Roy Honeyman; Christian Workers' president, Levi Minnich; Aid Society president, Martha Minnich. Two letters were granted. Bro. Jacob Snider, elder. An offering was taken Jan. 12. Bro. J. W. Norris preached both morning and evening; also Monday and Tuesday evenings.—Martha Minnich, Greenville, Ohio, Jan. 14.

Poplar Grove church met in council Jan. 11, with Eld. B. F. Sharp presiding. Eleven letters were granted. The following officers were elected: Edwin Baker, Sunday-school superintendent; Maggie Halladay, Christian Workers' president; Meda Bowman, "Messenger" agent. Elder, Bro. B. F. Sharp, tendered his resignation. We have elected Bro. Noah Erbaugh as elder for the coming year.—Meda Erbaugh, Greenville, Ohio, Jan. 13.

Stonelick.—Dec. 21 Elders A. Coy and R. C. Davidson met with the members in quarterly council. Bro. Coy, who has been our elder for more than a score of years, tendered his resignation. These brethren assisted in the Sunday-school and gave helpful sermons at the morning service.—Anna Lesh, Goshen, Ohio, Jan. 15.

OKLAHOMA

Bartlesville Mission.—Our series of meetings closed Dec. 29. Seven confessed Christ. Jan. 5 we reorganized our Sunday-school. The first Sunday Bro. Hardy was here there were only five in Sunday-school, and now there are forty-six enrolled. Tuesday evening we have a Bible Study. Thursday evening we meet and study our Sunday-school lesson and Saturday evening we have singing. Sunday-school is at 10:30 o'clock. We have preaching morning and evening, and the interest is increasing. We had a short program on Christmas, consisting of songs and recitations. Owing to the epidemic, we did not have our love feast.—Sophin M. Hymer, Bartlesville, Okla., Jan. 16.

PENNSYLVANIA

Bethany.—During the Christmas season our pastor gave stereopticon views of what the Red Cross is doing in France, and also delivered fascinating talks on the subject. We had our Christmas Festival on Saturday evening after Christmas. A sacred cantata,—"While Shepherds Watched,"—was given by the choir. Later the children, with their parents, enjoyed a good time in the basement of the church. Refreshments were served, and candy and oranges were given the children. We had a Watch Meeting in our church this year. Our pastor, Bro. C. D. Hesse, has written a new song entitled "The Character of Ruth and her great love for Naomi.—Margaret E. Rogers, Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 14.

Brethren Valley congregation met in council at the Pike church Jan. 11, with Bro. D. K. Clapper in charge. Reports of last year were heard and officers for the new year elected. Bro. Clapper serves as elder this year. Bro. M. S. Reiman and wife, deacon, and son, Ralph, minister, and sister, Ruth Ann, were granted letters as they are moving to Johnstown. Dec. 22 the Sunday-school reorganized with Brethren C. E. Reiman and J. L. Kuepper as superintendents. The congregation has decided to support a Sunday-school in India for seven years at least.—B. B. Dickey, Berlin, Pa., Jan. 9.

Everett church met in council Jan. 5. It being the first gathering since October, owing to the quarantine occasioned by the influenza. A goodly number were present. Our elder, Bro. J. S. Hershberger, presided. A report from the various committees indicates that those to whom special work had been entrusted, were interested in the work assigned. Although we had but three public meetings during the past three months, on account of indisposa, the financial secretary was able to make a very satisfactory report. During most of the quarantine period, the pastor, Bro. Irs C. Holsopple, distributed the Sunday-school literature to the various homes, as he stopped to inquire after the welfare of the sick. A report of the Sunday-school and church officers, elected for the year 1919, was announced by the elder. Bro. William Steele is on Sunday-school superintendent. We are arranging for an evangelistic meeting to begin April 20. to be led by a home evangelist. Dec. 4. During the past year four were received into the church by baptism, five by letter, and one reclaimed. Four letters were granted. Three members died. The Ladies' Aid Society have a very gratifying report through their President, Sister Lashley. Indiestions are for a good year, both for missionary endeswor and evangelistic effort in 1919. We hope to make this a "Forward" year. Jan. 9. in the Everett church.—Ira C. Holsopple, Everett, Pa., Jan. 9.

Falling Spring.—We held our love feast at the Hade meetinghouse Nov. 28, and a very spiritual meeting was enjoyed by those present. Eld. Oeilig, of Waynesboro, Pa., officiated. Our auditor of moneys at the Hade meetinghouse, reported by Bro. Hufus P. Bucher, of Quarryville, Pa., began Dec. 14 and closed Dec. 31. Bro. Bucher preached twenty-one sermons in all. The attendance and interest were good throughout the meetings. Six stood for Christ. The Sunday-school at Shady Geave reorganized Dec. 29, with Bro. Ernest King as superintendent. The school has started the new year, determined to do more than in the past year.—Bro. Harry M. Fox, one of our elder boys, who had been teaching school at Zullinger, Pa., has resigned, and moved with his family to Easton, Md.—H. N. M. Gearhart, Greencastle, Pa., Jan. 7.

Gormaw.—The church held its Sunday-school Christmas service Dec. 24, when the children gave n spleudid program. An offering was lifted for Heconstruction work. Quite a lot of home made work was done at Christmas time by the Sunday-school. The Bible class made forty-two boxes to 'the soldier boys. Another class of girls gave a donation to the old folks of the County Home; also made up ten boxes for the soldiers. A class of children donated toys to the Germantown Hospital. Others gave baskets to poor families in the neighborhood. Thus the spirit of helping others wm carried out. We held services on Thanksgiving Day, when an offering was taken for Home on Thanksgiving Day, when an offering was taken for Home on Mission work. The Light and Endeavor class entertained twenty-three children, mostly orphans, on Thanksgiving Day. They were beaught to the church for services, and given dinner and supper. A program was rendered by the children in the afternoon, for the benefit of their little guests. Two have been baptized since our last report.—Mrs. M. C. Swigart, Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 9.

Huntingdon church installed officers for 1919 at the morning service, Jan. 5. Evangelistic services began Jan. 6 with Bro. Harvey Eeplogle, evangelist, and Bes. Cassady assisting. Bes. Cassady has had a struggle to get us into this work, but a real blessing comes to those who enter into the work. The will move faster when we catch the vision of the early apostles. Begin at once to bring others to Christ! We need not wish to be foreign missionaries when we do not see work right around us here. We should not let these opportunities pass, for great blessings came into our own lives in this service.—Eleanor J. Brumbaugh, Huntingdon, Pa., Jan. 8.

Lititz church met in council Jan. 8, with Eld. I. W. Taylor presiding. Two letters were granted. Officers were elected for the coming year as follows: Elder, Bro. J. W. O. Hershey; Sunday-school superintendent, Bro. H. R. Gibbel; trustee, Bro. Noah Trimmer; Christian Workers' Meeting, Bro. H. R. Gibbel. We held services on Thanksgiving Day, at which time we also held our love feast. Brethren Hiram Gibbel, Nathan Fahnestock, Linneus Longenecker and Geo. N. Falkenstein were with us—the latter officiating. An excellent program was rendered on Christmas evening. Owing to the illness of Bro. Samuel Myers, our series of meetings had to be canceled. However, we hope to have a series of meetings or a Bible Institute later on. Many calls have come to the church in behalf of missions and war relief work, and our members have responded nobly.—Florence B. Gibbel, Lititz, Pa., Jan. 10.

Lost Creek congregation met in council Jan. 1 at the Good Will church, with Bro. John E. Rowland presiding. Sunday-school officers were reelected for 1919. Sister Minnie Bushur was reelected for three years as "Messenger" agent, and the writer, correspondent for the same length of time. Bro. Ges. Strawser was elected elder for another year. Bro. John E. Rowland was chosen pastor for another year. Owing to the epidemic we did not have a Christmas program. Several of our brethren have been stricken, but all of serving and are again with us, for which we are very thankful.—Issac Bashor, McAllisterville, Pa., Jan. 12.

Montgomery church met in council Jan. 3, with Eld. Oesu Fyock presiding. Three months ago we decided to adopt the envelope system of giving, and think it will be a great help in our financial work. Dec. 29 was the day appointed to reorganize our Sunday-school, but as the attendance has been small, an account of sickness and other reasons, we decided to retain our aid officers noill April 1. Jan. 5 our Sunday-school offering for Armenian and Syrian Relief amounted to $32.14.—Bessie Fyock, Wilgus Mills, Pa.

Shamokin church met in council Dec. 14, with Eld. Adam M. Hallinger presiding. Two letters were received. We decided to begin a revival meeting Feb. 9, to continue two weeks, with our pastor in charge. Our church was closed for one month during the epidemic, but is now open again, and our services have taken as new life. The attendance is good and we hope for a successful year.—Mrs. Ora Hallinger, Shamokin, Pa., Jan. 13.

Springfield congregation met in council Jan. 4, at the Quakertown house, with Eld. Hottel presiding. We rejoiced when a father came to renew his covenant with the church. The mother being of the Progressive faith, was received into full fellowship. One letter was granted. Dec. 24 and 29 Christmas programs were rendered at the Quekertown and Springfield houses, respectively. Officers for the Quakertown Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meeting were elected: Superintendents, Brethren Alfred George and Clarence Holsopple; president of Christian Workers, Bro. F. O. Seese. Dec 29 we lifted an offering of $12.73 for Armenian and Syrian Relief. We keenly feel the loss of five of our workers who recently moved from our midst. Two have been removed by death.—Lodina Hershbarger, Quakertown, Pa., Jan 9

Tulpehocken congregation met in council Dec. 16, at the Heidelberg house. At this time the reports of the treasurer, together with those of the auditors, Missionary, Committee, Tempeesnre Committee, Sisters' Aid Society, and trioteeo of the different houses were given. During the year twelve were received by baptism, three were restored, three disowned and nine died. Fourteen letters were granted and twelve were received. We have now aresoged to hold n series of meetings in the Richland house, to commeece Feb. 15, with Bro. Nathan Martin, evangelist.—R. F. King, Lebanon, Pa., Jan. 9.

Viewmont Sunday-school reorganized for 1919 with Bro. Geo. L. Peterson, superintendent. The Sunday-school this year did not give a treat to the children, as heretofore, but, instead, on Christmas asked for donations to the Christian Home of Johnstown, and received jam, jelly, fruit, canned fruit and vegetables, besides some clothing and money. As loflnenza has had its effect on the vicinity of Johnstown, many orphan children are in this Home, and we hope that our gifts will bring cheer and comfort to them. Our school also gave $75 to Armenian and Syrian Relief. Bro. W. H. Rummel, our regular correspondent, is recovering slowly from a serious illness.—Mrs. Chas. H. Stutsman, Johnstown, Pa., Jan. 11.

West Johnstown congregation met in council, Jan. 1, Eld. N. W. Berkley presiding. This lo the council at which reports are given and the organization effected for the year. Much business was disposed of with splendid unanimity. Our finances are in excellent shape. We paid $800 on our parsonage, after all other obligations had been met. The pastor's salary received a substantial increase. Church officers were elected for the year. Two petitions were sent to District Meeting. Delegates to District Meeting are Elders N. W. Berkley, H. M. Detwiler, A. U. Berkley and J. H Blough. The first Sunday of the new year a young brother was baptized. The attendance at the services is gradually gaining again. There still is considerable influenza in our city.—Jerome E. Blough, 1309 Franklin Street, Johnstown, Pa., Jan. 9.

Windber church, after being without services for ten weeks, has been reopened. The Sunday-school has been organized for the coming year, with Bro. Irs Resm, superintendent. Jan. 5 an offering of $66.36 was token for Armenian and Syrian Relief. The Friendship Adult Bible Class also gave $50. During the past year about fifty members had a record of perfect attendance. During the absence of our pastor, Bro. H. S. Replogle, who is holding a revival at Huntingdon, Bro. Abel Berkley, of Johnstown, is preaching for us. A few of our members had influenza, but are recovering and all are glad to attend services again.—Mrs. Harvey Knavel, Windber, Pa., Jan. 13.

TENNESSEE

Beaver Creek.—Brother and Sister W. H. Swadley recently came here, and their visit was much appreciated. They organized a home Department with the writer as superintendent. Jan. 12 we reorganised our Sunday-school, with Bro. J. Henry Peterson as superintendent. Our Sunday-school for 1918 was the best on record and we wish to make it still better for 1919. We decided to have a Sunday-school lecture twice each month by our Sunday-school students.—Julia E. Peterson, Fountain City, Tenn., Jan. 13.

VIRGINIA

Ansioch.—Dec. 29 a program was rendered by our Sunday-school, which was enjoyed by all present. Bro. J. Allen Floes, of Roanoke, Va., and Bro. J. B. Peters, of Wirtz, Va., gave no some very interesting and helpful tolks. We were very glad to have these brethren present. An offering of $202 was taken for Armenian and Syrian Relief.—Benla Bowman Peters, Rocky Mount, Va., Jan. 8.

Red Oak Grove church met in council Jan. 11, with Eld. J. F. Keith presiding. Sister Lena Bowman wan reappointed "Messenger" agent; Sister Clara Vest and the writer, correspondents; Sister Ella Bowmon, clerk; Bro. Wm. Yearout, Sunday-school superintendent. Jnn. 12 Bro. J. F. Keith preached a good sermon on "Christinn Integrity." A collection of $72 wan token for the wnr ouffercrs. The number received by baptiom hns not been so large this year, but we rejoice that a few have been nnde willing. Now thnt the wnr is over, and our young brethren will soon return, we can take up the work agoin with senl. We hope it may be the bonner year for our church, and that many will be added to the fold.—Sorah Hlln Bowmnn, Floyd, Vn., Jno. 13.

Topeco church met in council Jan. 4, with Eld. A. N. Hylton presiding. It had been some time since we were permitted to meet in council, on account of the influenza. All the officers, except correspoondent, were reelected. The writer was chosen as "Messenger" correspondent. The church decided to pay Bro. D. B. Garber for his work at Camp Lee, Va., Dec. 1 we lifted an offering of $23.95 for General Mission Work. Our Sunday-school raised $17.45 for the support of Sister Rebecca Wampler, and $10.15 for War Relief last year. We have retained all Sunday-school officers for this year.—Almeda Alderman, Floyd, Va., Jan. 7.

Outlook.—Jan. 5 our heartn were made glad when two of our Sunday-school children confessed Christ. Not having a baptistry in our chocch, and no other place being convenient, immediately after Sunday-school four outo louds went to Sunnyside, arriving in time for the services, after which baptism was administered.—Mrs. C. A. Wagner, Outlook, Wosh., Jan. 5.

Seattle chuech met in council Dec. 30, with Bro. Robert Hiner presiding. Owing to the effort to procure a pastor and elder, to take full charge of the church, we elected Bro. Robert Hiner elder for only six months. Bro. V. C. Wilhelm was elected superintendent of Sunday-school and Bro. C. H. Mouot president of Christian Workers' Meeting. Two letters were granted. Owing to the epidemic, our church has been somewhat handicapped as the ban wos on for six weeks. Only one member, so far, has been taken by death.—Mrs. Cora Welmer, Seattle, Wash., Jan. 6.

Tacoma church met in council Dec. 22, at the Thrift schoolhouse, with Bro. Geegory presiding. We elected officers for the coming year as follows: Bro. B. S. Gregory, elder; Sister Jennie Garman, church and "Messenger" correspoodent; Bro. Elmer Carpenter, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Lewis Thomas, Christinn Workers' president. Our Sunday-school at this place has been hindered on account of the epidemic, and quite a number have been sick.—Mrs. E. S. Oregory, Graham, Wash., Jan. 12.

WEST VIRGINIA

Egion.—Jan. 12 a few brethren and sloters met at Bro. David A. King's, to hold services for him again another. Sister Mory King, who is said to be a member of the church and Sunday-school. This services were conducted by Bro. Jones Fike. Our oged sinter eojoyed the meeting very much and we decided to have a meeting with her the second Sunday of each month. We had a Sunday-school at the Maple Spring church in the afternoon, with a large attendance. In the evening we met for Christian Workers' Meeting. This was n busy and well-spent day for many.—Goldie Judy, Eglon, W. Va., Jan. 13.

Salem church met in council Jan. 1, with Eld. Jeremiah Thomas presiding. Officees for 1919 were elected: Bro. Jamee M. Thomns, clerk; Eld. Jeremiah Thomns, "Messenger" agent; the writer, correspondent. Bro. Noah Thomas was reelected Sunday-school superintendent. Letters of membership were granted to Brother and Sister W. H. Thomos and daughter, who have located at Roanoke, Va. We decided to hold our series of meetings in July or August. On account of influenza our Christmas have been closed since the second Sunday in October. Services are to begin nguin as unnnl.—Ida D. Wilson, Brandonville, W. Va., Jan. 8.

The Forward Movement Calls for $795,000.00 in 1919

Let Not Your Heart Be Troubled

WHEN you are in the mood to appreciate something a little extra fine, look up the tenth verse of the fifteenth chapter of Deuteronomy. It tells of two obligations, one toward your needy brother and one toward yourself. The second one will probably interest you the most, but that's all right. The fine thing about it is that you can discharge this obligation without feeling the least bit selfish. Nor will it react unfavorably on the first.

Better go back to verse seven to begin. Then you will get the full force of it. Then you will see how very obvious that "surely" is in the first injunction: "Thou shalt surely give him." Of course you will give him, especially since it is only a loan anyway. Yes, you will do that even if "the seventh year, the year of release, is at hand," and the debt is likely to be outlawed. You could not refuse to help in so plain a case of need.

But look now at the second duty, the one that concerns yourself alone, the one your needy brother knows nothing of, the one that makes this passage "a little extra fine," the one that reads like this: "And thy heart shall not be grieved when thou givest unto him."

That is fine, isn't it? There's the drive for the starving children and mothers in war-stricken lands. And there's the drive which the Church Boards are putting on for the spiritually starving of the whole wide world. You are going to give freely for both of these. We knew that all along. But the best part of it is,—the best for you,—that your heart need not be grieved about it when you do it.

The Oppression of Israel Up to Date

PHARAOH'S oppression of Israel was an awful, cruel thing. And now that you have studied it again, what good has it done you? Did it make you think, and think seriously, of the many kinds of oppression in know that many men are obliged to toil on constantly without a regular day of rest, to say nothing of a day for worship?

You had heard about these things? Well, did it ever bother you any? Did you ever ask how such things can be? Did they ever give you an uncomfortable twinge in the region of your own conscience? Just a lurking suspicion that there might be something you ought to do about it?

The Dry Victory and the Forward Movement

THE sudden triumph of the campaign for the dry amendment was a surprise to most of us. Only those who had kept closely in touch with movements throughout the nation were prepared for the rapid succession of ratifications by the various State Legislatures. In its general unexpectedness it was something like the ending of the Great War. And it was something like it, too, in moral significance, not only because of what is immediately involved, but also for the encouragement it gives to all friends of social progress.

Great evils can be overthrown. The like has been accomplished in the past. The like will be accomplished in the future. It is a great victory for righteousness,—great in itself and greater still in the promise which it gives of other victories.

The liquor forces are making a great bluster about what they will do with that billion dollar fighting fund. They will storm around for a while and then resign themselves to the inevitable. This country has at last made up its mind on this question.

To any faint-hearted person who thinks the adoption of the prohibition amendment does not signify very much because it can never be made a working reality, we should like to commend an article by Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale University in the Independent for January 4 on the subject, "Can Prohibition Drive Out Drink?" Get it and read it. If you have an open mind you will be convinced. It leaves nothing more to be said on that point.

But all this is introductory. What to say is this: This world is sick with abounds on every hand. The only c Gospel of Jesus Christ. It surely look like the complete evangelization of th a long way off. But who knows what t may bring? The war ended more expected. The Use of Scripture in Overcoming Temptat

IN our temptations we are often advised to take refuge in the Word, as did our Master, by saying: "It is written." The implication seems to be that there is something of magic or miraculous power in the quoting of Scripture, and that, at the sound of it, Satan will take to his heels, and run away.

Our Lord, of course, did use Scripture in answering each of the special temptations, but with what purpose and intent? Did he, indeed, quote the Scriptures to Satan, or did he thus quote them, to reassure himself in the perplexing problems with which he had to deal, as to what the will of the Lord was? Certainly, the latter is the real meaning of his quoting of Scripture. In meeting the temptation, to cast himself down from the pinnacle of the temple, and by some stupendous miracle, proclaiming himself to be the Son of God and the coming Messiah, he answered his own thoughts, suggested by Satan, by saying: "It is not right to Living God, and that God would lead and triumph in this matter. So, al tempted to turn the stones into bread so hungry. He threw himself again, the Word, back upon the providen Heavenly Father, waiting for his gui rection, and well he might, for as we "angels came and ministered to him that Jesus quoted the Scripture to re to just exactly where the will of th matter, in the decision of the proble fore him, and his solving of the perp

This is the message for us, in the kind of problem and every condition of life. If we meditate thereon day and night, we shall know how to meet the issues which confront us from day to day. If our minds were as fully saturated with the Word of God, as was that of our Lord, we should be better able to meet the difficulties of life and its perplexities.

Once knowing what the will of the Lord is, we must boldly there take our stand, and move from it not one jot or tittle. Our will must be irrevocably made up to take our stand on the will of God, when once it is known and clear. I once knew a good man, who told me that he had a vision,—a veritable miracle,—happen to him, and he believed God was leading him to commit adultery. If he had been willing to listen to the counsel of the Word of God, and had meditated upon its truths, he would have clearly perceived the statement there: "Thou shalt not commit adultery." Having reassured himself, in the hour of need, of the unalterable will of God concerning the matter, he would have escaped the delusion under which he was laboring, and would have been saved from a heinous sin and the bitterest of sorrow.

Education and Reconstruction

THERE is much said about reconstruction. The word is used, for the most part, in a very vague and general sense. Sometimes it refers entirely to the rebuilding of the houses of France and Belgium, and the restoration of factories and railroads and industries. The soil has been churned over and over by shot and shell and trench, and it will be an almost superhuman task to restore it to its prebellum iertility and arability.

Then, again, reconstruction is spoken of in a political sense. The world must be made over, in some real sense, so as to insure the blessings of peace, tranquillity and prosperity to all nations, both great and small. The Peace Conference should make a peace that is not a provocation for another war. And there should be such a League of Nations as will make all the safeguards against future wars that are politically possible. Law has its place, and a very important place, therefore we must make good and just laws, nationally and internationally. We have found out that the liquor problem, for example, needs the strong arm of the law, as well as sentiment,—economic, moral and religious,—for its solution. So there is a reconstruction politically. Governments, laws and treaties must be on the basis of democracy, else no guarantee for future peace can even be hoped for.

Then, again, reconstruction often refers to the social, moral and religious condition of Europe. When we remember that England, France and Germany each lost at least 50,000 (and, perhaps, more nearly 100,000) teachers, professors and preachers, we see a great need for leadership in the spiritual and cultural life of these peoples. The need for spiritual comfort, idealism, a sustaining faith, after the sodden experiences of war, can not be measured. Can these nations recuperate spiritually without our aid? Will they welcome our aid? What shall we do when we get there? To look upon these nations as mission fields, in the same sense as India and China, would certainly be resented by them, and would, perhaps, be presumptuous on our part. All seem to agree as to the great need for teachers, and especially for a spiritual and religious revival. But how approach this problem? As far as I can see now, the only way in which our kindly offers could be accepted without embarrassment, in a religious reconstruction, is through the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A., which have already won the love and respect of Europe. Of course, theoretically, each denomination can say: "All who do not belong to us are not of Christ, and are therefore a mission field." But we are not facing a theory, but a condition. For each denomination to rush to Europe to propagate its creed, is out of the question. But can we not, therefore, do something for the reconstruction of religious faith in Europe? And our teachers,—would thousands of them be acceptable to these nations, even if we sent them to Europe? No doubt it would make for world-democracy and internationalism if we sent 100,000 teachers of America into the schools of Europe. There is much said about the need, but what is the specific program so we can help intelligently and effectively?

Again, reconstruction is necessary in the United States, unless we are blinded with egotism, so that we think there is no room for improvement. America also has aristocrats and Bolsheviki,—those who exploit the masses for their own selfish ends, and anarchists, who denounce all authority in government or religion. We, too, need reconstruction, in political, social, economic, religious and educational fields.

What is the place of education in World Reconstruction? Tell me what kind of a world you want, and I can tell you the problem of education. Education, in its broadest sense, is the influence of all the social institutions, the family, church, school, business, society and the State, upon the individual. Biologically, man is what he has been for thousands of years, except, perhaps, degenerated through luxury and vice. But man inherits from the race the same instincts he always did. The late Prof. James, the noted psychologist, pointed out at a peace banquet, some years ago, that the present generation, and future generations, will inherit the same instincts for war that have dominated former generations. The only hope, in this world, for peace, is the right kind of education that will enthrone reason in place of the instincts. Do we want a world of peace and harmony? Then we must educate the world accordingly. If reason is to guide our way in truth, then we must so educate. Men must be taught to know the truth, to love the truth and to do the right, else they will follow instinct,—the instinct of the animal. Our children inherit none of our piety; they must be taught piety. The present generation is biologically not a whit better than our remote ancestors,—all the ideals of civilization and religion depend upon education. There can be no reconstruction without educating the world into the ideals of life that make for social harmony. This business of education rests upon the home, the school and the church. Business and society must be reconstructed along the lines of Christian ethics, else wars will continue. "Man is the only animal that constantly preys upon its own kind." Man will forever continue to do this unless each generation is educated to the ideals of human brotherhood, as taught by Jesus Christ. Things will not go of themselves,—except down hill. "Eternal vigilance is the price of good government." Eternal efforts in uplifting humanity are the price of a better world. To reconstruct the world, so as to create a fit democracy, demands no less than an educational propaganda,—in all the educational forces of civilization,—that converts men to the things we want,—true democracy, the Kingdom of God, righteousness, justice, love and brotherhood. These ideals must be taught if they are to become real in the life of humanity. The one thing about reconstruction that is clear is this: we must make clear to ourselves what kind of a world we ought to have; what are the elements necessary to get such a world; then train sufficient leaders who will devote their lives to this cause and educate our world so that humanity will live by reason and love instead of by instinct. Without this, laws are helpless or useless. With this, laws and governments will be created to execute these ideals. It ought to be clear to all men that nothing less than the program of Jesus,—the Kingdom of God,—will meet the needs of the world, and that reconstruction will be no more than a temporary makeshift, or momentary relief, unless human institutions are based upon the eternal principles of Christ. The church must take religion seriously, and spare no sacrifice to ground everything upon the Rock, Christ Jesus.

Excursions in Bookland

"The Call of a World Task," Murray, 60 cents
"The New Archeological Discoveries," Cobern, $3.00

In certain obvious ways the two books listed above are as unlike as some married couples. Take, for example, the matters of size and general appearance. "The Call of a World Task" is a little red book with a purpose that is clear from its first sentence. "The New Archeological Discoveries" is a sedate volume of some 698 pages,—at least this is what it appears to be to the casual observer. Yet a glance into this large book will begin to disclose something quite different from that which the superficial observer would have expected to find. The large book is, in reality, a jolly big volume that has time to venture here and there, and at times even regales the reader with pages of interesting pictures. These are a few of the reasons why it might at first appear that, in placing these two volumes side by side, the Bookman has tried to outdo Cupid in the arrangement of incongruous couples.

But with all of their outward dissimilarity the little red book and the big blue book have something in common. They have a real affinity. They are alike in their emphasis on the relation between religion and life, even though their methods differ. "The Call of a World Task" is concerned with the immediate and pressing problems of today; the large book is concerned with picturing life as it was lived in New Testament times. The full title of the second book will make its aim somewhat more clear. It is as follows: "The New Archeological Discoveries and Their Bearing Upon the New Testament and upon the Life and Times of the Primitive Church." From this it will appear that both books are concerned with the relation of religion and life, but that the first aims to visualize present needs for us, while the second aims at a concrete reconstruction of the past,—particularly as it touches New Testament life and times.

The interest in the relation of religion and life is nothing new, even though for us the Great War has made it well nigh universal. While we are all wondering just how the church should relate herself to the needs of the day, we have only to remember that thoughtful people have ever been more or less disturbed over this question. Long before the Great War, novelists had invaded this field of interest and returned with such books as "The Calling of Dan Matthews." But world conditions in our days have emphasized, as never before, the deep-seated relation between religion and life. It is not simply that Christianity should fit us for the life that is to come,—it must fit us for the life that now is. The world must be Christianized if it is to become a decent place in which to live.

The church is face to face with a world task. The fact is not new, but as information it is new to many people. For this reason "The Call of a World Task" is a book that should be read by every earnest believer who wishes to take the measure of the church's responsibility in these crisal times. "The Call of a World Task" was written to interpret the present world situation in terms of missionary responsibility. It is only fair to say that it was written especially for the students in American colleges who are interested in the practical side of Matt. 28: 19, 20. And yet, is there a minister or a layman anywhere who is not interested in this great missionary task and how it should be accomplished? "The Call of a World Task" concerns not alone the college students, who are looking forward to laying their lives upon the altar of service,—it concerns every one who loves the Christ, who came to seek and to save the lost.

The story of how this little red book was written, is not without interest, since it illustrates the way in which, in these days, men are able to catch and visualize the needs of the whole world. At the Northfield student conference, held early in 1918, it was felt that the students should have a study book, interpreting the present world need in terms of world opportunity. The Educational Secretary of the Student Volunteer Movement was delegated to produce the desired book in one month. The Secretary threw himself into the task with such energy that the task set was finished within the time limit. Last summer, at student conferences, the book was studied with great success. Last fall the book was made the first on the list for the Mission Study Courses in Brethren colleges. But now, with the sudden coming of the problems of peace, "The Call of a World Task" is a book that should be in the hands of all our thoughtful people. It is a book that fits right in with the Forward Movement idea for the Church of the Brethren. "The Call of a World Task" is not only a book for study groups and classes, but any one who cares to read will find that the book is interesting as well.

The Bookman's excitement over the dramatic way in which "The Call of a World Task" fits in with the Forward Movement idea must not blind us to the merit of the large book with the pictures that we started out by contrasting with the little red book. The whole story of the significance of new archeological discoveries can not be told here. It is enough for students to say that "The New Archeological Discoveries" deals in an interesting and popular way with such subjects as the new light which the discovery of Egyptian papyri has thrown upon the languages in which the New Testament was originally written. Thus it happens that, to the discomfiture of many critics, these papyri show that the New Testament was written in the Koine, or language of the people, and not in classic Greek. This clears up many troublesome questions of grammar and text. But this is only one of the ways in which the book helps to clear up, for the average reader, the bearing of the new archeological discoveries upon the New Testament and upon the life and times of the primitive church. "The New Archeological Discoveries" demonstrates anew the truth of the New Testament and its eternal value to the men and women who hear the call of a world task.

Victory Through Faith

BY MRS. J. L. THOMAS

"He that overcometh shall inherit all things" (Rev. 21: 7).

Do temptations overtake you, is your burden hard to bear?
Is the road you travel rough and steep to climb?
Just fix your eyes on Jesus,—he is love without compare,
Beneficent, compassionate, sublime!

Chorus

Glory, glory, hallelujah!
Glory, glory, praise his name forevermore.
We shall see him, we shall know him,
When redeemed we stand on Canaan's happy shore.

In times of tribulation, in sorrow and distress,
When trials seem to overwhelm the soul,
Hold fast your faith in Jesus, he will your crosses bless
And bring you safely to your heavenly goal.

When the storms of life are rising and the awful billows roar,
When the soul is tempest-tossed and fiercely tried,
Then lift your eyes to heaven, to that happy golden shore,
And in Jesus' love be fully satisfied.

Marks of the King's Subjects

BY EZRA FLORY

When Paul said: "Henceforth let no man trouble me; for I bear branded on my body the marks of Jesus," he did not refer to the keeping of the ordinances of the New Testament, although we have heard this scripture so used. Nor did he refer to circumcision, for he had almost in the same breath said: "For neither is circumcision anything, nor uncircumcision, but a new creature" (Gal. 6: 15). What did he mean? The theme of the epistle to the Galatians is that of "the Gospel and the Law." It is vindicatory, doctrinal and hortatory. With Paul, salvation through faith in Jesus Christ alone is sufficient, without the Judaizing imposition of legal ceremonialism. But Paul declares that he bears on his body the marks of Jesus. "Branding in the flesh the marks of one's devotedness to a divinity, is to this day a widely-observed custom in the East," says Trumbull. Abraham was circumcised and his followers, as a seal in the flesh of a blood covenant with God.

Burton tells us that it was the habit in Mecca to cut three parallel gashes down the fleshy cheek of every male child; and of the claim that these gashes were signs that the scarred one was the servant of Allah's house. There are various modes of receiving marks in the flesh to show devotedness. So, too, circumcision had its significance among the Jews.

The mark of our King's subjects is, therefore, not primarily a dogma but one of an inner life which is the practical emphasis of the Christian life. This is what is emphasized by Jesus and made clear on every page of the Gospels. No greater calamity ever came to Christianity than when the Council of Nicæa established the church strength largely upon the basis of form and dogma. The effect was so far-reaching that its full significance was not comprehended until more recent times. The test of doctrine is important, but the test of righteousness has been too often ignored.

Church membership should depend upon the beauty of holiness of life and practical service to humanity. The lack of this emphasis called out the resentment of such men as Voltaire, of the Thirty Years' War, and of the Reformation. Who will dare to say that the present world conflict does not find its foundation in the same tendency?

The test of Christianity is that of "peace on earth and good will to men." Tertullian says: "Early Christianity answered its opposers by an appeal to the lives of believers. A temptation that abstained from others' goods; a chastity that they polluted not even with a look; a compassion to help the needy; a truth that gave confidence; a liberty for which they died."

When Peter besought believers to adorn themselves modestly, he admonished them to abstain from the cheap worldly adornment, but to "let it be the hidden man of the heart, in the incorruptible clothing of a meek and quiet spirit which is in the sight of God of great price."

Paul admonished Christian servants so to live as to "adorn the doctrine of God our Savior in all things." Again, like Peter, he admonished women to dress not in costly clothing, but "in good works."

The writer to the Hebrews says: "Follow after peace with all men, and the sanctification, without which no man shall see the Lord."

Jesus declared that "unless our righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, we shall in no wise enter into the kingdom of heaven." Again he said: "Except ye turn and become as little children, ye shall in no wise enter into the kingdom of heaven." He told Nicodemus that "except one be born anew, he can not see the kingdom of God." It is the "pure in heart that see God."

Paul declared that "if any one have not the Spirit of Christ he is none of his."

John wrote: "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." Again he wrote: "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; and so shall ye be my disciples." In his first epistle he sets in contrast the child of God and the child of Satan.

The marks of the King's subjects distinguish one in this life, for,

"Our deeds travel with us from afar
And what we have been makes us what we are."

"As we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly," for "As is the earthy, such are also they that are earthy: and as is the heavenly such are also they that are heavenly."

The Lost Sheep

BY JACOB FUNK

A wonderful and responsible work is that of the shepherd. Not only is he to feed the lambs, lead the flock to pastures green, guard against the enemies, but he is to gather in the lost sheep, and this last part is one that, I think, has been very much neglected in times past. We have been working on the theory that once lost meant lost forever, and so but little effort was put forth to save the one gone astray.

In the parable of the lost sheep, the stress seems to be placed on the fact that the shepherd seemed to be very much concerned about the sheep that was lost,—in fact, so great was his concern that he was willing to leave the remainder of the flock, to go and seek that one. Not only so, but he was willing to risk his very life for that one. There is no criticism either, when it is found, but great rejoicing.

What a contrast to the work of the shepherd, not having a proper sense of his duty! I think, sometimes, that if more anxiety were manifested over the one who has gone astray, not nearly so much care would need to be exercised for the ones who are safe in the fold. It is the erring one, above all others, that needs your help, your prayers, your tender care. This is squarely against human nature, but good shepherds do a lot of things that are not according to the rule of human nature.

Man's inhumanity to man and his pride before God, are the age-long manifestations of wickedness. We are still very apt to manifest some of the brute nature, when a man goes down, by helping to overwhelm him with sharp and undeserved criticism. Some folks have been driven out of the fold by this manner of conduct.

Oh, that there might be a more tender regard for the welfare of the lost! They are the Father's children, even though they are on the wrong track. Given a good pasture, in the right kind of environment, and treated with some extra manifestation of kindness, they will make good.

When I was a boy, my father had a lot of hogs. One of them was a runt, and seemed hardly worth the feeding.—so thought my father, when he gave it to me. It was the first property I ever owned, and that pig looked like a fortune to me. I made a pen as near to the house as my mother would permit, and fed it as if it were the most valuable animal in the country. It paid, too, for when the hogs went to market, lo, mine led all the rest in weight.

I am not implying, by this little incident, that people should be treated as hogs, but I do mean that the weak and the erring should be treated with extra kindness, and given special care by pastors and shepherds. It pays.

David Gregg tells the beautiful story of a Scotch Highlander, who planted a tree beside a little brook, where there was no kindly soil. Of course it wilted and drooped. But suddenly, to the surprise of every one, it took a new start in life and bore much fruit. An examination revealed the secret. With a marvelous vegetable instinct, it sent out a shoot which ran out along and over a narrow sheep ridge, and rooted itself in the rich loam on the other side of the brook. From this rich loam it drew its life. Even so it is the business of the shepherd to see that all the sheep draw their life from Jesus Christ, who is not willing that any should perish.

Under Southern Skies

BY J. H. B. WILLIAMS
Secretary-Treasurer of General Mission Board

Part II.—Some Problems and Suggestions

In our last article we spoke something of the trip which we so much enjoyed among the hospitable Southern brethren and sisters. There is another phase of the subject, about which we desire to speak, out of justice to these dear folks, living off so far from the main body of the church. We would help them all we could, and encourage them, as the pioneers of a large body of the Church of the Brethren in the Southland,—the church to be.

The Southern field is not without its problems and hindrances. We merely desire to mention a few of them. We do it not from a desire to show the dark side of the work, but, in some manner, to assist. We feel sure that in doing this we do no one an injustice, and it is but fair that we make known something of the real conditions there:

Other denominations quite largely occupy the field, though there are large unchurched masses that need the Gospel.

Our people who have settled in the South have not always gone with an idea of permanency. Many went South to seek their fortune and, of course, these always had a price on their property, upon the receipt of which, they often passed on. As is often the case, some overreached themselves,—a matter that can not be charged against the country.

There are great distances between the bodies of members. This is a deterrent in many respects, but the fellowship enjoyed by such members, when once they get together, is sweet indeed.

Secret orders very generally prevail throughout the South,—if anything to a greater degree than in the North. Many told us that these all but sap the life from religious profession. We understand something of this by our own observations in almost every quarter of the country.

The isolated position of our churches in the South has not given them an opportunity to become acquainted with our general church life. The likelihood is that the North has not been as diligent in going to the South, or in sending workers to assist the members in that section as it should. Our good people down there feel that they have not been remembered by visits, by reinforcements, that their appeals have not been heeded in many ways, as have those of the churches in other parts of the country. We believe that they are right in this statement. Our members have traveled along lines of latitude, rather than of longitude.

Then there is that ever present question of color. Our cause has been hurt, in some cases, by Northern folks going South with altruistic motives and Northern ideas on ways of helping the colored man. Their efforts, so far, have not succeeded, and have not helped the cause. It occurs to us that the thing to do, on moving South, is to go without having one's preconceived opinions too firmly fixed on this question, and to study the question well before acting or speaking on the subject. We do not, in any way, cast any reflections on anybody when we say this. We simply speak of the condition of things as it is. The people of the North are not qualified to judge in such matters, until they have been in actual touch with the Southern problem.

Such an array of hindrances would seem almost insurmountable, were it not for the fact that we have about as many in the North, and that, nevertheless, our work seems to progress here. Along with these, we should not overlook many most beautiful characteristics of Southern folks,—hospitality, honesty, simplicity, sociability, open-heartedness,—characteristics that would seem to make the hearts of the people fertile soil for our principles. We should learn the lesson of adapting our methods to the Southern mind,—just as it is being learned in India, China, and anywhere else where missionaries go.

We venture to add just a few suggestions, which we commend to the thought of our people who are interested in the Southern field. From interviews, held with brethren individually and in District Meetings, where open discussions were held, we gather that the needs of our brethren in the South center around four distinct heads:

1. A Strengthened Leadership.
2. Larger Financial Contributions.
3. Development of Their Potential Resources.
4. A Closer Cohesion of Their Membership.

1. A Strengthened Leadership.—All with whom we talked felt that the General Mission Board could assist by sending representatives to them oftener, and by endeavoring to help them locate active ministers in their territory. It would likewise be a great boon to these people if a good evangelist or two could be found, who would be willing to spend his winters among these churches. These evangelists should be active, successful in their past work, with a keen sense of the spirit and value of adaptation,—brethren with a vision, who would go South to help, not merely to spend the winter. But some strong ministers are needed as residents, and the evangelists would teach and inspire.

Pleasant Grove Church, Near Hufsmith, Texas, Where the Late District Meeting of Texas and Louisiana Was Held

2. Larger Financial Contributions.—(a) The South is a great mission field in itself. Surely, because of this fact it deserves that its calls be heard by sympathetic ears. (b) Some of our wealthier churches in the North, ambitious to do church extension work, might appoint some one of their best ministers to labor in the South for a season, the congregation bearing his expenses while there. The writer will be glad to know of any who may desire to do this very thing. (c) Some special fund, or some special percentage of money, contributed for World-wide Work, should be designated for work in the homeland. The budget system of church finance could, with profit, be employed both in the North and in the South.

3. Development of Potential Resources.—We hope that this can be done somewhat through the medium of our Forward Movement, during the next few years, and through visits of our returned missionaries to these churches. The people in the South are not pessimistic about their work; they are optimists. They see the harvest, but they need laborers to help reap it.

4. A Closer Cohesion of Their Membership.—In some manner there should be a program of education set on foot that would encourage our people, when they go to a new country, to go where there are members. Frontier Districts could, with profit, have "Locating Committees," made up of brethren who are not in the real estate business. Such Committees would refuse commissions from the sales of land. Their purpose would not be to make people restless, neither would it be their aim to keep up a program of agitation to encourage people to move, but simply to direct inquiring brethren towards localities where there are organized churches. In the Southland almost any kind of soil can be found, and there are churches in most of the communities. But our people should have education along the line of their responsibility to the church, and they should have many opportunities of learning, through our church papers and elsewhere, that the great Brotherhood greatly desires them to take care in moving, lest they isolate themselves from the church, thereby infinitely damaging their own spiritual lives, and rendering themselves of negligible value to the church.

In these remarks I have said nothing startling or unusual. I found nothing to warrant such. I found a splendid people, needing help and anxious for assistance. There is no sentiment or reason for the General Mission Board to work independently of the District Boards, in the territory I visited, but every reason why it should work heart and soul with them. The potential forces of large additions to our church forces are there. Supply leaders to supplement the efforts of those resident there, awaken the forces in the Southland, train them, afford them a vision, and they will do good work. I think money, wisely and judiciously invested in that territory, will yield splendid returns.

Addenda

It is but natural that we should say something about the opportunities of the great Southland as a place of residence for our people, as the trend of emigration will inevitably be southward. We need not waste our space to tell you that the Southern brethren will heartily welcome any one in their midst who comes with a rightful purpose. The South is one vast extension dining-room table, with open doors, open hearts and a blazing fireplace, if an expression, somewhat befitting their hospitality, is desired.

The writer is not in the land business. He does not own a foot of soil in the South, nor is he the relative of any land agent. He is not a very enthusiastic advocate of "church extension by immigration." Too often this has proved to be "church devastation by emigration," to which fact scores of weakened, depleted or abandoned churches in older territories will testify. We believe more in the doctrine of adaptation and evangelization. On the other hand, our Church of the Brethren would have remained in Germany, if nobody had ever moved. Therefore, since folks will move, and rightly so, sometimes, we venture to make a few suggestions to those who feel that their local churches can spare their services and who, therefore, are justified in leaving their present homes. The only word of caution we would offer is, that those who propose to leave places where they are sadly needed, would better stay there, if it is at all possible. Candidly, you know, brethren, that we may tramp, tramp, tramp about this old world, thinking that the fields across the hills are greenest, until we develop a sort of religio-vagabond spirit. Such, at least, is a possibility.

What we started out to say is, that the South needs workers. The South presents opportunities second to none in the country. The South presents splendid possibilities for the Church of the Brethren. There is not a church down there that will not welcome good workers. Every church pressed and stressed this point. And they have a right to feel that six or eight preachers,—oftentimes rusting out and in each other's way, in a church with only one preaching point,—are too many. They have a right to question such a dubious obedience to Christ's commands, especially when the Southland is a part of the "Judea" of Acts 1: 8.

In my other article I mentioned a number of churches that are especially lacking in workers. They will welcome additional members. Should you think of going South, plan to go where the members live. Do not listen to all land agents, but if you must listen to one, give heed to him whom our members recommend, and who lives close to them. Do not neglect your soul, nor the souls of your precious children, by allowing some "land wizard" to isolate you from the church.

Would you grow melons, raise cattle, thresh the inevitable "goober" (peanut), or raise cotton, inquire of almost any church in Texas. However, we believe that dairying is a principal industry at Manvel. The cotton at Taft or Portland seems to be very luxuriant. Here a place might easily be found for the right preacher. Would you grow rice, or raise stock, think of Roanoke in Louisiana. The sugar cane at Fruitdale, and the "truck" raised there, make the people who engage in them a good living. The turpentine from Alabama's pines produces a neat sum for those who tap the trees. The citrus fruit industry of Florida is in its infancy, largely, in the places where our brethren dwell, though thousands of cars of the fruit are annually shipped from the State. The fruit grown is juicy and fine and no irrigation is required. These short statements are made simply that you may know something of the crops and industries.

We simply wish to recapitulate what we have already stated:

1. Go, look, before you settle there.
2. Make thorough inquiry of reliable brethren.
3. Do not isolate yourself from the church,—the sun shines brightly everywhere.
4. Go South to live, and give and lend a hand.

Southern souls are precious, and many are dying for a vision of their own needs and for the sense of sins forgiven.

Our Departed Friends and Ourselves

BY OLIN F. SHAW

THE conviction of an existence after death is much older than the Christian era. And yet, in the light of the New Testament Scriptures, and of the intelligence of the present generation, the number of those is legion who are finding it difficult to approach physical death with that triumphant faith that can say: "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" I refer not to non-church members alone, but to a large per cent of professing Christians.

It is not my purpose to discuss in these lines the fact of the immortality of the soul, but rather to visualize, or to make more real, our after-death experience,—that our discarnate beings shall continue as personal entities, with a conscious individuality, though not with a carnal body, yet possessing a bodily form, and loving, thinking, recollecting and continuing to grow in the spirit-life.

In other words, our departed ones do, and we shall, from the time of the dissolution of bodies and spirits, continue as unimpaired, living realities, and as much so as did our adorable Savior.

Scriptural grounds for such a view may be found in such texts as the following: "God is not the God of the dead, but of the living" (Matt. 22: 32),—speaking of the long since departed spirits of Abraham, Moses, etc. "It behooved him in all things to be made like unto his brethren" (Heb. 2: 17). Let us note also the significant language of our Master, in connection with the former, as recorded in Mark 12: 26: "But as touching the dead, that they are raised." It is to be seen here that they are not awaiting,—as we have been in the habit of saying,—some future general resurrection day, but are raised.

Are we to suppose that, in response to the prayer of the thief on the cross, for a future blessing: "Remember me when thou comest in thy kingdom," Jesus granted unto him a special blessing that shall not be ours to enjoy, when he said: "Today shalt thou be with me in Paradise"? By no means. Precisely the same shall be the blessing of all the saved. And likewise, in the parable of Dives and Lazarus, the thought is conveyed of two personal realities after death, having entered at once upon their reward.

Jacob, in mourning over the loss of his son Joseph, lamented that he should go down unto "sheol," mourning for his lost boy. Apparently the idea prevailed, in those pre-Messianic times, that the future habitation of the soul was downward,—perhaps somewhere in the heart of the earth. In the light of the New Testament, who would want to accept such a theory now? And if it should be found that the thought advanced in these texts did not coincide with such Old Testament texts as Eccl. 9: 10, and other kindred passages, what have we in these but the conception of these godly men of old, of the after-death experience of the soul,—men who lived and labored without the glorious light of the Gospel?

If the acceptance of such views necessitates the readjusting of our theology, that is matter of small moment. It is, however, a matter of profound importance in ministering at the bedside of the sick and dying, or at the grave-side, in laying away the mortal remains of loved ones, what kind of light we set before them.

From different parts of the earth, and from different persons, has repeatedly come the testimony of persons who were with the dying, of having witnessed a mystical body, having the exact human form, rise from the body as life went out. Who could say that their testimony is not true? How well this testimony fits Paul's words: "There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body"! Also, "We know that if the earthly house of our tabernacle be dissolved, we have a building from God." To my mind the thought is clearly feasible, that there are bodily forms other than physical bodies, and that we are possessors of both physical and spiritual bodies. We bear the image of the earthly now; our departed friends now bear the image of the heavenly.

Statements emanating from the most trustworthy sources confidently assert that they have both seen and communed with departed spirits. The writer is neither prepared to affirm nor deny such statements. We are prepared, however, to believe that these dear ones may, much of the time, be very near to us, and may have power to influence our life for good.

Open-Window Christians

BY GALEN B. ROYER

WHAT fills one with greater delight than, after a long siege of winter, to get out and breathe plenty of pure, fresh air! It brings color to the cheeks, sparkle to the eye, and new vigor to our whole being. What a contrast there is between the days of August, with their stifling heat, when windows must be closed to keep out the dust and the torrid wave, with the "rare days of June," when windows are open all day long, and the fragrant, balmy atmosphere fills our homes! How eagerly, too, we snatch every opportunity, in those torrid days, to get the benefit of every cooling breeze, to gather a little relief from the depressing heat wave that has been upon us!

The winds and pure air are some of God's best, freest gifts. Just as soon as we cut them off either intentionally, through fear, as some people do, in case of sickness, or because our environment does not permit to enjoy them, as is the case in some tenement houses in the large cities, the air becomes impure and we grow pale, puny, sickly and, possibly, may die.

Open windows are spoken of in the Bible, and are very suggestive. Daniel opened his window towards Jerusalem, to pray, and the breath of heaven cooled his brow, made feverish by the plotting heathen about him. The prophet Malachi begs Israel not to neglect the Lord in his portion, and the windows of heaven will be opened with blessings far beyond our ability to contain them.

Is your window opened towards Jerusalem? It is so easy to shut it and live in the stifling atmosphere, breathed over and over by self, so foul and unfit for our well-being. It is so easy to shut one's self into the destroying atmosphere of the world, and in time stamp out the last vestige of spiritual life. What a sad death!

God's Word tells us how to keep open windows and enjoy the blessings of a pure, spiritual atmosphere. Does not this truth appear where we are told to "abide in him" (John 15: 4), "walk in the Spirit" (Gal. 5: 16), "walk in the light" (1 John 1: 17), "keep yourselves in the love of God" (Jude 21), and similar exhortations? They surely suggest the OPEN attitude to the Father and the necessity of holding this close relationship, even by those who are "justified by faith and have peace with God" (Rom. 5: 1).

"The righteous shall live by faith" (Rom. 1: 17), not simply be "justified by faith" (Rom. 3: 28). Just as every one must breathe every moment, to live physically, so must he who would live truly and well in the presence of God, breathe constantly his pure love through faith.

Perhaps we realize very little how easy it is to shut our spiritual windows. It does not take much to close them. Just neglect prayer and communion with God, or become filled with hurry and anxiety about the things that interest us deeply,—even those that belong to the Kingdom,—and the windows at once close towards God. To doubt God in the least, or to grumble in the smallest measure about our lot in life, proves most fatal before we know it.

But I am glad that our windows open more readily than they close, that the "weights" of God's grace abound in larger measure than our sins, which close them. Just as soon as we look longingly towards him, the windows open again.

Open windows mean open hearts and surrendered wills. They mean no secret reserve of sin of any kind, or a heart to disobey in one thing. They mean absolute confidence and loyalty to God. They bring into our lives a condition of having a "heart perfect towards God" (1 Chron. 16: 9), which enables God to show his strength in us (Gen. 17: 1). But they mean more than that. They give that joyous, buoyant feeling which comes to one when skies are clear and one walks cheerily in the presence of God. With Enoch it meant walking right into the glory world (Gen. 5: 22).

Now and then we come across Christians who impress one that there is something wrong with their lives. They appear zealous, they have never fallen under the judgment of the church, they are regular attendants at services, they take part in prayer, and often make long prayers, they seem to be hard-working and pains-taking, even to the smallest fringe on their garments, and yet there is something lacking. If they speak to any one about Christ, they repel instead of drawing the person nearer. They lack the "beauty of the Lord" (Psa. 90: 17) which other people expect in a Christian, and which a true child of God has. Perhaps, if we could see these people as God sees them, we would find they have shut their windows by their own notions of the Christian life, and barred out Christ's way and life.

No one has yet discovered the laws that control the wind. The Master himself called attention to this fact: "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh or whither it goeth" (John 3: 8). Then he explains that the Holy Spirit, the breath of God, is blowing all the time, that it knows no regular channels or specified avenues, but "where it listeth." Its ways are secret and mysterious,—past finding out,—and yet evident because "thou hearest the sound thereof."

Who has eyes keen enough to see the wind, and yet how distinctly one hears the leaves overhead rustle under its moving! So the breath of God should touch our daily lives. Even the tiniest leaf of the great tree of our being should flutter under its benign power. Indeed, when the winds of God blow and our windows are open, not only is the sound of his Presence heard, but the odor of spices from our lives is carried to others,—a holy living and unselfish loving which will be enjoyed by all thus influenced.

But this is not all. What is more purifying and refreshing than to open the windows of a long closed room and let the wind of God's great outdoors blow in and through! It carries away all disease germs and foul gases. It makes all things pure and clean. Were it not for pure air, disease would stalk everywhere. Think what pure air means to a city! Without it life would be almost impossible.

Just so is the work of the Holy Spirit. Where his fresh currents of grace move, there is purity of heart and healthfulness of Christian life. Not to have the window open is to live in the stifling atmosphere of a closed room, or it is like walking in the dense forest where "there is not a breath of air." People of the city, during the heated season, go to the seashore, where there are cooling breezes. How blessed it is to move out of the deadening, contaminating, unhealthful quarters of discord, unrest and dissatisfaction into the fullness of spiritual life and to enjoy his power, his presence, his peace! When once one moves, and knows the blessing, he wonders why he did not move sooner.

What is your environment, reader? Are your windows closed? Are you gasping for this pure, heavenly breath? What is keeping you where you now are? Is it paltry riches, unsteady position, worldly pleasure? In some instances men have offered all of earth that they had to give, for just one hour longer to live, and make it all right with God. Let us learn the lesson now,—TODAY, to give up anything and everything that prevents the gentle zephyrs of God's Holy Spirit from moving upon the smallest parts of our lives.

Fresh air is conducive to personal beauty. If we want to keep our Christian personality bright, beautiful, attractive, a help for the Kingdom, strong and useful for God, we must keep our windows open and live in the pure air of fellowship with God. And by his grace we can do it.

Nearsighted and Farsighted Christians

BY D. W. SHOCK

SOME people are nearsighted. They can see only things near at hand. The glories of the heavens above are shut from their view. The beauties of a distant mountain landscape are not for them.

Other persons are farsighted. Things near at hand are unobserved, or obscure, while things far away have a peculiar charm. Ancient and not modern history are their favorite. Æsop, in one of his fables, tells of an astronomer who, while walking along one night, gazing at the heavens, fell into a well. A neighbor assisted him out, but after so doing advised him, when studying the stars, to keep one eye on the earth.

Both nearsightedness and farsightedness are diseases of the eyes, and are a great misfortune. The perfect eye sees objects both near and far with distinctness.

Some Christians are nearsighted in spiritual things. They can see the wants of those immediately about them, but are blind to the needs of those across the great waters. They have warm hearts for those living in their own country, but are cold towards all enterprises in foreign lands. They are ardent advocates of home missions, but bluntly say that they have no interest in foreign missions.

Other Christians are farsighted. They let people starve on the same street with them, while their eyes are cast across all oceans. While they pray and plan for the salvation of the heathen, they have deaf ears to the struggling enterprises in their own homeland, or even their home church. Their hearts seem to melt at every cry for help from across the water.

How unfortunate! Both these conditions are defects of spiritual vision. The perfect vision of the Christian sees the needs of men at home, the needs of the home congregation to provide wisely for the future, and the needs abroad, and subscribes to Christ's declaration: "The field is the world." Every intelligent Christian ought to aim to be broad enough and large enough, every way, to take Christ's view of salvation.

Christ's view is the only correct view. It is common for the daring spirit, nowadays, to project a flying machine high up the sky, so as to survey the earth on a large and minute scale, in the interests of the weather bureau. We must mount up to heaven in order to get a correct view of earth,—Christ's view. And when we have secured his view, we need look no farther,—nowhere else,—but proceed to carry out his comprehensive plan for the salvation of the WORLD. We can then see both near at hand and far into the distance. We can then work and plan for the greatest interests at home and across the great sea.

THE ROUND TABLE

Peace

BY JULIA GRAYDON

"PEACE I leave with you." Thus spoke the Master, as he was about to leave his disciples in the midst of a troubled world.

We hear on all sides today: "Peace has come." Yes, it has come to the world at large, but if there is not peace in the hearts of men and women, there can not be the "peace which passeth all understanding."

"My peace I give unto you, not as the world giveth, give I unto you." The world peace, we want it, we are thankful for it,—but it can not make up for the peace which Christ left with us centuries ago.

"My peace I leave with you.
Hearts that are sore.
My peace I leave with you.
Yours evermore."

An Open Shame

BY ROY P. HYLTON

IN these days of conservation, the individual who wantonly permits the waste or careless use of resources, is anathematized by society. And it is well that he should be. Even a company of individuals, operating as one man, is branded as unpatriotic or disloyal for a single transgression of the laws governing the economic use and expenditure of material at hand.

I am impressed with the contrast in the Christian world. There is no great lack of material equipment in the church. There are over two hundred thousand churches in the United States, with seating capacity for sixty million people, costing, perhaps, one and a half billion dollars. There is an organization for every four hundred and eighty people. The need is not for more church buildings and organizations so much as it is for men. Even God can not carry out his plans without men.

I have in mind now a community of large possibilities, but the man to hold the wheel is not to be found. A large building, with seating capacity for several hundred people, is almost ghostly on Sunday, because of the empty pews. A faithful few meet each Sunday for Bible study, but have no minister. Their plaintive cry is for a minister, a leader, to work with them. This is no isolated case. There are communities of this kind all over this great land of ours, with no man to steer the ship. It is most surely putting the Man of Galilee again to an open shame!

Here is the crux of it all: Many congregations have two, three or perhaps half a dozen "preachers,"—I use that word advisedly,—who are unmindful of the need of the hour. Have Christ's standard-bearers become so gregarious by nature that they must congregate together and feed upon husks, like swine, when the great open fields are dripping with the sweetness of service to mankind? Can we no longer hear even the distant echo of that animating "Go ye" of Christ? Are we unfaithful to the church and to God who has called us? Soldiers of Christ, let us rally to the standard now. Today is the great day of opportunity. Let us not allow this open shame!

Do You Know Your Bible?

BY ZUMA HEESTAND

I AM speaking to each individual member of the church when I ask: "Do you know your Bible?"

The words of 1 Peter 3: 15 were not only spoken for ministers but include lay-members as well. "But sanctify the Lord God in your hearts: and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear."

What is your answer? Why do we hesitate or enter into personal work reluctantly? Why should we refuse to teach a Sunday-school class? Perhaps it is due to a lack of knowledge.

Have parents failed to teach the Bible or has the church failed because she does not require a definite course of study? Perhaps a course of catechism would help. After spending one year in a Presbyterian home, I am convinced that a good course of catechism would have been a help to me.

It is with joy that I recall those Sabbath evenings, spent with Dr. J. Campbell White and family. It is only by associating with a family, known by their Christlike lives and magnetic power as mission leaders, that I have been inspired to write these few words.

Morning prayers were not neglected, and on each Sabbath evening the family met in the living-room for Bible study and prayer. The following program was given on the last Sabbath evening that I was in the home: We were supplied with Bibles and then Mrs. White suggested that we begin to read at the tenth chapter of Romans. We read, verse about, until we reached the sixteenth chapter. Then all began repeating favorite chapters: The entire fifth chapter of Matthew; twenty-third Psalm; the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians, etc. Then Dr. White announced scripture references, and in turn the family repeated the verses. Then one of the girls was asked to give the ten commandments. She got them slightly mixed, so her father said: "You may repeat them for us each morning at breakfast until you are sure of them."

After this drill they began to repeat hymns: "Nearer, My God, to Thee," "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," "Lead, Kindly Light," "My Faith Looks Up to Thee," and "O Love That Wilt Not Let Me Go." Then Dr. White asked a great many questions, and the family took turns in answering, after which each one of us took part in the prayer service. It was only an extemporaneous program, which lasted one hour and a half, but every one present took part and received a blessing. After prayers we talked about catechism. They admitted that it took tact, time and perseverance to give a family of five the full course, but they were well paid for their efforts. I had to admit that our church had no catechism, and my knowledge was limited.

How I regret that I have not had such training! To fret about the past would be a waste of time. Here we are at the beginning of a new year. Shall we overcome the habit of neglect and launch ourselves with a strong and decided initiative to form the habit of systematic Bible study?

The Fruits of Rationalism

BY OLIVE A. SMITH

DURING the past four years of war, William Hohenzollern made many references to God as the Leader of the German armies and the Champion of the nation. Many of the German people expressed themselves in a similar way, apparently sincere in their belief that they were a chosen people, selected by Providence for world dominion. And during these years careful students of the situation watched every press report and every report from individuals who returned from the front. Never once did the late emperor mention the name of Jesus Christ as the leader of their cause. If any of his followers did so, it was not reported.

The reason is obvious. For forty years before the outbreak of the war, Germany was the center of the so-called rationalistic doctrines of religion. Their scholars taught that Jesus was the best Man who ever lived. He was a Superman. They,—the Germans,—had become supermen. Their achievements in science and philosophy, their far-famed efficiency, had earned for them the place to which they aspired as world leaders, and the crown of their achievements would be to push the doctrine of "the survival of the fittest" to its ultimate end, eliminating the races which were barriers in the way of their world dominion. In a way, it was excellent reasoning,—the inevitable end of rationalism, untouched by Christianity. It was the result of an actual application of the slogan: "Gott mit uns." For, after all, is there not a measure of truth in the paraphrase: "Man makes God in his own image"?

Perhaps we should not look backward, even to consider the reasons for the horror which has desolated Europe and drenched the world in blood. Truly, our attention needs to be centered on rebuilding from the wreckage as best we can. With a world debt of two-hundred billion dollars, with countless thousands of maimed lives and wrecked homes,—our own war toll being estimated at one hundred thousand,—there is more than enough to do and to think about. Yet we can not banish from our minds the questions which persist in knocking at the door of our intelligence.

"Why did it need to be so?" "Why could it not have been foreseen and avoided?" "How can we be insured against such horrors in the future?"

To consider these questions in the right spirit is not crying over spilled milk, or wasting time bemoaning the past. It is gleaning from the past the lessons we need for the future.

At this time the writer well remembers a certain minister who, later, became a university teacher. He was employed by the Government to deliver addresses during the period of the war. Prior to giving up the work of a pastor, he became deeply interested in the "higher criticism" and in the study of philosophy. In a most able address on the subject: "Why we are at war," delivered in 1917, he quoted extensively from the German textbooks, and commented on the insidious nature of the doctrines taught in them. At that time, the query arose in my mind: "Why has the nature of these teachings become so suddenly apparent?" For many, many years, scholars have been studying German texts and taking work in German universities. A few years ago it was considered the greatest honor to have been a student at the University of Berlin. And those same books, which are now regarded as the horrible foundation for all the teachings which resulted in the war, must have been used for a long period of time prior to that.

William himself, when talking to his American dentist, took occasion to sneer at the American folly of placing a "school-master" in the executive chair. We know how erroneous that sneer has proven to be.

But has the scholarship of our country, as represented by the spirit of our great institutions, failed of its mission, in leading us aright? Was Emerson mistaken when he said: "The scholar is the world's eye; he is the world's heart"?

The truth seems to be that rationalism and the kind of philosophy which formed the German basis of thought, made a most alluring kind of study for many scholars, ministers, and students. Given an attractive setting and an imposing background, and it is amazing how we may lose sight of the real nature of the object we are pursuing. How quickly we swung back to the great realities of religion when we saw how we had been deceived and mocked! When the time of trial and suffering came, there was no room for rationalistic study, or speculation, or philosophy.

Of course, no nation is absolutely free from these errors. But there is such a thing as a national spirit, and, however much we may differ in our views as to what should be done in a crisis like the one just past, it is certain that the majority of our soldiers realized that they were fighting for the principles of the Nazarene.

The Good Book tells us that the nation which forgets to honor and follow God has chosen the way which leads to death. Germany claimed Divine leadership, but Jesus said: "I and my Father are one." A voice from above said: "This is my beloved Son.- Hear ye him." Thus the slogan, "Gott mit uns," is not enough.

"Better Be on the Safe Side"

BY ELIZABETH H. BRUBAKER

"HAD we not better be on the safe side?" said a minister of the Gospel when teaching a certain Bible subject. Many questions have two sides,—one that is known as the safe side, the other as the doubtful. It is often difficult to know just which is the positively right course to pursue, and that is the time to guard, lest we are not on the right side. Some people are constitutionally abnormal, and it is then difficult to do the normal thing. Even ministers of the Gospel may appear in the pulpit in an abnormal condition. Frequently listeners are, or may be, in the same state of mind or health. When one is in a nervous condition, certainly it is difficult to concentrate on the minister's sermon, and under such circumstances the mind is easily drawn away from the message given. Even babies,—innocent little beings,—are sometimes taken to church in an abnormal condition,—probably sick and not able to be at their best. Certainly, the child that is sick should not be taken to church. But when a child is well, and other conditions favorable, should mothers be compelled to remain at home simply because some persons think babies should not be taken to church?

I recall well the view taken by a minister,—the pastor of a large church in a large city. In fact, it was said that this particular church had the largest seating capacity of all the churches in that city. On the occasion to which I refer, the house was well filled. During the sermon, a mother with a baby in her arms, rose to leave the room. Said the minister: "Mother, sit down. Do not go out. People, give me your attention. I am glad that God has given me a voice that I can be heard above the babies. When I came to this city from Boston, where it is not customary to take babies to church, it seemed strange to see them brought to church here. But when I learned that mothers can not come without bringing their babies, I said: 'Let the babies come.' I hope, however, that the time will soon come when this church will have a nursery where babies can be cared for by young women taking turns, and thus permitting mothers to hear the sermon."

It was my privilege to be in the audience when this incident occurred. I shall never forget the impression the foregoing words, coming from that scholarly minister, made upon my mind. At that time I was doing city mission work. In our visits from house to house, it was a common experience to hear mothers say: "I have never attended church much since I am married. I have children and can not leave them at home." I often felt sorry for these mothers, and the thought has come to me: "Why should mothers, who so much need the spiritual uplift of a good sermon, be deprived of church attendance?" Certainly the normal child will smile in church. It will also let objects fall. Should not those persons who allow themselves to be distracted by these things be themselves corrected, in some other way than at the expense of the mother? If children are not taken to the house of worship when small, at what age shall they begin to attend church?

I recall another incident, related by a well-known national Sunday-school worker: "When but a child, and sitting by my mother in church," said she, "I sometimes became restless. Then my mother would whisper to me: 'Sit still and listen to the Word of God.' I shall never forget those words of my mother," said she. "They have influenced me all through my life. Let us take our children to church, and thus help them to form the habit early in life, of church attendance."

Certainly, there are exceptions when the mother, for good reasons, will not take her baby to church. There are times, too, when it is decidedly better for a mother to take her crying baby out during church services. In general, is it not better to correct the adults who allow their attention to be drawn away by the innocent child? Is it not a real inspiration to see the whole family attend the church services? Let us remember the admonition of Heb. 10: 25: "Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is."

CORRESPONDENCE

"Write what thou seest, and send it unto the churches"

MT. MORRIS COLLEGE MISSIONARY SOCIETY

Jan. 12 occurred the regular monthly meeting of the Mt. Morris College Missionary Society. This society was organized in 1901 and has been supporting a worker on the field in the person of Bro. D. J. Lichty, who, as also his late companion, was a charter member of the organization. At this meeting two addresses were given,—one by Sister J. W. Lear on "Traits in the Life of Sister Nora Lichty," and the other on "History and Aims of the Society," by Eld. M. W. Emmert.

The membership of this body consists of students and local church members who have signed the membership card, and former students who joined while here. The latter have been sending their yearly amounts by letter, since having moved away.

However, we regret to say there are delinquents and the treasury is in arrears. A committee is to consider the present situation. Why not give this committee a surprise by each member acting as a "committee of one" to do his part in bringing the funds up to where they should be?

By March 1, 1919, we ought to have all dues paid and the money on hand to make up the $360 support for the fiscal year. About $550 is required to do this. However, with each one doing his part, the burden will not be heavy on any one individual. Already progress has been made and the society is on a better standing than a year ago, by nearly $200. One member, who was interested in supporting a native worker, is now applying the amount of $75 a year to the Lichty fund.

It would be greatly appreciated if all members of the organization, who read this, would send their 1919-1920 offering at once to the undersigned, and thus minify the expense of sending notices. We say "offering" because it is hoped that at this time of need and opportunity we may be able to get beyond the initial one dollar a year,—just as in our church we have superseded the penny-a-week collection of years ago. We shall be glad to report still greater progress in the future. Nelson E. Shirk.

AN APPEAL FROM THE HISTORICAL COMMITTEE OF MIDDLE PENNSYLVANIA

The committee which has in hand the compiling of the history of the churches of Middle Pennsylvania desires to call the attention of persons abroad, who once resided or have family connections here, who may be able to give important and interesting data that are not otherwise available.

This District has been an epoch-making one in our great Brotherhood in some very important respects. It gave to the church its first advanced schools and college, its first weekly paper, report of Conference, ministerial list, hymnal with music, young people's paper, ministerial meetings and Sunday-school conventions. It was among the first,—if not the first,—to hold Sunday-schools. Her Sunday-schools were the first to support a missionary on the foreign field.

Some of the churches in the West, notably Eel River and Monticello, in Indiana, Plattsburg, Mo., and Dry Creek, Iowa, owe their origin to emigrants from this District. Among the descendants of these pioneers there may be preserved some records or traditions that will be of interest, obtainable only through them.

It is the desire of the committee to have the work as full and complete as possible before it goes into print. The early history of some of the churches was never written, but lies behind the cloud of vague tradition.

Any help or suggestions that any one can give will be highly appreciated by the committee. Correspondence solicited. Jas. A. Sell.

YORK, PENNSYLVANIA

The fourth quarterly Sunday-school Teachers' Institute was held in First Church, Dec. 19. Bro. Noah Sellers, of Black Rock, gave a very interesting talk on "Vision Before Work." Bro. H. K. Ober, of Elizabethtown, was also present and addressed the Teacher-training Class on the subject of "The Personal Touch." He then presented international diplomas to seven of the class who had finished the course. Four others received seals.

Dec. 31 we met in council to reorganize our Sunday-school. Bro. L. Elmer Leas was reappointed superintendent for the First Church, and Bro. John K. Pfaltzgraff for the Second Church. Our first quarterly council was held Jan. 9, with Eld. J. A. Long presiding. One letter was received and one was granted. Eld. Long gave a talk on "Simplicity of Attire." Our love feast will be held May 11. The fixed time for our love feasts is every second Sunday in May, and every second Sunday in October. The writer was appointed correspondent for another year.

Dec. 13 Bro. Lewis M. Clover, of Gatewood, W. Va., preached for us. Jan. 12 Eld. Walter S. Long, of Altoona, preached two very interesting sermons. His theme in the morning was: "The God of Jacob," and in the evening: "The Personality of the Devil." Jan. 12 our superintendent presented to members of the Sunday-school seventy seals and seventeen diplomas for regularity of attendance. Seven of these have not missed any Sunday. A large number who received seals have been regular attendants for four years. One was received by baptism since our last report. Alice K. Trimmer.

MEETING OF THE INDIA FIELD COMMITTEE

The regular meeting of the Field Committee of the India Mission was held at Bulsar, Nov. 12-15, 1918. Because of the epidemic of influenza, which has been raging throughout the mission for a number of weeks, the attendance at this meeting was not as large as it would otherwise have been, but those who had the privilege of attendance, enjoyed very much these few days spent together.

These occasions are important, not only because of the plans and decisions made for the carrying on of the work most effectively, but they are valuable because of the opportunity thus afforded for fellowship. Those at the more isolated stations often see none of their fellow-workers for several months and they especially enjoy such times as these, when they can mingle for a few days with the other missionaries.

There was an unusually large amount of work to be done at this meeting, and a number of decisions were made that have a far-reaching influence. With as many important questions as were considered, the harmony and unanimity of thought manifested, at every session, was almost surprising. Most of the decisions were passed almost without a dissenting voice.

One of the needs, most keenly and constantly felt here, is for trained, efficient native workers. That this may be met, plans are being considered to provide better facilities for training some of these people for service. One Main Girls' School is to be provided for each language area, where Normal Training can be given. The school for the Gujerati District is to be at Anklesvar and the work of building is to begin soon.

THE QUIET HOUR

Suggestions for the Weekly Devotional Meeting Or for Prayerful, Private Meditation

Never-Failing Strength

Isaiah 40: 31

For Week Beginning February 9, 1919

1. Introductory.—(1) The drain of life is exhausting: (a) Tasks. (b) Temptations. (c) Trials. (2) Replenishment is needed in the spiritual as well as in the physical realm. (3) God provides for this fully. He is ready to renew. (4) The condition, "Wait on the Lord."

2. Prayer Brings Refreshing.—Live a veritable life of prayer. Make it the chief part, not alone of your life, but of your service. Look for the Father's answers to your prayers as a constant experience. Your feet may be busy all day, hands ceaselessly active, head full of matters of business, but the heart need never be out of communication with him. Take time to be holy! Those blessed moments of intercession, which bring us with kindly hands out of life's disquiet into the sweet rest of communion, are the skylights through which heaven shines into our souls. Those are the times when our Lord still speaks to us as of old: "Come ye apart and rest awhile." It is then that we look upward and learn the Source of our strength and power. The petty and feverish things of life are lost, and we gaze through faith and prayer into the calm and undisturbed heart of God, and pray for new vigor and refreshing.

3. How Christ Obtained Strength.—Jesus prayed at the grave of Lazarus that the people might believe that the Father had sent him. But so far as a renewal of his own strength was concerned, he knew where to have it replenished. When, after a busy day, he had sent the multitude away, he "went up into a mountain apart to pray." Upon another occasion he withdrew into the recesses of a vast wilderness to commune with the Father. He arose in the morning, a great while before day, and went into a solitary place and there prayed. Jesus prayed to his Father to glorify him, to preserve his apostles in unity and truth, to glorify them and all believers with him in heaven. He prayed in the Garden of Gethsemane. He felt that same need of communion with the Father that we, his humble followers, so often feel. He who said: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest," left the crowd and even his beloved disciples, and alone with God sought rest and comfort through prayer. Were we, as his followers, to learn the great lesson that we are safe in his holy keeping, should we not receive a thousandfold more happiness, even in this life, and in the world to come life everlasting?

4. How May We "Wait on the Lord"?—One plain way is by habitual direction of our thoughts to him, continually realizing a vivid sense of his presence. Perhaps this is hard, amid the whirl and stress of life, but it is possible. If we hope to keep ourselves in close, personal relation to the Christ "whom having not seen we love," there must be a great deal more actual occupation of our minds and thoughts with him than is usual among professing Christians.

5. Suggestive References.—The powerful Friend (Isa. 40: 26-31). God enables us to stand (Rom. 14: 4). Abounding in every good work (2 Cor. 9: 8). Mighty weapons (2 Cor. 10: 4). The power within (Eph. 3: 20). God's Keeping Power (Philpp. 4: 7). Strengthened (Col. 1: 11, 12). Kept through faith (1 Peter 1: 5). The spirit of power (2 Tim. 1: 7). The Lord is our strength (Ex. 15: 2; Psa. 18: 1, 2, 32). The Lord restores (Psa. 23: 3). Strength by communion with God (Psa. 27: 14). Have courage (Psa. 31: 24). A blessed promise (Psa. 55: 22). Strength to the upright (Prov. 10: 29).

CALENDAR FOR SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 2

Sunday-school Lesson, The Giving of the Manna.—Ex. 16. 1-36.

Christian Workers' Meeting. "That True Bread from Heaven."—John 6: 32b-35.

GAINS FOR THE KINGDOM

Two were baptized recently in the First church, Minneapolis, Minn.

One has been baptized in the Bluefield church, Virginia, since the last report.

One has been received by baptism in the Morrill church, Kans., since the last report.

Thirty-six came forward in the Ottumwa church, Iowa,—Bro. J. Edwin Jarboe, of Chicago, evangelist.

Eleven accepted Christ in the Greentree church, Pa.,—Bro. Michael Kurtz, of Richland, same State, evangelist.

MEETINGS IN PROGRESS

Bro. S. J. Burger, of Howe, Ind., in the Yellow River church, same State.

Bro. Rufus Bucher, of Quarryville, Pa., at the Union house, Little Swatara congregation, same State.

CONTEMPLATED MEETINGS

Bro. L. H. Root, of Mt. Morris, Ill., to begin Feb. 9 in the Batavia church, same State.

Bro. B. F. Petry, of Eaton, Ohio, to begin Feb. 16 in the Greenville church, same State.

Bro. J. K. Eikenberry, of Maxwell, Iowa, to begin about May 18 in the Beaver church, same State.

Bro. Rufus P. Bucher, of Quarryville, Pa., to begin Feb. 15 at the Hatfield house, Hatfield congregation, same State.

Bro. E. B. Hoff, of Bethany Bible School, to conduct a Bible Institute some time in February in the Flora church, Ind.

Bro. H. C. Early, of Penn Laird, Va., to begin sometime in October in the Woodbury house, Woodbury congregation, Pa.

PERSONAL MENTION

A steward and matron are wanted at the Brethren Home, Carlisle, Pa., beginning with April 1. Applicants may communicate with H. K. Miller, Huntsdale, Pa.

That presentiment of ours that Bro. Winger would tell the "Messenger" readers about the New Haven Missionary Conference, turned out to be well founded. Watch for his interesting story next week.

Just before going to press we received word of the death of Eld. J. M. Mohler, of Mechanicsburg, Pa., on Saturday morning, Jan. 25. We have no details, but a sketch of Bro. Mohler's life and work will be given in a later issue.

Bro. Nelson E. Shirk, who is the duly appointed "publicist" for the church at Mt. Morris, Ill., writes us concerning some corrections that should be made in the 1919 Yearbook: "Bro. Leonard H. Root has resigned from the pastorate of this church. Bro. M. M. Sherrick is now the elder of our church. For Columbia, Bro. W. H. Hood is listed as pastor in the Yearbook' but is no longer acting in that capacity. Bro. Wayne Gerdes, a student, is now in pastoral charge of that outpost." We suggest that all who are interested, turn to their copy of the Yearbook, and enter the corrections, above alluded to, for their future benefit.

ELSEWHERE IN THIS ISSUE

Bro. J. C. Swigart makes an announcement to the elders and churches of Middle Pennsylvania concerning the District Conference, to be held in the Snake Spring church April 15 and 16. It will be found among the Notes.

Mission points in the Central States will please note the call made by Sister Nettie C. Weybright in behalf of the Aid Societies of Northern Indiana. The sisters are willing to be of real service to the various mission points, and should be given the needed information WHAT to make, and WHERE to send it. Be sure to turn to Sister Weybright's announcement in another column.

MISCELLANEOUS

A total of over $2,000 was contributed by the Manchester congregation, Ind., to missions, relief and reconstruction work, etc., during last year. Surely, this is a day of bountiful giving!

A little sixteen-page leaflet lying on our desk has just managed to secure a minute or two of editorial attention. We believe you would like to see it. The color of it, is restful to the eye. Besides this, the reading is interesting. Yes, it is something about the Forward Movement Program. To be more specific, it is "An Explanation of the Goal of the General Mission Board." It tells what the various points in the goal are,—just the thing you want to keep clearly in your mind. On pages 12 and 13 it tells how every congregation may be organized for the greatest missionary efficiency, and there are ten points under that. Wouldn't you like to know what they are? Just give the word to the Secretary of the Board. His address is Elgin, Ill.

Here is a good motto, originally adopted by the Dorcas Class Aid Society, Goshen, Ind.: "Do what you see to do, and do it at once." What a change there would be wrought, in all our church activities, if each member would make that motto his daily maxim! And how the "Forward Movement" would prosper!

Famine in India

How these words chill us to the very marrow! We shall never forget the harrowing scenes and descriptions of the famine in the early days of our missions! Must they be seen again? We have feared it, but had hoped that the Father might, in some manner, intervene to save these distressed people from a repetition of those dreaded experiences.

At the request of our missionaries, $10,000 is this morning (Jan. 25) being cabled to them for immediate famine needs. We, therefore, call upon our dear brethren and sisters to consider this most urgent Famine Call, which now arises in our own field, in this hour of the world's supreme need. We shall appreciate it if you will present this call to your church as soon as possible, and also that you will remember it individually, and lift an offering to assist in this most pressing work. Kindly send your offerings to the Mission Rooms, where they will be receipted and one hundred cents of every dollar, thus donated, will be forwarded for relief. May God help India and strengthen our workers in their present heartbreaking tasks, is our prayer!

Most fraternally yours,
General Mission Board.

One of the active Aid Societies has adopted the commendable practice of looking after the needs of the sick and distressed in a very practical way. To all such the Society sends what is known as "Sunshine Boxes," filled with things adapted to the special requirements of the needy one. What better evidence of genuine sympathy could be given than the presentation of such an embodiment of sunshine? By all means, let us have more "Sunshine Boxes"!

One of our correspondents recently sent us thirteen obituary notices at one time,—some of them dating back to September of last year. Now, while we do not wish to discourage a reasonable exercise of economy in the expenditure for postage, it occurs to us that notices of that sort should not be held until their publication can no longer be regarded as a matter of news. Our correspondents will greatly oblige us by the prompt forwarding of their communications, thus assuring their publication at the earliest possible date.

A correspondent, in urging a liberal response to the offering by which one of the missionaries is supported on the foreign field, takes occasion to remind his constituency of the new and better era in which we are now living. Please notice, and let its spirit apply to any fund to which you are asked to contribute: "It is hoped that at this time of need and opportunity we may be able to get beyond the initial 'one dollar a year,' just as in our church we have superseded the 'penny-a-week' collection of years ago." Such energy is simply another way of "pressing onward"!

Bro. I. H. Crist, of McLouth, Kans., informs us that, by request of Eld. W. J. Swigart, he has made eleven trips to the two prisons at Leavenworth, Kans.,—the Military and the Federal,—in the interest of our own members and other "conscientious objectors." In the Military Prison there are 294 of the "objectors." As noted elsewhere, steps have been taken to release 113 of these, but Bro. Crist is unable to give any facts concerning the disposal of the others. Fourteen of our brethren will still be behind the bars after the release of the 113. Five of our members are in the Federal Prison,—one of them Eld. David Gerdes, of Morrison, Ill. We regret to learn that, since his confinement, his health has been very bad. Bro. Crist was received kindly by all prison officials.

From various quarters we hear most encouraging reports of the way in which our churches are taking hold of the Forward Movement program. We are particularly impressed with the businesslike manner in which Southern Illinois is approaching the task. The Mission and Ministerial Boards of this District have jointly issued a "Special Announcement" for circulation among the churches of the District, endorsing the movement and urging each individual to help in every way possible. To give definiteness to the work, they have set forth in detail the goals which their District should strive to reach during the year 1919. They have figured out the number of baptisms which should be expected, the number of young men to be called to the ministry, the number of new subscriptions to our church papers to be secured, the amount to be raised for missions, and so on. This is the way to bring home the sense of local responsibility. Let every District and every congregation do the same, and then decide, by the grace of God, to reach the goal and even to "go over the top."

"Will you remember the work in your secret devotions and around the family altar daily?" This quotation is from a leaflet which deals with the Forward Movement. What about this? What do you think will happen when the whole church gets to praying earnestly for the success of this program? Don't you know what will happen?

In a recent issue we published an interesting write-up of the Sunday-school Institute of the First and Southern Districts of Virginia, crediting the communication to Sister J. H. Shickel, whose name was given by the sender in connection therewith. We are now informed by Sister Shickel that the report should have been credited to Prof. I. N. H. Beahm, the Secretary of the meeting. We trust that with this explanation credit will be given to whom it is justly due.

Many of our churches find it somewhat difficult to decide on a system of giving by which their congregational needs may be amply met, without imposing undue burdens upon any one. One of the congregations, in which nearly all of the members are wage-earners, has hit on a plan that is fair to all and in harmony with the Scriptural proviso "as the Lord hath prospered." Then, too, it is so simple that all can readily understand it: "Each member gives three per cent of his salary." In that particular church that ratio gives plenty of means for their expenses. Other churches might have to increase the ratio to meet their needs, or to make other slight modifications.

Making the Most of Our Conventions.—Sunday-school Conventions and other gatherings of that sort may be greatly inspiring to those in attendance, but the community in general,—the people who were not present,—will not be benefited unless at least some of the enthusiasm, aroused at the Convention, is given concrete form by a good write-up of the meeting for the local paper. It is a waste of a far-reaching religious opportunity not to supply the local journal with information of this sort. Many of the readers of these periodicals see no other newspapers, and should be placed in touch with the inspiring messages given at the various sessions of a Convention. Care should be taken, of course, in the preparation of these articles. Let them be concise and illuminating, challenging the most thorough interest of every reader.

IMPORTANT NOTICE ABOUT MEN AT LEAVENWORTH

The Secretary of War gave out for publication yesterday, Jan. 22, his order for the release of 113 "conscientious objectors," held at Fort Leavenworth, the remission of the unexecuted portions of their sentences, their "honorable restorations to duty" and immediate discharge from the army.

The men released comprise two classes. In one group are 30 men who heretofore have been recommended by the board of inquiry, headed by Judge Julian Mack, for furloughs. Group two includes those men whom the board of inquiry, on reexamination, found to be sincere and who, in its judgment, would have been recommended for furloughs if they had had opportunity of being examined by it before the court-martial proceedings.

Secretary Baker instructed that the discharges granted these "conscientious objectors" should be written on a special form, which includes the following remark:

"This is a 'conscientious objector' who has done no military duty whatever and who refused to wear the uniform."

The policy of granting farm or other furloughs to such men as were adjudged sincere, Secretary Baker said in his order, was adopted so that the country might have the benefit of such labor as they could perform conscientiously, instead of having to pay for their care and subsistence with no corresponding benefit.

"Objectors" found insincere must serve their sentences.

This order will be of interest to many of our people who have written us anxious letters, asking for information. I have tried to keep in close touch with the situation, and Jan. 15 I called the War Department by phone, to inquire as to the latest developments. Dr. Keppel, Third Assistant Secretary of War, said that the Board of Inquiry had made their report, and he suggested that I come to the Department and look over the list of names, to get the list of our members. The invitation was gladly accepted and through the courtesy of the Secretary, I was permitted to make a copy of the entire list, containing 113 names. A further kindness was shown, when permission was given to read the order of clemency by Secretary Baker. The latter privilege was given on condition that I do not make it known until officially announced through the press. This ruling has been observed, and now there are three things that greatly concern the Central Service Committee: First, How many of the 113 are members of the Church of the Brethren? Second, How many are members whose names do not appear in the list of "sincere"? Third, How may the Committee render assistance to those whose names do not appear, and yet are conscientious objectors?

We appeal to pastors, parents and interested friends to furnish us the names of all brethren sent to Fort Leavenworth. We can notify you at once whether your son, brother or friend is in the list of discharge. We recognize some by acquaintance and others from letters received from their parents or relatives. Send names to the Secretary at 337 N. C. Avenue, S. E., Washington, D. C.

Central Service Committee,
J. M. Henry, Sec.

AROUND THE WORLD

Reading Matter for Soldiers

Through the efforts of the Red Cross, magazines and newspapers are now distributed at more than 400 points in France and in the various parts of the area of occupation. During a recent month 2,500,000 daily papers, 270,000 weekly newspapers, and 450,000 magazines were distributed to the various army camps and hospitals. In many cases the literature, thus distributed by the Red Cross, proved to be the only reading matter available for the soldiers in isolated places. What this meant to those so situated, can best be learned from the many letters of appreciation. In addition to the above, thousands of Bibles and Testaments have been distributed and gratefully received.

The Fate of Turkey

Considerable discussion has been aroused as to the ultimate disposition of the Ottoman Empire. If the Turkish Government is driven out of Constantinople, what will be done with the city and the all-important Straits of the Dardanelles? Students of history are greatly interested in the eventual disposition of affairs. Greece, possibly, might want this ancient capital of the Byzantine empire, under which the Hellenes, centuries ago, reached the summit of their power and glory. To hand the city over to the Greeks may perhaps be one way of avoiding other complications. To assign Constantinople to any one of the great nations, would arouse jealousy which might readily lead to serious complications.

Better Conditions in Germany

According to recent reports of the general elections in Germany, the great majority of the people are alive to the need of a strong, stable, representative form of government. There seems to be little tendency to adopt the extreme views of the Socialists, as some had feared. The Allies, as well as the United States, rejoice in the evident determination of the German people to establish and maintain a free and representative administration of their governmental affairs. As prospects are now, the men at the helm of affairs are likely to remain in control, and if so, there is no likelihood of serious disturbances. This also will insure prompt payment of indemnities, levied upon the German nation by the Allies.

Missionaries as Life Savers

Hunan Province in China has been the battle-field where Northern and Southern leaders endeavored to settle their differences by the force of arms. The advance of the victorious army, or the retreat of the vanquished one, has been equally terrorizing to the people, and during those times of special need the mission compounds were filled with women and children, seeking protection from the brutal conduct of the soldiers. At one time fully 500 people were housed with the missionaries. Special praise is due the Presbyterian mission at Changsha, whose workers saved 2,000 Northern soldiers from being shot down in cold blood after having surrendered. They also fed and cared for 5,000 Northern prisoners of war.

A Helpful Hand to Russia

In the hope of ending the alarming terrorism in Russia, the Allies are hastening to the aid of that sorely-stricken country. They have made a proffer of peace to all the warring factions, including the bolsheviki. All are invited to send delegates to a conference with allied leaders, to be held next month on an island in the Sea of Marmora. At that meeting means will be discussed and plans made for a permanent government in Russia. Possibly some way may be devised by which that country may work out its own destiny. This is a step in the right direction, and the result of the conference will be awaited with intense interest. The lives as well as the happiness of millions of people are at stake and nothing should be left undone which might help them out of the mire that threatens to engulf them.

Death of a Noted Health Expert

Dr. Horace Fletcher, widely known as an expert on dieteties, died while on a visit at Copenhagen, Denmark, Jan. 13, from bronchitis, after a long illness. He was born at Lawrence, Mass., Aug. 10, 1849, and devoted practically his entire life to a study of health promotion. Extended experiments at the universities of Cambridge and Yale, finally resulted in the elaboration of the theory of "Fletcherism," a system for the thorough mastication of food. He was a member of numerous health, sociological and geographical societies, and considered an authority in his special field of study. His own words, perhaps, best illustrate the value of his deductions: "I was a confirmed high liver up to the time I was fifty-four years old. I had tried every diet that specialists could prescribe. It came to me suddenly that all these prescriptions were to take effect after the food had passed beyond control. I resolved to try what could be done with the food before it left my mouth. Extensive experiments with myself and others proved the absolute correctness of my theory that thorough mastication will insure perfect digestion. Then, too, a smaller amount of food is needed for the effective sustenance of the body." Briefly stated, Dr. Fletcher's common sense rules are these: "Chew all foods, even liquids; eat only when hungry; never eat when angry or depressed in spirits."

Influenza's Ravages

A conservative estimate now places the total extent of the losses, due to the prevalence of Spanish influenza, at at least six millions, in different parts of the world. It is conceded to be the most deadly epidemic that has swept the world since the dreaded "Black Death," which devastated the larger part of Europe after the close of the "Thirty Years' War." Recent reports from the Island of Tahiti, a French possession in the Society Islands group in the Pacific, indicate that more than one-seventh of Tahiti's 12,000 inhabitants has fallen victim to the dread disease. Urgent appeals for help are being responded to by the Red Cross, but, owing to the great distance, relief measures will hardly reach them in time.

Fighting Siberian Typhus

Practically without adequate provisions to resist the onslaught of the typhus epidemic, many parts of Siberia have sustained heavy losses of life in recent months. Now, however, the American Red Cross has taken hold of matters by equipping a relief train with medical experts and ample supplies, to stamp out the disease as quickly as possible. This train is composed of fourteen cars, equipped with every device that latest advances in medical science can suggest. Proceeding from town to town, the people will be instructed how to manage the cases of those now stricken, as well as to employ proper sanitary expedients for the prevention of further outbreaks. It is a fine demonstration of latter-day "Good Samaritanism."

A Real Menace

Dr. G. Frank Lydston, of Chicago, has been visiting various countries of Asia, and especially Armenia, Syria and Persia. He says that serious disease conditions will follow the war, and scourge the world, unless precautionary measures are promptly taken. There are probably 400,000 unburied dead in the countries above named, and those surviving have been greatly debilitated by underfeeding. Typhus and cholera are sure to develop unless effective measures are taken to establish better sanitary conditions. In that respect, therefore, relief work in the Orient will mean adequate protection for the United States. "The American Committee for Relief in the Near East" is well worthy of any help we may give them, in their work of real beneficence.

Two Billions Saved by Waste Prevention

Not all the vast revenue, required by our Government at the present time, is raised by taxation or the sale of bonds. It is now proposed to raise at least two billions by the very practical plan of conserving waste products. The National Waste Reclamation Section of the War Industries Board was instrumental in saving a billion and a half last year by the proper utilization of refuse material hitherto uncared for. This favorable showing suggests a possibility of real conservation in every household, town and city of our land. We heard recently of an Iowa congregation which, by the collection of old iron, brass, copper, rags, newspapers and the like, raised over $500 for Red Cross work. "Gather up the fragments, that nothing be lost," said the Great Teacher, and his suggestive words are just as pertinent today as when first uttered. As a people, the Americans have frequently been regarded as rather prodigal. The pressing needs of the war situation have, however, taught us lessons that will not soon be forgotten. A noted church worker recently remarked that by greater economy there would be means in plenty and to spare for the increased demands of the Lord's work.

"A World Power"

It is no slight admission, on the part of the leaders of the Allied Nations, when they designate President Wilson as "a world power," for never, perhaps, has any man wielded so large an influence. That, despite all assertions to the contrary, his attitude at the Peace Conference will be a factor of tremendous significance, is generally admitted. Several concessions of magnitude have already been made in response to the President's appeal for right and justice. So far the list of American achievements at the preliminary meetings and the Peace Conference itself, may be summarized as follows: (1) The harmonizing of conflicting opinions regarding Russia, and a possible solution of vexing problems. (2) Serving notice on Italy that America would not tolerate the gratifying of imperialistic ambitions, if thereby the new-born Jugo-Slav state would be imperiled as to its future permanency. Thus one of the most dangerous problems before the Peace Conference was reduced to comparative harmlessness. (3) President Wilson's plans assisted materially in bringing order from confusion in Poland by adjusting the differences between conflicting parties, and having them work together for the best interests of the newly-created nation. Such a wholly altruistic endeavor has been most favorably received. (4) Allied diplomats have been convinced of the fact that, if Germany is to pay the vast sums required for the rebuilding of France and Belgium, she must be given a chance to rehabilitate herself. Otherwise she will fall a ready prey to the lures of bolshevism. (5) Best of all, America has succeeded so well in demonstrating the need of a League of Nations, that now the Conference's conception of such a League promises to exceed the most sanguine expectations of the American Congress.

What Is Bolshevism?

We have been asked to define the nature of the much-discussed "bolshevism" and its dangers. Briefly stated, bolshevism, as now rampant in Russia and parts of Germany, signifies "rebellion," not merely against oppression, but against all orderly constitutional government. Bolshevism is antidemocratic, and openly preaches tyranny in the name of the workers in general. It has no use for the ballot or for the machinery of popular government. It would force extreme forms of socialism on the people by means of "blood and iron." The real danger of the movement lies in the fact that its delusive and pernicious teachings may spread to other lands. Comprehensive measures have already been taken to prevent the propaganda of "bolshevism" in the United States.

New Wonders of the Wireless

Recent improvements in wireless telegraph and telephone appliances have greatly simplified that wonderful means of communication,—so we are told by Godfrey Isaacs, managing director of the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company. "Talking across the Atlantic by wireless," he assures us, "will be an accomplished fact by the time the Peace Treaty is signed." That would be truly wonderful, but even more remarkable is his other statement: "In the not far distant future I think we shall walk about with wireless telephones attached to our bodies. Standing in one of the busy streets of London, we shall be able to talk with a friend who may be in an aeroplane far above us." Only a few years ago such achievements would have been deemed impossible. The next decade will likely reveal still greater marvels.

Our National Disgrace

That, despite our so-called civilization, the annual number of lynchings is still disgracefully large, is no credit to us as a nation. Under date of Jan. 20 the Southern papers report that Bragg Williams, a negro, under death sentence for murder, was taken from the jail at Hillsboro, Texas, by a mob, and burned at the stake. Press reports deferentially state that "the crowd was orderly," and that there was little excitement. County officers attempted to restrain the crowd but were overpowered. The negro was seized and taken to the public square, where he was tied to a post. Boxes, barrels and other fuel, covered with oil, furnished the quickly-ignited pyre. That a scene of that sort should be possible in a land of supposed law and order, is strange indeed, especially in this case, when there was no doubt of the law's speedy action. In this connection, it is a matter of special interest to learn that many communities in the South have no trouble whatever with mob violence. Their exemption is due to the fact that the religious element of the community is a unit on the matter of law observance. These upholders of duly-constituted authority insist that "the powers that be" are "ordained of God" and as such deserve the respect and support of every citizen. As a natural result of such a loyal and determined attitude, there is no tendency towards lawlessness whatever. The preponderance of community sentiment is wholly in favor of letting the authorities attend to their work according to the statutes duly provided by the lawmakers.

Reconstruction Work in France

As early as 1871, a body of English Quakers entered upon the task of restoring the devastated region of France, where the war of that year and the one preceding, had been fought. Early in the present war, the old organization was revived, to be later joined by American Friends, Mennonites, and others. The American Friends' Service Committee, with headquarters in Philadelphia, represents Friends of all branches in the United States, and has charge of about 500 workers in France,—300 American and 200 English. They are now busily engaged in rebuilding activities in the war zone. The French Government aids the work in every way possible. It supplies lumber to two factories near the Swiss border, which enables the men of the Friends' Unit to make houses in sections. These are shipped to the devastated area and quickly erected as needed. Another group of the Quaker Reconstruction workers aids in farm work,—plowing, threshing, repairing the broken farm machinery and getting the shell-torn fields in shape for cultivation. Another Friends' unit, managed by doctors, has established eight hospitals, where they can attend to cases of illness and injuries among the civilian population, whose doctors and nurses are still with the army. The Friends' Medical Unit has been working under the civilian branch of the American Red Cross, which aids the work in many ways, chiefly by money and supplies. As the workers receive only board, clothing and transportation, and the leaders donate their services, the whole movement is conducted on wonderfully economical lines.

HOME AND FAMILY

Old Age

BY JAMES A. SELL

I first met Bro. D. L. Miller on the streets of Polo, Ill., about forty years ago. We recognized each other as brethren, and became acquainted without the formality of an introduction. Through our occasional meetings and correspondence we became fast friends and time has only served to strengthen the ties.

While alone in my humble home, on the evening of the last day of the year 1918, my meditation turned to him. I recounted the years of our pilgrimage, now nearing their close, and in this reverie wrote the following, which I dedicate to him:

"We are sojourners, as were all our fathers; our days on the earth are as a shadow, and there is none abiding" (1 Chron. 29: 15).

"The righteous shall flourish like the palm tree: he shall grow like a cedar in Lebanon. Those that be planted in the house of the Lord shall flourish in the courts of our God. They shall still bring forth fruit in old age" (Psa. 92: 12-14).

"Thou shalt come to thy grave in a full age, like as a shock of corn cometh in his season" (Job 5: 26).

"Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints" (Psa. 116: 15).

"Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his (Num. 23: 10).

Our sojourn in this changeful world,
Is nearing now the end,
And we are coming to the goal,
To meet our Blessed Friend,
And as we fold our tents away,
And watch the setting sun,
We're happy in the joyful thought,
Our race on earth is run.

We trusted in our Father's love,
In all our sojourn here,
And though the clouds were sometimes dark,
We yielded not to fear.
Now, as we view the years gone by,
Through which our feet have trod,
We see in all the Guiding Hand
That led with staff and rod.

We loved the truth he gave to us,
Through his Beloved Son,
It was to us the Polar Star,—
Our Guide till life is done.
He made us heralds of this truth,
To tell it all abroad,
That all mankind can now be saved
If reconciled to God.

We bore a part,—an humble part
In the good work of grace,
That gave the doctrine to the world,
That saves our fallen race.
We soon shall lay our armor down
And close our record here,
And though our work is not complete,
We've nothing now to fear.

We trust there'll be no sad farewells
When we shall pass away,
For we are going to a land
Of bright and perfect day.
Life's twilight hour is now at hand,
And soon will darkness come,
And we will take our last long sleep
And waken up at home.

The New Buffet

BY ELIZABETH D. ROSENBERGER

SARAH WARNER took up the cream pitcher and sugar bowl, then she thoughtfully took Warren's plate, fork and spoon in the other hand, and passed through the swinging door into the kitchen. There was a frown in her white forehead when she came back to her small dining table and with practical deftness proceeded to gather up the other dishes. She was thinking of how Lavina and Amos appreciated her cooking. "Them tea biscuits now, you can't be beat on them!" Amos had honestly assured her, while Lavina said: "If any salad could be better than this, I've never heard of it."

Of course Sarah and Warren bestowed the same kind of compliments when they were at Lavina's table, the week before. Lavina's sandwiches had a tang and flavor very seldom discovered in a sandwich of any species whatsoever, while her cocoa, with two plump marshmallows floating on top, was hot, sweet, just rich enough, brown enough, simply,—well, it was Lavina's cocoa. Generally, they spent one evening a week together. Then the two women racked their brains to think of dainty things to serve. But it was not of salted almonds or chicken a la king that Sarah was thinking. Her mind was busily intent on another phase of this evening's pleasure.

"If I only had a buffet," she sighed. When Sarah sighed and wished for something, there was always some one ready to meet her challenge. This time it was Warren Junior, who was sitting by the window, with a tablet and fountain pen, trying to write a poem about the white moonlight. He had sent a poem to the town paper. It was rejected "with thanks." Now he was looking for more scenery, moonlight, or something, to set him going again. But he was not so inspired that he failed to hear anything his mother said, or see anything she did. He looked at her now in astonishment as he asked: "What's a buffet?"

Susan, his younger sister, answered: "It's something we should have in that dining-room to put dishes on. It's like the one they have over at Sim Grove's house. They put the salad on the buffet; then they serve it whenever the guests are ready for the salad course. If mother'd be like many women, she would have had a buffet in this dining-room. She'd a said long ago that she wouldn't do without it."

Mother weakened perceptibly as she listened to Susan. "That cupboard in the wall does all right to hold our dishes. But I would like to have a buffet or sideboard, or something of that kind."

Father overheard this. He made his usual explanation: "Why, I'll get you a buffet if you want one. I didn't know you wanted anything like that. I suppose you could get it right away, if you really want it."

"Want it? I've always wanted a buffet. I can't remember when I haven't wanted it. I get so tired serving things without it when Lavina and Amos are here. A dining-room like ours should have more in it than just a table and chairs."

"Where could we put it?" asked Susan.

"I've never thought about that. We just never will have one, so what's the use?" Mother swept up the few crumbs under the dining table. Then with one accord they all went to bed.

For once in his life father thought about what Sarah had said. She seldom expressed a wish for anything. His modest income precluded the purchase of many luxuries. She surely wanted this buffet. Was it possible to get this piece of furniture for her?

A week later father counted out the imposing sum of $50 and laid the bills by mother's plate at the breakfast table.

"I saw that the furniture is all marked down. Now's your chance to buy your buffet."

"Oh, father! I don't suppose I should spend it for that." Sarah looked at Junior, then at Susan,—their wants were so many.

Father shook his head sternly. "Not this time. I want you to have just what you have been so earnestly wishing for."

That settled it. They began discussing the kind of buffet,—should it be light oak, or dark? Have more drawers or more shelves? Junior thought there was discussion enough to design plans for a palace. But at last Sarah and Susan announced the result of their consideration. They were going to buy a dark buffet of colonial design, if possible.

There came days of wandering through furniture stores; then Sarah decided to take a buffet that was something like her dreams.

"Send it out today," she ordered as she paid the bill.

"Very well, I think we can have it ready for the ten o'clock delivery," answered the clerk.

That evening Junior enthusiastically voted the new buffet "great." Susan looked at it critically then asked: "Why don't we have it on this side of the room, next to the window?"

"Because it will not fit in there," answered mother in a world-weary voice.

Father was a bit near-sighted. He walked right into it on his way to his own chair at the table. Every dish and glass in it rattled. "Well! that's a fine one. But why not set it on this side of the room?"

"There isn't room enough there," explained mother patiently.

Junior went from the buffet to the table and back again, ostentatiously showing his mother what could be left on the buffet and how easy it was to serve a good meal, when one has a place handy for the water pitcher, the bread plate and the milk pitcher. But Sarah said little. She looked worried.

When Amos and Lavina came again, they praised the beauty of the new buffet and said much of its usefulness. Before they went home, Sarah unburdened herself to them all.

"I've always been wanting it, as I told them. I worried Warren into buying it for me, but you may as well know the worst. The dining-room looked better without it. You see, small as it is, the buffet crowds it and makes everything bad. It's exactly what I wanted, but I was better off without it."

Susan listened thoughtfully. She so wanted a new dress to wear to the high school parties. She had seen a wonderful cerise velvet on Jean Rench. If she could only have a cerise dress! It had been her lament, though her mother had not yet yielded. "It's a bad color; you'll get tired of it. You'll find that it's too flashy and you will be sorry you ever saw Jean in that dress," said mother.

"I guess after all, I'll think of some other color for my dress," decided Susan.

Home Reminiscences

BY MARY V. HARSHBARGER

IN the early days of my childhood, when I stood just a little above my mother's knees, she was my first teacher. She gave me my first lessons, and I found her to be a very kind and earnest instructor.

I call to mind a scene on a Sunday morning of days long ago. Our home, surrounded by picturesque hills and valleys, was in the old Keystone State,—Pennsylvania. I can still see my beloved mother as she then appeared. She had been reading her choice book,—the Bible. Patiently she explained to us little ones some of the pictures, and these, to me, are sacred yet. My first lesson was to spell the words, "Holy Bible," on the outside of the cover. It was my first introduction to the Sacred Volume and I often think of it.

The family altar was a part of our daily home life. Never shall I forget one morning when we little tots,—six or eight in a row,—sat on our long wood-box. Father said: "Children, all sing," and we did sing most heartily. We felt that we, too, had a part in the morning worship.

Father was often called away to preach. At such times mother would gather her little flock about her, and we had our morning song service and prayer. How very anxious mother was that her children would grow up to be useful men and women,—true to God and man! Her constant prayer was that if God would spare her, she would bring up her little ones for him.

The Spring Run church also is a spot which I delight to recall to memory. There, when my sister Ella and I were still young children, we gave our hearts to God.

"Through floods and flames, if Jesus leads,
I'll follow where he goes,"

was sung on the banks of the crystal stream on that ever memorable May day when we promised to live faithful until death.

Then, too, I love to think of the fathers in Israel who came to our home. Our associations with them will ever be cherished as a sweet memory of bygone days.

As time passed, we grew in strength, and by and by the boys began to go out from that home. Then we often found our dear mother in tears for the absent ones. Many were the prayers she offered that God would shield them from sin.

Time, in its rapid flight, brought many changes by and by, yet death did not enter our circle for many years. The children began going out into their own homes,—one here and another there.

Home gatherings,—family reunions,—were next in order. These were very pleasant and enjoyable. At Sabetha, Kans., we were favored with a truly blessed gathering of that sort. I still see mother's face, as the children, so dear to her heart, began to come home with their little ones. What a truly blessed meeting that was! There was nothing too much to do, to prepare for that memorable occasion. At a long table, our meals were served. There, too, we sat in communion services,—our dear father ministering unto us.

When wooers came to our home, seeking a life partner in one of the daughters, father and mother did not concern themselves so much whether they had money at their command, but rather did they make it their business to ascertain whether they were men of high ideals and sterling characters.

However busy, and however many men were hired in the busiest season on the home place, there was always time for morning worship with the hired men present.

I well remember the time when, in father's absence, a terrific storm swept around the house, as though it would move it. Mother, however, was not alarmed. She simply gathered her little flock around her, while she, in her clear, sweet voice led in the song: "He Is Ever Near, Never Fear."

Does it pay to be a faithful parent in the things that lead children to walk in the footsteps of father and mother? Parents should spare no effort to make the most of the opportunities for soul-growth that God has placed in the home. Keep the teaching and training fresh and interesting! Children will ever cherish the prayers they have heard offered in the home.

Another thing that I remember with thankfulness, is the fact that we, as children, were always taught to obey our father and mother. Parents who do not regard this as being essential, may rest assured that they will send out into the world men and women of a selfish type. Such parents will not make the best citizens nor will they have the happiest homes.

"Now they wait across the river,
Bidding us a welcome there,
To that home without a shadow,
In that land so bright and fair."

God's Mirror

BY DAISY M. MOORE

TAKE a good honest look into God's mirror. It is vastly good for the soul!

Some people are fond enough of looking into the mirror to admire their physical appearance. Too many are just as eager to look about them, to see how their neighbors are conducting themselves. In this latter scrutiny, alas, it must truthfully be said that the prying eyes are too often more intent upon finding some weakness,—something which they may criticise,—than to perceive the good traits of their fellows.

How deplorable this is,—not alone because of the wrong spirit it manifests in the fault-finder, but because of the gross injustice to the observed. Many times an action, prompted by the best motive in the world, is given a totally different interpretation by the onlooker.

More than that, I am sure that the Lord did not intend we should set ourselves up to pass upon and judge our fellow-creatures.

No one is qualified to do that except one who is able to look deep within the heart and life of man, and who can sympathetically understand conditions as they exist in that life, motives and actions.

That power was not conferred upon any mortal, and it is well, for God's judgments are so neutralized by love and sympathy as to be surpassingly more lenient than mere man's would be.

What each man should do is to keep his eyes turned self-ward. If he concerns himself about the integrity and cleanness of his own life, he will have quite enough to do.

God holds a mirror into which he is anxious for each of us to look.

If we are careful and conscientious, we may see our spiritual selves in this reflector. One thorough, searching examination and a man will be kept so busy sweeping "before his own hearth-door" that he will have neither time nor inclination to note his neighbor's faults. His own problem will be sufficient to engage all his thoughts and efforts.

SISTERS' AID SOCIETIES

ARGOS, IND.—Report of Walnut Aid Society from Feb. 4, 1918, to Jan. 3, 1919: During the year we held thirty meetings, with an average attendance of eleven. Our work consisted mainly of making aprons, bonnets, prayer-veils, pillow-slips, piecing quilts and sewing for the Red Cross. We are supporting two orphans,—one in China and one in India. MEETING OF THE INDIA FIELD COMMITTEE

The Bible School at Bulsar will open again in June, and it is hoped that a number of our workers will enter for this work. The educational standard required for entrance was raised, and thus we hope to have helpers in the future who are better prepared for their work.

A new station for the Marathi field is to be opened at Palghar. This will be made the centre for the medical work in Marathi. In this way all the stations in the Marathi territory can be more easily reached by the medical workers than under the present plan. Palghar is more ceotrally located than the present place for medical work.

The Survey Committee have been studying our field here in India, and are looking forward to the future development of the work. They brought a partial report to this meeting. The plans for the work demand that our present missionary force be increased to sixty, in the next few years. We are looking forward to a large growth in the work along educatiooal, evangelistic, and industrial lines. The comparison, showing the status of the work seven years ago and of today, prepared by the committee, shows that a healthy growth has been made. May we prepare for an even larger success in the future!

The high prices, together with the lack of rain, the past monsoon, have brought prospects of almost certain famioe. Some are even now suffering from lack of food, and this will rapidly increase as the year goes oo. The mission took actioo at the meeting, looking toward relief for some of the suffering ones. Adults will, as much as possible, be sent to the Government relief works, or given employmeot, so that they may support themselves. Relief funds are to be largely used in caring for children and the physically onfit. We know that you at home, who have been so abundantly blessed with material things, will do your part in makiog it possible for us to help relieve the suffering ones in India.

A call is being sent home for the following new workers for 1919: One doctor, ooe nurse, one agricultural graduate, one accountant with business ability, two evangelists, and two single sisters. Who will come aod help us?

Bulsar, India. Lillian Grisso.

MARKLEYSBURG, PENNSYLVANIA

Markleysburg church met in council Dec. 28, with Eld. D. K. Clapper presiding. The reports of the officers were given and everythiog was found to be satisfactory. It was decided that we accept the service flag, dooated to the Church of the Bretbreo and Sunday-school by Bro. O. P. Thomas and wife. Our flag has ten stars io it —ooe of gold.

The following officers were elected: Clerk, Bro. I. M. Thomas; "Messenger" ageot, Sister Lucinda Chrise; correspoodent, the writer. Bretbren I. M. Thomas, A. M. Thomas and D. K. Clapper are to secure a minister to hold the revival. Our Sooday-school is progressiog oicely, with Bro. O. P. Thomas, superintendent.

Dec. 31 closed another year of the service of Bro. Clapper as elder in this congregation. To appreciation of his services a surprise social was arranged, which worked out well. Shortly before Christmas a number of friends gathered at the home of Bro. Silvaous Thomas, bringiog with them provisions aod maoy other good things. Wheo all was ready, Bro. Clapper was led ioto the room. A chorus of good wishes came from the crowd, which oumbered about fifty. Bro. Clapper made a few remarks, expressing his thanks for the gifts aod especially for the kindly spirit manifested. The remainder of the evening was spent in soog aod prayer. The next day, when Bro. Clapper was packiog the things to ship home, he found that a sugar barrel was oot large enough to accommodate them.

As we eoter the oew year of labor, may prayer, consecratioo and true devotioo to our God lead us to a richer blessiog of spiritual lifel

Mary J. Frazee.

LOST CREEK CONGREGATION, PENNSYLVANIA

We have completed another year of pastoral work in the Lost Creek congregation. It has brought some pleasant and some sad experiences to maoy of us. As has been the case in general, the influenza epidemic has done its work among us and hindered our public services to a great extent. Death has claimed a number of our young members, who were promising material for the building up of our congregation in the future. Our oastoral work has been of a pleasant nature, and brought to us many beneficial experiences.

The new year begins with encouragiog conditions, and we are hopeful that health conditions will soon be such that our sanctuaries will be filled even to overflowing with earnest, devoted seekers after God's truth.

On New Year's Day we met with the brethren and sisters in the Good Will house In part, the report given of our work doring the year 1918 is as follows: 5 weddings, 17 funerals; 135 sermons; 34 members received by baptism; 505 pastoral visits; 3,225 miles covered by auto in our work for the church. The large territory here to be covered requires a large amount of work. During the year our members were privileged with two series of meetings. Two were deferred because of health conditions. We trust that this year may bring us many new opportunities and blessings.

We bless our Heavenly Father for his kindly providence and blessings hestowed upon us all, and pray that his care, presence and direction in the cause of salvation and righteousness may be given us.

John E. Rowland.

DR. RAY E. PEEBLER

Dr. Ray E. Peebler, youngest son of Albert J. and Pauline C. Peebler, was born at Ozawkie, Kans., May 9, 1887. In his early youth he moved with his parents to Idaho.

At the early age of fifteen he united with the Church of the Brethren at Nampa, Idaho, having been converted during a meeting held by Bro. Andrew Hutchison.

An outstanding feature of his life was his ability to set up high standards, and then work up to them. While he was yet in the graded school he resolved to get an education by his own efforts. In 1903 he entered high school, finishing the four-year course in three years, entering the College of Idaho, and there he graduated in four years. Then followed a four-year medical course, two years at Boulder, Colo., and two years at Denver, Colo. One year was spent in interne in the Salida, Colo., Hospital. He then entered into practice at Romley, Colo., where he remained until October, 1917. In September, 1912, he married Charlotte Royce, of Boulder, Colo. To this union one child was born.

When the United States declared war upon Germany he offered his services. He was stationed at Base Hospital 29, Camp Cody, N. Mex., and after a few weeks was on his way to France. Next he reported from Base Hospital 29, Tottenham, London. Before he labored until one day the message came: "Ray was buried Oct. 24, 1918, in Tottenham, London. He died of influenza."

Billings, Okla. Clemma L. Peebler.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

CALIFORNIA

Egan.—The ban has again been lifted and we are rejoicing that our workers have thus far been spared. Dec. 29 our Sunday-school rendered an excellent program consisting of music, reading, a pageant—"White Gifts for the King," and an address on "Consecration." Nearly all expressed a willingness to consecrate their lives to the Master and his work, and are beginning the year with renewed strength and courage. The "White Gift" offering amounted to $78.09,—a part having been given by the Ladies' Aid and the Christian Workers' Society. Of this amount $27.69 was sent to the California Children's Home and $70.40 to the Armenian and Syrian Relief. Food and garments contributed were turned over to the Ladies' Aid for distribution. We like the "White Gift" plan of service. Even the children find giving to the Master in this manner more appropriate than expecting to receive gifts for themselves. Jan. 12 another offering of $41.50 was sent to the Armenian Relief.—Mrs. Margaret A. Brubaker, Hemet, Cal., Jan. 15.

Glendora church has been closed for twelve weeks, owing to the epidemic. During this time a number of our members have been afflicted, but we thank the Heavenly Father that but one was taken,—Mother Netzley. Dec. 28 our doors were again opened for worship. We had expected to have a special New Year's, but it had to be postponed. All regular services are now being held. Jan. 4 our regular quarterly council was held, at which officers were elected for the coming year. No changes were made except "Messenger" which position the writer was chosen. A Sunday-school Advisory Board, consisting of our elder and the two superintendents, was formed to carry on the work more efficiently. Several new workers were added to our number by letter.—Sylvia L. Cripe Netzley, Glendora, Cal., Jan. 10.

Glendora.—As we were unable to hold our Thanksgiving services in November, we held them Jan. 19. Eld. G. H. Bashor delivered an inspiring address. An offering of $104.00 was taken. In the evening the consecration service for the teachers and superintendents of the Sunday-school was held. We were impressed with our responsibility as "foundation layers." The solemnity of our duties, as mediators between God and the members of our classes, made very clear the fact that we are dealing with the highest creation of God,—the immortal soul.—Mrs. Sylvia L. Netzley, Glendora, Cal., Jan. 20.

La Verna church is glad to report that Eld. R. H. Miller has accepted the pastorate. He has already moved to our city and taken up his work. A Forward Movement committee has been organized, with our pastor, president, and Eld. J. B. Dickey, secretary. We met in council Jan. 13, with Eld. Dickey presiding. The report of our treasurer showed a total of $4,173.39 received during the year. About $2,800 of this was for missionary purposes.—Grace H. Miller, La Verne, Cal., Jan. 15.

Live Oak.—Dec. 22 the Sunday-school lifted an offering of $55.44 for Armenian and Syrian Relief. Jan. 2 Bro. D. L. Miller came to us and remained for ten days. Our regular attendance was the largest we have ever had. Some that were never known to attend church before, became regular attendants. Bro. Miller labored earnestly, and aside from the good done to the church, made many friends outside of the members.—A. Crites, Live Oak, Cal., Jan. 13.

COLORADO

Fruita church met in council Jan. 10, with Eld. J. R. Frantz presiding. The election of church officers for the coming year resulted as follows: Elder, Bro. J. A. Bryan; Christian Workers' president, Sister Effie Gnagey; clerk, Fred Brown; trustee, Davis Stowder. On account of the influenza, services have not been held for three months. A few of our number have been sick but no death has resulted, for which we are very thankful. Our love feast was also postponed. Jan. 12 we took a collection of $16 for Armenian Relief. The Sunday-school also gave an offering, which amounted to $6.16. —Anna Keedy, Fruita, Colo., Jan. 15.

IDAHO

Winchester.—The quarantine has been lifted, though there are still a few cases of influenza. We were quarantined Oct. 10. We had services Dec. 1, after which the quarantine was again put on, and lifted Dec. 26. Dec. 29 we elected Sunday-school officers for the coming year, with Bro. Cecil Flory, superintendent. Jan. 2 we met for quarterly council meeting with our elder presiding. Bro. Niswander was reelected elder; Sister Lottie Wilsey, clerk; the writer, church correspondent and "Messenger" agent. Jan. 5 the Sunday-school offering of $5.72 was sent to the Armenian and Syrian Relief Committee. At the morning service an offering of $22 was taken for the same fund. Jan. 12 Bro. Niswander preached a missionary sermon. An offering of $20.55 was taken for missions. Our members so far have escaped well, as none have been taken by influenza.—Amanda E. Flory, Winchester, Idaho, Jan. 12.

ILLINOIS

Big Creek church met in council Dec. 28. Our Sunday-school was reorganized with Brethren Howard Ridgely and A. J. Markman superintendents. Brethren Wm. Mathis and Gideon Beewe were chosen precidents of the Christian Workers' Society. Jan. 4 Eld. N. H. Miller, of the Allison Prairie congregation, was called here to officiate in the anointing of Sister J. M. Forney, who was stricken with paralysis. Our services are closed at present on account of influenza. Very few families have escaped, but there have been no deaths.—Dow A. Ridgely, Parkersburg, Ill., Jan. 20.

Camp Creek church met in council Jan. 11. We are glad that services can be resumed again. The series of meetings and love feast that had to be deferred on account of the epidemic. We may have our communion services in the spring. Jan. 12 a number of members and friends met in the home of a sister who is sick. We rejoiced when she renewed her covenant and was restored to the church. She was anointed at her request, and we trust she may be fully restored to health. We had preaching on Sunday morning and evening by Bro. Walters.—Carrie Hummer, Colchester, Ill., Jan. 18.

Elgin.—Illinois, too, has gone "over the top" on the water wagon, and we just had to celebrate in our Sunday-school Jan. 19. As many boys as there were ratifying States stood up one after the other, and as a fact or two about each State was read, a young man stuck a star on the corresponding State on a large map on the wall. When "Illinois" was called, all the boys sprang to their feet simultaneously, standing very straight. The effect was electrical. The State song, "Illinois," with which all the school children are familiar, then rang out. Two additional verses, apropos of the Amendment, were sung from a large sheet on the wall.

As the machinery of our school is putting on high gear, there is a boost in attendance already. Some are being healed some by the recovery from the "flu" of a number of our people.

This week we begin again to have prayer meeting in the homes. "Forward Movement" plans for missions are being distributed. We are giving loss more than we used to, and are enjoying it!—Adaline H. Beery, Elgin, Ill., Jan. 21.

Martin Creek church met in quarterly council Jan. 18, with our elder, Bro. J. W. Harshbarger, presiding. He gave the best his service as elder this year. We reorganized our Sunday-school with Bro. Anson Leinard, superintendent.—Amelia Leinard, Geff, Ill., Jan. 20.

Sterling church held its regular reorganization Jan. 13, with Eld. C. M. Suter officiating. Bro. Suter was reelected elder for another year. It was demonstrated at this meeting that those present were anxious to labor unitedly for the good of the church and the increase of the Kingdom. We feel much encouraged and hope to accomplish more for the Master in the future than ever before. At a recess meeting an offering of $34.50 was given for Armenian and Syrian Relief. Our Ladies' Aid gave $7 to the Mt. Morris Orphanage, and our Helping Hand Society has assisted with bedding, money and clothing for the children. Jan. 15 about thirty members gathered at the home of Bro. Buckley, and gave him a surprise, it being his seventy-first birthday. Songs and a splendid talk of good-will and encouragement by Bro. Buckley were enjoyed by all, after which refreshments were served. Presents were served and a delightful time was spent.—Mrs. Olive Dearmie, Sterling, Ill., Jan. 22.

Woodland.—On account of the influenza epidemic we were not permitted to hold our council meeting at the regular time in October, so we met Dec. 18. Bro. S. G. Bucher presided. Five letters were granted. Bro. D. J. Johnson was elected superintendent of the Mt. Pleasant Sunday-school, and Bro. C. G. Bucher for Woodland. Other officers elected were: Bro. J. E. Bulib, trustee; Bro. D. J. Johnson, clerk; Sister Lydia Bucher, "Messenger" correspondent; Sister Lydia Walter, President of the Aid Society. The writer was elected elder. Owing to the fact that we were not well enough represented to elect an elder. This was postponed until the April meeting. Up to this time nearly every family in the congregation has suffered more or less from the influenza, but so far we have had no deaths. Services have had to close at both places.—Bessie Block, Ipava, Ill., Jan. 20.

INDIANA

Flora.—Our average Sunday-school attendance for 1918 was 234, one more than the previous year. Twenty-one received seals and diplomas for regular attendance. Sister Sarah Bowers, who is nearly seventy-four years old, received a seal for seven years of regular attendance. We have seventy enrolled in the Primary Department, and, under the supervision of Sister I. R. Beery, it has so increased that two new classes were formed. The Christmas offering of our school for Armenian and Syrian Relief, to which each contributed, amounted to $154.83. At the Wednesday evening prayer meeting we are studying the Book of Hebrews. Both of the teacher-training classes have good attendance. We are expecting Bro. E. B. Hoff, of Bethany Bible School, to conduct our Institute some time in February.—Mattie Welty, Flora, Ind., Jan. 17.

Manchester.—Jan. 19 the morning service was given over to the raising of funds for the suffering ones in Bible Lands. Bro. D. O. Cottrell read the opening scripture and a short sermon was preached by Prof. V. F. Schwalm. Bro. Cottrell then conducted the closing part of the service, appealing for generous pledges and donations. As a result over $1,200 was pledged in a very short time. A contribution also was lifted, amounting to over $200. The Sunday-school answered the call with about $600 in pledges and payments, which raised the total from the Manchester congregation to over $2,000 for Armenian and Syrian Relief.—Ivah M. Grossnickle, North Manchester, Ind., Jan. 20.

Markle.—Since our last report in September, we have had only seven services. While the town and community at large were very much affected, there were no deaths in our congregation. Our fall love feast was postponed until spring. Our revival, to have been held during the holidays, was also postponed until later. Neither could our annual visits be paid. The ban has been lifted now for some time, and we trust people will again be glad to attend Sunday-school and church services. Our church council was held Jan. 18, with Eld. D. B. Garber presiding. Bro. D. W. Paul, of the Loon Creek church, was with us. Six letters were granted. Sunday-school officers were elected, with Brethren Daniel Braston and Chas. Poorman, superintendents. Bro. D. W. Paul gave a financial report of the Old Folks' Home at Mexico, with a petition for help. A committee was appointed to solicit for same. Church officers were elected, with Sister Lina Bowman, clerk; the writer, "Messenger" correspondent.—Lillian Earhart, Huntington, Ind., Jan. 22.

Mexico church met in council Jan. 16, with Eld. Frank Fisher presiding. Sunday-school officers were reelected and Sister Mattie Douglass chose Christian Workers' chairman. Our series of meetings has been canceled for this season. We decided to hold our love feast some time in the spring. Our offering to the Armenian Relief was $72.85.—Bertha Fisher, Mexico, Ind., Jan. 20.

Middletown.—We are now in the midst of a revival meeting, which began Jan. 8. Attendance and interest are good. Bro. Jos. Spitzer is the evangelist. Bro. Roop, our elder, filled the appointment yesterday evening. Are looking for good results.—Florida J. E. Green, Middletown, Ind., Jan. 18.

North Liberty church met in council Jan. 4, with Eld. Heestand presiding. Six letters were received. We decided to have a series of meetings this year, with either Bro. Parrett, of South Bend, or Bro. J. Appleman, to assist. We also decided to have Bro. McFaddin hold a series of meetings some time during 1920. Church officers were also elected, with Sister Anna Peterson, clerk; Mrs. Bennie Gardner, "Messenger" correspondent; Bro. J. Hildebrand, elder. We also decided to secure a singer for the evangelistic meetings.—Mrs. Bennie Gardner, North Liberty, Ind., Jan. 20.

Notice.—Second call to mission points of Central States: The call of the Northern Indiana Aid Societies received quite a general response a few months ago for the needy saints in Russia. We have been answered with bags and boxes of clothing and bedding. Now the new year has begun. What are your present needs? What kinds of clothing, bedding, etc., do you most need? Please write to the undersigned now, if you need anything and tell definitely what you need. These busy, helpful sisters want to know what to make and where to send it.—Nettie C. Weybright, Corresponding Secretary, Syracuse, Ind., Jan. 20.

Shipshewana.—Lt. Bro. J. H. Schrock favored us with an excellent missionary sermon, after which we took a collection for foreign missions, amounting to $22.51.—Velma Bollinger, Shipshewana, Ind., Jan. 17.

Spring Creek.—Jan. 12 our Sunday-school took a collection of $130.26 for Armenian Relief. The last number of our Sunday-school was given Jan. 17 by Bro. V. F. Schwalm, of North Manchester College. The next numbers in the lecture course will be Feb. 14, 15 and 18, to be given by Bro. Chas. D. Bonsack, of Elgin, Illinois. Church and Sunday-school are progressing nicely and we feel that God is blessing the work at this place.—M. Amanda Rusher, Percerton, Ind., Jan. 21.

Summitville church met in council Dec. 28. Eld. J. A. Miller was present; also our minister, Bro. H. B. Martin. Reports of the secretary and treasurer were read and accepted. Sunday-school officers were elected, with Bro. E. C. Surber, superintendent. The writer was elected secretary of the Christian Workers' Meeting. Bro. J. A. Miller was reelected elder. Two letters were granted. Trustees are to be chosen at our next council. The meeting was a very inspiring one. Our church and Sunday-school attendance is increasing. We are glad to get back to public worship. We certainly are thankful that none of our members were taken by the epidemic.—Mrs. Pearl Tomlinson, Summitville, Ind., Jan. 20.

IOWA

Beaver church met in council Jan. 4, but on account of the epidemic and stormy weather Eld. Chas. Rowe could not be with us. Sunday-school officers were elected, with Zona Diehl, superintendent. Sister Mary Shidle was elected president of Christian Workers' Meeting. Our church council board consists of five members instead of three,—two new officers having been elected, Bro. Flory is expected to commence a Bible Institute in February or March. Our series of meetings will begin about May 18, with Bro. Blickenstaff, of Missouri, as evangelist. Our attendance has not been so large as at other times, on account of sickness. So far none of our members has been taken by the epidemic.—Belle Ruth, Grand Junction, Iowa, Jan. 16.

Coon River church met very much in our services during November and December on account of the epidemic, but were permitted to open schools and churches again Dec. 30. Our closing work for 1918 and organizing for 1919 is behind schedule time. We had our quarterly council meeting Jan. 11, with Eld. Rowe present. Much business was transacted, and our work was arranged for 1919. One was received by letter. Brethren M. W. Eikenberry and J. B. Spurgeon were with us. Bro. Charles Reynolds and wife were advanced to the office of deacon. Brethren C. E. and D. D. Fiscel was chosen elder. We reorganized our Sunday-school with Bro. Chas. Royer, superintendent. Bro. John Bitz is president of Christian Workers' Society.—Mrs. Ella Eikenberry, Dana, Iowa, Jan. 19.

Dallas Center church met in council Jan. 4, with Eld. C. B. Rowe presiding. Officers were elected for the year, with Bro. Walter Royer, Sunday-school superintendent. Our churches and schools have been closed three different times, on account of scarlet fever and influenza. We were not permitted to hold our series of meetings or love feast on account of sickness, but we feel we have much to be thankful for, as we have lost none of our members.—Anna Goughnour, Dallas Center, Iowa, Jan. 14.

Panther Creek.—Jan. 5 we had Sunday-school and church services. There had been no services, excepting one Sunday, since Oct. 13. A great many have had the disease but there has been no death in this immediate vicinity. Jan. 16 our business meeting was held, with Eld. M. Stine in charge. The following officers were chosen for one year, with Bro. E. F. Emmert, superintendent. Bro. H. L. Messamer was elected president of Christian Workers' Meeting. Jan. 19 an offering will be taken to help alleviate suffering in the war-stricken countries.—Beulah Row Messamer, Adel, Iowa, Jan. 17.

KANSAS

Appanoose church met in council Jan. 18, with Eld. C. W. Shoemaker presiding. Officers were elected for the year, with Bro. Milton Eikenberry, Sunday-school superintendent; the writer, correspondent. Bro. Oscar Wiggins, president of Christian Workers' Society. Like many other churches we have had no services for some time, on account of the influenza. Services were resumed Jan. 5.—Ethel Morgan, Pomona, Kans., Jan. 20.

Monitor church met closed doors for five weeks on account of Spanish influenza, opened again Dec. 29. We met in council Jan. 15, with Eld. W. H. Yoder presiding. Church and Sunday-school officers were elected for the year, with Bro. W. H. Yoder, elder; Bro. C. H. Dresher, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Earl Brubaker, president of Christian Workers' Band; Mrs. Mae Brubaker, president of the Junior Band. One church letter was granted. It was decided to hold a love feast on the evening of May 17. We have planned to have a Rally Day this spring. A special program will be prepared and we hope much good will be accomplished. We will observe community day again this summer. This is a day in which young and old look forward with great pleasure. An offering was taken for the Armenian sufferers, which amounted to $60. The Thanksgiving offering for World-wide Missions amounted to $92.—Mrs. Laura Murrey, Conway, Kans., Jan. 20.

Morrill church met in council Jan. 15, with Bro. C. B. Smith presiding. Three letters were granted and one was received. Since our last correspondence one has been received by baptism. All church officers were reelected. Brother Clayman Saylor was elected Sunday-school superintendent. A committee was chosen for Child Resene Work. Over a year ago our pastor, Eld. C. B. Smith, asked to be relieved. The church very reluctantly granted his request and a pastoral committee was authorized to secure some one in his place. Bro. Smith has faithfully served the church at this place for a number of years, and has endeared himself to both old and young. We feel very fortunate in securing Bro. W. H. Yoder, of the Monitor church, same state, who will take charge about May 1. Bro. Yoder comes to us highly recommended, and we pray that the work may prosper under his direction.—Mrs. Delilah A. Maxey, Morrill, Kans., Jan. 18.

Scott Valley church met in council Jan. 12, with Eld. S. E. Lantz presiding. Three letters were received. The following officers were elected: Bro. Ralph Quakenbush, elder; Bro. H. L. Philippi, trustee; the writer, "Messenger" correspondent and correspondent; Bro. Albert Corn, Sunday-school superintendent; Hattie Philippi, president of Christian Workers' Band. The work here is moving along nicely. We expect some new members this spring. If anyone is thinking of changing location we would be glad to have him visit us or write. There are some good farms for sale, one of which is improved and close to our church.—Mrs. E. D. Leavell, Westphalia, Kans., Jan. 15.

Verdigris church met in council Jan. 16, with Eld. S. E. Lantz presiding. The following officers were chosen for the year: S. E. Lantz, elder; Bro. G. E. Shirky, Sunday-school superintendent; the writer, church correspondent and "Messenger" agent. We are greatly in need of ministerial help here, so many of our members having moved away. We will always be pleased to welcome any visiting brother, sister or friends. We are glad to welcome back Bro. Ralph Quakenbush to our church. We have greatly appreciated the sermons of our pastor, Bro. D. H. Hoover, also the smiling and devoted services of Eld. Lantz.—Alice Birkin, Madison, Kans., Jan. 16.

MARYLAND

Meadow Branch church misses the presence and assistance of the elder in charge, who is not so well at present, and also Bro. E. A. Snader, who has gone to Florida again for the winter. Eld. Bixler, however, has amply provided ministerial help and scheduled the work well for the first month of the year. We have a union Sunday-school at Meadow Branch and the one in Westminster have fully reorganized, with a splendid corps of officers and teachers. The organized class work bids fair to equal that of the past.—W. E. Roop, Westminster, Md., Jan. 18.

Old Furnace church met in council Jan. 11, with Eld. B. W. Smith presiding. One letter was received. Our Sunday-school was reorganized, with Bro. Dennis Culp, superintendent. Jan. 12 Bro. A. J. Wheeler, brethren Harry Wingard and Noah Myers, Sisters Lucy Brechbill and Ida Myers left for Virginia and were joined here by Sister Young, who has been duly elected Sunday-school superintendents for the Westminster Sunday-school for 1919. The Christian Workers' presidents are Sister Trostle and Bro. E. A. Snader.—W. E. Roop, Westminster, Md., Jan. 18.

MICHIGAN

Battle Creek.—At our Christmas program a collection of $7.25 was taken for the Grand Rapids Mission. Jan. 4 we held a members' meeting, with Eld. Chas. Smith presiding. Our Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Society was reorganized as follows: Bro. Sanford Mullinex, superintendent, and Bro. Harley Arnett, president. Eld. C. L. Wilkins, of Grand Rapids, gave two inspiring sermons on Sunday.—Wayne Weiker, Battle Creek, Mich., Jan. 16.

Beaverton church met for services Jan. 5,—the first since October, on account of influenza. Jan. 18 we met in council with Eld. Perry Arnold presiding. Our Sunday-school was reorganized for six months, with Bro. Ira Academy, superintendent. Bro. Samuel Bowser was chosen elder. Jan. 19 our quarterly meeting was held and to $22.91, which is to be sent to the Armenian Relief.—Martha M. Whitmer, Beaverton, Mich., Jan. 20.

Elmdale church met in members' meeting Jan. 18, with Eld. C. E. Deardorff presiding. Two letters by membership were received and two were granted. The following officers were chosen for the year: Bro. C. H. Deardorff, elder; Bro. Stephen Weaver, Jr., clerk; Bro. G. F. Deardorff, treasurer; the writer, correspondent; Bro. Stephen Weaver, Jr., president of Christian Workers' Meeting. On account of the influenza epidemic our services were suspended for thirteen weeks, but we are now holding services and feel that we have been greatly blessed of the Lord, as none have been taken from our number.—Emma Weaver, Sr., Alto, Mich., Jan. 22.

Shepherd church met in council Jan. 11, with Eld. Harvey Stauffer presiding. Officers were elected, with Bro. Roy Boyle, Sunday-school superintendent, and Sister Gertie Kirkling, Christian Workers' president. Owing to the influenza, our school was closed for five weeks for the second time, but started again Jan. 12, with good attendance and interest. We are expecting some new members to move among us in the spring, for which we are very glad.—Mrs. Opal Rench Class, Shepherd, Mich., Jan. 16.

MINNESOTA

Bethel.—Jan. 5 Eld. M. L. Hahn began a series of meetings in the Union Sunday-school building and continued for one week. Although the weather was severe, we had very good attendance. Jan. 11 Sister Alberta Crouse, accompanied by her brother, came from Spur, Minn., and stayed over Sunday. Bro. Flora assisted in the meetings on Saturday evening and Sunday. The people took a standing vote, requesting Bro. Hahn to preach every Sunday this year.—Florence Miller, Hines, Minn., Jan. 17.

Minneapolis (First Church).—Jan. 19 our elder, Bro. D. F. Landis, of Lewiston, Minn., officiated at our love feast. There were only a few present, but all proved a spiritual blessing to all. This previous to our beginning the work here, Sept. 1, 1918, several members moved from the city, but since our coming one mother and her daughter have been baptized. Bro. J. M. Reiff has been chosen Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Lewis Dreyer, Senior Christian Workers' president; Sister Grace Dull, Junior Christian Workers' president. We hope to do some effective work in these lines. We have a junior enrollment of fourteen. Since Jan. 1 two teacher-training classes have been organized. Pray for the church here, that we may win others from this great city into his kingdom.—Mrs. Sophia B. Leatherman, Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 20.

MISSOURI

Carthage church met in council Jan. 19. Both elders were present. The Aurora congregation having been merged with the Carthage church, meetings have been discontinued there. This adds to our number. Church trustees were chosen: Bro. Amos Shank, two years; Bro. Elzie Moore, one year. With this exception the reelection of all church officers was deferred to the regular July meeting. Bro. John Keeling is superintendent of Sunday-school and Sister Holmes, leader of Christian Workers' Society. A generous appropriation was made for local church work and other purposes. The week previous, a liberal offering was given for Armenian Relief. We greatly rejoice in the blessings of peace, and in the lifting of the ban on meetings.—J. L. Switzer, Carterville, Mo., Jan. 20.

North Bethel.—Two letters were issued to Bro. G. W. Ellenberger and wife, who have gone to South St. Joseph, Mo., to take charge of the work under the direction of the Mission Board of the Northern District of Missouri. An offering of $23.70 was taken Jan. 5 for the Armenian and Syrian Relief. Our Sunday-school, having been discontinued for a time on account of the epidemic, has taken on new life, and is moving along nicely, with a good attendance, considering the weather and the still lingering effects of the influenza. Our Mission Study Class is receiving enthusiastic support from all, and is progressing under its new teacher,—Bro. Elvie Feather. Since the departure of Bro. Geo. Ellenberger and wife, we are without a pastor.—Arthur Prather, Skidmore, Mo., Jan. 20.

NEBRASKA

South Red Cloud church met in council Dec. 18, with Eld. John Ernst presiding. Church officers were elected, with Sister N. P. Campbell clerk; Sister Lydia Wagoner "Messenger" agent; the writer, correspondent; Bro. Ira Wagoner, Sunday-school superintendent. While our attendance has not been as large as we should like, we have been enjoying some good spiritual sermons by our pastor, Bro. John Ernst.—Emma Blickenstaff, Red Cloud, Nebr., Jan. 17.

NEW MEXICO

Clovis.—Our fourth quarter's work was hindered much by bad weather, and also on account of closing, because of the epidemic, for six weeks. It does not happen in a decade that we see so much snowfall. Have not been able, entirely, to complete our church yet. The Sunday-school attendance has reached seventy again, and new pupils enroll every Sunday. We have a home department of about sixty members. The Christian Workers' Society gave a Christmas offering of $25.65 for Armenian Relief, and the Sunday-school, $14.90.—Minnie B. Rodes, Clovis, N. Mex., Jan. 15.

OHIO

Brookville church met in special council Jan. 13. The Finance Board consulted with the church in regard to support for our elder, Bro. Fidler, who has been laboring so faithfully for us. The church decided to support him. Our elder then gave us a brief report of some of the work done during the year: Visits made, 268; funerals, 36; anointed, 9; weddings, 14; sermons, 96; evangelistic sermons, 42.—Mrs. Arthur Hay, Brookville, Ohio, Jan. 20.

Deshler church met in council Jan. 9. Bro. David Lytle presided. One letter was granted. We have been having a series of meetings some time in the spring; also a communion. Sunday-school officers were chosen for the year, with Bro. S. O. Wilcox, superintendent. Our church was rededicated Dec. 29, Bro. Wagner, of North Manchester, Ind., preached the sermon. Bro. Joel Vanell preached for us in the evening. We were glad to have so many visiting brethren and sisters with us for the day. We are thankful for our neat little house of worship, which will enable us better to handle our Sunday-school classes and love feasts. May God's richest blessings rest on Brother and Sister David Lytle, who worked long and earnestly for the upbuilding of the cause at this place.—Esther Dishong, Deshler, Ohio, Jan. 20.

Fairview church met in council Dec. 11, with Eld. J. B. Hylton presiding. We retained our former officers. Many of our members were not present on account of sickness. Our church and Sunday-school were closed for about six weeks.—Belle Hylton, Mansfield, Ohio, Jan. 18.

Greenspring church met in council Jan. 4, with Bro. Moss, of Portage, Ohio, officiating. The following officers were elected: Christian Workers' president, Lucille Snavely; Sunday-school superintendent, Claude Snavely.—Mrs. Elias Eberly, Old Fort, Ohio, Jan. 17.

Greenville church met in council Jan. 8, with Eld. G. W. Minnich presiding. Officers were elected as follows: Elder, G. W. Minnich; church clerk, John Miller; trustee, S. S. Halladay; Sunday-school superintendent, John Weimer. Our Sunday-school raised an offering of $133.85 for Armenian and Syrian Relief. Of this amount $30 was given by the Sisters' Aid Society. Jan. 19 S. A. Propst, of Dayton, representing the Anti-saloon League, gave a talk. An offering was taken for the Armenian sufferers. Eld. B. F. Petry, of Eaton, Ohio, will have charge of our revival meetings, beginning Feb. 16. The attendance and interest have been good, considering the epidemic that has swept over the city.—Ella Miller, Greenville, Ohio, Jan. 20.

Marble Furnace church met in council Jan. 16. Bro. Wright presided. Our Sunday-school was reorganized Jan. 5, with Bro. E. A. Weaver, superintendent. Bro. Hite is working for the starving in the East. Hearing that Bro. Friend Crouse, who was called home by this church, had been installed as minister, we decided to send him a small token of remembrance. We met in special council, to which all the churches in the district were called. Bro. J. W. Fidler, of Brookville, Ohio, and Bro. J. O. Garst, of Dayton, Ohio, were present. The latter presided. Our pastor, Bro. Van B. Wright, who has been here for almost eight years, was ordained. It was a most impressive service. The epidemic is now claiming its second course in our neighborhood, and there have been some deaths recently. We hope soon to be able to proceed with our regular services.—B. Emma Ramsey, Peebles, Ohio, Jan. 22.

New Carlisle.—Jan. 5 our series of meetings opened, with Eld. D. R. McFadden, of Smithville, Ohio, in charge. The meetings were closed, to our regret, Jan. 10, on account of Spanish influenza. Jan. 5 an offering of $4.80 was taken for Armenian Relief.—Ruth B. Speyer, New Carlisle, Ohio, Jan. 16.

Springfield.—First Church met in council Jan. 18, with Bro. J. C. Inman presiding. Church and Sunday-school officers were elected, with Bro. Ira Hoke, superintendent; Bro. Thomas Wise, church clerk; the writer, "Messenger" agent and correspondent. Reports show the year to have been a very successful one. Besides contributing to outside causes, the amount given to the church was more than double that of any previous year. The amount given to missions was likewise more than doubled. On account of the influenza epidemic, we were obliged to discontinue our series of meetings in October, but we hope to resume it again the last of March or first of April. It will be conducted by our pastor. Considering conditions, our attendance has been unusually good at all services. Our church is inadequate for the present Sunday-school needs. We enjoyed a good service Jan. 5. Bro. Inman preached an unusual sermon on "Ships," impressing on the members and officers their duty. This was followed by an impressive installation service. The Sisters' Aid Society was recently organized and is doing good work.—Orma Bowman Hamilton, Ohio, Jan. 21.

Strait Creek church met in council Jan. 13. Bro. Van B. Wright presided. A goodly number was present and the spirit of the meeting was excellent. It was the first meeting that had been held for several weeks, on account of the influenza. We paid our District assessments and other local bills, and took an offering for our portion of helping the schools. We also took a collection of $30 for the war sufferers. We hope to hold a series of meetings in the late spring. We trust there will be an early opening of the churches.—S. R. Setty, Sinking Spring, Ohio, Jan. 15.

OKLAHOMA

Washita church met in council Jan. 15 with Eld. J. R. Pitzer presiding. Officers for the year were elected, with Bro. Pitzer, elder; Bro. Gilbert Brubaker, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Clark Garst, Christian Workers' president. Because of the influenza, snow and bad roads, our work has been greatly hindered. We are hoping for better things now, since conditions are more favorable.—Rae Boyd Brubaker, Cordell, Okla., Jan. 18.

OREGON

Portland.—Our Sunday-school is progressing nicely, with Bro. Amos Reed as superintendent. We have organized a cradle roll and

Bro. T. J. Barnhart. To them were born two sons and two daughters. She leaves her husband, four children, father, mother, three sisters and three brothers. Burial in the Zion cemetery. Services by the writer.—J. D. Kesler, Zion, N. Dak.

Bemiller, Bro. Jacob C., son of Brother and Sister John Bemiller, died at his home, Mayberry, Md., of influenza, Nov. 24, 1918, aged 34 years, 1 month and 12 days. He joined the Church of the Brethren when quite young, and always enjoyed his church. He leaves his wife, one daughter, his father, mother and sisters. Services in the Meadow Branch church by the writer, assisted by Eld. J. C. Brown. Interment in adjoining cemetery.—W. E. Roop, Westminster, Md.

Bucher, Bro. Titus, died of pneumonia, following influenza, Jan. 4, 1919, aged 39 years, 11 months and 19 days. He is survived by his mother, wife, one child, two brothers and two sisters.—C. H. Thrush, Girard, Kans.

Calvert, Bro. Thomas Mills, son of Ira and Rachel Calvert, born in Huntington County, Ind., died of a complication of diseases at the home of his daughter in St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 7, 1919, aged 70 years and 1 day. In 1873 he married Sarah C. Hammons. A few months later both united with the Church of the Brethren. He leaves his wife, one son, three daughters, two brothers and three sisters. Services in the Allison Prairie church by the writer, assisted by Eld. J. C. Stoner. Text, Heb. 11: 16.—N. E. Miller, Vincennes, Ind.

Inspiring Wall Mottoes

Heavy Felt Banners

These illustrations show the text, but not the coloring of these beautiful new hangers. They are hand painted on bright blue felt of fine quality, with illuminated initials and borders. They can be seen across a large room, and make a splendid ornament for the schoolroom. They are furnished with tape hangers and may be used as banners as well as wall mottoes. Size 18x27 inches. Price, One Dollar each, postpaid.

OUR MOTTO
I AM BUT ONE, BUT I AM ONE
I CANNOT DO EVERYTHING, BUT I CAN DO SOMETHING
WHAT I CAN DO, I OUGHT TO DO
WHAT I OUGHT TO DO, GOD
HELPING ME, I WILL DO.

Pennants Made to Order

An effective means of stimulating enthusiasm in your Sunday-school is by awarding pennants. These pennants are made of a good grade of felt with the letters sewed on, and are triangular in shape. A pennant 12x30 inches made specially to your order with not more than fifteen letters costs only 60c. We shall be pleased to quote special prices on other sizes and shapes or with more letters. When ordering please be sure to give color desired for letters and also for background.

Banner Class Banner

Faithful attendance by classes can best be secured by the awarding of these banners to the class having the highest percentage of attendance. Your choice of either red or dark blue wool felt of first quality. Finished with wooden rod with gilt ends and gilt cord for hanging. Size 13½x20 inches. Each, $1.00

Cradle Roll Banner

YOU CAN BOOST the Sunday-school through the Cradle Roll. One of these banners hung up in your school will attract attention to the Cradle Roll Department. Painted on light blue wool felt of fine quality. Finished with rod and gilt cord for hanging. Each, $1.00 home department, and the interest shown is encouraging. We have also begun the use of the Graded Lessons for the Primary and Intermediate Classes, and we hope this will be a means of promoting new interest. Steps are being taken to encourage our young people in the work, and a class has been organized with an enrollment of ten students. We hope to have others join soon. Sister Laura Cheney has been chosen as teacher.—Grace W. Hewitt, Portland, Oregon, Jan. 17.

PENNSYLVANIA

Connellsville Mission met Dec. 16, with Eld. D. K. Clapper presiding. Bro. Paul Lepley was reelected trustee and also Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. W. H. Friend, church clerk; Bro. Ewing Nabors, trustee; Sister Elizabeth Carroll, "Messenger" agent; the writer, correspondent.—Anna L. Cogan, Dawson, Pa., Jan. 20.

Hatfield congregation met in council Dec. 28, with Eld. Wm. B. Fretz presiding. Three letters were received. We had a pleasant meeting. Our Sunday-schools were organized, with the writer as superintendent for Hatfield, and Bro. Wm. G. Nice for Lansdale. We took an offering in behalf of an aged minister. The church decided that the superintendents of both Sunday-schools set a date for a special offering, to be taken for Armenian and Syrian Relief. A few weeks later the offering was taken, which amounted to $224.50. We expect Bro. Rufus F. Bucher, of Quarryville, this State, to conduct a two weeks' series of meetings, starting Feb. 15, at the Hatfield house.—J. Herman Rosenberger, Souderton, Pa., Jan. 22.

Important Notice.—Elders and churches will note that the next District and Elders' Meeting for Middle Pennsylvania will meet in the Snake Spring congregation April 15 and 16. All reports, duly audited, together with all queries and papers of whatever kind, intended for consideration at said meeting, should be in the hands of the program committee not later than March 1, in order that programs may be furnished the several congregations previous to the convening of the meeting.—J. C. Swigart, Secretary, Martavana, Pa., Jan. 20.

Lancaster church met in council Jan. 15. Eld. H. B. Yoder presided. Three certificates of membership were received and two were granted. Bro. H. W. Wolgemuth was reelected trustee. Our pastor, Bro. Yoder, gave an interesting report of his work for the year. He made 947 calls, preached 97 sermons, baptized 8 people, preached 21 funerals, solemnized 20 marriages and helped to anoint 31 persons. Eighteen were received by letter, 1 was reclaimed and 16 letters were granted. Five were called by death. Our membership at this time is 259.—Leah N. Phillipy, Lancaster, Pa., Jan. 21.

Little Swatara church met in council Jan. 11 at the Meyer house, with Bro. Wenger presiding. Church and Sunday-school officers were elected. The church decided to support one of our young brethren in his preparation for the mission field. Jan. 12 a series of meetings was started at the Union house, with Eld. Rufus Bucher, of Quarryville, Pa., as evangelist.—Annis B. Wenger, Fredericksburg, Pa., Jan. 21.

Morrellville church met in council Jan. 7, with Eld. Jerome E. Blough presiding. A splendid spirit of unity was manifest. Plans were laid and officers were elected to carry on the work of another year. The finance committee presented a budget for 1919, which was accepted. It was decided to hold a local Sunday-school Convention some time within the next few months. Bro. J. F. Ream was chosen elder for the coming year. Our pastor, Bro. C. C. Sollenberger, was asked to remain with the church for another year, beginning April 1. The various activities of the church were intrusted to capable brethren and sisters. With our work well organized, we hope to lay the foundations for a successful year's work. Jan. 5 the morning service was devoted to acquainting our people with the Forward Movement, and showing definitely the part which our local church should have in the carrying out of this program. The following Sunday, an impressive installation service was held for all newly-elected church and Sunday-school officers. A teachers' class has recently been organized, the number enrolled thus far being fifteen.—Mrs. C. C. Sollenberger, Johnstown, Pa., Jan. 20.

Notice.—A steward and matron are wanted at the Brethren's Home at No. 5, Carlisle, Pa., from April 1, 1919. Applicants may communicate with the undersigned.—H. K. Miller, Huntsdale, Pa., Jan. 20.

Philadelphia (First Church).—Dec. 22 our Sunday-school held its Christmas exercises. An appropriate program was well rendered by the children. Bro. C. C. Ellis gave us a short and interesting talk. Each department liberally responded to the "White Gift" offering as follows: To our General Sunday-school Fund, $12; Preston Retreat, $8; French Relief, $12.50; Armenian and Syrian Relief, $72.40; Neffsville Orphanage, $17.50; Home Mission, $2.50; total, $144.50. Each scholar was given a box of candy.—Mrs. Wm. H. B. Schoch, Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 13.

Plum Creek church met in council Dec. 28, when the church officers for the year were elected and various phases of the church work considered. The present pastor was reelected for the coming year. Bro. Edgar Kimmel was elected superintendent of the Sunday-school. It was decided to elect one new trustee each year, the term of office being three years, rather than the former indefinite period. Church and Sunday-school attendances are good, considering the influenza epidemic. Bro. C. O. Beery, of Pleasant Hill, Ohio, is formerly pastor, and came to us Jan. 5, and gave a very interesting talk. An offering was taken Jan. 12 for the Relief Work in the Near East, which amounted to $53.07.—Mrs. A. B. Replogle, Shelocta, Pa., Jan. 20.

Robinson.—We met Jan. 12 to reorganize our Christian Workers' Society. Bro. C. D. Brendlinger presided. Sister Grace Bantz was elected president.—Goldie Brendlinger, Robinson, Pa., Jan. 20.

Stonerstown church met in council Jan. 3, and elected officers for the new year. Bro. J. F. Harris presided. We decided to have a series of meetings in the near future. Solicitors met Jan. 1 and found that during the year 1918 $2,330 99 had been received from all organizations. There is still some indebtedness on the new church. Jan. 19 the Riddlesburg church will be dedicated. The interior has been remodeled. Our church and Sunday-school services were closed for nine weeks, on account of influenza, but everything is in fair working order again.—Roy X. Wilson, Saxton, Pa., Jan. 16.

West Greentree. We opened a series of meetings at Greentree Jan. 4 and closed Jan 19. Bro. Michael Kurtz, of Richland, Pa., assisted. The attendance was good throughout. Eleven accepted Christ. Two members were received by letter recently.—S. R. McDaniel, Elizabethtown, Pa., Jan. 21.

Woodbury church met in council Jan. 18, at which time the report of the treasurer was read and accepted. Arrangements were also made to meet the current expenses of 1919. We have arranged to have Eld. H. C. Early hold a series of meetings for us at the Woodbury house next October. Elders J. R. Stayer, Nelson Geyer and the writer were elected delegates to District Meeting, Jan. 19 an offering of $118.20 was received from the church and $27.31 from the Sunday-school for Armenian and Syrian Relief.—J. C. Stayer, Woodbury, Pa., Jan. 21.

TEXAS

Ft. Worth.—Jan. 5 we reorganized our Sunday-school. The writer was elected superintendent. We averaged about twenty last year. Because of the influenza our school was closed for some time. There has been no sickness to-day, which has lessened our attendance. Our school is normal again and we are starting out with renewed interest. A number of new scholars are being added each Sunday and some of our soldier brethren have also returned from Camp. Bro. Luther Hammet is president of our Christian Workers' Meeting. Bro. Bruce Tharrington, a young minister, preaches for us when he has the opportunity. Duty at the Camp deprives our isolated brethren from attending regularly. We have no brethren there. Some of the Mennonite brethren also attend our services, and we appreciate their help and presence. We are much in need of workers, and would be glad to have brethren desiring to change location, write us. We will give all the information possible.—Mrs. Cora Leicbt, Ft. Worth, Texas, Jan. 19.

VIRGINIA

Bethel church met in council Jan. 5. As Eld. I. N. H. Beahm could not be present, Bro. Elwood Cunningham presided. Our Sunday-school is closed for the quarter on account of the epidemic. We had to close the church from the first Sunday in October to the third Sunday in November. Now the epidemic is worse than before, but we have not lost any of our members, for which we are thankful. We took a collection of $4.75 for Armenian and Syrian Relief Jan. 5. On Thanksgiving Day we took a collection of $4.71, which was sent to the General Mission Board.—Mrs. Maggie Cunningham, Shipman, Va., Jan. 18.

Linville Creek church met in council Dec. 27, with Eld. A. J. Fitzwater presiding. We enjoyed the presence of Bro. J. H. Kline and wife, of the third Sunday in November, and Bro. C. A. Nair and wife of the Unity congregation. Two letters were received and seven granted. The church building committee made their final report, showing a balance of $1.01 in the treasury. Due to the rise in repairing the Cedar Run house. Bro. J. S. Wampler was reappointed superintendent of the Linville Creek Sunday-school, and Bro. N. F. Kline for Cedar Run. Bro. Jos. Keggy was appointed president of the Christian Workers' Meeting. We decided to hold a series of meetings at Cedar Run some time during the year.—Catherine R. Kline, Broadway, Va., Jan. 18.

Unity congregation met in council Jan. 11, with Eld. W. A. Myers presiding. Five letters were granted and one received. The reports of the different committees were encouraging. The committees on missionary, Sunday-school and educational work presented and urged the Forward Movement, as adopted by the General Brotherhood. A committee on dress reform was appointed, consisting of five sisters. A committee of five brethren was appointed to arrange for the District Meeting, which will convene at the Fairview house in the Unity congregation April 17 and 18. The delegates to District Meeting are J. J. Flory, Russel Mason and Anna Roller. The delegates to Annual Meeting are Brethren C. E. Nair and I. N. Zeigler. The services of Bro. Minor Myers have been secured to hold a series of meetings at the Bethel house, and Bro. B. S. Landes at the Fairview house some time during the year.—Anna R. Roller, Timberville, Va., Jan. 15.

Valley Bethel church met in council Dec. 14, with Eld. C. B. Gibby presiding. The attendance was good and all business was disposed of pleasantly. Brethren A. H. Miller and Raymond E. Bussard were elected superintendents of the Valley Bethel Sunday-school. Bro. Bussard and wife were also appointed to canvass the committee to visit the homes of this community, to encourage the people to attend Sunday-school more regularly. We hope these visits may bring forth good results. We have organized a teachers'-training class and also a teachers' meeting, which, we believe, will be of much help toward the betterment of our school. We had services on Christmas Day, with a good attendance.—Raymond E. Bussard, Broadway, Va., Jan. 18.

White Hill congregation met in council Jan. 15, with Eld. S. J. Flory in charge. Church and Sunday-school officers were elected for the coming year. Jan. 5 we took a collection of $27 for Armenian and Syrian Relief. Sister Minnie Miller, of Bridgewater, was with us Jan. 18 and 19, and gave us helpful instruction in our Sunday-school work. We hope to have him with us again. The work at this place has been hindered by the epidemic.—Mary E. Hall, Stuarts Draft, Va., Jan. 21.

WASHINGTON

Forest Center church met in council Jan. 11, with Eld. W. H. Tigner presiding. We elected officers as follows: Bro. Tigner, elder; the writer, "Messenger" correspondent and agent. Two letters have been granted since the last report. The committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief made plans to carry on a special drive for this work. The Sunday-school adopted an Armenian orphan for one year. Every alternate Sunday, for over a year, the school collections have been given for this work. The present Sunday-school officers were reelected for the next six months. We are quite comfortably located in our new church basement now. The first services were held on Thanksgiving Day, at which time an offering was taken for missions. We plan to continue work on the building as soon as the weather permits. We are very thankful that we have no indebtedness so far and hope to finish without any. The community presented Bro. Tigner with a purse of $45 for Christmas. Our services were closed for seven weeks on account of influenza. Several members have been ill, but there have been no deaths. We have started a teacher-training class with sixteen members. We meet on Friday night of each week.—Nora A. Willey, Valley, Wash., Jan. 13.

Wenatchee City.—We have met only twice for Sunday-school since the first part of October. The majority in our city have been sick, but so far most of the Sunday-school members have escaped the epidemic. We are few in number. While we have not been able to carry our Sunday-school work to the homes in a systematic way, we are trying to encourage home study by distributing quarterlies and papers. No weekly offering is taken, but when the call for funds came, for Armenian and Syrian Relief, our superintendent was equal to the occasion. Most of the members have telephones, and every family was told of the opportunity to serve by giving. The response totaled $39.10 cash, and a $100 Liberty Bond. The Sunday-school feels especially grateful to the donors of the Liberty Bond and a personal check for $25. We are hoping that the time will soon come when we can again worship in our accustomed way.—Fred Bastin, Wenatchee, Wash., Jan. 18.

WEST VIRGINIA

Bluefield.—On account of influenza, our quarterly council, that was to have convened in December, did not meet until Jan. 12, 1919. Our elder, Bro. C. D. Troup, of Roanoke, Va., preached for us both morning and evening, besides presiding over our council at 4 P. M. Several important matters were disposed of. The pastoral committee was continued and also instructed to secure an evangelist to hold a series of meetings for us in 1919. Bro. G. S. Whitehead was elected Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. J. C. Dixon, "Messenger" agent; the writer, clerk and correspondent. The treasurer's report showed a balance of $24.26 on hand Jan. 1. One has been baptized since our last report.—C. E. Boone, Box 368, Bluefield, W. Va., Jan. 18.

The Conquest of Dreams

EVERYWHERE churches are putting a more comprehensive interpretation upon their responsibility to the world. In this spirit our own church has begun a Forward Movement which, we hope, will give such momentum, as the years go by, that it will never stop.

Have you tried to analyze the dream of "a greater Church of the Brethren in the world"? The movement calls for a new type of consecration, for a new standard of church efficiency. To use a concrete measure, the program calls for the following sums each year, for a period of five years:

Christian Workers' Societies for Missions and Benevolences,	$ 5,000
Sunday-schools for Missions,	40,000
The Church for District Missions,	200,000
The Church for Foreign Missions,	250,000
The Church for College Endowments,	300,000
Grand Total,	$795,000

These are large sums, and yet, if the facts were known, it is clear that these figures can not be so far beyond what many churches and Districts are doing even now. It is mainly a matter of getting all congregations up to standards already attained in a large per cent of the churches.

But even if we admit that these sums are large, has not the time come for the church to see that the Lord has put her in a large place? Both Joel and Peter say:

"And your sons and your daughters shall prophesy,
And your young men shall see visions,
And your old men shall dream dreams."

Who will say that these verses have nothing in them for us, especially when we recall the solemn words of the Master: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do, because I go unto the Father."

H. A. B.

The Battle That Counts Most

GERMANY won a great many battles in the war, but that fact is not very comforting to her now, because she lost the most important one, the last! The Allies suffered many severe defeats, but the bitterness of them is easily forgotten in the final victory.

No soldier of the cross of Christ ever realized more keenly than Paul the vital nature of the last battle. That was the one he wanted to be sure to win. It was when he was entering the last lap of the race that he looked upon the real test as still ahead of him. That was when he kept "stretching forward" most vigorously. "I press on toward the goal," he said.

If you have lost out in a battle with the tempter, never mind. It is to be regretted, but it is not decisive. It is the last one that counts. Be thankful that you have that one still ahead of you.

If you have gained a victory lately, be glad but not too glad. There's at least one more to win. Watch out for that!

"Partakers of the Divine Nature"

THOSE wonderful promises that Peter writes about in the fourth verse of the first chapter of his second letter,—had you ever noticed just what God's purpose in them was? To supply us a great warehouse, by means of which our every whim might be promptly gratified? Look it up and see. You may be surprised. "That through these ye may become partakers of the divine nature."

Do you realize how wonderful that is? Then we would escape "the corruption that is in the world by lust." And then we would add to our faith virtue, and knowledge, and self-control, and patience, and godliness, and brotherly kindness, and love. And then we would "never stumble."

"Partakers of the divine nature"! Who can comprehend it? To put the same estimate upon the worth of things that God puts on them; to see in affliction and adversity the opportunities for the sanctifying of the human spirit that God can see in them; to see in prosperity and health and wealth the obligations and responsibilities toward the needs of the world which God sees in these things; to love righteousness and truth as God loves them and to hate sin and error as he hates them; to get the divine view-point, in short,—can you conceive of anything finer than this?

Not in the same infinite measure, of course not. But just to have a little of it, a glimpse of it, as much as our poor, straitened spirits can hold—wouldn't even that be riches and "joy unspeakable"?

If You Lack Experience, Get Some

THE deliverance of Israel from Egypt was the one great event which became the nation's inspiration and basis of steadfastness ever afterward. The memory of it often faded out of sight temporarily, with unhappy consequences, but it remained through all the subsequent history the ground of appeal for prophets and reformers. Their constant effort was to keep alive, in the nation's consciousness, that wonderful testimony to Jehovah's love and care.

Experience is always the firmest ground of confidence. What has been accomplished or endured, can be accomplished or endured again. Why, then, this dallying with doubt, this stopping to calculate whether it is better to continue faithful to Christian ideals, whether it is profitable to serve God or not? Can it be that you have nothing to look back to? Were you never rescued from the grip of a powerful temptation? Do you know nothing of the joy of a great deliverance? Surely you have sometime tasted of the sweet rewards of righteousness and trust.

Then build upon this for the future! Let it make you strong for present tasks and trials! And even eager for them. And for still greater ones. So that you may know the greater blessedness of greater deliverances. And thus be emboldened to attack more difficult situations. And in that way find the open road to still greater deliverances. And then to greater conquests. And,— And,—

Experience is the thing we need, to give us faith and courage for the work which God expects of us. Let's pitch right in,—and get some.

The Psychology of Worldliness

EVERYTHING human can be studied from the psychological point of view. Psychology is the science of the mind, or of consciousness, or, as modern psychologists put it: "Psychology is the science of behavior." The mental or conscious attitude of man toward anything whatever, is a psychological fact.

All our behavior, or conduct, is due to two or three springs of action: The inherited instincts, which are at the basis of all action; the environment, which modifies action; and the personal will. Worldliness, therefore, is due to a reversion to the lower instincts, or imitation of our environment; or personal choice in following the lower instead of the higher ideals of life.

Worldliness must be defined before we can speak clearly of its psychology. I shall use the term to indicate the opposite of "spirituality." The Christian life is the life of the Spirit. It means to "walk by the Spirit," to be guided by the Holy Spirit, to have the fruit of the Spirit, which is "love, joy, peace, long-suffering, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, meekness and self-control" (Gal. 5: 22). The life that is not spiritual is worldly. It is evident that there is a good deal of worldliness in the world; and many people, who class themselves among the saints, can well say that they "have not yet attained" to the perfect goal of spirituality.

The spiritual life is an attainment, a task, a new birth from above, a life of the highest ideals of goodness and truth. This life is a life that goes upward, by effort, by ceaseless prayer and watching, by absolute faith and loyalty to God and Jesus Christ. Any letting up or vacation in this strenuous life of faith will mean deterioration. Worldliness is missing the mark of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus; it is a failure to live the spiritual life. What, then, are the psychological causes of worldliness?

(1) Inertia. Man is naturally lazy, and he moves most easily in the old grooves and ruts and habits. It requires effort to advance, hence he is conservative and remains in the state where he finds himself. In psychological language, worldliness is reversion to the lower instincts. All men have the lower instincts. They are born in us. Each normal child has the instinct of pugnacity (fighting), greed, egoism, sexual passions, etc. These native forces are always present, and unless they are ennobled or overcome by the expulsive power of a holy affection; by loyalty to a good cause, man will be controlled by his lower instincts.

The greedy, selfish, penurious man is worldly. He follows the lower, animal instincts. He is not spiritual and can not understand the joys of the spiritual life. One of our greatest educators has said that the reason why our amusements are so debasing is because the managers of our theaters and places of amusement are in the business for money. If they appealed only to the higher instincts they would have very small audiences, because only a few people have developed the higher side of life. But since they want large audiences, they appeal to the lower instincts, which are common to everybody. All educators and reformers recognize that the majority of our amusements are on this lower plane of life,—so as to appeal to all people. The worldly man either is on this plane or reverts to this plane.

A study of adornment reveals its close relation to sexual passions. Authors on social psychology agree that fashions and jewelry are either consciously or unconsciously intended to arouse the sexual passions. Here, again, worldliness is a reversion to the animal instincts.

(2) Egoism. Prof. Ross, in "Social Psychology," refers to fashions as caused by two motives,—to be different, and to be alike. That is, the rich want to be different from the masses, and therefore they invent ways of dressing, and modes of speech and life so as to set themselves off,—above,—the masses. It is the instinctive egoism, selfishness, pride and effort to domineer and rule. It is a matter of common knowledge that the rich women of our large cities discard their styles as soon as the servant girls appear with the same. They must then procure "new styles," to be different, so as to individualize themselves. The costly jewelry, the many servants, the grand palaces, the fine limousines, the extensive journeys, etc., are largely to "show off,"—to do things that the masses can not do. The shop girls will not associate with "servant girls." We say we believe in democracy, yet very few people really believe in it at all. They do not want to be "equal," or "brethren" to their fellowmen, but be better,—in a class by themselves. In all this egoism, the worldly life is again following a primitive instinct which has not yet been ennobled by the spiritual principle of humility.

(3) Imitation. Another cause of worldliness is imitation. As already stated, the poor imitate the rich, and follow their styles, to be like them. The great burden of styles, whether in dress, or automobiles, or houses, or in sight-seeing, is due to the instinct of imitation. While there is an instinct of egoism that tends to differentiate and individualize the few, the masses imitate their environment, and especially their leaders, and those just ahead of them. Millions of people are in constant agony and tension to "keep up with the styles." I do not limit this to clothing, but apply it to all phases of life. When we study the process of character development, and begin to realize the power of suggestion, which the environment makes upon the mind, it is little wonder that it is difficult to create a spiritual personality in an age of wealth and luxury and general worldliness. The power of suggestion rules nine-tenths of life. There are thousands of suggestions along the line of worldliness to one along the line of true spirituality. The masses are not spiritually minded. What are the interests of the public? A prominent educator quotes the following: "The great 'interests' which make up American life are: (1) The ticker; (2) female apparel; (3) baseball bulletin; (4) the 'movies'; (5) bridge whist; (6) turkey trotting; (7) yellow journal headlines and 'funny' pages; (8) the prize fight. And the estimate is that 100,000 Americans are genuinely interested in the foregoing matters to every 5,000 who are interested in politics, and to every 1,000 who are interested in education." If there are 100 who are interested in the above, to every one who is interested in education, we can see the power of suggestion that comes to our children, and the appeal to their God-given instinct of imitation. It is our business to get interested in the "social gospel," and to create a fit community for our children to enjoy.

The three items, "inertia," "egoism," and "imitation" are only used as examples. The field of worldliness is as broad as human life and all phases of life may be worldly, unless properly related to the Highest Good. Who is the worldly person? He who reverts to the lower life, to the primitive life, like the savage, and places the body, the passions, the egoism, etc., above the claims of the highest good. He who remains in a rut of ease,—the inertia of custom and habit,—is also worldly. The worldly is always the non-spiritual, the animal, natural, unregenerated person. The haughty spirit, the domineering attitude, the greedy and selfish, are as much following the lower instincts as those who imitate the masses in showy display. They are all alike unspiritual and worldly.

The cure for disease is abundant health; and the cure for worldliness is the victorious life of the Spirit. To grow spiritual demands "prayer without ceasing," Bible study without ceasing, and service without ceasing. It means absolute loyalty to the Kingdom of God. Then the life of the Spirit, and the fruit of the Spirit will be realized. D. W. K.

An Evening Talk

THE evening talk, mentioned in the third chapter of John, is looked upon as one of the most interesting incidents recorded in the life of Christ. The New Testament would not be complete without the story.

Here we have Nicodemus coming to the Master by night. Among the Jews he was a man of high standing, being one of their rulers and a member of the Jewish Senate. The conversation he had with Jesus would indicate that he was not only an honest man, but was religious, and interested in his teaching. We may say, even with emphasis, that he was a seeker after the truth. He had much light, such as it was,—Old Testament light,—but he keenly felt the need of more.

What he saw of Jesus and his work led him to realize that the Master was more than an ordinary man, superior to any of the instructors of his day. His miracles appealed to Nicodemus with force, and convinced him that he had God on his side, that God was with him in all he said and did. Whatever others might say concerning him, he believed that he was a teacher come from God,—one whom God had sent. To a discerning mind the miracles were the best of credentials, showing that he was a teacher divinely appointed and was, therefore, able to speak with authority. It was a case where the teaching was backed up by the required evidence. So it was settled in the mind of the ruler that the new Teacher could be depended upon for information that the Jewish teachers, —of whom he was one,—could not supply.

It is said that he came to Jesus by night. That is, he came in the evening for a quiet interview. There was nothing out of the way, or unusual, in the evening call. It may have been the very best time to call on an exceedingly busy man, as Jesus was. There are no grounds whatever for impugning the motives of Nicodemus for seeking the quieter hours of the declining day for his talk with one whom he regarded as the most distinguished Teacher of the generation. His motives were pure and his methods fully within the limits of propriety.

As a man among men, accustomed to meeting men of rank and distinction, he opened the conversation with the courtesy and dignity becoming his own rank. He found the Master ready, and in one of his best moods for the interview. Jesus did not wait for his learned visitor to introduce the subject for the evening. He introduced it himself, and that, too, without any preliminaries. He may have been meditating on the new birth when approached, or there may have been something in the life of Nicodemus that suggested the thought.

At any rate, Jesus led out on the importance of the new birth and its process, giving his evening guest to understand that the new birth was one of the fundamentals of his system of teaching. To the earnest visitor it was not only a new question, but one that was past his comprehension. He simply could not understand it. In a general, and possibly in a particular, way he knew a good deal about the natural birth, but to be born again was out of the reach of his conception. To become a Jew, or to become a member of the Jewish nation, by being born of Jewish parents, was plain enough. This was clear enough, but being born again, or born from above, was where the mystery came in.

Jesus made the doctrine very emphatic, saying that without this new birth no man could even see the kingdom of God, let alone enter it. In all probability Nicodemus could not see the true kingdom. He had eyes but he could not see, could not perceive, could not comprehend. His eyes had not been opened, his mind had not been enlightened, and however much he may have known about the Jewish theology, he did not know enough about the true kingdom to be able to recognize it. Such things are discernible solely by the spiritually-enlightened even today.

In explaining the subject, Jesus expanded by saying that the new birth, of which he spoke, must be "of water and of the Spirit." This only deepened the mystery. What could water mean? Could he be referring to the baptism that was required of those who became his followers? To the teacher of Jewish theology it looked that way, but how could one be born of the Spirit? He simply sat in wonder and amazement. Here, he said to himself, is a Man come from God, talking about being born of the Spirit. How natural it was for him to ask: "How can these things be?" One might enter the water, and come forth, the act resembling a birth, but how about being born of the Spirit?

It never occurred to him that one might be so thoroughly influenced by the Spirit as to be, in a large measure, recreated, made over, made a new creature, in thought and life. And having undergone this regenerating process, he would be recognized as a newborn babe,—born into the Kingdom. One enters this world by a birth and, according to the understanding of the Jew, he becomes a member of God's chosen people by a birth also. As in nature the natural birth stands at the entrance into this world, so in the spiritual kingdom the new birth, in like manner, stands at the entrance of that kingdom. In fact, Jesus told Nicodemus that "except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of God." That is,—no new birth, no entrance into the kingdom.

The process is also well defined: "Of water and of the Spirit." Not water only, nor Spirit only, but of both, first of water then of the Spirit. Whatever may be the value of piety it cuts no figure without the new birth. No Christian ethics can take the place of the spiritual birth,—not even the church ordinances. Without the new birth all known Christian graces avail nothing. The man who has never been born again,—has never been born from above,—can not be regarded as the child of God. For him church membership is for no purpose. One might as well talk of the natural life without the fleshly birth, as to talk of the new creature in Christ Jesus without the spiritual birth.

Well may each reader ask of himself: "Have I been born again?" If the divinely-appointed process has been purposely omitted, there can be no grounds for answering the question in the affirmative, for Jesus says of this birth that it must be "of" water and the Spirit." Even with the process in evidence, the life and the fruits must tell the story. The man who does not have the Spirit of Christ, who does not live the life that the Master intended he should live, has never been born again. In the absence of the fruits of the Spirit, the water birth cuts no figure. Men who have experienced the new birth, talk and live like new-born creatures. To be born of the Spirit means more than the external form. It means the life that is lived in private as well as in public. Truly may one ask: "Do I talk like one who has been born again? Do I transact business like one who has experienced the new birth? Do I have the fruits of the Spirit? Or do I act and live just like the common run of men?" Yes, let a man examine himself even to learn whether he has been born again, or whether he acts like one who has been born from above. J. H. M.

In Gethsemane

BY RHETTA C. O'ROURKE

(May be sung to the tune, "Nearer, My God, to Thee")

Oft when my heart is sad,
By faith I see
My Savior kneel alone,
In Gethsemane.

Low bowed upon the ground,
With darkness wrapped around,
His voice the only sound,
In Gethsemane.

Knowing the hour had come,
When he must be
Our Living Sacrifice,
On altar tree.
When he must bleed and die,
No man to heed his cry,
Swiftly the hour drew nigh,
In Gethsemane.

And was it, Lord, for me,
Thy pain and woe,
Thy grief and agony,
Suffered below?
Broken the tempter's dart,
Humbled my erring heart,
Thinking of thee, apart,
In Gethsemane.

So, when the shadows creep,
All round my day,
Still may my trusting heart,
Look to thee and say,
The cross thou gavest me,
A trifle seems to be,
When I remember thee,
In Gethsemane.

On Post-War Religion

BY H. H. NININGER

It is, indeed, to be regretted that in the day of the world's greatest need the question was sincerely asked by men and women of all faiths: "Is Christianity a failure?" When Christianity's Founder was among men in person, demonstrating the virtue of his doctrine, there never was any question among them as to whether he succeeded. The only question was: "By what authority?" Strange, isn't it, that now, since millions of us have, for so long a time, professed to live by that same creed, there should yet arise, at so critical a time, a question as to the sufficiency of his religion?

No, the world does not, and will not, demand a new religion. But it will demand a new expression of the religion, so long known in name and in history, but which has been so little known in action. In fact, it has been demanding this change for a long time, as is evidenced by the deluge of blood which has so recently swept over Europe. But we err when we expect to hear this demand put into words. It must be read in the conditions existing. The world is like a fretful child. It can call for only the things with which it is acquainted, and when these things fail to satisfy, it spurns everything and goes on crying. Mankind had peevishly tossed about after every kind of doctrine until all doctrines became nauseating, and then it arose in rebellion against all. This nausea can be removed only by proper nourishment, and let us not forget that packages may be incorrectly labeled:

The principal differences between Christ's religious life and that of the "Christian world" of today are:

Whereas his was a creed of living, ours is a creed of theology.

Whereas he loved, we teach about loving.

Whereas he showed mercy indiscriminately, we discuss the worthiness of this or that case, to be the recipient of our kindness.

Whereas he served, we preach sermons on "service."

He constrained folks to flock to him by lifting the burdens from their sorrowing hearts and by preaching good news (Gospel). We beg folks to come and listen to our theology or scold them for not coming.

Instead of measuring his success by a membership-roll he measured it by the service rendered.

In all of these activities he was proving to his fellows that God is love, and that men are brothers, while we preach, lecture, teach, write, and array the writings of all the sages of all generations to prove "the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man."

When Christendom organizes for the purpose of serving as Jesus served, and every Christian is busily employed satisfying the needs of human society, we shall no more ask: "Is Christianity a failure?" And when non-Christian people behold the evils of society cured by men and women, not suspected of selfish motives, they will wonder! And we shall no longer need to beg and persuade them to hear our doctrines, for they will be asking for an exposition of that theology which makes men unselfish servants of humanity.

Foreign Missionary Conference of North America

BY OTHO WINGER

The twenty-sixth annual session of the Foreign Missionary Conference of North America was held in the Assembly Hall of Taft Hotel, New Haven, Conn., Jan. 14-17, 1919. One hundred fifty-seven delegates were present, representing fifty-four mission boards of the United States and Canada. In addition to the delegates there were about one hundred corresponding members, including returned missionaries and others, interested in the great mission cause. The General Mission Board of the Church of the Brethren was represented by J. H. B. Williams, D. J. Lichty and the writer.

Those who have attended these conferences for twenty-five years say that this one was the greatest. And judged by the bigness of the issues considered, by the bigness of the plans proposed, to meet the needs of the hour, by the richness of thought and spiritual zeal with which the addresses were given, the conference surely was one of greatest importance. What the result will be remains for the future to tell.

The convictions and feeling of the conference may be expressed by the following terse sentences, taken from different speakers: The church has come to the greatest hour in her history. The war has not saved the world, but has only revealed her need of salvation. This is an hour of world peril. If the church can't save the world, then the world is insolvent. Will the church swing into line in one of God's great creative hours? Peace and democracy will never be assured to the earth until Jesus Christ shall reign and rule. The teachings of Jesus must be universal. The best peace league is that of Christian service. The greatest organization is the Christian church. The only fortress that can't be taken is the city of God.

The supreme need of the hour in all non-Christian lands, and in many so-called Christian lands is the Christian religion,—not merely that it may be preached, but much more that it shall be manifested in the lives of Christian men and women, and made real to them in earnest Christian service. As we listened to the earnest appeals by those direct from these needy lands, and as we realized both the bigness and the urgency of the needs, the question came: Who is sufficient for all this? The only answer is: God, working through his church and people, as they are willing to be used of him.

Dr. Mott,—that man of great international fame for Christian statesmanship,—after reviewing the needs of Russia today, said he could hardly sleep when he thought of those needy people. "In fact," said he, "I sometimes think I ought not to sleep when so much needs to be done."

The hour has come for the church of God to move forward. The conference adopted a forward movement program that proposes to be the greatest crusade the church has ever made, to win the world for Jesus Christ. While the movement, as such, is an interchurch program, there is no thought of any church boards lessening their programs in any way whatever. Union of churches was not talked of, but a united effort by the Christian churches was urged as the only force that can meet the world's needs today. There is so much to be done that every Christian church and organization can find ample scope for the largest amount of work and service it can perform.

In the midst of an interesting session came an experience never to be forgotten. A messenger interrupted the meeting by announcing that the thirty-sixth State had ratified the prohibition amendment. All joined in joyful thanksgiving and in singing: "Praise God from whom all blessings flow." It was considered most significant that, at the very hour when the great conference was planning the biggest work for the church of all the centuries, the greatest hindrance to the progress of righteousness should have received its death-blow in this great country.

The work of the conference was too large for anything but the briefest description to be given here. But there were a few features of the conference that were of special interest to the writer.

The leaders of this great meeting were men of extraordinary ability. To mention the names of John R. Mott and Robert E. Speer among the leaders, is ample proof of this statement. To see men of their ability consecrating all of their resources and influence to this work, ought to encourage men and women everywhere to give all the assistance possible.

One could not but note and feel the Spirit's power manifested in these meetings. The greatest confidence was expressed in the power of prayer. Frequent and earnest were the seasons of devotion. Jesus Christ was exalted by every speaker. He was constantly recognized as the only hope and salvation for the world. For his sake the coming crusade is to be made. It is refreshing to know that in an age of higher criticism one could attend a three days' meeting of Christian leaders, representing many different denominations, and never hear a word but that recognized one Lord as Divine, the only begotten Son of God. An address by Dr. Speer on this subject was pronounced by many as the greatest sermon they ever heard.

Congregational singing formed a good part of the meeting. A standard hymn book of one of the large denominations was used. Standard and familiar songs were favorites. It was, indeed, spiritually refreshing to engage in such a service. It was a most favorable contrast to the singing in many places, even in our own services, where one can scarcely hear anything but some of the latest and often rag-time-like songs of the passing hour. Isn't it about time, Brethren, for our Hymnal, or some other good book, to be brought back into use in our churches?

The Lord's Prayer was in common use, in which not only the one leading in prayer, but the entire assembly joined. The frequent use of this great prayer reminded us of a custom that was once common practice,—though not so much so now,—in some places among the Brethren. I was made to feel that we may need some leaders of other bodies to come back to us and teach us the beauty of some things we are slighting.

"And what board do you represent?" This was a common question. When addressed to us, we, perhaps, at first said: "The Church of the Brethren." "The United Brethren?" "No." "The Plymouth Brethren?" Other questions finally brought our reply: "No, the Dunker Brethren." "Oh, yes, we know those people." And then, perhaps, they would tell us of some good people they had known as members of that church. And then I wondered why we don't call ourselves by the name by which people know us and will continue to know us. What is the use of trying to hide it? I'm too young to understand all of the reasons why our older Brethren didn't want to accept our common name. But I have wished for years we had a name folks would understand. You say the name was derisive. So were the names "Methodist," "Baptist," "Christian." I'm not ashamed of the word "Dunker." Rather I would like to see the church so to live and work that the name would be known and loved the world around.

As we sat in this great inter-church assembly, and thought over its great proposed program, the love for our own church was deepened. We wished that every member of the church might have been there. We wished that the church we love would accept the great challenge of the hour, that with all the men and money at our command we would march forward in this great crusade for Jesus Christ. To fail him in this hour of his great call, would be to deny him before the world, and to prove ourselves unworthy to be counted among his chosen.

But we will not fail him. Our church already has a great program for the next five years. We can carry out that, and more too. The critical hour of the Christian church has come. "Can the Lord depend on you?" "Can the Lord depend on me?" Can he depend on the Church of the Brethren? "Even so, Lord Jesus. Amen."

Can We Become Perfect?

BY WM. J. TINKLE

MANY people say: "No, it is impossible to become so good in this life that we never commit sin." Yet Jesus says: "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father, which is in heaven, is perfect." Surely, our Master would not tell us to do something which it is impossible to do.

Much of the discussion on this point has been the result of misunderstanding as to what spiritual perfection is. Perhaps I can not do as much as some one else, but that does not denote that I can not become perfect. The winesap is not as big as the pippin, but if it has no defects, it is a perfect apple, nevertheless. If the man with one talent does his best, he becomes a perfect one-talent man; but if the man with five talents does no more than this man, he is not doing all that he could, and is not a perfect five-talent man.

I have heard people say that they never met any one who was without faults. Such individuals may be scarce, but it is not our business to judge our neighbors. We can not see their motives nor all the circumstances, What we call faults, may not be sins in the sight of God.

David says: "I was shapen in iniquity and in sin did my mother conceive me." "How can such a one become perfect?" you ask. But notice that he is speaking only of himself. If we feel that the same is true of ourselves, it only shows the necessity of being born again.

A scripture, often quoted to show that we can not live without sin, is 1 John 1: 8: "If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us." Now, a man might write a book and afterwards change his views. He still would be the author of the book. He could not say that he had no book. But he would not have to be guided by the principles of that book or write another like it. In like manner, if John Doe should steal a horse and afterward be converted, people still might speak of John Doe's theft, and he could not say that it was not his theft. Nevertheless, he would not be a horse thief after he was converted. Some people do deceive themselves by saying that they have no sin, when all their neghbors can see that they do. Thus they harm the cause. It does no good to tell people how good we are. But, dear brother, don't let Satan whisper to you that this passage makes it impossible to live without sin. The apostle John can not mean this, for in the preceding verse he says: "The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth us from all sin." And in the following verse he speaks of being "cleansed from all iniquity."

There are more passages of Scripture about being saved from sin in this life, than about salvation in the life to come. Let me quote a few of them:

"If thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments." "If thou wilt be perfect, sell that thou hast," etc. (Matt. 19: 17, 21).

"In all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us" (Rom. 8: 37).

"He that committeth sin is of the devil; for the devil sinneth from the beginning. For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil" (1 John 3: 8). Can we think of our Master doing his work half way, and being unable to destroy all the works of the devil?

When the angel appeared to Joseph, announcing the birth of a Child, he said: "Thou shalt call his name Jesus; for he shall save his people from their sins" (Matt. 1: 21). Knowing this to be the reason why Jesus came to the earth, can we not trust him to save us entirely from our sins, even though we may not understand all the passages on the subject? Could we be saved from our sins and still be in bondage to a part of them?

We should not be discouraged, thinking that we can not attain to Jesus' standard of perfection. "With God all things are possible." Since there is none good but God, we should crucify our own selves, and let God live in us and make us what he wishes us to be. When we think of the commandment to be perfect, it should make us realize the necessity of trusting and keeping close to God.

I once heard a man say: "If I thought that I was perfect I should want to die at once, for there would be nothing more to do." As if the perfecting of self were all a Christian has to do! When you get rid of your sin, you are then just ready to begin to do good work. You can't put in your best efforts for the cause until you do. Let in the Spirit, follow his promptings! Let God make you a clean vessel, and then see if he does not use you to his glory.

Urgency in Evangelism

BY S. S. BLOUGH

ONE day, in the closing months of Jesus' ministry, he was invited to eat bread in the house of a chief Pharisee. Luke relates the story very beautifully in chapter fourteen. While here, as was customary, he was being watched by those who would ensnare him. Even these uncommon surroundings did not deter Jesus from seeing an opportunity. He was ever the Master Teacher and Healer, and was ready to embrace the occasion even in this home. He, therefore, healed a man even though it was on the Sabbath. Past experience had shown his critics unable to cope with him on this question, so they left him alone, though he had asked their opinion concerning the righteousness of the act.

Jesus saw in their behavior at the feast the need of a lesson on humility and the lack of true hospitality. He taught two great lessons on these points,—one to the guests and the other to the giver of the feast. One, seemingly anxious to change the course of the conversation, said: "Blessed is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God." This was evidently what brought forth the great teaching of the parable as recorded in verses sixteen to twenty-four.

In the application of this beautiful parable, there are many lessons to be learned. The one who made the supper typifies God, in his preparation of, and invitation to, the Gospel Feast.

Those first called were the representative Jews, who were mostly of the educated, priestly class. These should have been most capable of being used, but were not willing to make the sacrifice. Those sent to them were John the Baptist, Jesus and his disciples. Their refusal shows their rejection of the Savior and his methods.

The second class called represents those of the Jews who were despised and disrespected by the Pharisees. While it is true that a few priests and Pharisees received him, a much larger number of these were made willing to become his disciples. It would seem also that the Samaritans must be taken in under this class, for salvation was also for them. But the Lord was not yet satisfied, for he had that which was for the benefit of all.

There was a third class which they were to bring in. These were the most despised and diseased of the entire country. These represent the Gentile world. Because of infection and fear of contagion, they are driven out, and no one would think of inviting them near his home, much less to his table. Here, then, is taught the graciousness of the Gospel preparation for the entire race. It is made to embrace the crime-stained and misery-stricken of the whole human family, who have a place in the merits of Jesus, and an interest in his atonement.

This parable is intended to present the whole Gospel Scheme. Here we have its Author, the instruments used, its subjects, its method, its spirit and its benefits. It is hard to see how, in any other figure, Jesus could have taught so much in so small a compass. This characteristic is evident in all of his teaching.

This parable teaches that the Gospel is for all the unsaved everywhere. It not infrequently happens that among those who confess to be Christ's followers there are some who can not grasp the truth that salvation is possible for the vilest sinner.. Perhaps self has not been sufficiently sacrificed. Then, too, it is so difficult to get people to see that the Gospel must be sent to the heathen. They have not yet learned the lesson of a whole wide world for Jesus. Can we not see the danger of becoming self-righteous and disobedient like the Pharisees? Every true follower of Christ rejoices that there is an invitation to all, everywhere, for the benefits of this Gospel Feast.

Since the preparation has been made complete for all, the servants must go out and give the invitation. In the application of the lesson, who shall go out and give the gracious invitation? Jesus said: "Go ye, therefore," and "So send I them." This indicates very clearly that those who have themselves come to the feast must go out and tell others. It is presumed that they appreciate the privilege of the feast sufficiently to be willing and ready to go. Yes, it is the mission of the church to find the unsaved.

The unsaved at home and abroad are not primarily commissioned to find the church, but the church is to find them. We are willing, perhaps, to bring the Gospel to some, where it is not too inconvenient or too expensive, but we have not become so very willing to go or send workers into the byways and hedges. We somehow might lose our respectability, or the church might become contaminated with those who come from there. Have you ever heard of a church that was so respectable that it refused admission to some when they asked to come in? Instead of that we are to go and compel them to come in. Does it not seem as if we had gotten beyond our business, or that we presume to know better than the Lord did? Jesus says: "I came not to call the righteous but sinners to repentance." And again: "Go out quickly into the streets and lanes of the city."

Here is taught the lesson that to find the unsaved we must go where they are. Yes, go find them, they will not come to you. It is quite necessary, at times, to pull out into the deep and let down the nets. Compel them to come in. This will often be difficult.

Paul had some experience along this line when he became all things to all men that he might, by all means, save some. This does not mean that he became a worldly-minded sinner with them, in order to be one of their number, but that he brought the truth in such a way as to meet them on their level. Compel them to come in by interest, by reason,—these are strong factors but will not do for all. It may have to be done by supplying temporal needs, through music, or, most of all, through sympathy. Who has strayed so far away that sympathy, properly expressed, will not have a favorable influence? We must put ourselves in the inquirer's place, and try to appreciate what his needs and desires are.

Let us not forget the urgency of the matter. When this world conflict is over, there will be more open doors for a world Gospel than ever before. Will the church of Jesus Christ see her responsibility and opportunity? When the Government called for men, men responded. When funds were required, funds were given in unheard of large sums. Shall we do less for the Ruler of all the earth? There will be great need for the proper application of the Gospel to the world's needs. The church must be to the world more than she has ever been.

Many young men, who are in the ranks today, will come back to us sooner or later. What shall we do with them? They are splendid men, who have shown a willingness to sacrifice, and they will find places where they can make good. Why not use every effort to show them the need and nobility of accepting the mission of carrying the Gospel to the unsaved? Men who have learned to obey implicitly their country's call, ought not to hesitate to turn into the greater sacrifice of their Lord's religious service. Men who have been influential in bringing peace to the world, should be encouraged to bring peace to the souls of men, and thus hold that which has been gained for the world. Women who had the disposition of heart and of mind to nurse back to health the sick and wounded soldier, ought to be very serviceable in looking after the bleeding hearts of the sin-sick. O what a splendid army of workers might come from the ranks of these who have already suffered so much for the welfare of the world! Then, too, there are many who were not obliged, for various reasons, to engage in this warfare. Ought we not to feel that now comes our time? If we were to throw our strength and power into this, as they have done in the trenches and on the open field, even until success has come, the multitudes of the world's lost and sinning might be brought to the table of our Lord.

Then there are those who have learned to give by giving. Shall not their help be expected and willingly given that these others may carry the Gospel wherever the Spirit directs? May it be even so! Then the Lord's will shall be accomplished.

The Lord's business demands haste. Soon the opportunity will be lost and the world will have settled down again to her set methods of life. The opportunities gone may be gone forever. Estimates of the work, if computed, will show much more to be done than many have realized, and the results will be great accordingly. Shall we arise in our manhood and heed the urgent call that the Lord's table shall be filled?

Willingness to Go Wherever He Calls

BY IDA M. HELM

"But after I am risen again, I will go before you into Galilee," was Jesus' promise to his disciples. After the resurrection the disciples went to the place that Christ had appointed them, and, true to his promise, he met with them, and they were permitted to see and talk with the Risen Lord.

Today Jesus goes before us and from everywhere we hear him call: "Go work today in my vineyard." He is present with us in the Holy Spirit, in the home. He is in Ashland, in Washington, in Cuba, in the Philippines, in Africa, in China, in India, in Greenland, in Europe. From everywhere we hear the call: "Go and I will be with you." "To the Gentiles also hath God granted repentance unto life."

But where is my call? How am I to know where, in the midst of the great field, he would have me work? In the parable, the man with the one talent did not use it at all. The one with the two talents, also the one with the five, worked wherever they could find an opportunity, for they doubled all the talents they had.

Are we willing to go where he calls? "Lo, I am with you, always," is Jesus' promise. My neighbor across the way has misused me, he cheated me, he is my enemy. He slandered me. Do I love him and pray for him? Or don't I feel like praying for him? Do I care what becomes of him? Jesus says: "Love your enemies, pray for them that despitefully use you." That is a talent we can all use. We can pray. Now my enemy is pushed to the wall. He has lost every cent he had. Am I glad of it? Doubtless sorrow and gloom and dread have settled like a pall on his home. What shall I do? Does Jesus know about his adversity? What would he have me do? Do I believe in the providence of God? Do I recognize the opportunity to win my enemy for a friend, and point him to Christ? Am I forgiving and living so that he can see Christ in my life? Jesus says to me: "Lo, I go before you." Am I willing to follow him and be a neighbor to this man?

Over in the city, in the Italian quarter, there is a family stricken with the fever. Can I lightly say: "There is a family afflicted with a dread disease. Too bad!" And then can I carelessly pass by? They are God's children. Will we improve the opportunity of caring for them, so Jesus can say to us: "I was sick and ye ministered to me"?

A cold-blooded murder is committed, and the culprit confined in the county jail, without bond. Dare I, as a follower of the Christ, say: "Hang the culprit, give him his just dues"? Listen to Jesus, when cruel men were murdering him: "Father, forgive them, they know not what they do." Christ died to save the cold-blooded murderer. Shall I go and give him the message of pardon and life? The penitentiaries and reformatories are full of men and women and boys and girls, and from behind those iron bars comes the call for help. In the breast of every one behind those walls there smoulders a spark of divinity that God's mercy can reach. The smouldering gleam needs to be fanned into a flame. Shall we help to fan it?

Over the seas a terrible, awful war has been raging. Millions of souls went down to hopeless graves. The piercing cry for help still comes ringing across the mighty deep. I am thankful that we are not looking on calmly and unconcerned. We are doing all in our power to supply the necessaries and comforts of life. But the great need of the world today is Christ, and above the cry for the temporal things of life, comes the cry for spiritual food, the Bread of Life,—eternal life. The way we can help the world best today is by living close to Christ, and by redoubling our efforts to share the benefits of the Gospel with all people.

The church has a stupendous responsibility today, to give to the world the message of peace, to make it feel the weight of the message. Men, money, time, intellect, courage, love, strength,—all are needed in the great work of carrying the message of peace and life into the war-wasted, death-stricken regions of this world. If each one of us is willing to work wherever he calls, wherever we find an opportunity, trusting in his strength, the work will be accomplished, and where the war cry has sounded, the Gospel call to worship God is ringing out. May our united prayer be: "Lord, in blessing us, make us a blessing to others." "Lo, I am with you always."

As Others See It

BY FLOYD M. IRVIN

Those who take it upon themselves to stand for a principle of right, not yet accepted by the majority, always suffer severe criticism, scorn, and frequently persecution. While living and performing their heroic work, they must suffer the penalty of the under dog. But after their work has been performed, and they have passed beyond, the world sings praises to their names and lauds them to the skies. Yet this does not sustain the conscientious reformers in their time of testing and trial, when they need help and encouragement.

During the war the Church of the Brethren conscientiously stood for a principle, in spite of widely-differing sentiment. We suffered for it. We shall continue to suffer, if we do our part in endeavoring to inject the spirit of Christian pacifism into the new world order, during the period of reconstruction. We need words of sympathy and encouragement. This we find in the words and Spirit of Christ.

Yet in dark hours of trial the little demon of doubt will challenge our interpretation and understanding of those words and that Spirit. At such a time the following quotations, which give us the view-point of several prominent men who have not themselves stood for nonresistance, may help us to see the reasonableness of our stand.

First, let us listen to Dr. Henry Neumann, the leader of the Ethical Culture Society of Brooklyn, N. Y.: "If I were a Christian I should want my church to stand firm as a rock for the principle that evil is to be overcome, not with another evil, however unselfishly motivated, but with good. One would suppose that when Germany, by pushing to its logical extreme the moral evil inherent in war, has so effectively dramatized for mankind the enormity of that essential evil, clergymen would be all the more eager to demonstrate that the wholly opposite way of their Master was, after all, the true and better way."

Now listen to Bernard Adams, a university man of England, who was wounded after serving eight months in the war, and during convalescence wrote a book, entitled, "Nothing of Importance," from which the following quotation is taken. He later returned to the war and was killed in action: "The seeds of cruelty, selfishness, ambition, avarice, and indifference, are always liable to swell, grow and bud, and blossom suddenly into the red flower of war. These are the seeds of war. And it is because they know that we, too, are not free from them, that certain men have stood out from the arena as a protest against war. These men are real heroes, who, for their conscience' sake are enduring taunts, ignominy, misunderstanding and worse. Most men and women in the arena are cursing them, and as they struggle in agony and anguish, they beat their hands at them and cry: 'You do not care.' I, too, have cursed them when I was mad with pain. But I know them, and I know that they are true men. I would not have one less. They are witnesses against war. And I, too, am fighting war. Men do not understand them now, but one day they will."

Now let us face a shaming criticism of the Christian church in the following poem, quoted by Dr. John R. Mott at the great Northfield Student Missionary Conference, and also in magazine articles, written by an unbeliever and published in the Labor Leader, in England:

"An unbeliever, oft I went
Into church to find content,
And waited that my soul might see
Man's most divine humanity,
And from the church's inmost shrine
Christ's very eyes looked into mine.

"Within the church again I stood,
When half the world was red with blood,
And said: 'Here shall I find release
From strife; here reigns the Prince of Peace.'
But in God's house I found dark hate
And Fury set in Love's estate,
The songs of peace are put away,
Christ's priests cry out: 'Go forth and slay.'

"O, sadder than the blood which rains
Its fruitless showers on Europe's plains!
O, sadder than the widow's moan
Or Belgium's suffocated groan!
Man's heaveniest Gospel is denied,
His blackest crime is sanctified
And through great Europe's war-drenched lands
Christ's church for bloody violence stands.

"For when the State unsheathed the sword,
The servile church forgot her Lord.
Among the nations, had she stood
For Europe's wider brotherhood,
Had she recked less of earthly things
And served alone the King of kings,
Her word had curbed in that wild hour
The people's rage, the kinglet's power."

Now let us, for a moment, sit at the feet of the great psychologist, Dr. William James, and study the true import of the following extracts from his authoritative treatise on the "Psychology of Religion," namely, "Varieties of Religious Experience": "'Love your enemies.' Mark you, not simply those who happen to be your friends, but your enemies,—your positive and active enemies. Either this is an Oriental hyperbole,—a bit of verbal extravagance, meaning only that we should, as far as we can, abate our animosities,—or else it is sincere and literal. Outside of certain cases of intimate individual relation, it seldom has been taken literally. Yet it makes one ask the question: Can there, in general, be a level of emotion so unifying, so obliterative of differences between man and man, that even enmity may come to be an irrelevant circumstance and fail to inhibit the friendlier interests aroused? There is no saying what the effects might be; they might conceivably transform the world.

"Psychologically and in principle, the precept, 'Love your enemies,' is not self-contradictory. If radically followed, it would involve such a breech without instinctive springs of action, and, with the present world arrangements, that a critical point would practically be passed, and we should be born into another kingdom of being. Religious emotion makes us feel that other kingdom to be close at hand, within our reach."

If ever that "other kingdom" was close at hand, surely it is in these days, when men have been brought close to God by suffering and are now earnestly and unitedly seeking for a foundation for a permanent peace. Shall we not haste to bring it?

THE ROUND TABLE

"Boogered"

BY EZRA FLORY

Two men sat talking about some virgin soil in a new territory. "What should I get for the farm?" asked one of the other, who was more experienced. "Well, yours is an excellent tract, and I'd rather have it than most other tracts of land that have been farmed, for yours is not 'boogered,' you see."

Not long after hearing this conversation, I was sitting in a dentist's chair. Before me was this motto on the window: "A thing done well today means less trouble tomorrow."

A horse came limping behind a wagon in the street, and some one said: "What a 'boogered' horse!"

These events set me thinking. I have heard it said: "It is easier to build up a church in a new community than to 'overhaul' one that has been 'boogered.'" Efficiency demands that tools be kept in good condition and a mechanic will not work with "boogered" ones.

The same truth holds good in the educational sphere. Children who have been scarred by evil impressions or warped and twisted by bad discipline and incorrect teaching, are "boogered" as certainly as material implements. In many instances the child is ruined for life and for eternity by parents and teachers who fail to realize the effects of their example.

It is the same story over and over again, whether in the classroom, in the pulpit, in the office, or on the farm. "Don't let your new tract be 'boogered.'" Farm well what you farm! Do not skim over a large tract and deceive yourself and others, too.

Our Aged Ministers

BY LEANDER SMITH

"Even so did the Lord ordain that they that proclaim the gospel should live of the gospel" (1 Cor. 9: 17).

WATCH the life of the minister! How cheerfully he goes about his work! What a willing, self-giving spirit is he! How readily he faces the issue and accepts the terms of his work! The hope of gain has had nothing to do with his decision. Ministers, as a class, receive very small compensation. It is difficult even for those who receive the largest compensation to save anything from their earnings. Where is there a body of men so purged of worldliness, so free from corruption and impurity?

Because of the nature of the minister's calling, and the character of his labors, he comes in contact, more than any other man, with suffering and unfortunate humanity.

The more closely he follows in the footsteps of the Master, the less likely is he to have anything at the end of the year. He is not supposed to make money outside of his calling. To do that would be considered as greatly lessening his usefulness. Disaster usually sweeps away the minister of the Gospel who seeks personal fortune. The pastor is expected to give his whole time to the church. Is it not, therefore, incumbent on the church to provide incomes for their servants who have worn themselves out in their service?

These dear old ministers of the glorious Gospel of Christ and their faithful companions, are now sacredly and tenderly entrusted to our care. These battle-scarred soldiers have faithfully and sacrificingly carried the banner of our King into sections where we enjoy the fruits of their service. Now, since they are old, and unable to care for themselves, we are bound, by the holy ties of gratitude and common honesty, to care for them, and to do it well.

Simple justice to the minister, who has given the best that is in him to his work, and who finds himself, in his old age, without means of support, should make any other course impossible.

Large duties and grave responsibilities rest upon the churches today. We are challenged, all around, by ideals that go to make up the best type of Christian civilization.

We have relatives and friends, who have been soldiers on the battle-field away from home, and we have these dear soldiers of the cross at home. The soldier's wounds bring recognition of Government responsibility. Even so should the dimmed eye and slackened step of the wornout minister bring the grateful recognition of a service that can never be adequately compensated, but that may be partially rewarded by providing for his needs with an income to be regarded only in the light of deferred wages.

Our Boys Were Taken

BY W. O. BECKNER

How hard it was to give them up! And yet they had to go. We thought we just could not do it, but the strong hand of the Government was laid upon their shoulders and they went.

How different it all was and is from what we had planned! That is what made it all the more grievous to bear,—the disappointment we suffered in seeing their promising careers all broken up.

But they went and we are living through it. They are too. Most of the boys have made much less noise about it than their immediate relatives have made for them.

There have been cases where some boys have been greatly blest by getting out from under the enforced conditions in which they had lived. A lad is himself. He is not somebody else. He is an individual, and as such he had a right to the full development of his individual powers. Why should father neglect the proper schooling of his son under the guise of necessity to pay debts? Why the debts at all? Why have possession of that which must be paid for in the life-blood of others? Where is the regulation, in morals or anywhere else, that permits parents to hold their children away from their proper education?

A well-to-do man once remarked, concerning his son, that the lad could not go to school that winter because he was still under twenty-one years of age, and was to work for his father yet a while. But when the draft law went into effect, that father was not asked for his son. The Government took him. And the father is getting along without him, although the lad is still where his father might claim his service, so far as age goes.

The facts are that we have given up our boys when we had to. That only establishes the related fact that we could have given them up for their own highest development if we had wanted to. And if we have learned that, is it not also true that we could have had higher ambitions for them in the first place and could have encouraged them to prepare themselves for a lifetime of work in the greatest work humanity ever undertook, that of establishing completely the reign of the Prince of Peace on earth? In too many cases fathers and mothers have said that they could never give up their children for the ministry or for the mission field. Some people are coming to see that now they have given them up for something else.

Peace can never come and stay until the ideals of love and brotherhood, taught by the Master, are known and loved by individuals. Democracy and peace are not things. They are simply attitudes of the human heart. It is the big work of the church to preach and teach, and by every means to propagate these ideals and doctrines. Our boys and girls must be given to the work. The church must have them. The church is the only institution whose only business it is to propagate such ideals. She must have workers to accomplish what is demanded of her. Our boys must be given to the work. Just as Samuel was given by his mother for a specific work, so must the boys and girls of this day be brought up in the atmosphere that leads them to a conscious dedication of all their powers of body and of mind for the Master's work on earth.

Out of this awful strife we must learn that if we do not give our boys to the ministry of the Word in one way, wars and disturbances will continue on earth, and they will be taken from us in another way. Who knows but that, if the Lord's people had been as active in carrying the Message to the nations as they should have been, in the years past, even this war would have been averted? Who knows?

Pastoral Work

BY D. W. SHOCK

IN the city, pastoral work has its amusing side, as well as its serious side. In some cases the minister must first prove that he is not a tramp, and the most difficult part of the whole transaction is to gain admittance to the houses. He often knocks and rings, again and again, but there is no response. The people are not at home, or they are in the back part of the house and can not hear, or the only one at home is hard of hearing, or is not presentable. Perhaps the people have moved away, or have been fooled so many times that they will frankly confess they do not respond to the door bell. Occasionally the pastor discovers that the people are at home by some slight noise within, or by a gentle movement of the window curtain, but for some reason they do not wish to open the door. The minister, standing on the doorstep in the hot sun of summer, or in the biting wind of winter, has discovered all this, and it does not tend to elevate pastoral work in his estimation. Finally he learns the meaning of his Master's words: "Behold I stand at the door and knock."

Sometimes the inmates, in response to his ring, call through the door: "Who is there?" and he is obliged to explain himself, not only to those within, but to all passers-by as well. Sometimes, when he rings the bell, a head is thrust out of an upper window, and he must reveal his identity before he is admitted. And during the whole transaction, sometimes the house dog, inside the door, is demanding to know who it is, or the house dog outside of the door is snapping at his heels, and all the neighbors' dogs, from adjoining doorsteps, are challenging his entrance.

Finally, after spending as much time as he had to spare, in getting into the house, he often is obliged to sit for fifteen minutes in the parlor, waiting for the lady to make an elaborate toilet. If there is ever a time when a pastor does not appreciate fine clothes, it is under such circumstances. It is not wonderful that some pastors of peculiar temperament and precarious health hesitate to do work in the homes. Let no one think that this is a fancy sketch; it is from life.

Nevertheless, it is a profitable work for both pastor and people. Many have been led to Christ in this way, and the minister has learned to preach to the common people as he could learn in no other way. To get under everybody's burden will sometimes almost crush him to the earth, but it is the kind of work the Master did while on the earth, and what was good enough for him, is good enough for his ministers today. "The disciple is not above his Master."

CORRESPONDENCE

"Write what thou seest, and send it unto the churches"

BARTOW, FLORIDA

We arrived here about the middle of November and are located three miles east of Bartow. There are now eleven brethren and sisters spending the winter here, all from Adams, York and Juniata Counties. Through the generosity of the Methodist people, we have been granted the privilege of using their church, and we now have preaching every two weeks. They have Sunday-school every Sunday and preaching every two weeks. That gives them services in their church every Sunday. Two of our brethren are teaching Sunday-school classes.

Several of the members, who attend our services, are located at Winter Haven, fourteen miles from here. There are also some members at Bartow. If there are any members within reach, who take the "Messenger," we would be very glad to have them attend our services. Our closest church is Sebring,—about fifty miles distant. So, while we are isolated, we still have the privilege of church services. We have two ministers, Eld. C. G. Winey, of Thompsontown, Pa., and Eld. B. F. Lightner, of Gettysburg, Pa. We are here as one family. Very often we all go to one home to spend the evening, and worship together before separating. Last Sunday evening there were twenty-six of us,—all Pennsylvania people,—gathered in the home of Bro. Banks Bashor. We had a song and prayer service, and felt it was an evening long to be remembered.

Our next preaching service will be January 26. We state this, so that any one, getting the "Messenger," and wishing to attend these services, will have the date of the meetings. Come and worship with us! We call our little village Pennsylvania Avenue, because all living on the avenue are Pennsylvania people. Brother and Sister H. J. Shellenberger are located here. Bro. Abraham Hershey and wife, and Bro. C. G. Winey and wife are spending the winter with them. Ida M. Lightner.

DEATH OF BRO. A. D. DOLL

A very sad accident occurred near Antioch, W. Va., Jan. 16. Bro. Abraham Dalby Doll, with his brother and another man, was cutting locust timber, when one tree lodged against another. Bro. Doll went in under the lodged tree to chop the other tree. After he struck once with his axe, the weight of the lodged tree caused it to split, striking him on the side of the head and inflicting a serious wound. With the assistance of his brother he walked to his home, about three-fourths of a mile. The doctor was called and, after an examination, advised that he be taken to the hospital. He died about half an hour after arriving there. The deceased was forty-three years old, and is the first to die in a family of eight children. He leaves his wife, two sons, an aged father and mother, four brothers and three sisters.

Bro. Doll was a member of the Church of the Brethren for a number of years and served as deacon. He was always found at his post of duty. He will be missed in the church, especially his home congregation, Knobley. Services by the writer. Text, Mark 13: 34-37.

Burlington, W. Va. B. W. Smith.

THE LONGING OF A PASTOR

Many times the natural longing of the pastor and his wife, or that of the elder and his wife, is to know how the congregation appreciates their efforts, but many times the congregation, thoughtlessly, allows that longing to go unanswered. And when it is answered not all congregations answer in the same way,—some in word, some in deeds of kindness, both of which are very much appreciated, especially when we realize that they come from hearts full of love and appreciation.

Thus the members of the Beaver congregation desired to show their appreciation of their pastor and his wife by an outward manifestation. On Thursday evening before Christmas they met at our home for prayer meeting. After the meeting was over, two sisters came in with a clothes-basket filled with many useful articles, also a nice sum of money, all of which was very much appreciated. Next day a brother came with a bushel of apples, another with a ham, one with some sausage, and another with a nice roll of butter. The children were remembered with sweets and toys. So it went until we were made to realize, from the depths of our hearts, that every member of the congregation was with us heart and soul, though to us our efforts seemed weak and faltering. Neither was this the first time we were remembered. Twice before, during the year, we received tokens of love and gratitude.

What was the result, do you ask? Certainly we were impressed to renew our energies and redouble our diligence—if possible to be of greater service to our flock in the year to come than in the one just passed. And the congregation feels that it has had a part in the renewed efforts, and in having the kingdom enlarged at this place.

We are sure that any pastor or elder will have the same feeling of encouragement, and the same desire to go forth with renewed efforts, if the members of his congregation will cause him to feel their heart-throbs as ours has done. If you have any doubts on this just try it, and be convinced. O. W. Diehl.

IN WASHINGTON

In our eighteen years of married life, wife and I have made a good many moves, for one reason or another, but we have reached the point where we think we should settle down and stay, at least until our family is grown. In choosing the place for our home, we took several things into consideration, and the result of it is our settlement in Washington.

In the first place, we wished to be in a new country. Having been among the homesteaders of North Dakota (we have our homestead yet), we know something of the fascination there is in developing a home from the raw land, not building on another's foundation. We are preparing to go through that experience again out here, to a farm, where the climate is mild enough for the tender fruits, —apricots, peaches, prunes, etc.,—yet cold enough in winter to give our children plenty of vigor. We find that here.

Of course we wish to be located within easy reach of a church. I think the greatest mistake one can make, in moving, is to locate away from the church. I'd rather struggle against a bad climate, poor soil, and real poverty, than to be away from the church. We find good churches out here.

No, we shall not stay at Wenatchee after winter is gone. We are going into the Okanogan Valley, near Oroville. Wenatchee is a splendid place for those that do not wish to do any pioneering. It has strong churches, good homes, wonderful orchards, etc. The Brethren here are prospering and it is a good place for all kinds of business, but the members in the Okanogan Valley have much cheaper land, of equal fertility, and a climate practically the same. They engage in general farming, as a rule.

The Brethren are getting nicely established there. When we move in, there will be about sixty members. A church is to be built as soon as spring comes. They have a good reputation with the people of the valley, and all are eager for more of the Brethren to come. Eld. G. A. Shamberger, of Oroville, is in charge of the church, assisted by Elders J. L. Weddle, C. E. Holmes, M. F. Woods, and H. M. Rothrock, of Tonasket. With this force, a large territory can be covered. Any one looking in this direction for a good home, can secure information from any of the above or from the writer. Paul Mohler.

Wenatchee, Wash.

OLD FOLKS' HOME, TIMBERVILLE, VIRGINIA

We wish to extend our thanks to the brethren and sisters of Virginia, and most of all to the members of the Board of Trustees for their kindness; also to the Sisters' Aid for the help they have given to the Home.

We are ending five and one-half years in the work of the Home and never have had occasion to invoke the aid of the committee a single time, in preserving orderly conditions. We are especially thankful for the Christmas gifts, with which the Home was remembered. Let us try to make next Christmas the best that the Homes have ever seen. May every congregation remember their members here! One cent from each member in your congregation will make a fine gift to your member in the Home.

Mark 10: 12 says that we should "give to the poor." "Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity: for God loveth a cheerful giver" (2 Cor. 9: 7). "The poor shall never cease out of the land: therefore, I command thee, saying, Thou shalt open thine hand wide unto thy brother, to thy poor and to thy needy in thy land" (Deut. 15: 11).

Let us all try to make the year 1919 the best the Homes have ever seen, and make them a blessing to our churches. May you all receive a blessing by your giving!

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Martin.

DEATH OF MARY ELLEN TROSTLE

Sister Mary Ellen Trostle, who died at her home on College Hill, McPherson, Kans., Jan. 8, 1919, was the daughter of Samuel and Sarah Price. She was born near Mt. Morris, Ill., Sept. 12, 1851, being therefore sixty-seven years, three months and twenty-six days of age. She grew to womanhood on the farm home of her parents and united with the Church of the Brethren at fourteen years of age. Jan. 1, 1878, she was married to P. J. Trostle and in the spring of the following year they moved to Reno County, Kans., near the present town of Nickerson, to make their home and fortune. Their home was blessed with the presence of three children, B. S. and C. C. Trostle, of Nickerson, and Miss Evelyn Trostle, of College Hill.

Brother and Sister Trostle not only tried to establish themselves in material goods but they were pioneer builders of the new community. The Salem church was founded largely by them, and Bro. Trostle was one of its first ministers. Their home was radiant with service, in those early days, and they served with willing hand and heart the sick and suffering of the community. Bro. Trostle was at one time a trustee of the then young and struggling McPherson College, and all of the family have been staunch friends of the institution.

The father and husband died in November, 1890, leaving the widow with the three children to pay for the home, and to bear the burdens incident to the pioneer days. Although she was in feeble health and not expected to live, Sister Trostle managed the business of the farm with a truly remarkable ability, raised all her children, gave them a higher education and kept up her home to the end.

In 1905 Mrs. Trostle moved from the farm, in Reno County, to the present home on College Hill. This she did.

In the autumn of 1913 Sister Trostle susta the injurious effects from which resulted in neu that time she has been a continual sufferer. H and fortitude were the essence of Christian Thanksgiving Day in 1914 she was anointed enjoyed the blessings of her faith. Unsound Teaching

Several leading denominations are struggling with the formidable problem of unsound doctrine, not only in their literature but also in their educational institutions. The loyal part of their membership insists upon a lining up with Bible principles, but seemingly the erroneous teachings have gained quite a foothold, and the uprooting of the questionable theories is not an easy matter. A firm advocate of Bible principles recently urged this safe rule of action, so far as ecclesiastical literature is concerned: "All books on theology may be tested by their attitude toward the Bible. If they are unsound in their treatment of leading Scripture principles, consign them to the junk pile."

The Old Book Still Holds First Place

Never before has the American Bible Society faced as great a demand for Bibles and Testaments as just now. Plans have been made for the immediate publication of 100,000 French Testaments, 50,000 Italian, 10,000 Portuguese, 20,000 Roumanian, 25,000 Bohemian, 50,000 modern Greek, 10,000 Yiddish, 25,000 Russian. All these are to be used among the soldiers. Large numbers of the entire Bible are to be printed in Roumanian, Polish, Finnish, Hungarian, Lithuanian, Bulgarian, Bohemian and Greek, for army and navy use, as well as for home mission work. To defray the expense of the urgent needs at this time, $50,000 will have to be raised at once. The Bible Society must have help.

A Criticism That Honors

Several weeks ago we mentioned the fact that a number of charges had been made against the Y. M. C. A. by several would-be critics. We also gave the answers of Mr. John R. Mott to some of the statements, clearly showing that there was really very little foundation to most of the charges made against the Association. One of the recent criticisms is by one Edwin L. James, who alleges, in all seriousness, that "the Y. M. C. A. workers were 'oversolicitous' as to the morals of the enlisted boys." If that is regarded as the only serious charge against the organization, the American people may well "thank God and take courage." Of some criticisms it has been well said: "Every knock is a boost," and that is quite true of Mr. James' astounding arraignment.

A Task Truly Worth While

If the promoters of the League of Nations succeed in realizing their fondest anticipations, the provisions of that movement will end war for all time. Much, of course, will depend upon the men in control of affairs. If there is, however, no decrease in armament, navies, and, large armies, militarism will still rule supreme and give occasion for wars in the future. Some contend, indeed, that "man is a combative animal. He is high-strung and likes to fight, if given reasonable provocation." That may be true of man, wholly swayed by his own earth-born inclinations. Not so, however, if the League of Nations is allowed to put into practice its more exalted teachings. It surely deserves the whole-hearted support of every believer in the Prince of Peace and his altruistic teachings.

Evangelistic Campaigns

A select committee of Presbyterian ministers have made a careful survey of the evangelistical campaign, held in Chicago by W. A. Sunday, some months ago. They found that while the Sunday campaign workers reported 5,233 cards, indicating Presbyterian preference, only 335 people could be induced actually to become members of that denomination. The largest number reported by any individual congregation is twenty-five,—a result that would have been considered pitifully small, had that congregation held its own revival meeting. The complete report has not yet been made public, but there are understood to be some criticisms of "the profane and vulgar language which shocked the moral sense of devout people," and also of "the indiscriminate way in which the decision call was made."

Perplexing Questions

One of the leading tasks, confronting the Peace Conference, will be the intricate one of erecting self-governing nations on the ruins of ancient governments, long ago destroyed, but still cherished in the history and traditions of submerged peoples. Still more complex will be the problem of establishing boundaries for those nations. Intermingled as they are, it is not easy to draw lines that would separate Czech from Teuton, Croat from Italian, Roumanian from Pole, Bulgar from Serb, Greek from Albanian, Turk from Greek. In all these and other cases the establishing of new boundaries, under existing conditions, means a more or less arbitrary creating of frontiers that shall not too seriously interfere with the aspirations of the population on either side of the line. In various sections of Europe there has been formed, through the vicissitudes of past centuries, a sort of interwoven system of settlements, of hostile races and conflicting cultures. In Macedonia, for example, Bulgars, Greeks, Serbs and Turks have their long-established respective villages and rural communities in neighboring valleys or on adjoining mountain sides. How shall an adequate border assignment be made, under the circumstances, and when made, how shall such regions be governed that the fierce antagonisms will die out and the fires of hatred will be smothered? Truly, the task is a stupendous one!

Urgent Need in the Bible Lands

While the Red Cross has assumed responsibility for a large part of Syria and Palestine, there are no fewer than 2,900,000 souls that have to be looked after by the "American Committee for Relief in the Near East." A large number of these will necessarily have to be dependent upon outside relief for at least six months. There are 1,770,000 refugees who anxiously await the time when they can be restored to their homes,—from 400 to 1,000 miles distant. Possibly about 50,000 houses, costing at least $50 each, will be required to house these refugees returning to their former homes. Farming implements, seeds, cattle and sheep will be needed to enable these people to become self-supporting. Household supplies also will be required. All these, however, can be procured if kind donors will supply the means. Will you help?

Catholic Priests Condemn Celibacy

For some time there has been a pronounced agitation among Catholic priests in various parts of Europe, demanding that they be given the privilege of marrying, since nothing in the Word of God controverts such a privilege. According to recent press reports, the Catholic clergy of Southern Hungary have addressed a petition to the church council of that district, in which they condemn the rule of celibacy as an anti-democratic and unscriptural institution, and demand its abolition. Just what attitude will be taken by the higher dignitaries of the Catholic church, is not known. One thing is sure,—the spirit of individual investigation is in evidence throughout the world, and whatever is mere tradition, religiously speaking, will be put to the test. The Church of Rome is likely to face some searching criticisms.

One Feature of Reconstruction

Much must be done for the rehabilitation of devastated France, but a special phase, recently being urged, is certain to be met with sympathy and ample financial aid in this country,—the plan to replant the stricken district with fruit trees. American subscriptions have already provided more than 10,000 trees, to replace the many that were destroyed in the war-swept area. Experts, in touch with the situation, maintain that the devastated section will make an ideal fruit-growing country. Though the soil has been greatly disturbed,—too much so, in places, for agricultural purposes proper,—it is in an ideal condition for fruit trees. Growers claim that trees will thrive excellently in the loose soil that has been left by war's ravages,—another illustration of the fact that even man's savagery can not wholly destroy nature's productivity.

How Canada Deals with the Indians

According to a recent statement of William Graham, commissioner of Indian affairs of Western Canada, the Northern Dominion has practically disposed of its "Indian problem,"—the Red Man has been civilized. The Canadian Indian today is an educated farmer. He professes to be a Christian and goes to church regularly every Sunday. Quite frequently he may be seen going to church with his family in an automobile. His children go to school. He is as good a farmer as his white neighbors,—sometimes a better one. Government agricultural experts teach him the latest scientific methods of cultivating land. Better living conditions are certainly doing wonderful things for the Indians of Canada. Had a similar course of intelligent treatment been followed in all Indian reservations of the United States, better results would be in evidence today.

Appalling Figures

In a general way most of us abundantly realize that the recent war has levied a heavy toll upon the people of the United States. This fact is brought home the more effectually by a comparative exhibit. All the gold produced in the various deposits throughout the world, during the 426 years since Columbus landed on the shores of America, comes to $16,500,000,000. During the eighteen months of Uncle Sam's participation in the war, he paid out the entire sum above mentioned and forty per cent more. The war cost the United States nearly twenty-three billion dollars. This aggregate is so stupendous as to be almost inconceivable. It may be of interest, therefore, to compare it with other figures, equally staggering. "The Statistical Abstract of the United States" gives the total quantity of gold and silver money in the world at $10,500,000,000. In our eighteen months of war we spent more than twice that sum. The value of the total foreign commerce of the globe is estimated at $23,000,000,000. To pay the cost of the late war, therefore, equals the whole of the world's commerce. It took seventy-three years to construct the railroads of the United States,—their aggregate value being placed at $20,000,000,000. We consumed more wealth, during the eighteen months of war, than the total value of all the railroads. In 1914 the total capital of all manufacturing plants in the United States,—the growth of a century or more,—amounted to a trifle over $23,000,000,000, or just about what the war cost us. In 1916 the aggregate amount of bank deposits in the United States banks was $22,000,000,000,—not quite what we spent for the war. In this connection it is interesting to note that to maintain a standing army of a half million men,—as is now proposed,—will cost at least $1,185,000,000 annually. These are figures of the general staff. If the world should continue to rely on big armies, big navies and a general armament to maintain peace, instead of a League of Nations, more than half the labor and resources of the world would have to support the next military program.

How Does It Impress You?

Suggestive, indeed, is a recent statement in the Baltimore "Catholic Review," as to how the "Knights of Columbus" spent the larger part of their original funds, $2,322,559.88, in the various war areas during July, August and September of last year: For 400,000,000 cigarets, $1,312,500; chewing tobacco, $58,080; 825,000 cigars, $42,300; 2,000,000 pipes, $34,027.60; 64,368 decks of playing cards, $5,011.56; for smoking tobacco, $17,128.57. Later in the year the "Knights of Columbus" received about $30,000,000 from the joint drive of the seven war charities,—Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., etc., to which everybody contributed. While the various expenditures have not as yet been made known, the same ratio would imply that the Knights of Columbus spent $18,000,000 for the commodities referred to above.

Food Relief for Europe

As recommended by President Wilson, an appropriation of $100,000,000 for food supplies, to be distributed in countries outside of Germany, was recently passed by House and Senate. The President,—aside from the pure humanitarianism involved in the relief measure,—declares that the prompt furnishing of food is now the key to the whole European situation and the solution of peace. He maintains that the pernicious clamorings of bolshevism can be stopped by food, and that all in conference with him are convinced that concerted action in the matter is of immediate and vital importance. The food question is plainly paramount,—so stupendous that only the Governments can adequately deal with it, coördinating the efforts of various voluntary agencies in the great work of sustaining Europe's starving millions.

Deplorable Conditions

Recent issues of "The World Tomorrow," "The Survey," and other publications of influence, have given considerable attention to the treatment accorded "conscientious objectors" at the various penal institutions of the Government. These periodicals, it should be remembered, do not presume to pass upon the merits of the claims, urged by these war opponents. They simply point out the facts as they found them, insisting that uncalled for severity and cruelty were visited upon these unfortunate men. From the evidence submitted, it appears that the refusal to perform the tasks assigned them, subjected these objectors to the undue rigors imposed upon them. In justice to Government officials of highest control, it is but fair to state, however, that the most objectionable phases of punishment have recently been largely done away with, by special orders from Washington.

A Prayer That Stirred Indianapolis

A recent issue of the "Christian Standard" (Disciple Church) describes how one of their leading ministers, W. H. Book, pastor of the Tabernacle church, Columbus, Ind., happened to stir up things in Indianapolis recently. When the State Senate, then in session, heard that he was in the city, they forthwith sent for him to come to the Capitol to conduct the devotional services. Evidently Mr. Book concluded that prayer would be good for the Hoosier Senators, for he accepted the invitation. It is a peculiarity of the minister referred to that when he prays he talks in plain English, just as he does when he preaches. Not being given to the "roundabout" way, he is never misunderstood. An honest, red-blooded servant of God is always a power,—and power has a habit of stirring things up. Mr. Book, as might be inferred, offered a prayer to which even the busy senators listened. All his life he had prayed and worked for prohibition, and, like every other man who has wept over the devastation caused by rum, and endured the sneers of rum sympathizers, he is now happy. Hence, in his prayer he thanked the Lord for the recent prohibition victory. In doing so, however, he stirred up a veritable hornets' nest. At the close of the prayer, Senator Hagerty objected to the thanksgiving for prohibition. He threatened to refrain from bowing his head and even talked of resigning his seat in the Senate, should another such prayer be offered. The report goes on to say that for an hour the Senate discussed the prayer, and that finally it was settled by a vote,—forty-four indorsing the prayer by voting to thank the minister for having offered it, and two, Senators Hagerty and Kolsem, opposing it. Incidentally, these senators showed "what manner of men they were."

These periodicals, it should be remembered, do not presume to pass upon the merits of the claims urged by these war opponents. They simply point out the facts as they found them, insisting that uncalled for severity and cruelty were visited upon these unfortunate men. From the evidence submitted, it appears that the refusal to perform the tasks assigned them, subjected these objectors to the undue rigors imposed upon them. In justice to Government officials of highest control, it is but fair to state, however, that the most objectionable phases of punishment have recently been largely done away with, by special orders from Washington.

A Prayer That Stirred Indianapolis

A recent issue of the "Christian Standard" (Disciple Church) describes how one of their leading ministers, W. H. Book, pastor of the Tabernacle church, Columbus, Ind., happened to stir up things in Indianapolis recently. When the State Senate, then in session, heard that he was in the city, they forthwith sent for him to come to the Capitol to conduct the devotional services. Evidently Mr. Book concluded that prayer would be good for the Hoosier Senators, for he accepted the invitation. It is a peculiarity of the minister referred to that when he prays he talks in plain English, just as he does when he preaches. Not being given to the "roundabout" way, he is never misunderstood. An honest, red-blooded servant of God is always a power,—and power has a habit of stirring things up. Mr. Book, as might be inferred, offered a prayer to which even the busy senators listened. All his life he had prayed and worked for prohibition, and, like every other man who has wept over the devastation caused by rum, and endured the sneers of rum sympathizers, he is now happy. Hence, in his prayer he thanked the Lord for the recent prohibition victory. In doing so, however, he stirred up a veritable hornets' nest. At the close of the prayer, Senator Hagerty objected to the thanksgiving for prohibition. He threatened to refrain from bowing his head and even talked of resigning his seat in the Senate, should another such prayer be offered. The report goes on to say that for an hour the Senate discussed the prayer, and that finally it was settled by a vote,—forty-four indorsing the prayer by voting to thank the minister for having offered it, and two, Senators Hagerty and Kolsem, opposing it. Incidentally, these senators showed "what manner of men they were."

Baby's Theology

A little four-year-old with curly head,
Spoke, as she nestled in her tiny bed,
"God, there is room for you!" she softly said.

I wonder—when the years are multiplied—
Will there be room for God still at her side?
If so, our Father will be satisfied!

Calot's Sunday-School Class Fellowship

BY ELIZABETH D. ROSENBERGER

"Guy Calot's in jail!"

Twenty-seven pair of eyes looked at John as he made this announcement. Most of these expressed surprise, a few expressed indignation and horror. Then the twenty-seven men began to talk.

"What's happened?" "What for?" "What are you talking about?" "Guy Calot, of all fellows!" Hurried explanations were made. Then Mr. Griffith, the teacher, asked John to tell the class all he knew. This was the Winners' Class in the Brethren church at Springfield.

"Guy was out with some other boys last night. They drove to Sidney in his car. About nine in the evening a deaf woman was trying to cross the street. Guy gave warning, and at the same instant she saw him. She happened to be of the flighty sort that dodges, then turns. She fell, striking her head on the curbing. They took her to a hospital where she died this morning. They arrested Guy and took him to jail. Now what's the thing to do?"

"We'll stand by him to a man," said one of the boys.

It was not necessary to take a vote; they were agreed to help each other at all times. So they let the matter rest. John was to see Guy in prison, assuring him that they would do anything they could to help the boy, for Guy was one of the younger members of that class. Just eighteen, a little inclined to be wild, but a boy of unusual promise. How they wished that the boy had been spared this! Guy was not usually reckless, only mischievous, loving fun, and eager for a good time. The accident was unfortunate, of course, but they all felt that Guy was not to blame.

Strange are the workings of the legal mind. Judge Swartz had been greatly annoyed by the motor accidents in Greenville. He wanted to do something to warn people of the serious consequences of their carelessness. Several deaths had been caused by half-drunken chauffeurs, yet no verdict had been pronounced against them. Now, with Guy as an offender from another town, the prosecutor made a strong case against the culprit. The town people, too, were terribly prejudiced. When it was found that there had been some drinking, when Guy admitted that he had taken two drinks, there was no escape for the boy. Judge Swartz sentenced him to six years' imprisonment.

His Sunday-school class kept close to him through the entire trial. They did not know how to change the minds of judge and jury. So Guy Calot began serving his sentence. It was extremely hard; he chafed against it. It was cruel and unjust, his fellow-townsmen declared. They went to see him sometimes, now and then, during the first year. Then one and another was surprised to find that he had not called on Guy for six months. Guy looked through his prison bars in vain.

The Winners' Bible Class held a meeting when Guy was condemned to six years' imprisonment. The president stated the object of the meeting: "Men, when that trial was going on we prayed that the Lord would set Guy Calot free, if it was his will. We prayed in faith, but our prayer was not answered. He was condemned to a cell. Now what can we do for our fellow-member?"

John was on his feet instantly. "We have much to do. If Guy Calot is to keep his reason and come out of this, able to do a day's work, it's up to us. We've got to make good on this job. If we fall down on it, we've no business to plan for any other Christian work. We've got to go over the top in this!"

"That's right! Let's show him that we're on the square," said another.

"We stand by the under dog every time," said a mill-hand, using the phraseology he was used to.

"One visit a week from some member of this class is the least we can do, as I see it," suggested the president.

Then and there the plan was laid, by which one member of that class saw Guy each week.

Almost three years had gone by and the class was faithful. John was especially instant in season and out of season. He was troubled about Guy's condition and frankly said so to any one who would listen. After a long conference with the pastor of their church and some men of influence in the town, another meeting of the Winners was called. John explained the situation: "It's like this: Guy must come out of that cell. He's lost hope and courage. It'll take all we can do to save him now. He's given up. We've got to hurry. Now I believe it's a long pull and a strong pull all together and we win once again. I have here a paper which every member of this class must sign first. Then the members of this church. After that I find I can get the names of most of the men of the town. Then I am hoping to get some political influence to back up the efforts of his Sunday-school class and church. It's now or never."

The men were all anxious to do more, if they only could. They did rouse such an interest in the case that those in authority found it the better part of wisdom to take up the subject of a pardon for Guy Calot. In a surprisingly short time many who had never thought much about the case, were convinced that Guy should be set free.

The pastor of the church that Guy had attended preached a sermon on the text, "In prison and ye visited me not." He spoke of those who are held captives: "There are all sorts of prisons. You look with envy upon a man who has all the money at his command to fashion his surroundings to his will. He calls men and they come, he signs his name to a contract, a palace rises out of the sand; fame and power are his. You say he is wonderfully fortunate. Perhaps he is. I hear the clanking chains which shackle him hand and foot. He can not escape, he is bound by chains of gold, chains of silver, but they are chains nevertheless.

"The man who lives for himself is a prisoner in a narrow, lonely cell. There are no windows through which he can look upon the outer world. The door swings only inward. There are few chances of escape for the prisoner. Jesus Christ comes to this man and says: 'If a man would save his life let him lose it for my sake.' That means freedom. Jesus alone can set him free from the fetters forged by selfishness.

"I thank God that the young men of my church have given their time and service toward freeing a prisoner, —one of our own members. We believe that we should serve by bearing the burden of our weaker brother. We ask your prayers for his freedom, as well as every effort you can make in his behalf."

John, the ever faithful friend, carried the pardon to Guy. It was pitiful to see how weak and unlike the Guy who left them three years before, he had become. His hands trembled when he took the paper. The tears dropped on the floor of his cell as he stood there, looking at John, without saying a word of thanks. He could not speak at first.

Today Guy is president of the Winners' Class. There is none more faithful in the church service than he, for he claims that he has experienced the real fellowship of the church in his suffering. "My life is too short to express to you men my gratitude for the deliverance you effected. You set me free from a prison cell," is the way he begins many a speech.

Youth and Young Manhood

BY JAS. A. SELL

A GREAT responsibility is placed upon youth, but very few appreciate it. The way of life to success is perilous and is begun without experience. If we had about fifty years' experience, with which to begin our career, we might stand a better chance for success, but life is often near its close, before we get the experience by which to direct our steps wisely.

Environment and heredity exert a mighty influence, and often create barriers beyond which many young people never rise. They go along with the crowd like dumb-driven cattle,—led to the stall and knocked in the head without ever thinking of rising above life's environments. The fault for this rests partly upon the parents and partly upon the customs of society, but young people, in a normal state of mind and health, have largely themselves to blame.

Their dearest interests in time and eternity are at stake, and they are, or should be, fully conscious of this fact. But too frequently, in spite of admonitions, warnings and entreaties from friends, they will spurn the right, and take the wrong course.

As they leave the innocence of childhood, they enter the open doors to all kinds of vice. Their religious instructions and restraints are set aside, and habits of appetite and lustful passions are freely indulged in.

The ancients had a legend that one of the smaller gods created the material universe and that a common angel peopled the earth with living creatures, but that all the numberless deities united to produce that most wonderful and most dangerous gift,—the youth of man. The idea was that any one of the gods could have created matured man, but that the beauty and possibility and the fateful charm of youth required their combined wisdom.

When, however, they had completed their labors, and saw what a hazardous thing they had made, they debated a thousand years whether they should confer this marvelous gift upon the human race. At last they decided to make the venture, and a deputation of angels was sent to earth, to endow humanity with the precious boon. When their errand was accomplished, and a company of young men and young women stood before them, the angels said: "Now you have youth. What are you going to do with it?"

The angels having accomplished their mission, ascended to the skies, leaving the young men and women to work out their own salvation, and to solve their own problems. The responsibility placed upon them taxes the strength of sages and angels. This message of the angels is echoing and reechoing through the corridors of time, and it will continue to ring as long as maidens love and young men aspire: "Now you have youth. What are you going to do with it?" Some are making good, others are not.

From the little we know of other ages, or other countries in our own age, the young people of our own country,—the United States of America,—enjoy superior advantages for successful endeavors in the fields of religion, literature and business, and, in short, in all things that tend to the elevation of our sinful race. To fail under the circumstances is nothing short of a disgrace.

The young people who now attend Sunday-school and pay attention to the lessons in the International Course, have a character to think about that ought to give them instruction and inspiration, to answer in their life the question, "What are you going to do with your youth?" Those who do not attend Sunday-school, are suffering a great loss. They miss help that they greatly need. For this they themselves are to blame.

The biography that has just been studied is that of Joseph. Under peculiar circumstances he became the wise counselor to the king and an associate on the throne in a by-gone age of Egypt.

A certain writer says of the story of his life, as narrated in the Old Book, that "it is told with a simplicity, truthfulness, and minuteness of detail that leaves scarcely anything to be added, while one is afraid to touch it, least he mar its beauty."

Joseph was the favorite son of a fond, doting father. This fact, added to the two dreams that he told, aroused in his brothers a murderous hatred. He dreamt of a future greatness. He was a dutiful boy in his home life. His father loved and trusted him, and confided important business to his care. While visiting his brothers in distant fields, in obedience to his father's orders, they said: "Let us kill him and see what will become of his dreams."

Not being fully united in this purpose, they cast him into a slimy pit and finally compromised by selling him to a band of traveling merchants. These took him away from his home and all that was dear to him, and exposed him to sale in a slave-market in a foreign country.

Here, for a time, though a slave, he found favor, but when urged to commit a nameless crime by a licentious woman, he refused. Thereupon he was cast into a dungeon, where he remained for two years. At length a ray of light dawned upon him.

Through a course of providential leadings he gained his freedom, and was soon promoted to a position where he became the counselor of the king, and admitted to power next to the royal throne. He held in his own hands the keys of well-filled granaries in time of famine. He now realized the fulfillment of his dreams.

But let us not forget what lay between his dreams and their fulfillment: The hatred of his brothers, the frowning pit where he kept company with lizards and toads, the cruel sale to foreigners, the journey from his home and father, his sale again into slavery, and his imprisonment in a dungeon for two years, with the terrible suspense of not knowing what the end might be.

All young people, in answering the question of the angels, in the ancient legend: "What are you going to do with your youth?" should, like Joseph, take to dreaming. Dream of future greatness. It would be better, however, not to go to sleep, to do the dreaming. Keep wide-awake,—the wider the better. Aim to be somebody and do something worth while! Set the standard high and press towards it! Have lofty ideals and never lose sight of them. Be thoughtful, kind, truthful, dutiful, honest and courteous!

Every life has its turning points, and they are especially numerous and important in young manhood and womanhood. A wise or a foolish choice at some of those points determines the destiny for all time. Those who seek the counsel of their father and mother, and other people who have had experience, and made a success of life, are taking a wise course.

At a time like the present, when employment is easily secured and wages exceptionally high, all extravagance in expenditure should be avoided and a bank account started and added to, monthly. To make the best of youth, to prepare for greatness in some of the activities of the world, the best education within reach should be secured.

A calling, trade or profession should be selected and followed with a zeal that knows no abatement. This is peculiarly an age of specialists. A few people can be, what may be called, many-sided, but the greatest number must specialize and stick to their job.

Dream of greatness, but don't forget the pluck and plodding that are required to carry you through the pits into which you may be cast by treacherous friends or open enemies.

Shun all bad habits and bad company. Experience and science teach us abundantly that the use of tobacco and intoxicating beverages has a bad effect upon the human system. Avoid them! Youth will therefore by be the gainer in cleanliness, health and brightness of intellect. It will save money enough, in course of time, to furnish one with a large library.

Build air castles! People who never build castles in the air, will never build city blocks on the ground. But we must not forget the hardships and trials that lie between the dreams and their fulfillment.

If you feel that you have wasted time and left opportunities pass, do not be discouraged. Others have had the same experience and began to dream, and reached a higher goal. So,

"Deem not the irrevocable past
As wholly lost or wholly vain,
If, rising on its wrecks, at last
To something nobler we attain."

Officers for 1919: President, Sister Mary Bowers; Superintendent, Sister Maggie Umhower; Assistant, Sister Ira Kagarise; Secretary, Sister Elizabeth Barnett; Assistant, Sister Golda Miller; Treasurer, Sister N. T. Stuckey; Financial Superintendent, Sister M. J. Weaver. Our Aid Society has been a great help to the church, both socially and spiritually.—Mrs. M. W. Sell, Roaring Spring, Pa., Jan. 20.

ROSSVILLE, IND.—Report of the Sisters' Aid Society for 1918: We held eighteen afternoon meetings, with an average attendance of eight. Our work consisted of piecing quilts and knotting comforts. Donations received, $4.90; offerings, $9.91; for work done, $3.70; balance from 1917, $48.29; total, $66.80. Paid out for material, $31.77; to the poor fund, $5; to Southern District of Indiana, $10; to a sister in Christian Aid, $10; to Mary Quinter Home, $20.40. We donated one comfort to Mexico Home, one comfort to a needy sister in China, one prayer-covering, one boy's waist, two sheets, two pillow-cases and a box to a mission in Mississippi, valued at $50. Last spring the members of the Church of the Brethren with three other denominations, organized a sewing circle to sew for the French Relief and we made 157 garments. We reorganized with Sister Elizabeth Hatcher, President; Sister Ella Hufford, Superintendent; the writer, Secretary; Sister Vernnie Metzger, Treasurer; Sisters Blanche Gochenour, Susan Hufford and Rosa Harper, Devotional Committee.—Lizzie Spurgeon, Rossville, Ind., Jan. 21.

UNION CITY, IND.—Report of the Country Ladies' Aid Society for 1918: We held twenty-five all-day meetings, with an average attendance of nine. We made prayer-coverings, sun-bonnets, aprons, comforts, quilts and various kinds of garments. Amount on hand, Jan. 1, 1918, $69.27; amount received during the year, $114.13; expended during the year, $25 for Armenian Relief; $10 for Mary Quinter; $10 Thanksgiving offering; $10 for the Armenian and Syrian Relief; for material, $46.44; balance, $90.96. We reorganized with the following officers: Amanda Noffsinger, President; Sarah Arnold and Rebecca Hay, Superintendents; the writer, Secretary-Treasurer.—Mrs. Pearl McFarland, Union City, Ind., Jan. 20.

UPPER DUBLIN, PA.—Report of the Aid Society for 1918: We held twelve half-day meetings, with an average attendance of fourteen. We made 31 quilts, 40 aprons, 15 dust-caps, 2 sunpos, 2 dresses and 3 skirts, 2 bonnets and 2 pair bloomers. We sold eight quilts and donated one. Dues for the year amounted to $23.50; donations to Sister Brubaker, $5; to Sister Ella Hufford, $10; thanksgiving offering; $10 for the Armenian and Syrian Relief; for flowers; material, $26.96; missions, $30; flowers, $5; receipts for the year, $104.10; balance, $42.14. The old officers were all reelected: Sister E. S. Brooks, President; Sister Ella Shoemaker, Secretary; the writer, Treasurer.—Anna M. Brunner, North Wales, Pa., Jan. 20.

WATERLOO, IOWA.—Report of the Sisters' Aid Society of the City church for 1918: Number of members held, 51; average attendance, 13. Cash received, $107.99; expenditures, $111.66. Eight quilts were made, for which we received $73.22; tied 3 comforts, $3; also tied 12 for Social Welfare League. Paid $50 to Quinter Memorial Fund; $30 for support of native worker; clothing sent to Minneapolis, $8.94; paid grocery bill, $16; donated "Gospel Messenger," $7; Red Cross, $11.85; Belgian Fund, $3.85; flowers, $1. In June we united with the Red Cross auxiliary of the church and worked every Thursday. Number of garments made, 183; waterproof bags, 100; property bags donated, 25; kits, 20; sheets, 5; pillow-cases, 22 pair; 22 pair bed-socks; 318 dust-cloths, napkins, tray-cloths and handkerchiefs. Knitting done at home: 2 pair wristlets, 1 helmet, 11 sweaters, 116 pair socks. Officers elected for 1919: President, Sister Hershberger; Vice-President, the writer; Secretary, Sister Shanks; Assistant, Sister French; Treasurer, Sister Rashwonk. We also adopted an Armenian orphan for one year.—Mrs. W. M. Lentz, Waterloo, Iowa, Jan. 20.

WESTMINSTER, MD.—Report of Sisters' Aid Society: We held thirty regular meetings, with an average attendance of eight.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

CALIFORNIA

Fresno.—Owing to the severity of the influenza, few services have been held this winter. Jan. 19 the ban was lifted, so as to allow morning services. This was the first service of the year and an offering of $62 was taken for Armenian-Syrian Relief. Afterward the Sunday-school Board met and appointed teachers for the Junior Sunday-school. It is planned to have the adult classes elect their teachers Jan. 26, and to have the new officers take their places Feb. 2.—Mrs. O. N. Whitlow, Fresno, Jan. 22.

CANADA

Bow Valley.—Jan. 19 Eld. Melvin Rensberger preached to a well-filled house. We certainly were made to rejoice when a brother and his wife accepted Christ. In the afternoon baptism was administered to them. In the evening Bro. N. N. Garst gave us a good sermon on the subject of "Faith."—Maude E. Pohst, Bow Valley, Alta., Can., Jan. 25.

Redcliff.—The committee, appointed to secure a place in which to hold our series of meetings, has secured the Baptist church. The Baptist people do not have services at the present time, having no resident minister. We began our meetings Jan. 19 with a good attendance. The church was well filled last night with attentive listeners. The Sunday-school has nearly reached the one hundred mark, for which we thank God and take courage.—Catherine Hollinger, Redcliff, Alta., Can., Jan. 20.

COLORADO

McClave church met in quarterly council Jan. 17. Owing to the sickness of our elder, the writer presided. Officers for the year were elected. Very little change was made, with the exception that Bro. L. H. Cline, who has served as church clerk for sixteen years in succession, asked to be relieved. Bro. Paul Cline was chosen to serve in that capacity. Considerable regard is being paid to a pastor gave their report. Their findings were considered, and another committee chosen to investigate farther. The influenza epidemic has broken out again and claimed one of our faithful sisters as a victim. We have a very interesting class with good interest.—W. T. Luckett, McClave, Colo., Jan. 29.

Wiley church was closed for twelve weeks on account of influenza. While the epidemic has been severe, we have lost none of our members. The attendance at Sunday-school and church has been good, considering conditions. Wiley church has been greatly blessed. In the four years that Bro. Funk has been pastor, the church has increased 150 per cent. One came out on the Lord's side last night. Jan. 19 an offering of $28 was taken for Armenian Relief. In appreciation of his help during the epidemic, our pastor was presented with a fur overcoat and cap. The work was heavy on him, as he was the only minister in the town.—Anna B. Goltman, Wiley, Colo., Jan. 28.

FLORIDA

Schring.—We are getting ready for our Bible Institute, which is to begin Feb. 10, conducted by Bro. A. C. Wieand. Sister Wieand and the children are already here. Last Sunday we appointed a committee, with Bro. J. B. Kendall, foreman, to arrange for the Institute. At this time we have more members here than during any previous winter. The chapel is nearly filled, and we hear of still more coming. Bro. P. S. Miller preached for us last week, and will take an active part in our services. We can not name them all, but among the officials, at this time, there are six deacons and five preachers. The weather for the winter has remained fine, with only one or two very light frosts, so far. The citrus fruit is in splendid condition.—J. H. Moore, Schring, Fla., Jan. 21.

Seneca.—We have great reason to be thankful to our Heavenly Father for his care over us during the epidemic. We have not had a single case of influenza in our community to date. We had no meetings for three weeks, but now have regular appointments. Bro. Felthouse was with us Jan. 19, preaching both morning and evening. Sister Clair, of Pennsylvania, and Brother and Sister Katherman, of Kansas, are with us again. We are glad for their help, if it is only for the winter.—Ira W. Miller, Eustis, Fla., Jan. 20.

IDAHO

Bowmont church met in council Jan. 17, with Bro. J. H. Graybill presiding. Two letters were granted and eleven received. Church officers were elected for the year: Bro. A. L. Boyd, elder; Bro. S. L. Gross, clerk; Bro. A. E. Riddlesharger, Sunday-school superintendent; Sister Stella Brockus, president of the Christian Workers' Meeting. We were under quarantine for some time, but the Bowmont church has always remained open for rejoice. None of our number have been taken so far. Two elders have come to help us carry on the work here,—Bro. A. L. Boyd, of Oklahoma, and Bro. N. J. Wampler, of Fruitland, Idaho. Bro. J. H. Graybill, of Nampa, gave us a farewell talk. He expressed himself as feeling like a father toward this church, since he has known it since the time of its organization. In twelve years he has seen this country change from an almost barren waste to a land of plenty. A beautiful valley of prosperous farm homes, many of which belong to Brethren families. However, we are glad that Bro. Graybill is still in an adjoining congregation, so that he can visit us occasionally.—Nora E. Zimmerman, Bowmont, Idaho, Jan. 24.

Clearwater.—After sixteen weeks' vacation on account of influenza, we met in council Jan. 25, to reorganize for the year. Brethren J. E. Lehman and Earl Harp are Sunday-school superintendents. It was thought best not to have any night services during this quarter, but we are glad to have Sunday-school and preaching services each Sunday. Clearwater church has been blessed so far, as none has been taken.—Mrs. Mollie Harbacher, Lenore, Idaho, Jan. 27.

INDIANA

Camp Creek.—We were glad to have with us, Jan. 26, Bro. Moy Gwong, of Manchester College. He gave two stirring addresses which were enjoyed by all. His theme was, "Consecration to Jesus Christ." He presented China's need from the view-point of his people. Our series of meetings will begin Feb. 16, with Bro. Wm. Overholtzer, of Warsaw, Ind., as evangelist.—A Mission Study Class was recently organized, with Owen Harley as teacher.—Laura Harley, Etna Green, Ind., Jan. 27.

Laporte church met in special council at Lakeview Mission, Jan. 25. Eld. C. Metzler and Bro. D. R. Yoder, of the Mission Board, were present. Bro. Metzler acted as moderator. We decided to engage Eld. J. H. Fike, of Middlebury, Ind., to hold a series of meetings at the Mission in Laporte next June. Three have been received recently by letter. Jan. 26 Sister Alice Lahman, of Chicago, gave a talk in the interest of Bethany Bible School. Afterward we listened to a sermon by our pastor, Bro. J. C. Shull. We have seven large mission stations this week in the country, and also in Laporte.—Rachel C. Merchant, Laporte, Ind., Jan. 27.

Pina Creek.—Jan. 18 we were pleased to have with us Sister Eva Trostle, of Chicago. A Mothers' Meeting was held with about seventy in attendance. On Sunday morning Sister Trostle gave a splendid talk on "Christian Attire." In the afternoon she gave a talk to the girls. Instead of having Christian Workers' Meeting, the entire time was given to Sister Trostle. She told of the mission work in Chicago. Her subject for the evening service was: "How to Be Truly Happy." Plain facts were given, which were much appreciated.—M. S. Morris, North Liberty, Ind., Jan. 27.

Roann.—The work at this place has been much hindered during the last three months. We have been permitted to meet only twice in Sunday-school session from Sept. 29 till Jan. 12, because of the epidemic. However, we feel very thankful that we have as yet lost no members. We are now resuming our work with new zeal and interest. Since our last report nine have been received and granted. We met in council Jan. 18, with Eld. J. D. Rife acting as moderator. Officers for the coming six months were elected, with Bro. Ray Figert, Sunday-school superintendent and Bro. C. C. Miller, treasurer and Christian Workers' secretary. Jan. 19 services were resumed and assisted. Our collection for Armenian and Syrian Relief was nearly $50.—Mrs. Pearl McFarland, Union City, Ind., Jan. 20.

West Manchester.—Within the last two weeks our church has been made to rejoice to see two of our faithful Sunday-school attendants,—a young man and a young woman,—received into the church through confession and baptism. Both made application at our regular council meeting, Bro. Ira Brumbaugh, Liberty, Ohio, who is expecting to take up pastoral work at Summerfield, Kans., preached for us both forenoon and evening. Bro. Samuel Boyer, one of our faithful deacons, is now in Chicago, having treatment, expecting, soon, to undergo an operation for different ailments. May we remember him in prayer!—Calvin F. Eller, North Manchester, Ind., Jan. 26.

IOWA

Mt. Etna church met in council Dec. 29, Eld. S. L. Cover presiding. We elected officers for 1919. Bro. Cover was chosen elder; Bro. Simon Arnold, "Messenger" agent; the writer, corresponding secretary; Sister Lizzie Angus, church clerk; Bro. Anda Johnston was elected Sunday-school superintendent for the year; Bro. Harry Rogers, Christian Workers' president. Since our last report one has been reclaimed. Although the influenza has been raging, we have been able to continue our regular services most of the time, and while the crowds are much smaller than usual, all feel very thankful to meet in the Lord's house.—Mrs. S. L. Cover, Mt. Etna, Iowa, Jan. 26.

Osceola church met in council Dec. 28. Eld. Leslie Cover not being present, Bro. Ira Brown took charge. Bro. Chas. Stedman and Sister Clara Mason are our Sunday-school superintendents. We have not met for worship much this winter, on account of the influenza. We were glad to have Bro. Lee Fisher with us over Sunday. He preached for us and had charge of the communion service. It seemed good to see him in the pulpit in his old accustomed place.—Jennie Alexander, Osceola, Iowa, Jan. 25.

KANSAS

Baldwin.—After a vacation of five weeks, due to the influenza quarantine, we were permitted to begin our series of meetings Dec. 1, with Bro. W. A. Kinzie, of Nickerson, Kans., as evangelist. Sister Mattie Hoffman had charge of the song service, which every one enjoyed. The sermons were very instructive and inspiring. We had large and appreciative audiences each night. Owing to bad weather and sickness, our meetings closed sooner than we expected. Three accepted Christ and were baptized. We were to hold our love feast at the close of the meetings but it has been postponed.—Etta Markley, Baldwin, Kans., Jan. 20.

Burr Oak church enjoyed a spiritual feast on Sunday, Jan. 11. Our pastor, Bro. G. O. Stutsman, conducted installation services for the newly-elected officers and preached an inspiring sermon. In the afternoon, owing to baptismal services, church services during the day were as usual.—Carrie E. Wagoner, Burr Oak, Kans., Jan. 25.

Newton city church met in council Jan. 5, with Bro. M. J. Mishler presiding. The following officers were reelected: Bro. M. J. Mishler, elder; Bro. Chas. Sherfy, treasurer; Sister Mary Mishler, church correspondent; Sister Mary Mishler, president Christian Workers' Society; Sister Lena Ronine, Sunday-school superintendent. A Home Department and Cradle Roll were added to our Sunday-school, with Sister Naomi Hoyt, superintendent for the former, and the writer, superintendent for the latter. Our series of meetings will be held when suitable arrangements can be made. Attendance and interest at our various services are increasing, and we are very grateful for the privilege of regular services. We are hopeful that much good may be accomplished this year.—Mrs. Lizzie A. Lehman, Newton, Kans., Jan. 24.

LOUISIANA

Roanoke church met in council Jan. 4, with Bro. J. A. Miller presiding. Election of officers resulted as follows: Miller, elder; E. Flenning, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. J. B. Firestone, Christian Workers' president; Bro. Jacob Longanecker, "Messenger" agent. Bro. J. H. B. Williams spent a short time here, giving us much encouragement and consideration. How we do appreciate the visits of our brethren! Our Thanksgiving service was an expression of our thanks for what God has done for us. Our offering for World-wide Missions at Christmas we used the "White Gift" service, and were very much pleased with the results, as it gave our children a broader vision of service. The gifts amounted to $84.20, which was sent to the Armenian-Syrian Relief. Our series of meetings to be held by Bro. S. H. Durst, had to be postponed. Brethren passing through the South are very cordially invited to stop with us at any time.—Mrs. Sue M. Bowers, Roanoke, La., Jan. 24.

MICHIGAN

Grand Rapids.—We are in the midst of a revival meeting, conducted by our elder, Bro. C. L. Wilkins. He is earnestly expounding the Word of God, ably assisted by Sister Eva Burke, of North Liberty, Ind., who is directing the song service. At our members' meeting, held in December, the officers for the year were elected. Sister Blanche Robinson was reelected church clerk; the writer, church correspondent; Ruth Miller, president of the Christian Workers' Society. The Sisters' Aid Society is doing good work, much interest being manifested. The attendance at our Sunday-school has materially decreased, during the last few months, on account of sickness and other causes.—Mrs. M. M. Chambers, Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan. 23.

Woodland Village.—We are enjoying church services again after our second vacation because of influenza. We are indeed happy and thankful for God's care and protection through this period. Jan. 18 we had a pleasant business meeting. Church officers were elected as follows: Elder, G. F. Culler; clerk, Esther Morrison; trustee, Wm. Florry; "Messenger" agent, J. W. Smith. Our revival meetings, which were to have been held by Bro. G. L. Wine in November, have again been postponed. Our Sunday-school reorganized recently, with Bro. Elden Farrell superintendent. We have begun an interesting Mission Study Class under the direction of our pastor. Two offerings for missions and relief work have been taken since Thanksgiving.—Orpha Lehman, Woodland, Mich., Jan. 24.

MISSOURI

Shelby County.—We held our council Jan. 18. All officers were elected for the ensuing year. Our Sunday-school was organized with a full corps of teachers, with Bro. Ira Hall as superintendent. Sister Frank Folger is president of our Christian Workers' Society; Sister Nettie Keller, church clerk; the writer, "Messenger" correspondent. We decided to have a series of meetings in the spring, if suitable arrangements can be made, but no date was set. Our Sunday-school took up a collection of $10.82 for Armenian-Syrian Relief. Our pastor gave us a talk, urging us to put our shoulders to the wheel and make plans for some practical work this year. We pray that something may be done that will count for God in this community. We were very fortunate in not losing any of our number during the epidemic, and thank the Lord for his blessings.—Merle Stouder, Leonard, Mo., Jan. 24.

NEBRASKA

Afton church met in council Jan. 4. Officers for the church and Sunday-school were chosen as follows: J. H. Snell, elder; Sister Edna Snell, Sunday-school superintendent; the writer, correspondent. Services have been irregular during part of the winter, on account of sickness. During the month the weather has been ideal, but in spite of bad roads the attendance and interest are increasing. Christian Workers' Meetings are again in progress, with good interest. We are making an effort to organize a primary department with the graded lessons. We are anxious to see the Lord's work prosper here.—Constance Snell, Cambridge, Nebr., Jan. 30.

Sugar Lake church met in council Jan. 1, with Eld. P. T. Grabill presiding. Officers for the year were elected: Bro. Ira Kindig, Christian Workers' president. A call was extended to the District Board, to hold the postponed District Meeting in this church during the latter part of April. Bro. C. B. Smith, evangelist, and W. H. Halderman, singer, both of Mexrill, Kans., have been secured to hold a series of meetings to begin April 13, and to continue through the District Meeting, in case the call is accepted.—Mrs. Ira M. Kindig, Holmesville, Nebr., Jan. 27.

NORTH CAROLINA

Relief.—Bro. Virgil C. Flinchell, of Elgin, Ill., came to the Brumметts Creek church Jan. 20, remaining three days. He gave seven very interesting leasons and lectures on Sunday-school work. We have added to our Sunday-school the cradle roll, teacher-training class, home department, missionary department and temperance department, which we know will be of great help. Our collection for the Sunday-school work was $13.86.—M. E. Bradshaw, Relief, N. C., Jan. 23.

NORTH DAKOTA

Ellison church met in council Dec. 26. Five letters were received and five granted. Bro. J. C. Forney was chosen elder for the coming year; Bro. Alfred Berry, clerk and Sunday-school superintendent. We are expecting Bro. Jacob Jarboe to hold a series of meetings for us during the coming summer. In response to the call from the Sunday-school Board our school contributed $80.30 for Armenian-Syrian Relief. We are glad to have with us, Jan. 19, Eld. A. M. Sharp and wife, of Egeland, who are on the previous Sunday, Eld. J. D. Kesler, of Zion, N. Dak. Our work is moving along nicely since the epidemic.—Alice E. Stevens, Rock Lake, N. Dak., Jan. 26.

OHIO

Bear Creek.—Our Sunday-school closed the year 1918 with a splendid report. We were especially interested in helping to make Ohio dry. Bear school headed the list in Montgomery County, contributing over $400 to the Dry Federation and voting for them. Today we rendered a short program in behalf of the Armenian-Syrian Relief, and an offering was taken. In the last month we gave $100 for that fund. We have also given $100 for Africa. The offerings taken on the second Sunday of each month for the next five months will be given for the same purpose. We are using the envelope system in raising funds and it is working nicely.—Mrs. Maudie W. Filbrun, Dayton, Ohio, Jan. 26.

Danville.—We have been having our experience with the influenza. We lost two of our members on account of it. Our series of meetings only lasted a week when we were compelled to discontinued for several Sundays. However, we made a house-to-house canvass for our Thanksgiving and holiday offerings, which amounted to $432 for Home Mission work and $98.50 for World-wide Missions. Our Sunday-school is now reorganized, with Jay Workman and Howard Nyhart, superintendents. Church services are moving along as usual.—C. J. Workman, Buckeye City, Ohio, Jan. 23.

Lynchburg.—We would be glad to correspond with any members of the church who would care to change locations and at the same time help to build up the White Oak church, situated about eleven miles southwest of the county-seat of Highland County, and three miles south of the C. H. and D. Railroad. Land can be bought for $50 to $100 per acre. Address the writer.—Eld. R. C. Davidson, Lynchburg, Ohio, Jan. 27.

Notice.—To Elders and Pastors of Southern Ohio: At the District Meeting, held at Eld. H. McKimie's last year, privilege was granted the Bradford church to solicit funds in the District for a churchhouse in Bradford, which is so much needed. Bro. John R. Snyder, of Bellefontaine, Ohio, has been secured to assist in this work and will begin about Feb. 1 to call on the various churches. Any assistance given to increase the Lord's work at this place will be greatly appreciated.—J. E. Overholser, Secretary Finance Committee, Bradford, Ohio, Jan. 24.

Oakland.—For several Sundays we were not permitted to have services on account of influenza, but the work is again moving along nicely. We met in council Jan. 11, with Eld. Chas. Flory presiding. Bro. Flory was ordained as elder for another year. The church secured Bro. Hugh Miller as pastor until May 1, 1920. Sixteen letters were granted. Officers for the year were elected, with Brethren A. E. Alley and Walter Martin, Sunday-school superintendents; the writer, correspondent. We are expecting to have a "sing" in the near future, under the leadership of our chorister, Bro. Cassel. We contemplate holding a series of meetings in the spring.—Mrs. R. T. Waggoner, Bradford, Ohio, Jan. 26.

PENNSYLVANIA

Carlisle.—In the early part of December our congregation met in a special session, to elect Sunday-school officers for the coming year, the writer being elected as superintendent. The officers took up their duties at the beginning of the new year. Jan. 20 the church met in council, which had been postponed from a date earlier in the month. The regular church election was held, and reports were made by the officers. Our elder, Bro. J. A. Long, of

The attendance at Sunday-school and church has been good, considering conditions. Wiley church has been greatly blessed. In the four years that Bro. Funk has been pastor, the church has increased 150 per cent. We came out on the Lord's side last night, Jan. 19 an offering of $302 was taken for Armenian Relief. In appreciation of his help during the epidemic, our pastor was presented with a fur overcoat and cap. The work was heavy on him, as he was the only minister in the town.—Aona B. Goltman, Wiley, Colo., Jan. 28.

FLORIDA

Schring.—We are getting ready for our Bible Institute, which is to begin Feb. 10, conducted by Bro. A. C. Wieand. Sister Wieand and the children are already here. Brethren were appointed a committee, with Bro. J. B. Kendall, foreman, to arrange for the Institute. At this time we have more members here than during any previous winter. The chapel is nearly filled, and we hear of still more coming. Bro. and Mrs. P. S. Miller and wife are here and will take an active part in our services. We can not name them all, but among the officials, at this time, there are six deacons and five preachers. The weather for the winter has remained fine, with only one or two very light frosts, so far. The citrus fruit is in splendid condition.—J. H. Moore, Schring, Fla., Jan. 21.

Seneca.—We have great reason to be thankful to our Heavenly Father for his care over us during the epidemic. We have not had a single case of influenza in our community to date. We had no meetings for three weeks, but now have regular appointments. Bro. Pethtour was with us Jan. 19, preaching both morning and evening. Sister Clair, of Pennsylvania, and Brother and Sister Eatherman, of Kansas, are with us again. We are glad for their help, if it is only for the winter.—Ira W. Miller, Eustis, Fla., Jan. 20.

IDAHO

Bowmont church met in council Jan. 17, with Bro. J. H. Graybill presiding. Two letters were granted and eleven received. Church officers were elected for one year: Bro. A. L. Boyd, elder; Bro. S. B. Gross, clerk; Bro. A. E. Riddlesbarger, Sunday-school superintendent; Sister Stella Brockus, president of the Christian Workers' Meeting. We were under quarantine for some time, but the Bowmont church has abundant reason to rejoice. None of our number have been taken so far. Two elders have come to help us carry on the work here,—Bro. L. Boyd, of Oklahoma, and Bro. D. J. Wampler, of Fruitland, Idaho. Bro. J. H. Graybill, of Nampa, gave us a farewell talk. He expressed himself as feeling like a father toward this church, since he has known it since the time of its organization, and has seen it grow from a small one to change from an almost solid stretch of sagebrush into a beautiful valley of prosperous farm homes, many of which belong to Brethren (saints). However, we are glad that Bro. Graybill is still in an adjoining congregation, so that he can visit us occasionally.—Nora E. Zimmerman, Bowmont, Idaho, Jan. 24.

Clearwater.—After sixteen weeks' vacation on account of influenza, we met in council Jan. 25, to reorganize for the year. Brethren J. S. Lehman and Earl Harp are Sunday-school superintendents. It was thought best not to have any night services during this quarter, but we are glad to have Sunday-school and preaching services each Sunday. Clearwater church has been blessed so far, as none has been taken.—Mrs. Mollie Harlacher, Lenore, Idaho, Jan. 27.

INDIANA

Camp Creek.—We were glad to have with us, Jan. 26, Bro. Moy Gwong, of Manchester College. He gave two stirring addresses which were enjoyed by all. His theme was, "Consecration to Jesus Christ." He presented China's need from the view-point of his people. Our series of meetings will begin Feb. 16, with Bro. Wm. Overholtzer, of Warsaw, Ind., as evangelist. A Mission Study Class was recently organized, with Owen Harley as teacher.—Laura Harley, Rina Green, Ind., Jan. 27.

Laporte church met in special council at Lakeview Mission, Jan. 25. Eld. C. Metzler and Bro. D. R. Yoder, of the Mission Board, were present. Bro. Metzler acted as moderator. We decided to engage Eld. J. H. Fike, of Middlebury, Ind., to hold a series of meetings at the Mission in Laporte next June. Reports have been received recently by letter. Jan. 26 Sister Alice Lahmao, of Chicago, gave a talk to the interest of Bethany Bible School. Afterward we listened to a testimony our pastor, Bro. Jesse Bright. We have cottage prayer meetings each week in the country, and also in Laporte.—Rachel C. Merchant, Laporte, Ind., Jan. 27.

Pine Creek.—Jan. 18 we were pleased to have with us Sister Eva Trostle, of Chicago. A Mothers' Meeting was held with about seventy in attendance. Sister Trostle gave us a splendid talk on "Christian Attire." In the afternoon she gave a talk to the girls. Instead of having Christian Workers' Meeting, the entire time was given to Sister Trostle. She told of the mission work in Chicago. Her subject for the evening service was: "How to Be Truly Happy." Plain hints were given, which were much appreciated.—M. S. Morris, North Liberty, Ind., Jan. 27.

Roann.—The work at this place has been much hindered during the last few months. We have had services only twice in Sunday-school session from Sept. 29 till Jan. 12, because of the epidemic. However, we feel very thankful that we have as yet lost no members. We are now resuming our work with new zeal and interest, since our last request to the health board has been granted. We met in council Jan. 18, with Eld. J. D. Rife acting as moderator. Officers for the coming six months were elected, with Bro. Roy Pigert, Sunday-school superintendent and Bro. C. C. Miller, president of Christian Workers' Meeting. Jan. 26 we took an offering of $66 for Armenian-Syrian Relief.—Sarah C. Seltner, Roann, Ind., Jan. 30.

Union City.—We met in council Jan. 18. Four letters were granted. Officers for church and Sunday-school were elected as follows: Bro. B. F. Sharp, elder for three years; Bro. E. M. School, trustee; Bro. Earl McFarland, clerk; Bro. Geo. Netzley, "Messenger" agent; the writer, correspondent; Bro. Chas. Stockdale, Sunday-school superintendent. Brethren David Minnich and Jacob Olwin were present and assisted. Our collection for Armenian and Syrian Relief was nearly $50.—Mrs. Pearl McFarland, Union City, Ind., Jan. 20.

West Manchester.—Within the last two weeks our church has been made to rejoice to see two of our faithful Sunday-school attendants,—a young man and a young woman,—received into the church through confession and baptism. Both made application at our regular services. Last Sunday Bro. Ira Frantz, of Sidney, Ohio, who is expecting to take up pastoral work at Summerfield, Kans., preached for us both forenoon and evening. Bro. Samuel Boyer, one of our members, left now to Chicago for taking treatment, expecting, soon, to undergo an operation for different ailments. May we remember him in prayer!—Calvin F. Eller, North Manchester, Ind., Jan. 26.

IOWA

Mt. Etna church met in council Dec. 29, Eld. S. L. Cover presiding. We elected officers for 1919. Bro. Cover was chosen elder; Bro. Simon Arnold, "Messenger" agent; the writer, correspondent; Sister Lizzie Johnston, church clerk; Bro. Ande Johnston was reelected Sunday-school superintendent for six months; Bro. Harry Rogers, Christian Workers' president. Since our last report one has been reclaimed. Although the influenza has been raging, we have been able to continue our regular services most of the time, and while the crowds are much smaller than usual, all feel very thankful to meet in the Lord's house.—Mrs. S. L. Cover, Mt. Etna, Iowa, Jan. 25.

Osceola church met in council Dec. 28. Eld. Leslie Cover not being present, Bro. Chas. Colyn took charge. Bro. Chas. Steeman and Sister Clara Mason are our Sunday-school superintendents. We have not met for worship much this winter, on account of the influenza. We were glad to have Eld. Leslie Cover with us over Sunday. He preached for us and had charge of the morning service. It seemed good to see him in the pulpit in his old accustomed place.—Jennie Alexander, Osceola, Iowa, Jan. 25.

KANSAS

Baldwin.—After a vacation of five weeks, due to the influenza quarantine, we were permitted to begin our series of meetings Dec. 1, with Bro. W. A. Hutchison, of Nickerson, Kans., as evangelist. Sister Nora Shively, of Plymouth, Ind., took charge of the song service, which every one enjoyed. The sermons were very instructive and inspiring. We had large and appreciative audiences each night. On account of bad weather and sickness, our meetings closed sooner than we expected. Three accepted Christ and were baptized. We were to hold our love feast at the close of the meetings but it has been postponed.—Etta Markley, Baldwin, Kans., Jan. 29.

Burr Oak church enjoyed a spiritual feast on Sunday, Jan. 11. Our pastor, Bro. G. O. Stutsman, conducted installation services for the newly-elected officers and preached an inspiring sermon. In the afternoon we received by baptism, three candidates during the day were as usual,—Carrie E. Wagoner, Burr Oak, Kans., Jan. 25.

Newton city church met in council Jan. 5, with Bro. M. J. Mishler presiding. The following officers were reelected: Bro. M. J. Mishler, elder; Bro. John Hoffer, "Messenger" agent; the writer, correspondent; Sister Mary Mishler, president Christian Workers' Society; Sister Lena Romine, Sunday-school superintendent. A Home Department and Cradle Roll were added to our Sunday-school, with Sister Naomi Hupp, superintendent for the former, and the writer, superintendent for the latter. Our series of meetings will be held when suitable arrangements can be made. Attendance and interest at our services are increasing, and we are especially grateful for the privilege of regular services. We are hopeful that much good may be accomplished this year.—Mrs. Lizzie A. Lehman, Newton, Kans., Jan. 24.

LOUISIANA

Roanoke church met in council Jan. 4, with Bro. J. A. Miller presiding. Election of officers resulted: Bro. Miller, elder; Bro. E. E. Henning, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. J. B. Firestone, Christian Workers' president; Bro. Jacob Longnecker, "Messenger" agent. Eld. J. H. Moore, Schring, Fla., came here, and gave us much encouragement and inspiration. How we do appreciate the visits of our brethren! Our Thanksgiving service was an expression of our thanks for what the Lord has done for us. Our offering for World-wide Missions was $89.15. Christmas we used the "White Gift" service, and were very much pleased with the results, as it gave our children a broader vision of service. The gifts amounted to $84.26, which went to the Armenian-Syrian Relief. Our series of meetings, to be held by Bro. S. H. Garst, had to be postponed. Brethren passing through the South are very cordially invited to stop with us at any time.—Mrs. Sue M. Bowers, Roanoke, La., Jan. 24.

MICHIGAN

Grand Rapids.—We are in the midst of a revival meeting, conducted by our elder, Bro. C. L. Wilkins. He is earnestly expounding the Word of God, ably assisted by Sister Iva Burke, of North Liberty, Ind., who is directing the song service. At our members' meeting, held in December, the officers for the year were elected. Sister Blanche Robinson was reelected church clerk; the writer, church correspondent; Ruth Miller, president of the Christian Workers' Society. The Sisters' Aid Society is doing good work, much interest being manifested. The attendance at our Sunday-school has materially decreased, during the last few months, on account of sickness and other causes.—Mrs. M. M. Chambers, Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan. 23.

Woodland Village.—We are enjoying church services again after our second vacation because of influenza. We are indeed happy and thankful for God's care and protection through this period. Jan. 18 we had a pleasant business meeting. Church officers were elected as follows: Elder, G. F. Culler; clerk, Esther Morrison; trustee, Wm. Flory; "Messenger" agent, J. W. Smith. Our revival meetings, which were to have been held by Bro. G. L. Wise in November, have again been postponed. Our Sunday-school reorganized recently, with Bro. Eldon Farrell superintendent. We have begun an interesting Mission Study Class under the direction of our pastor. Two offerings for missions and relief work have been taken since Thanksgiving.—Orpha Lehman, Woodland, Mich., Jan. 24.

MISSOURI

Shelby County.—We held our council Jan. 18. All officers were elected for the ensuing year. Our Sunday-school was organized with a full corps of teachers, with the writer as superintendent. Sister Frank Folger is president of our Christian Workers' Society; Sister Nettie Keller, church clerk; the writer, "Messenger" correspondent. We decided to have a series of meetings in the spring, if suitable arrangements can be made, but no date was set. Our Sunday-school took up a collection of $10.82 for Armenian-Syrian Relief. Our pastor gave us a talk, urging us to put our shoulders to the wheel and make plans to do some practical work this year. We pray that something may be done that will count for God in this community. We were very fortunate in not losing any of our number during the epidemic, and thank the Lord for his blessings.—Merle Stouder, Leonard, Mo., Jan. 24.

NEBRASKA

Afton church met in council Jan. 4. Officers for the church and Sunday-school were chosen as follows: J. H. Snell, elder; Sister Edna Corell, Sunday-school superintendent; the writer, correspondent. Services have been irregular during part of the winter, on account of sickness. During the month the weather has been ideal, but in spite of bad roads the attendance and interest are increasing. Christian Workers' Meeting are again in progress, with good interest. We are making an effort to organize a primary department with the graded lessons. We are anxious to see the Lord's work prosper here.—Constance Snell, Cambridge, Nebr., Jan. 30.

Silver Lake church met in council Jan. 4, with Eld. P. W. Grahill presiding. Officers for the year were elected, with Bro. Michael Wine, elder; Bro. Christian Hargelroad, Sunday-school superintendent and "Messenger" agent. Five letters were received. We decided to have revival meetings the last of April or the first of May.—Lee R. Grahill, Roseland, Nebr., Jan. 25.

South Beatrice.—On account of the influenza epidemic and weather conditions, we did not hold our yearly council until Jan. 11. Bro. James Gish was elected elder; Bro. Ira Kindig, assistant; Bro. Arthur Miller, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Ira Kindig, Christian Workers' president. A call was extended to the District Board, to hold the postponed District Meeting in this church during the latter part of April. Eld. C. B. Smith, evangelist, and W. H. Halderman, singer, both of Morrill, Kans., have been secured to hold a series of meetings to begin April 13, and to continue through the District Meeting, in case the call is accepted.—Mrs. Ira M. Kiodig, Holmesville, Nebr., Jan. 27.

NORTH CAROLINA

Relief.—Bro. Virgil C. Finnell, of Elgio, Ill., came to the Brumметts Creek church Jan. 20, remaining three days. He gave seven very interesting lessons and lectures on Sunday-school work. We have called to our Sunday-school a teacher-training class, home department, missioonary department and temperance department, which we know will be of great help. Our collection for the Sunday-school work was $12.86.—M. E. Bradshaw, Relief, N. C., Jan. 23.

NORTH DAKOTA

Ellison church met in council Dec. 26. Five letters were received and five granted. Bro. J. C. Forney was chosen elder for the coming year; Bro. Alfred Flory, clerk and Sunday-school superintendent. We are expecting Bro. Jarboe to hold a series of meetings for us during the coming summer. In response to the call from the Sunday-school Board our school contributed $80.30 for Armenian-Syrian Relief. We feel that we have with us, Jan. 19, Eld. A. M. Sharp and wife, of Egeland, and on the previous Sunday, Eld. J. D. Kesler, of Zion, N. Dak. Our work is moving along nicely since the epidemic.—Alice E. Stevens, Rock Lake, N. Dak., Jan. 26.

OHIO

Bear Creek.—Our Sunday-school closed the year 1918 with a splendid report. We were especially interested in helping to make Ohio dry. Our school headed the list in Montgomery County, contributing over $400 to the Dry Federation and winning the banner. Today we rendered a short program in behalf of the Armenian-Syrian Relief, and an offering was taken. The last report we gave $100 for that fund. The Aid Society decided to give $25. The offerings taken on the second Sunday of each month for the next five months will be given for the same purpose. We are using the envelope system in raising funds and it is working nicely.—Mrs. Maudie W. Filbruo, Dayton, Ohio, Jan. 26.

Danville.—We have been having our experience with the influenza. We lost two of our members on account of it. Our series of meetings early in the week and the latter part were discontinued for several Sundays. However, we made a house-to-house canvass for our Thanksgiving and holiday offerings, which amounted to $432 for Home Missions, and $100 for the World-wide Fund. Our Sunday-school is now reorganized, with Jay Workman and Howard Nyhart, superintendents. Church services are moving along as usual.—C. Woodman, Buckeye Valley, Ohio, Jan. 27.

Lynchburg.—We would be glad to correspond with any members of the church who would care to change locations and at the same time help to build up the White Oak church, situated about eleven miles southwest of the county-seat of Highland County, and three miles west of the N. and W. Railroad. Lots can be bought for $50 to $100 per acre. Address the writer.—Eld. R. C. Davidson, Lynchburg, Ohio, Jan. 27.

Notice.—To Elders and Pastors of Southern Ohio: At the District Meeting held at Ft. McKinley last year, privilege was granted the Bradford church to solicit funds in the District for a churchhouse in Bradford, which is so much needed. Bro. John R. Snyder, of Bellefontaine, Ohio, has been secured to assist in this work and will begin about Feb. 1 to call on the various churches. Any assistance given to increase the Lord's work at this place will be greatly appreciated.—Eld. C. E. Overholser, Secretary Finance Committee, Bradford, Ohio, Jan. 24.

Oakland.—For several Sundays we were not permitted to have services on account of influenza, but the work is again moving along nicely. We met in council Jan. 4, for the first year. Chas. Flory presiding. Bro. Flory was retained as elder for another year. The church secured Bro. Hugh Miller as pastor until May 1, 1920. Sixteen letters were granted. Officers for the year were elected, with Brethren A. D. Alder and Walter Martin, Sunday-school superintendents; the writer, correspondent. We are expecting to have a "sing" in the near future, under the leadership of our chorister, Bro. Cassel. We contemplate holding a series of meetings in the spring.—Mrs. R. T. Waggoner, Bradford, Ohio, Jan. 20.

PENNSYLVANIA

Carlisle.—In the early part of December our congregation met in a special session, to elect Sunday-school officers for the coming year, the writer being elected as superintendent. The officers took up their duties at the beginning of the new year. Dec. 29 the church met in council, which had been postponed from a date earlier in the month. The regular church election was held, and reports were made by the officers. Our elder, Bro. J. A. Long, of

Will Your Share Be Ready?

THE announcement of the Chairman of the Relief and Reconstruction Committee, on page 104 of this issue, will assure our readers that definite measures are now under way for the accomplishment of a work which will be worthy of our profession.

This call will make a very strong appeal to our people. It will do so, in the first place, because it is made in behalf of suffering humanity. In these years of unprecedented horrors, nothing has touched our hearts more deeply than the pitiable plight of those unfortunate peoples of the Near East who, entirely innocent of all responsibility for the war, were driven from their homes by the hundreds of thousands, to wander and to perish. While multitudes have already perished, other multitudes remain, especially of women and children, pleading and hoping that the hand of Christian mercy may reach them before it is too late.

In the second place, this call is certain to meet a ready response because of the opportunity it offers us to defend ourselves against any charge of selfish indifference to the struggles and sufferings of our fellowmen.

Our neighbors and fellow-citizens, many of them, answered their country's call in a way that some of us, for conscience' sake, could not answer. Shall we permit them to suspect that our attitude was insincere? Shall we allow the world to say that we are less ready than others to sacrifice for the common good?

We must not and we will not. Here is an opportunity we can not let pass by. But it would be a miserable makeshift, indeed, were we to try to show forth sentiments we do not feel. The best way to seem unselfish is to be so. Then it will be easy to give answer to this call.

We believe the Brotherhood will answer with a ringing emphasis. The figures look large only in the aggregate. Think how small the sacrifice is for each one.

Will the Church of the Brethren render this noble service to the suffering mothers and children of the East? If you say so, she will.

Making the Most of Your Mistakes

IT is one of the sayings of the efficiency experts of today that nothing is more valuable than the mistakes we make, if we will but utilize them. Charles F. Schwab, of the Rethlehem Steel Company, one of the greatest experts in the management of industrial affairs, a man who succeeds in accomplishing things where other people fail, bas said: "Nobody makes more mistakes than I do, but the man who keeps on making the same mistakes repeatedly is a fool."

It is a rather startling thing that our mistakes are some of the most valuable possessions that we have, if we capitalize them and use them rightly. A mistake is always an indication that something has gone wrong. and there must be a cause or reason. It is a challenge for one to see wherein the mistake was made, what lies at the root of it, and to search until the secret cause is found,—then to eliminate it, whatever the cost may be.

Mistakes should not discourage us,—they should challenge us. We should not become blue,—we should become determined. Mistakes are simply an index of some disobeyed law, some essential condition which was not fulfilled. They should be used as other indexes are, to find the thing you are hunting,—the missing link without which you can not succeed.

When a minister fails in preaching a sermon, fails to interest his audience, he should ask himself: "Why have I failed?" And he should not give up the search until he has located the secret of the failure. When a Sunday-school teacher fails to accomplish the things she set out to do, she should ask herself searchingly: "Why this failure? Where did I miss it?" And keep up the search until the secret cause is discovered.

The parent in the home, who has failed in accomplishing what he set out to do, in the way of discipline, should search until he finds wherein the failure lies, and then institute another search for the secret of success.

Probably there is no detail of our lives which will not bear improvement. Some of the efficiency people are reminding us that we do not know how to wash our faces to the best advantage, or to dress ourselves efficiently. Some people take thirty to forty-five minutes to make their toilet when they ought to be able to make a reasonably good appearance within ten or fifteen minutes. Perhaps in so simple a matter, seemingly, as dressing yourself you could eliminate half the number of motions needed to complete the process and so cut off and save fifteen to thirty minutes.

So it is in teaching, or in preaching. Some ministers make three times the number of movements to drive home a certain point that others do. If you will but keep up the search, you can double your efficiency in everything that you undertake.

But it is not a question of simply learning where the trouble lies and what the secret of success is, but a question of following up this knowledge with appropriate action, and then repeating these actions until fixed habits are established.

Among the Churches of Northern California

THE District of Northern California is one among the active, growing Districts in our Brotherhood. Organized twelve years ago, with but few organized churches and a small membership, it now numbers twenty-one organized churches, with a membership not far short of fifteen hundred. It has grown wonderfully in a dozen years.

A very enjoyable season was had in visiting some of the churches of the District recently. It would have been a pleasure to visit all of them, but the time was lacking. Our meetings were more or less interfered with by influenza. But this has been common in all parts of our Brotherhood. It will be noticed that the MESSENGER does not give the usual number of accessions for this season.

The Empire church was the first visited. It has, perhaps, the largest membership in the State,—250. Bro. A. M. White is elder in charge. It is also the home of Elders David Bowman, S. F. Sanger, J. N. Gwin and Samuel Keller. Recently the Waterford church was organized, and the division of territory took some thirty members of the Empire church. Brethren Levi Winklebleck and Jacob Deardorff are the elders at Waterford, and they are earnest workers. They have a fine prospect of building up a large congregation.

The meetings at Empire opened with a large attend-

The Church and the Eighteenth Amendment

EVERYBODY understands that the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States is a great event in our national history. And some can see in it also the promise of important happenings in other nations of the world. But did it occur to you that it has any special significance for the Church of the Brethren? We think it has. And for this reason: It is the first great social reform,—if we have our facts straight,—in the accomplishment of which our people have had an active share.

From the very beginning of her history, our church has cherished as fine a set of moral ideals as any people ever got together. Recall a few of them: Individuals should settle their differenees through mutual forbearance and the counsel of their brethren, rather than through litigation. Nations should settle their differences in like manner rather than by resort to arms. Truthfulness should be recognized as a sacred obligation without any necessity for oaths. Since equality of opportunity is the right of all, no one should hold his fellow in bond-service. Strong drink is such a foe to human welfare that both the indulgence and the traffic in it are unchristian. Simplicity in dress and the general manner of life are demanded by considerations of modesty, healthfulness and economy.

The soundness of such principles as these is manifest. This has long been recognized by nearly everybody, even if there has not been universal willingness to practice them, nor universal agreement as to the best methods of promoting them. To have perceived the righteousness of these ideals and to have put them into a church platform more than two hundred years ago, to have preached them and to have made an earnest effort to live in harmony with them during these two centuries, to have seen some of them incorporated into the organic law of our country and to note the increasing favor with which others are regarded,—all this is good ground for satisfaction. To stand for right ideals is worth something, especially when it is hard to stand for them. Perhaps we are entitled to a few thrills of pride, if we are careful to keep that term within the worthy bounds of self-respect.

But let us turn now from the pleasant pastime of patting ourselves on the back to ask whether we have always made the most of our profession. Consider, first, our relation to the prohibition movement.

We have always been a temperance people. Our interest in the subject, however, until a very recent period, was confined to the practice of temperance principles ourselves. We invited and urged others to come

We have always been a temperance people. Our interest in the subject, however, until a very recent period, was confined to the practice of temperance principles ourselves. We invited and urged others to come into fellowship with us and accept this and other Gospel principles, but we did not regard it as our duty to attack the liquor curse itself. The writer well remembers a certain Sunday after-meeting visit in his boyhood, at the home of a good brother, when the conversation turned to the temperance agitation. Not only did this brother think we should have nothing to do with it, but he regarded the whole anti-liquor crusade as useless and a case of misdirected zeal. The Bible presupposes that there will always be drunkards, he said, for it says that no drunkard shall enter the Kingdom of Heaven. Our children would not know what that verse means if prohibition prevailed, he argued—a calamity not to be contemplated for an instant!

But there came a day when we could no longer satisfy our consciences with a negative policy. Our neighbors and friends were struggling to curb the power of the mighty monster, if not to destroy it. We decided to help, and help we did, with a vigor and enthusiasm which it is decidedly pleasant to contemplate in these days of national triumph. With our General Committee and auxiliary committees the church is now well organized on this issue, and eternal opposition to the liquor traffic, not merely in our personal habits, but with our voice and pen, our votes and pocketbooks, is now thoroughly established as a part of our church policy.

With a similar purpose our Conference, a few years ago, appointed a committee on dress reform. The idea is that the influence of the church should be exerted as strongly as possible against the evils of modern fashion, and in favor of simpler and more rational styles of dress. To practice this principle ourselves is our first duty, but it was rightly felt that our obligation is wider than this, in this matter, just as truly as in the case of the drink evil.

It is idle to say that nothing worth-while can be done. More has been done already than many people know, and our own committee has achieved some tangible results. Public sentiment can be educated, the public conscience can be aroused until the extravagances and indecencies of fashion become so disreputable that respectable people will not tolerate them. The cause is a most righteous one and deserves the hearty support of the church. And the committee should be encouraged by receiving the united coöperation of the membership in its efforts to promote the cause of dress reform.

On the peace question, too, we have been slowly but surely working toward a more aggressive attitude, and the net result of our late experiences will be to accelerate that process. We have always been a peace people. We asked only to be let alone. We had no wish to do violence to anybody. We stood out against any direct participation in war, at the same time trying to be loyal to our country. Our record on this subject has much in it that is worthy of the highest admiration, yet, in some respects, we have been very slow to see the logic of our position.

As recently as 1902 we officially declined the suggestion that the church contribute her influence to the peace movement by appointing a committee to represent us in that capacity. We were already a peace organization, we argued. And so we were, according to our own interpretation of the subject. But at last the feeling grew too strong to be resisted, the feeling that we ought at least to try to count for more in the promotion of anti-war sentiment, and a committee for that purpose was appointed.

To some it seems that special efforts along this line are hardly worth while, because there are no such tangible ways of making our influence felt as in a matter like the drink curse. But the objection is not valid. The problem is one of educating and organizing public sentiment. Our statesmen and diplomats will do what the people demand. And we can contribute our full share, if we will, to the development of a sound public opinion.

Now let us make a confession that may offend our vanity a little but which may be good for us, nevertheless. We have been a little too much disposed to mistake our ideals for achievements and to overlook what others have done along these lines. We have sometimes talked and acted as if we and a few other nonresistant bodies were the only people who loved peace. In view of the efforts put forth for many years by numerous organizations and conspicuously by such public men as William H. Taft and William J. Bryan and now most determinedly by Woodrow Wilson, and in view of the complete history of our own attitude to these efforts, any tendency to talk overmuch about ourselves in this connection is apt to strike some people as a rather bad case of very bad manners. Indeed, a willingness to let the nations work out the problem of world peace the best they can without our help, coupled with our readiness to be on hand with a proud "We knew you'd come to our position," as soon as they have solved the problem, would make one think of the story of the man whose wife killed the bear. From a safe place in the rafters he bravely watched her fight off the intruder and then, when the wild beast had been vanquished, came down to join her in proudly relating to the neighbors how they had slain the bear. If the reader will pardon us for putting the case so bluntly, we should like to suggest that the common slogan "More work and less brag" might not be altogether inappropriate in this instance.

We got into the liquor conflict just in time to have a real and honorable part in the victory just achieved. It is a good time to gather fresh courage for the battles still ahead. It is good to believe that the Church of the Brethren is awake to her peculiar responsibility as a champion of moral principles which the world so sadly needs, because they are principles proclaimed by the Founder of Christianity; that she stands ready to put the same enthusiasm into the support of every righteous cause that she has put into the fight with drink; and that, while continuing to preach with unremitting zeal the necessity of individual regeneration by the Spirit of God, she will exert her full strength against everything that makes for human misery and drags souls down to ruin.

ance. Bro. Samuel Fike, an earnest worker, led the song service, and assisted materially in the work. A new outbreak of the epidemic, however, cut down the audience fully one-half. Six professed Christ, but in the midst of the ingathering the meetings had to be closed because of the prevalence of the disease. On the evening we closed one accepted Christ. A general expression of opinion was that, if the services could have continued, there would have been a large ingathering.

From Empire our tour took us to Oakland, a city of some 200,000 souls. The Golden State Mission, in this city, is one among our most prosperous missions. In August last, two years ago, Bro. James U. G. Stiverson and family took charge of the work. Then there was but one member of our church in the great city. The first religious service was held in the home of Bro. Stiverson Aug. 20. A Sunday-school and Sisters' Aid Society were organized in October, 1916. The first applicant was baptized Dec. 16 of the same year. The first money received for building a house of worship,—$10,—came from a good sister in Canada. The church was organized March 28, 1917, by Elders S. F. Sanger and D. R. Holsinger.

Bro. Stiverson canvassed the State District to secure money to build a house of worship. He secured $4,300, a lot was purchased and a suitable house erected, where meetings are now held. It cost $1,300. For the lot $2,340 was paid. It is located on the corner of San Juan and Fortieth Avenues. The building was constructed so that it will make a bungalow parsonage for the pastor, when the church building is erected on the corner. They now have fifty members, and the room is not large enough for the rapidly-growing congregation. The Sunday-school is large and active. On the Lord's Day, spent with them, they had eighty-seven in attendance and the offering was nearly $13. They now have a membership of some fifty. By direction of the Mission Board of the District, Bro. Stiverson is again to canvass the District for money to build a suitable house of worship. An effort will be made to raise enough, and if not, the General Mission Board will be asked to assist.

At Rio Linda is a small body of members,—eighteen in number,—with Bro. Michael Blocher in charge. They hold their meetings in the public school building. The epidemic was prevailing there and we only held four services. Rio Linda is nine miles from Sacramento, a city of about fifty thousand. There should be a mission started in this large city. The brethren at Rio Linda feel that this would be a help to them. They sincerely hope that some of our members, who are changing localities, may come to their place. They claim they have good land and a fine and prosperous locality.

Some fifty miles north of Rio Linda is the prosperous church of Live Oak. Bro. W. R. Brubaker is elder of this live, wide-awake church of some seventy members. We had fine, appreciative audiences at this place. At the urgent request of the members we gave them a series of Bible Land Talks. We had a very enjoyable season with the members of the Live Oak church. They have, in part, a "live" name and are good workers in their calling.

Our next stopping-place was the Lindsay church, located in the Northern Orange District of California. Here, along the foothills, at the base of snow-covered mountains, they raise fine oranges. They ripen earlier than in Southern California. They are usually picked and marketed before Christmas.

The church here has 130 members, and is in charge of Eld. Isaac Brubaker. It was organized March 17, 1912, with twenty-eight charter members. It is one among the growing churches in the District. Bro. Price Robertson is one of the active helpers in the ministry. Eld. M. S. Frantz has been chosen as pastor of the Lindsay church. Six weeks before our coming Bro. Price Robertson started a series of meetings at Woodvale. Here the Methodists had built a house of worship, but had given up the work. Bro. Robertson persistently kept at the work for six weeks, and the Lord wonderfully blessed his earnest efforts,—sixteen accepting Christ. It was a good meeting and our brother showed his ability as an evangelist. He also held a very successful series of meetings in Missouri. He has fully decided to give his life to evangelistic work in the church. Those desiring his help should address him at Lindsay, Cal. After we were called away from Lindsay, Bro. Robertson, at the call of the church, continued the meetings for a short time.

At Lindsay we closed our meetings in Northern California. We had calls from other churches, but the prevalence of influenza made it seem best to postpone other meetings. The epidemic greatly hindered people from attending the meetings, but the Lord blessed the work and some good was accomplished in his name.

A Salvation That Works

THE New Testament has much to say about works, even "good works." We are told "to work out our salvation" (Philpp. 2: 12). This does not mean that we should work merely to be saved. It might be well for us to be sure of a salvation that works. The man, who is saved should be a worker. He may have done the things that led up to the saving power of God. He may fully realize what salvation means to his soul, but if he is a really converted man he should know that his life, as a worker, has just begun. In the beginning of his struggle salvation was ahead,—it was yet to be attained. But having experienced the pardoning grace, salvation, or the rescue from sin, is in the past.

Having been born again, having become a new creature, he sets his hands and heart to that which is in the future. It is no more working out his salvation; it is now a salvation that works,—a salvation that sees things to do and does them. It is a salvation that counts for something,—not a salvation that is merely for self, but one that goes out after others. And if the process of working out one's salvation does not result in this condition, we may well question its value for the individual or a collection of individuals.

We once knew a prosperous farmer, a member, who lived some distance,—say fifteen miles,—from the church where services were held practically every Sunday. Generally speaking, his life was exemplary. His neighbors looked upon him as a God-fearing man. He was not ashamed of his religion and yet the man did nothing but make money, and in temporal things provided well for his family. He was seldom seen at the regular services, but he was on hand for every love feast. For love feast expenses he probably paid one dollar a year. And this was the extent of the help he rendered the cause he represented. To live a pious life, and to perform the duties called for by the church ordinances at the love feast, was his way of working out his salvation.

Aside from the little help rendered at the feast, he was of no value to the church, local or general. It probably never occurred to him that the man who pretends to work out his salvation should have a salvation that works. He would have censured the farmer who works hard for a farm and then refuses to work his farm; or the man who comes into possession of a good team and then neglects to work his horses.

Possibly we have this farmer duplicated from one end of the land to the other. Men and women apply for membership in the church. They comply with the conditions of pardon, feel happy, go on their way rejoicing, and reap, as they think, the full benefits of their relation to the body of Christ. They may attend services regularly, take an active part in the worship, be on hand at every love feast, render a bit of assistance on the occasion, but that is the limit of their activity. They may give moderately for church expenses, but have little or nothing for missions or other works of charity. They may be out early and late in pursuit of business, but never have time to administer to the sick, the hungry and others that are unfortunate. Like the priest and Levite, on the road to Jericho, they see the disabled man in the road but urgent business prompts them to pass around to one side or the other. Their religion may be of the orthodox type, but it is of no value, for the reason that it will not work. They have plenty of time for work along temporal lines, but none for the duties found everywhere along church lines.

They may be comforted by a sermon in support of salvation by faith alone, and decide to let faith have its course, independent of the good works which God has before ordained for his people, that they might walk in them (Eph. 2: 10). In fact, there are two ways of viewing faith and works. One is to rely wholly on faith, just as though faith of itself could save. The other is to comply with just enough of the New Testament requirements to secure admittance into the fold, and be numbered with the saints on earth. That is, be enrolled as a soldier of the cross, but never to apply for training or for service,—to be counted, but never to be counted on. That is, to enter the flock as a babe, but never grow to full stature in Christ Jesus. It is just to remain a babe in the family of God,—that much and no more. Such a person may be counted a man in business circles, but only a babe in religion.

Is this picture too severe? Here is another. A man does just enough to secure a homestead,—one hundred and sixty acres of land. He builds an excuse of a house and moves his family on the claim. For seven years he hunts and fishes a bit, managing to live. The land becomes his. The Government has given him a good title. But he keeps from starving by a little fishing and a little hunting. His one hundred and sixty acres remain unimproved, uncultivated. Can any one tell what value a man of this sort is to the State in which he lives? He is simply an ungrateful homesteader, and with the State full of such men, the country might as well belong to wild men of the forest.

Well, how about becoming mere homesteaders in the Church of the Brethren? We have heard people talking about finding a church home where they could enjoy themselves. We like the idea of a church home, and then we like the thought of a workshop,—a place where converted men and women can enjoy themselves and be of some practical use to the church and the community. In other words, a salvation that works.

Daybreak

BY B. F. M. SOURS

When the sunbeams burst in splendor and the hills are lit with joy,
When the golden tide of glory comes apace,
We can hear the distant angels with the songs that never cloy,
We can hear the birds a-singing of the Grace
That spread forth the daisied meadows, and the dogwood hills afar,
And the sunny slopes of springtime's poplar-bells;
We can hear it,—if we listen,—past the gates of distant star,
The sweet story that the far-off harper tells.

Then the sun comes on in glory, like a warrior in his might,
And the foes of light in caverns creep for fear,
Till are silent all the sullen and despairing wails of night,
And the sword of gloom is sheathed, and broke the spear.
And we wonder, as the marshalled hosts of gladness march along,
At the splendor that is gilding all the way,
And we join the sunlit birds in the ocean-tides of song,
For the Father's love bestows another day.

And the grass-blades are a-sparkle with the mirrors of the dew,
And the sun advancing quaffs the nectar bright,
And the eastern skies forget the glory, in their after blue,
And the fields and meadows glare with golden light.
For the daybreak came and vanished, and the day has trod apace:
'Tis by daybreak might and manhood are unfurled,
Telling of the joy awaiting, 'neath the Father's wondrous grace,
Of the gathering of the harvests for the world.

The World Must Be Made Safe for Christ

BY CHESTER F. SCHROYER

We are passing through a marvelous period,—a period characterized by the greatest material progress the world has ever seen. Railroads and telegraphs have penetrated the remote parts of the globe, carrying trade into lands where hitherto only explorers and probably a few missionaries had penetrated. The flags of the respective nations followed the trade and brought conflicts of national ambitions.

Few, indeed, several decades ago, would have been so bold as to assert there would be a remote possibility of America's being involved in a war beyond the Atlantic. But material progress, brought on by inventions, resulted in the Europeanizing of the globe and made ideas the ruling power in the world.

Today one man, with the proper equipment of "wireless," could, if permitted, instantaneously communicate with every other individual on the surface of the earth. Only a short time ago the Soviets of Russia made a wireless appeal to all workmen of the world.

Each year must, of necessity, add greater influence to the spreading of propaganda. It is evident that we must become citizens of the world in an ever-increasing degree. No social disturbance, in any part of the earth, will leave the rest of the earth immune.

In the face of this progress and these conditions, what can be the future influence upon Christianity? Out of the conditions of life men build their philosophies of life. The philosophy of any one nation immediately reflects on other peoples, and determines their actions. It is evident that there must be no breeding places for false philosophy anywhere, if the rest of the world is to remain immune and uninfected.

The press has been enthusiastic about the slogan: "Make the world safe for democracy." For the same reason is it not a matter of even greater importance that the world be made safe for Christ?

For instance: We are told that in a recent census of the higher institutions of learning in South America, less than one per cent of the students professed belief in any deity whatsoever. We are also told that in Africa at the present time three proselytes are won to the religion of Mahomet for every Christian convert, and, as the Crescent is being driven out of Europe, it has the prospect of winning the second largest continent from the Cross. China and the East have still hardly been touched by the transforming power of Christ.

The old adage, "Epidemics come out of the East," will, in the future, by the very nature of things, be infinitely more true than in the past. Will China emerge into Western customs and civilization, minus Christian ideals, like Japan? Material prosperity is opening our very doors to the pagan East and South.

A time there was when the foreign missionary movement was a matter of loyalty to the Master, of humanitarianism and sentiment. Today it is all that and more. It is self-preservation. Woe to the world when the ambitious rule without the restraining influence of the gentle Christ!

Christian education is the remedy for many ills that beset the state. Our trouble with Mexico cost this country enough to place a church, a hospital and a school of higher education in every town of over four thousand inhabitants in Mexico, and keep them going for ten years.

Millions who are waking into this new age of cosmopolitanism, this age of free interchange of ideas, have never heard of Christ. For the safety of the future, since these people will contribute their share to the philosophy of the world, they must learn the brotherhood of man through the Fatherhood of God, or they will, as disease spots, spread infection to Christian lands.

The Standard of Loyalty That We Have Set for Ourselves

BY J. H. B. WILLIAMS

Now that the fires of the great war have been extinguished and the flow of blood has been stanched, the world settles down to make the necessary adjustments by which it may accommodate itself to the new conditions.

Although some lands have not been engaged in the struggle, none has escaped the influence of the conflict. Autocracies have crumbled, their peoples are declaring themselves free. The crowns worn yesterday are base metal today; their wearers are discredited; the people rule.

Our land, already free, feels the war's effects none the less. The fusing power of national sacrifice has forged our gigantic population into a common sympathy, while its cosmopolitan peoples have led it to awaken to a new internationalism, hitherto undreamed of. Henceforth our freedom is not alone for ourselves. The greatest tribute ever given to our form of government is now being paid by making it a pattern for the forms of government, talked of by many European peoples.

Nor would it be expected that these bonds of mutual sympathy, uniting great peoples, and the new ideals of self-government, could be created without very marked influence upon the great body of Christian believers. The tug at its heart-strings has been titanic. High partitions have been torn down, false religious conceptions have been "scrapped," and the spirit of Jesus Christ has been revealed as the only sufficient consolation for a war-torn world.

We are, therefore, justified in inquiring now as to what obligations, what duties, what responsibilities our attitude in the great world war has brought upon us. We can answer at once that our immediate duty is to succor the wounded, restore broken homes, seek for the orphan, feed and clothe unfortunate innocence, and assist war-stricken peoples in attaining a self-supporting position again. There is no question about the need, nor is there question about Christ's attitude in such a crisis. But in stating these facts we only mention a platitude common to all peoples, and generally accepted by them as their human duty. In so planning, what do we more than they?

But we have gone farther in this conflict, in the course of literal obedience to the Bible, as we understand it, than have other Christian organizations who, doubtless, are just as conscientious in their convictions on war as we have been ourselves. As a church we have refused to bear arms because we have believed, and do believe that Christ forbade it. And we have repeatedly set ourselves on record as meaning to obey literally his whole Gospel.

For this cause, many of our young men have suffered hardships. They have endured scoffings, derision, cursing, and sometimes persecution, but they have quite generally stood firm, usually willing to do what they conscientiously could. Our church has stood with them, and we thank God that Christ's grace is sufficient.

The attitude of our young men in Camps is largely indicative of what it would have been if others of our membership had been called. But the conflict is over. No people is more glad than ours, and no people will render keener loyalty to the Government in any service that it can possibly give.

But we are writing all this primarily to preface our main inquiry. Since we have stood so firm in our peace principles, because of respect for Jesus Christ, what stand must we now take, respecting others of his principles, that are always of paramount importance in the spiritual conflicts between this world and Jesus Christ? If we claimed special privileges, surely ours are the special duties. If our privilege was exemption from bearing arms, then, surely, our share in the spiritual struggle must be service in the front-line trenches. If we desired life when others, equally lacking in responsibility for the war, must go to their deaths, then, certainly, the desire could be founded neither on selfishness nor on special privilege. Such an idea must topple of its own weight, and is better unexpressed. We must be more sensible in our view-point.

If the spirit of our Brotherhood has exemplified itself in sympathy and act, by accepting only noncombatant service in things military, then, most assuredly, we have, in so doing, committed ourselves before God and before the world to a "one hundred per cent loyalty to Jesus Christ." We have allowed other parents' sons to die in our places and have allowed other parents to endure the pangs of death, in place of our own, or of ourselves, because conscientious convictions have seemed to warrant us in parrying the thrust of actual warfare.

We hear of a young man who claimed he could not bear arms because of his conviction and that of his church, but he was found smoking a cigarette, which was contrary to the rules of his church, and, of course, when it was told his superior officer, he forfeited the officer's respect, and compromised his own position at once, rendering himself subject to actual service. To his captain, faithlessness in one tenet of church principles, proved his insincerity in the other.

The deportment of this lad is but the type of that Christian who attempts to glorify Christ by objecting to military service, but who, at the same time, attempts to evade the Lord's claims in another direction. "The devil a monk would be." The Lord's cause can not be advanced by duplicity.

If we declared ourselves as being unwilling to fight for world freedom in the way the majority of people see it, and justify our position by Christ's commands, if our Lord's cause seemed so glorious to us that we sought to escape death while others died, then, surely, to be consistent, we must have been seeking to live that, through us, others might live. Then, truly, we are willing to go in the inspiration of his only begotten Son, that none may perish, but that all may have life. And if others have died that we might continue to live, then our duty, our God-given duty, our God-commanded duty, is to interpret him to the world in such a way that we make this life for them and for us worth all that our brothers in the flesh paid for it in the sacrifice of their lives.

Truly, this is not an easy program, but it is consistent. We tremble for our future if we do not attempt to live up to a program of the same spirit of obedience to Christ's full commands that we have claimed for ourselves on the principle of peace. Ours should be a stronger force for God and his cause, through the experiences that we have undergone and the profession that we have made in the last two years. May the Father help us to enquire diligently into the character of our allegiance to Christ!

Church Membership

BY J. S. SHERFY

In the early history of the church "the Lord added to them day by day those that were saved." Yet, in spite of the fact that the Lord has taken the initiative in enrolling men and women in the church, there are those who object to church-membership and insist that they can live as good Christians outside of the church as inside. In fact, some go to the extreme of arguing that their lives outside of the church are less hampered and restricted, and are relatively richer and more luxuriant in growth than the lives of the great majoity who are inside.

An illustration which appeals to us with some force, in respect of such a contention, follows:

A certain man boasted of his own fine Christian character. He stood outside of church fellowship and, with much pride and Pharisaic self-righteousness, looked contemptuously upon the weak and imperfect specimens of Christianity whom he saw in the church. He was sure that he was, in every way, far superior to them.

This man went daily to his work along a certain highway. It was in the late spring and beside the road was a field of corn which had suffered because of too much rain and too little sunshine and, consequently, was a bit yellow.

The man of our story noticed this. He also noticed in the road, beside the field, a volunteer stalk of corn. This stalk was on an elevation and in new soil, and was otherwise favored, so that it was dark green in color and quite luxuriant in growth. The anti-church man saw in this a picture. He said to himself: "That field of yellow, backward corn represents the puny Christians in the church. This fine, rank stalk represents my superior Christian character, as I stand outside of the chuch."

He admired the picture greatly. As he passed the place daily, he looked with great satisfaction on the stalk, which grew so beautifully and, as he fancied, characterized himself.

But one morning, as he passed by, the stalk was gone. He approached the place to see what had happened, and saw in the mud the tracks of a cow. The stump of the stalk gave evidence that the cow had eaten the fine stalk of corn. The man went on and fell to thinking quite soberly: "Possibly," said he, "that stalk still represents me as I stand outside of the fence of the church's protecting care. Perhaps, if I stand where I am Satan will get me as the cow got the stalk of corn."

As he worked that day, he mused further: "If the stalk had remained, it is doubtful if it would have produced a full ear, as it stood apart from the nurturing influence of the field. And though the field has been backward, because of adverse conditions at first, it will, without doubt, respond to the favorable influence of the warm summer sun, and produce a large crop. I guess I had better get over the fence."

Few persons realize how helpless and fruitless and how succeptible to Satan's destroying power they would be, were it not for the nourishing influence of the saints and the protection which God has provided in the strong fence of church membership.

When Israel Was Compelled to Fight

BY JAMES M. MOORE

In the days of Samuel, Jehoshaphat, Elisha and Hezekiah, as described in former articles, there are instances where God overcame the enemy of his people without human violence. These all were marvelous manifestations of divine power, possible where faithful obedience and unwavering faith opened the way.

There were, however, a number of times when Israel was compelled by circumstances, and even commanded by God, to fight. A few of these will be considered, the same principle applying to all, as far as the facts are given.

It will be seen that in the absence of a strong stand for righteousness, God's people were called on to employ the weapons of warfare. Even when they seemed to take a stand, but were inclined to waver, necessity demanded their meeting the enemy by force.

Commanded to Slay the Midianites

Numbers 25 and 31

The Children of Israel were making their way northward, on the east side of the Dead Sea, toward Canaan. Balak, King of the Moabites, feared defeat, unless he could, in some way, obtain the help of superhuman power. He sent for Balaam to come and curse Israel. Balaam, after much persuasion, finally secured permission from Jehovah to go, but under special restrictions. The Divine Spirit took control, and the result was that a great blessing was pronounced upon Israel.

Balaam, however, advised Balak that if he could succeed in persuading Israel to sin against God, the curse would come. This is evidently what is referred to by the Revelator when he refers to Balaam as the one "who taught Balak to cast a stumblingblock before the children of Israel, to eat things sacrificed to idols and to commit fornication" (Rev. 2: 14).

With the help of the Midianites, a wicked people living to the south and east of the Moabites, Balak succeeded in his evil purpose. The story of the sin that followed makes one of the blackest pages in Jewish history. Idolatry, accompanied by the basest immoral practices, spread like wildfire through the camp until arrested by the drastic action of Phinehas, the priest.

A strong and unwavering stand for righteousness and against all forms of evil is God's ideal for his people. With grievous sin among their own number, some extraordinary measures will be necessary to arouse the people to a realization of their terrible condition.

As for the Midianites, they were already steeped in wickedness. So far had they gone into the depths that there was absolutely no hope of repentance in them. If left as Israel's neighbors, they would lead the people into a like degradation and absolute ruin. Summary judgment upon them was the only remedy.

Israel, by being employed in the executing of the death sentence, learned a great lesson in the awfulness of sin. As they went about their death-dealing tasks, they had ground into their minds something of the reality of God's hatred for that which is evil. Thus their stand, in favor of the Divine Law, was renewed, and strengthened as possible in no other way.

As in this case, so it was always true that a call for Israel to fight with carnal weapons was evidence of a wavering in its stand for righteousness and truth. Even in more modern times, were it not for the fact that the sins of the enemy had succeeded in getting altogether too strong a hold on those who were nearest right, the question might well be raised as to whether something better than physical force might not have been found.

Gideon's Victory.—Judges 6 and 8

For seven long and wearisome years the Children of Israel had been sorely oppressed under the cruel tyranny of the Midianites. It was all because God's people allowed themselves to fall into evil, and as a result the Divine Protection was withdrawn for a time.

So heavy was the hand of oppression that Israel sought refuge in dens and caves in the mountains, forced to live much like the wild beasts. The privations were severe, for when there was any hope of a harvest, the Midianites, assisted by the Amalekites, came up over the land as locusts for multitude, devastating and plundering as they went. A more pitiable plight could not well be imagined.

The people cried out to Jehovah in their distress, and Gideon was selected to lead in the great deliverance. This newly-appointed leader was courageous and aggressive when settled in his convictions, yet it took absolute proof to convince him. Three miraculous signs were necessary to assure him of the genuineness of the Divine Call, but with all doubts removed there was no turning back.

The army that was to break the power of the oppressors was selected by elimination. First of all those who were fearful and trembling were sent back, taking away over two-thirds of the original number. The putting of the enemy to flight was to be accomplished without human violence, and hence only those could be used whose trust in Jehovah would enable them to walk right into the midst of the Midianitish hosts without a tremor.

The next step was to call out all except the most cautious. This was to be a surprise attack, and great care would be necessary, lest the surprise work the wrong way. This left but three hundred men to lead out against the innumerable hosts of the enemy. They were, however, the very pick of the Israelites.

With a thorough understanding as to the plan of attack, the little band moved out in the dead of night. The blast of the trumpets, the breaking of the pitchers, the lights, and, above all, their battle cry: "The sword of Jehovah and of Gideon," together contributed to the confusion among the enemy. The Midianites fled in disorder, slaying one another as they went.

The victory well on the way, others of Israel, out of the tribes of Naphtali, Asher and Manasseh, were ready to join. With the entering of those who formerly were fearful and trembling, there came the first necessity for human violence. As long as the trusting and cautious three hundred were conducting the battle by maintaining a strong stand for Jehovah and righteousness, no weapons were necessary. Had all Israel possessed a like unwavering faith, the victory would doubtless have been even more glorious.

Here, then, we have one of the necessary requisites for claiming the exercise of Divine Power in our behalf. No case can be found where a nation, strong in its faith in God, was oppressed by an enemy. Sin is the great destroyer of the necessary faith, and therein is one solution of the need of resorting to arms for the protection of a nation.

David and the Ammonites.—2 Samuel 11: 1 and 12: 26-31

To the east of the Jordan River were the Ammonites, —a strong nation that, time after time, had been exceedingly troublesome to Israel. They were suspicious and treacherous, and seemed to take delight in their wickedness.

David was king of Israel. Upon learning of the death of the former king of the Ammonites he, in all sincerity, had sent a message of comfort to Hanum, their new king. The bearers of the message were insulted, shamefully treated and sent back. The result was a battle, in which the Ammonites were driven from the land.

Later David sent his army under the efficient leadership of Joab against this same people, to attack them in their own country. Joab's army was successful, and dealt a crushing defeat to the enemy. A siege was set against Rabbah, the capital city, and David remained at Jerusalem awaiting results.

As Rabbah weakened under the attack, Joab saw that it would be but a short time until the defense would completely give way. He sent in haste for David to lead the army while the city was formally captured, and thus receive to himself the honor.

King David came, and the taking of the city was completed. Upon the captives were inflicted such cruelties as can not be harmonized with the actions of a man after God's own heart. This presents one of the great difficulties of Old Testament history.

In getting at the real situation it is necessary to notice what happened in Jerusalem between the leaving of Joab's army and the sending for David, as recorded in 2 Samuel 11: 2 to 12: 25. It is said that David tarried at Jerusalem; and it was during that time that there were enacted the darkest scenes in the history of that great man. The sin with Bathsheba, the setting of Uriah in the battle-front, to be killed, that the crime might be covered, weighed heavily upon the king's heart.

With a deep feeling of guilt gnawing at his conscience, it is not so much to be marveled at that David was so harsh in his revenge upon the Ammonites. In the days after David had his heart cleansed from sin, we would expect an entirely different attitude.

It is a significant fact that Jesus Christ, the one man absolutely free from sin, was most merciful to his enemies. Of all men he had a right to judge harshly, yet of all men he was most ready to forgive. In the light of this it is not surprising that we conclude that many of these bursts of harsh revenge are but the results of the raving of a guilty conscience.

As for nations, when they can clear their own skirts of sin, then expressions of kindness and courtesy will seem more natural. It is difficult, to say the least, for us to express anything other than revenge as long as our lives are so contaminated with evil.

People

BY ELIZA POPE VAN DYNE

In the last year, in the last two years, even, girls and women have been taken rather roughly and thrown at one another. And somehow it did not hurt them. It seemed, instead, to awaken them, either abruptly or gradually, from the stupor they had been in, regarding one another.

And the stupor was stupid, for there was nothing at all at the root of it but a nice, sleepy indifference. It so happened that there had been nothing particularly interesting about the women in their assemblies. Women hadn't time for women, and most certainly not girls for girls. They enjoyed people who had done things; people who had seen things. They preferred men.

But that is changing, or has changed, or will change. Friendships,—like those that some men know,—are developing among those women who are working instead of playing together. Friendships that grow slowly and last, and give an infinite amount of real pleasure.

And then there is this delightful addition to their natures (isn't it an addition?),—they value one another, admire one another, help one another. A new respect is growing among girls and women for girls and women. And so with people for people.

Capabilities and attributes receive their recognition, fully, freely, and ungrudgingly. You want your friends to be fine and big,—as fine and big as you try to be. You need to find them so. And so petty rivalry ceases, and the sheer delight of finding truth and sincerity and strength in another human being takes precedence over it. This new joy of finding a companion superior to others, is beyond comparison with the antiquated satisfaction of finding something wrong. It is no longer desirable to find yourself better, but your companion just as good,—or better.

And you pick up, along the way, the fact that culture is lovely and cultivation loveliet, but that good nature and a great heart are loveliest of all. You discover for the first time really how invaluable good cheer is,—how dearer still an open, generous mind.

And most of all you learn to ignore the qualities that are not in people because of those that are. And you find that when you are disillusioned in another it is perhaps the way you feel, or think, or look on life that moment and not a drastic change in them at all.

Very slowly you are shown essential factor after essential factor that control all pleasant human relations. And first among the imperative needs is keeping calm,—and being "a good fellow." That superb quality is perhaps the most important in the whole composition,—that ability to stand things, whatever they are, and stand them cheerfully.

It is good to get out among people. They are fine.

The Old or the New Christianity,—Which?

BY QUINCY LECKRONE

God is King of humanity, with first claim to be worshiped. The mission of the church is to establish in the hearts of men such a God,—to establish him not only as a Benevolent, Loving Helper to man in his carnal needs but as a King, a Ruler, with authority to command respect, devotion and service. Why is it difficult now to get service for God?

My first answer to this question is: Because we think first of self, with God to wait on us, and having found and applied his grace, we are satisfied. Christ saved men by first glorifying God. His first thought was of God.

We must not do less than we have done, to establish the church, the means of grace, but more to glorify God, who saves the church.

We need not talk less about the ministry of God, but more about the ruling God. We must not say less about the healing, helping God, but more about the authoritative God. We must not say less about the Gospel that blesses, but more about the Gospel that commands, judges, humbles and awes.

When Calvin emphasized the austerity of God, and caused men to tremble and greatly fear at the reading of the Word, he did not minimize thereby his loving kindness or his tender mercy, but only made men see and feel their first duty with terrible effectiveness.

This is the old religion, the good old religion, whereby God was given first place according to the unrevoked first commandment. Why is it so difficult to get service for God now?

My second answer to this question is: Because we serve self first and then forget to serve God. We have made civilization and its blessings our first aim. We try to reach the fruits of Christianity through civilization, and having obtained them we are satisfied. God may now go; we have no further need for him. We psychologize upon the things we should spiritualize. If the thing pleases us, we accept it. If it does not so please us, we will have nothing to do with it. The old religion of primitive Calvinistic interpretation, wherein duty and service were made paramount to pleasure, is not of popular present-day acceptance.

This leads to another consideration, aside from the main theme of this article. Shall we preach the old-time religion at the peril of popularity, or shall we cater to a new religion, more in harmony with present-day psychology? I leave this question with you.

Do you think, when Jesus preached, that the people stood around and said: "That is fine. I always knew that was real religion. That just suits me"?

Not a bit of it. It made them angry. They cursed him. But then they went home and thought about it.

Let me ask another question: What is the real ruling interest we have in religion? Is it God or is it man? Is it the holiness of God and its due, or is it the moral interest of man, and its due? Is it God's sanctity or is it man's moral dignity and its welfare? Upon this consideration let me ask still another question: "Is our religion Christian, and if so, does it lead us on to God? Does Christ serve us, or do we serve him? Is he the object of our faith or only the subject of it? Is he the recipient of our faith or only the exponent of it? He is doubtless our Hero and we imitate him. May it be that in the new religion he stands too much between us and God, and that, while we are looking too much for self-benefits, we never get beyond him to God.

The new religion has a tendency to magnify the love of God at the expense of everything else divine. They who do so often realize that something is wrong. The Gospel Message lacks something to them. It is short of the fullness, the fire, the urgency and the compulsion the Gospel once had. Who is it that can not remember how the message once moved them to penitent tears and action? Why not now?

It lacks practical effect on character. A Gospel of nothing but love can not develop character. It elevates our needs above our duty to God. It makes much of the Gospel meaningless. By it the matter of guilt is put aside; we are taught to forget rather than repent. It makes God our Servant, rather than we his. It makes Christ the Author of a religion of moral culture only,—a religion that terminates in civilization. We only learn, receive, and then enjoy.

Since the tragedy of the cross and the victory of the resurrection we are more than disciples,—we are members of Christ, we are confessors, we are regenerated, new beings. We are now not only disciples of Christ, but we are more,—we are his purchased property, bought with a price. When Paul said: "I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord," he said it after he had magnified that love by consecrated action.

The religion of Jesus is not all love of God,—one-half of it is love of man to God. It is not all gifts of God to man,—one-half of it is service of man to God.

To magnify him is to worship him as a servant seeking to do his will.

THE ROUND TABLE

Her Faith

BY JULIA GRAYDON

It was on the porch of a summer hotel that I heard a man and his wife talking about their little daughter who had gone out with some friends and had been caught in the rain, which was more than an ordinary shower.

The father said: "I must go down to the summer house. She is probably waiting there for me."

"I think," said the mother, "you had better wait. It is raining so hard, and she will find shelter."

"I know," said the father, "but I do not want to destroy her faith in me. She knows I always go for her and bring her back, and she will look for me."

Those words lingered long in my mind, and I thought of that wonderful faith, and the father so anxious not to have it destroyed. What a beautiful relationship it makes! And how I wish more fathers had it, for it will keep both father and daughter in the right path, each helping the other.

Sowing and Reaping.—Gal. 6: 7, 8

BY LEANDER SMITH

We have here a great and important law. We might call it the law of human life. Let us spend a little time looking at the law, so that, if possible, we may see clearly what we have to do with it, and what it has to do with us.

First, there is the fact that underlies the law. It is this: Human life is a sowing and reaping. It is not a succession of isolated experiences. It is a closely-compacted whole. The sowing and reaping are not separated from each other in time, as in the natural harvest. Every day of our life we are sowing something for the future, and reaping something from the past. The sowing and reaping thus go on contemporaneously and continually.

Now for the law: "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." A most simple and natural law,—necessary, one would think, in the nature of things; yet men live on, and sow on, and hope to find it otherwise in their case. We reap what we sow in kind; but the quantity is largely increased. Sow one sin, and you may have a horrible harvest of a dozen or more sins. On the other hand, each act of obedience, self-denial, or kindness, prepares the way for many more.

We come now to the application of the law. Evidently there might be endlessly-varied applications of it. But while there may be endless varieties, there are two great groups, so that we can, looking at the subject broadly, have a twofold application of the law:

1. "He that soweth to his flesh,"—what does that mean? Immediately we think, perhaps, of those whose hearts are set on pampering their baser lusts and passions. But does "the flesh" mean only the baser lusts and passions? Certainly not. Selfishness belongs to the flesh, just as, undoubtedly, lust does. And the same kind of harvest is in store in the end. Not at first. There was a difference in the sowing, and there will be a difference in the reaping.

2. If you expect to reap the harvest of a rich and blessed eternity, you must sow to the Spirit. This does not mean the giving up of all the things of the flesh (for God has promised us the blessing of this life, and of the life to come), but it does mean that all our lower desires are to be regulated, subordinated, and controlled by the higher life of the Son of God.

The Greatest of All

BY LULA R. TINKLE

Every day, yes, every hour, wherever we may be, the rich blessings of our Heavenly Father are on every hand. We sometimes pause, in our busy life, to count our blessings. We name them over and count them one by one, then lift our voices in praise to him who gives them all. We are thankful for the sunshine, for health, for home comforts, for faithful friends, for Heavenly Guidance and for the answers to our prayers. But there is one blessing too incomprehensible for us to appreciate fully. Our appreciation of a thing grows as our estimated value of that thing increases. It helps us to increase the valuation of a blessing when we picture ourselves and surrounding conditions as they might be in the absence of that blessing.

As we assembled in the various churches for worship at Christmas time, to sing our Christmas praises, and hear again the beautiful story of the Christ Child, our hearts were at peace and our minds at ease because we felt so confident that the story we loved was true. But suppose that at that quiet hour, a messenger had rushed into each church of the land and proclaimed to those assembled there, that the story of the Christ Child was a false report, and that the Christ we worship is not the Savior of the world, and that henceforth we must cease our worship,—thus say the high magistrates! Suppose you knew these messengers had come with a true message from authentic powers, what, oh, what would be your feelings? Where, oh, where would be your joy, your aims, your ambitions?

The whole wide land would be in darkness, and our joy and song would be turned to sorrow. No more gifts, no more songs at the glad Christmas tide! Can you picture the grief and despair in every face, young and old? Dwell upon this sad picture until you feel some of the gloom in your own heart. Then turn to the real picture about you, flooded with light from on high! Rejoice! rejoice! the blessing is yours! Christ was truly born and liveth today. Try, in your weakness, to enjoy and appreciate this,—the greatest of all blessings.

How He Knew

BY DAISY M. MOORE

There is a very beautiful story told about the faith of an old fisherman.

One, knowing his simple, childlike trust and wondering at the source of such unwavering confidence in what might not be proven by the usual methods of the senses, said to him one day, "Sir, how do you know that Christ lives and moves and reigns in the hearts of men?"

Turning toward the white cottages set high against the cliffs, the old man asked: "You see those cottages against the cliffs? Sometimes, when I am far out at sea, I know that the sun has risen by the reflections thrown from those windows. Because I see his light reflected from the faces of men and women, as I meet them day by day, and because I feel his love within my own life, I know that Christ lives."

"Ambitions"

BY OLIVER H. AUSTIN

We hear a great deal, these days, about personal ambitions. Why do we have these ambitions? Are they for self-aggrandizement, or are they for the purpose of surpassing our neighbors? Or do we have these ambitions because we have a vision of service?

If your ambition is to be a farmer, farm! If your ambition is to be a hanker, attend to your hanking, hut take God with you. If a merchant, be a merchant on the square. If a teacher, teach as though you were teaching for eternity. If your ambition is to he a preacher, preach the message that will inspire men to better thinking and better living. Preach the message of a Living Christ, who lived to make men free, holy, true, noble, upright, and clean in thought and action.

I know, reader, that you are aware that Jesus Christ in our hearts makes us hetter men and women, so, why should not our ambition, at this time, he to make Jesus Christ REAL to every man, woman, and child, for in this way will the world he made a safe democracy.

We must not only talk religion,—we must live it. If the Christian people of this generation fail to do their whole duty now, in every place and at all times, this old world will indeed, he in a pitiful condition and the coming generations will he driven away from Christ because we failed to do our duty. We must not fail, hut, through the power of God, we must make this world a safe place in which men, women and children of future generations may live harmoniously together in Christian fellowship and hrotherly love.

The soldiers of our own United States of America, and the soldiers of the allied nations have done nohly. Many have given their life-blood in the fight against autocracy. Will the soldiers of Jesus Christ do any less than give of their life-blood for this noble cause of building a world-wide Christian democracy which is the only real solution of the problem now confronting us?

The Need of Conversion

BY JACOB FUNK

Monumental waste is the term that might be readily and truthfully applied to some of the methods of the church in past generations and even at the present time. Partly has this been true because of insufficient workers, hut fundamental in the reason is the fact that there has not been sufficient stress placed upon the matter of conversion. Of course, this is a very homely and possibly an out-of-date term, but, nevertheless, it was a very necessary thing in apostolic times and we are learning that some of the apostolic methods are even today very applicahle and successful.

Christ placed the real value upon it when, with a boldness that almost seems rude, he declared to educated, cultured and enlightened Nicodemus: "Ye must he born again." It was, indeed, a rude awakening for Nicodemus. To the Jewish way of thinking, a leader need simply to come and take charge of the affairs of state and government, and all the people would rally to his standard. Then the Roman Government would be overthrown and the throne of David would be reëstahlished.

But that was not the only thing needed. Indeed, if such a thing would have happened, it would have been no guarantee that the Jews would or could have kept the government intact. There was something radically wrong with the heart of the nation, and though the saying, "Righteousness exalteth a nation," had rung in their ears long years before, yet they did not realize that they needed to be born anew, or made over again. That, however, was the fact in an individual as well as a national way.

But are we not today as blind and as slow of comprehension as was Nicodemus? We are striving to hring a world to Christ and it may he possible that we ourselves do not know him. We are striving to point sinners to the Lamh of God, and we may be chief in the procession. Would it not he a good thing to have a private talk with the Master, and, possibly, instead of hearing him say that we needed hetter-equipped church huildings, more oratory in the sermons, more polish in our manners, more culture in our deportment, come out hluntly, and declare that we must he born again? If this is the case, we may strive, hut our striving will he in vain unless we take heed. The Spirit of God will not dwell in that person or people who have not been cleansed from sin and passed through a complete transformation in their lives.

Paul is a very good example of what a transformed life really is. Without hesitation he went ahout his Father's husiness in a way that caused folks to know that something had happened to him. For this cause we say that there has heen a lot of lost effort in our work. We must he horn again.

I am not pleading for a change of feeling, or of will, or of sentiment, but of heart. When this has been an accomplished fact in our lives there will be hetter-equipped church huildings, more missionaries on the field and more at home in the churches, more effective sermons, hetter culture in society, more upright, cleaned-up, enthusiastic lives than we have ever known before. We have heen putting the cart hefore the horse, and it has been a very awkward and unsatisfactory experience. Loud noise will never take the place of holy living. Machine-made efforts at enrolling church members will never fill up a church with Holy-Spirit-filled individuals, but men and women of God, speaking as they are moved hy the Spirit, will eventually bring about a change in the community, and results,—surprising results,—are sure to follow. It is worth a trial.

CORRESPONDENCE

"Write what thou seest, and send it unto the churches"

FROM OMAJA, CUBA

Ten years ago we were building our church here at Omaja. This was made possible largely through gifts from brethren and sisters in various parts of the United States. The General Mission Board had given me permission to solicit funds for this purpose, and the response was all that could have been expected. During these ten years we have enjoyed regular services in the house, and some of them were by those whom we have been close friends with for the greater part of our lives. We are indeed grateful for what we have enjoyed, and to those who helped us to secure a building.

But now a change has become necessary. Many of our members have left Cuba, and practically all who are left here are counting on leaving before many months. Without members, there is no need of a church building; and so, at a recent meeting of the members, it was decided to sell. The decision of those who are here is to use the money received for the property in some mission field. We are now investigating to see where we shall use it. What we should like is for those who gave anything toward the church to say whether they are willing that the money shall be so used; and we should like to have them say very soon. We shall take it that those who do not say anything against this plan are in favor of it.

We had hoped and worked for better things. But we are in no way responsible for conditions as they now are in Cuba. It is with deep regret that we have made up our minds to leave this land upon which the Creator has showered so many and great blessings. So far as climate and productiveness are concerned, we know of no place equal to Cuba; and we had expected to spend our remaining years here. But since that is not to be, we are looking forward to a new home in which we hope to be located within a few months.

It would be difficult to find a body of members so regular in attendance and so liberal in giving as those who have been here during the years. These things have added much to the pleasure and profit of all and to the good of the cause. When we go north, we shall be widely scattered, but none of us will ever forget the trials and the blessings of our sojourn in Cuba. And our hope is that the Father may guide and keep all to the coming of his kingdom.

FAMINE RELIEF IN INDIA

The usual rains did not come in abundance this year, hence the food-producing crops in this part of India are almost a total failure. There will be some cotton here about Anklesvar, and those who have land with cotton will be able to get along. But farther east of us there is failure in cotton also. Hence in Raj Pipla State, where our Vali station is located, conditions are more acute than at any of our other stations. The poor, who live by the daily wages they earn, are the first to suffer, for when there is no work for them to do they have nothing in store to tide them over until next season. Word from Ahwa states that the main crops are about half. About Jalalpor they are from thirty to forty per cent.

One way by which the people try to help themselves is by stealing. Unfortunately, for months, in the villages and along the railroad, there has been a great amount of thieving. Organized bands from villages near the railroad are out at night, stealing all the grain they can from running freight trains. A number from their party board a long freight train and throw off sacks of grain, which are then carried off by the other members of the gang. This has become a serious problem to railroad officials and men in authority, who have armed the guards on these trains.

The Government states that there is sufficient food in India to feed the people, but the big problem is that of distribution. Many selfish dealers, in place of assisting the Government to get grain into the hands of the needy as quickly and cheaply as possible, will hold their grain at a high price in order to enrich themselves. Our mission, in answer to a request from the Government, has offered to assist officials in the relief measures that will be undertaken by the Government. In many places grain is being stored so as to be available when the need arises. In Raj Pipla State large tanks, that have become dry, are now being dug deeper, thus providing work for many people. Other constructive works will be opened by the Government as the need arises in all famine-stricken regions to provide work for the people. This is the best kind of famine relief work, because it helps the people to help themselves and does not make beggars of them. At many places the Government is also opening orphanages for children needing such help.

Because of the evil results that followed gratuitous relief work in the famine of 1900, our Field Committee has decided that such relief work should be confined, as much as possible, to children and to those who can not work. A Famine Relief Committee was appointed by the recent Committee Meeting at Bulsar, consisting of Brethren Stover, Ross and Long. The General Mission Board was asked to sanction, by cable, the using of $10,000 in famine relief work. This committee met at Anklesvar Nov. 27, to act upon matters needing attention. The Vali missionaries were asked to be present, since the relief measures under immediate consideration are so vitally related to the needs of their field.

The committee began its work under the supposition that famine relief money will be forthcoming. Four lines of relief measures were acted upon: A loan, to the extent of four hundred rupees, if needed, was granted to a brother named Dana, to enable him to save his land without borrowing from unscrupulous money lenders, who would exact such a high rate of interest as to cause him to lose his land in the end. Many a poor man loses his land in that way. Thus, in famine time, the poor virtually become slaves to the rich for years to come.

Those who come to us for help, and are able to work, are given employment. Our farmer boys at Vali, having raised no crops, will be given pay, in exchange for the work they may do. A stone road needs to be built from the mission compound at Vali to the boarding-school,—a distance of about forty rods. This is badly needed in the rainy season. To gather stones from the fields and the near-by creek for this road, will provide work for some little time, until the contemplated building operations, to enlarge the boarding-school at Vali and to provide buildings for the medical needs at Umalla station, get under way. Vali is three miles from the station,—Umalla,—which accounts for the decision to locate our medical work of Raj Pipla State there, near the R. R. station, as it will be much more convenient and accessible for both our medical workers and their patients.

The third line of relief work considered has reference to the children attending our village schools. In order to give them the help which many of them so much need, it was decided that each missionary be given the privilege to try out the following plan for fifteen days, in any two of his village schools, and afterwards report results to the Relief Committee: For six days in the week, excluding Saturday, each child who is in school for five hours is to be given one meal a day. It is expected that this will result in a larger attendance of both day-school and Sunday-school. The plan will be extended to other schools as the need justifies, should the results be satisfactory.

Finally, steps were taken to establish a Foundlings' Home, as sanctioned at the recent meeting of the Field Committee. The need for this arises from the results of the recent influenza epidemic, more so than from present famine conditions; however, the latter tends to make the need of such a home much more imperative than it otherwise would be. This Home will be at Vali, under the care of Sister Himmelsbaugh, until it can be transferred with her medical work to Umalla. Only children four years old and under will be admitted. An Indian nurse and other women helpers will be secured to assist in the work. When necessary arrangements are completed, children will be admitted. May the Lord bless and direct all these efforts to relieve suffering, to his glory and to his praise!

LIGHT AND DELIGHT

With a "Homes" writing tablet I am able to send letters to my friends again. Of course my dear wife must doctor my words some yet, but I intend to grow.

The "Homes" machine for the blind and the near blind is a very simple device, made in Los Angeles by an aged blind man at the cost of $2.50. The State Library Association teaches the blind of California free of cost. The teacher in this county, Miss Morrison, has sixty-five pupils, some as old as seventy and on up to eighty-seven years, most of whom are learning to read, using the Moon raised letter system. The association is reaching out into other States, helping the blind. I began the study of raised letters Jan. 21, so as to be able to continue to read at least portions of the Bible. I can succeed. This teacher goes to many homes to give lessons.

If any one desires a "Homes" tablet, write me at 1247 Maryland Avenue, Glendale, Cal. M. M. Eshelman.

ROCKTON, PENNSYLVANIA

In the spring of 1914, thirty members, representing a dozen families belonging to the local church at Rockton, began a work of faith that has been blessed of God, and doubtless will continue as a blessing to others.

It was in July of 1914 that, with only about $800 in hand, the church began the building of a new house of worship,—the old one no longer being suitable for worship without extensive repairs. It was an old wooden building on a poor foundation. Some thought it was not yet time to build, and some could not see their way clear to do so, but with encouragement from Eld. A. Fyock, the work was begun, in faith believing that the Lord was directing the work. The wisdom of building then can be fully realized now, for at no time since then could labor and material have been procured at the prices then paid. The building would have cost double, to build it today. In the meantime the new building has afforded better facilities for the Sunday-school and all other church services.

The work began in July, and the building was finally dedicated in December. The money necessary for the building was raised, it might be said, "without the noise of a hammer." Silently and persistently the work went on, and always, when needed, the money came, although the membership is small and all depend on daily labor for a living. There is not a well-to-do family in the membership, yet today the church building stands free of debt, with a balance of $45.88 on the credit side. The building is a neat, commodious, brick structure, arranged conveniently for Sunday-school work, and cost a trifle over $6,000, which includes a thousand dollars' worth of donated labor.

Considering the small membership, limited circumstances, and other difficulties in the way, it has taken a large measure of faith to accomplish these results. How true that, where men place their money, with faith and works acting together, a great spiritual gain will follow! The year 1918 closed with every department of the church hav-

THE QUIET HOUR

Suggestions for the Weekly Devotional Meeting Or for Prayerful, Private Meditation

Winning the World for Christ

Mark 16: 15, 16

For Week Beginning February 23, 1919

1. Introductory.—(1) A personal command: "Go ye." (2) An extensive charge: "All the world," "Every creature." (3) A glorious mission: "Preach the Gospel." Tell the glad tidings of (a) pardon, (b) power, (c) hope. (4) Go, send, pray, pay!

2. The Divine Message Must Be Proclaimed.—To each one of us comes the Great Commission, "Go!" And as we go, we are to "witness." We are to be the Lord's witnesses. If the world ever hears of Jesus, it will be because we tell of him. Do not lose sight of Christ's wonderful word, "Lo!" Many, perhaps, are ready to claim the Master's promised presence, but the "Lo" is joined to the "Go"; it is "Go, and lo, I am with you alway." If we would possess the "Lo," we must "Go," in sacrifice, if not in person. These are the words of Jesus to us, and when we heed them, the whole world will soon be put in touch with Jesus' message to the lost. Where, then, is the trouble that so little progress is made in heathen lands? Here is the answer: "So long as the church spends almost ninety-five per cent of the money, contributed by her members, on the work in America, and only about five per cent in the heathen world, the work of missions can not be successfully prosecuted."

3. Some Things to Ponder.—Only one out of every four women, and only one out of every eight men, of the average church, have given contributions to foreign missions. Only one cent a year is spent for each one of the 1,000,000,000 non-Christians in heathen lands. We spend $15 at home for every one of the 20,000,000 Christians of America, each year. There is one minister of the Gospel at home for every 546 people, and only one minister in heathen lands for every 275,000 persons.

4. The Blessing That Comes to the Giver.—When our Master said it is more blessed to give than to receive, he meant, if he meant anything, that the giver received greater blessings than the recipient of the gift. He meant that the reflex influence of giving was more blessed than even the direct influence. He meant that he who gives to missions receives greater benefits than those to whom the gifts are sent. The greatest work of foreign missions is accomplished at home and not abroad. It is wrought in the hearts of Christian men and women who give their money and their lives,—even more so than in the hearts of the heathen to whom the Gospel comes. He meant that the herald of the good tidings had a happier lot than the mere hearer of the tidings.

5. Giving Yourself to the Work.—If you want to do people good, you can readily find an opportunity, but you will have to pay the price for it. The price is personal sacrifice and effort. The example of Christ is the all-instructive one in the case. People talk about him being their Pattern, but they often forget that,—whatever more there was, in Christ's vicarious sacrifice,—there was this in it,—the exemplification for all time of the one law, that by personal influence alone can men be won for the Kingdom.

6. Suggestive References.—The ultimate glory of the church (Isa. 60). "Declare his glory among the heathen" (1 Chron. 16: 23, 24). Jonah's mission to the Ninevites (Jonah 3: 1-9). The Gospel to be preached as a witness to all nations (Matt. 24: 14). "Teach all nations" (Matt. 28: 19, 20). The call of Saul (Acts 26: 14-18). Great opportunities do not exclude adversaries (1 Cor. 16: 9). Pray for more laborers (Luke 10: 2). Be not weary in well doing (Gal. 6: 9).

AMONG THE CHURCHES

Bro. J. Edw. Jarboe, of Chicago, at West Wichita church, Kans.

Bro. J. B. Shaffer, of Nestorville, W. Va., at Littleton, same State.

Bro. J. E. Shepler, of Benton Ferry, W. Va., at Moatsville, same State.

Bro. Ralph G. Rarick and wife, of South Bend, Ind., in the Buchanan church, Mich.

GAINS FOR THE KINGDOM

Five accepted Christ in the Bethany church, Ind.

One has been added to the Wakarusa church, Ind.

Three were baptized in the Homestead church, Mich.

Three have recently accepted Christ in the Manchester church, Ind.

Two have been baptized in the Maple Glen church, Pa., since last heard from.

One has been baptized and another awaits the rite in the Roanoke City church, Va.

Seven have been baptized in the Shippensburg church, Pa., since the last report.

Seven confessed Christ in the Empire church, Cal.,—Bro. D. L. Miller, of Pasadena, same State, evangelist.

Two were baptized in the Indian Creek church, Pa.,—Bro. Nathan Martin, of Rheems, same State, evangelist.

One accepted Christ in the Middletown church, Ind.,—Bro. Jos. Spitzer, of Summitville, same State, evangelist.

Fourteen confessed Christ in the Nappanee church, Ind., —Bro. Chas. Bonsack, of New Windsor, Md., evangelist.

Twenty-five,—thirteen of whom are from the Boys' Boarding School,—were baptized in the Anklesvar church, India.

Ten,—making sixteen in all,—accepted Christ at Woodvale, Cal.,—Bro. Price Robertson, of Lindsay, same State, evangelist.

Four were received by baptism in the Yellow River church, Ind.,—Bro. S. J. Burger, of Howe, same State, evangelist.

Eighteen confessed Christ and one was reclaimed in the Twin Falls church, Idaho,—Bro. M. Alva Long, of Weiser, same State, evangelist.

Twenty-two were baptized and two reinstated in the Huntingdon church, Pa.,—Bro. H. S. Replogle, of Windber, same State, evangelist.

Nine confessed Christ, seven of whom have been baptized, in the Hollidaysburg church, Pa.,—Bro. J. J. Shaffer, of Berlin, same State, evangelist.

Fifty-five confessed Christ, thirty-six of whom have been baptized, in the Waynesboro church, Pa.,—Bro. Galen B. Royer, of Huntingdon, same State, evangelist.

Nineteen more,—making fifty-five in all,—have accepted Christ in the Ottumwa church, Iowa,—Bro. J. Edw. Jarboe, of Chicago, Ill., evangelist. Thirty-eight have already been baptized.

CONTEMPLATED MEETINGS

Bro. E. E. Eshelman, of Fostoria, Ohio, to begin April 20 in his home church.

Bro. J. Edwin Jarboe, of Chicago, to begin March 2 in the Denver church, Colo.

Bro. F. E. McCune, of Lawrence, Kans., to begin Feb. 16 in the Mt. Morris church, Ill.

Bro. S. I. Bowman, of Harrisonburg, Va., to begin Feb. 16 in the Harrisburg church, Pa.

Bro. S. E. Thompson, of Garden City, Kans., to begin Nov. 2 in the Abilene church, same State.

Bro. C. B. Smith, of Morrill, Kans., to begin the latter part of April in the Omaha church, Nebr.

Bro. H. H. Helman, of Maple Grove church, Ashland, Ohio, to begin in his home church early in May.

Bro. J. H. Fike, of Middlebury, Ind., to begin next August in the Lower Deer Creek church, same State.

Bro. W. A. Deardorff, of Brantford, N. Dak., to begin some time in June in the Poplar Valley church, Mont.

Bro. Wm. Thompson, of Conway Springs, Kans., to begin April 6 in the Pleasant View church, same State.

Bro. A. B. Miller, of Hagerstown, Md., to begin March 11, in the Walnut Grove church, Johnstown congregation, Pa.

Bro. H. C. Early, of Penn Laird, Va., to begin the latter part of August in the Beech Grove house, Chippewa church, Ohio.

Bro. Otho Winger, of North Manchester, Ind., to begin some time during the summer at Hartville, East Nimishillen church, Ohio.

PERSONAL MENTION

Bro. D. F. Lepley, of Connellsville, Pa., took occasion last week, in connection with a business trip to Chicago, to run out to Elgin and extend his greetings to the "Messenger."

Bro. J. A. Stouder, whose address in the 1919 Yearbook is given as Leonard, Mo., should now be addressed at R. D. 1, Cherry Box, same State. His correspondents are kindly requested to enter the necessary correction in their copy of the Yearbook.

At the meeting at the Publishing House, last week, in the interests of the Relief and Reconstruction Work, besides the members of the executive committee, the following-named brethren were present: A. J. Culler, of McPherson, Kans.; Geo. W. Flory, of Covington, Ohio, and John Heckman, of Polo, Ill.

Relief and Reconstruction

One thing that stands out prominently in this work is the great interest our people take in feeding the hungry, clothing the naked and relieving the suffering. The Relief and Reconstruction Committee was appointed by the Goshen Conference. Even before that time money had been received for relief work.

On the part of many there has been a feeling that the Governments will largely handle the reconstruction work in France and Belgium. The same is true with reference to feeding and clothing the people. Naturally, not much money has been given to our committee for this part of the work. But there has been a deep sympathy for the suffering Armenians and Syrians. Last year our people, through the Relief and Reconstructin Committee, gave thousands for these poor people who have suffered innocently. This year the quota asked frnm our schools was set at $20,000. The response has been very liberal. Ynu will find an itemized statement of all receipts in the "Missionary Visitor." Naturally that statement must be about two months late.

For some time many have been pointing to Armenia and Syria as the place where our people should cnncentrate their efforts. Their heart has been with these people. There is no Government tn help them. There is no stehle Government through which the United States can wnrk. As a result, the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief has been handling the work. Tbey have been making a drive for $30,000,000. Tbey hope to reach that amount. They are now sending cargoes nf supplies to the East. They have a strong nrganizatinn. They are seeking the help of others who are willing to co-operate.

Interviews witb their secretary revealed the fact that they would appreciate nur help. This has opened the way for us, as a people, to work under their direction, have the benefit of their efficient organization, secure our field of oporations and supplies through them, and thus accomplish the most in the shortest time and at the least expense.

But to do this will require men and means. Our people are willing and anxious to assist. For this reason your committee comes with its plans which have been worked out after not a little time and effort.

Your committee is making c all for $250,000 for Armenia and Syria from the Church nf the Brethren in 1919. That sounds like a big sum. Well, it is a big sum. But the sum is not as big as tbo need nor is it as big as we could make it, or would make it, if it were our nwn families that have lost all in this dreadful period thrnugh which these people have passed. Put yourself in their place, and judge frnm that what you would do. This means an average of two dnllars and fifty cents per member. Is that impossible? Give your own answer.

A numbor of rogional secretaries have been secured who will organize their territory and secure assistants for smaller territory. These assistants will come in touch with each local church, and in this way every member will be reached. Tho machinory is not complicated. The work will not be heavy because so many are taking hold of it. You can make it easy by doing your part.

In looking for a brother whn should take charge of the work in Armenia, your committeo finally settled upon Bro. A. J. Culler. He has agreed to take tho work and has arranged to leave his congregation and collego and give one year to this worthy cause. Arrangements are now being made for him to leave the States in the near future. Others will follow. It is the hope of the committoo that wo may have brethren whose hearts the Lord will lay this task, so that they will give of their means and even themselves for suffering humanity.

One thing furthor: Neither the committee nor any of the workors wish this work to detract from our general missionary offerings. All are eager to help put across the Conforonce Offering of $150,000 which is so much needed. The month of April has been solected to push Armenia. May and June are rosorved for Missions and Education. Wo even hope that gifts to Armonia and interest in that work may stimulate the gifts tn, and interest in, missinnary and educatinnal activities.

J. E. Miller, Chairman.

Bro. C. C. Cripe, of Auburn, Ind., is to assume the pastorate of the Waddams Grove church, Ill.,—according to a recent report from that congregation.

Bro. J. W. Grater, now in pastoral charge of the work at Decatur, Ill., has moved from his temporary address, 417 East Stewart Avenue, to 1233 North Water Street, his permanent address.

Bro. Mays Heiney, who has given a portion of his time, for the past few years, to the teaching of music in a number of the Middle Western States, has changed his address from Huntington, Ind., to Haxtun, Colo.

Bro. R. A. Saylor, of Bradford, Ohio, has arranged to give some of his time to evangelistic work, and churches desiring his services are requested to communicate with him at as early a date as praeticable, that he may arrange his schedule to the best advantage of all concerned.

Bro. W. P. Noffsinger should have been listed as pastor of the Union City church, Ind., in the 1919 Yearbook, instead of the name that is given in the "List of Churches and Missions, with Pastors and Elders in Charge." Those interested will please turn to the place in question, and make the correction as indicated.

ELSEWHERE IN THIS ISSUE

The Deer Park church, Minn., desires to secure the services of a pastor, and invites correspondence from possible applicants. Please turn to the notice of Sister Pearl M. Ramer, among the Notes, for further information regarding this ministerial opportunity.

Bro. Edgar Rothrock, Moderator of the last District Conference of Nebraska and Northeastern Colorado, makes an announcement to the churches of his District on page 108. It will be noted that the next District Conference, postponed from last October, is to be held in the South Beatrice church, near Holmesville, Nebr., April 22 to 27.

MISCELLANEOUS

The District Meeting and other gatherings of Northwestern Kansas and Northeastern Colorado will convene in the Belleville church, Kans., April 11 to 14, inelusive.

The Relief and Reconstruction Work for April, the Conference Missionary Offering and our Educational interests for May and June, and the Forward Movement right now and all the time,—yes, that's the program. You have the right idea.

There's the India Famine Fund, too. You are not forgetting about that, are you? Had you not better send in a check for that right now, while you think of it? You can send the balance later, when you get your mind made up as to how much you want to give.

"Peter's Puny Love" is the striking phrase we saw in a recent list of evangelistic sermon-subjects. "What a Sinner Must Not Do to Be Saved" is another. And here are two more of them: "The Character of Heaven" and "What the Holy Spirit Will Do Today for the Christian."

The members of the South Keokuk congregation, Iowa, always glad to welcome loyal members into their community, are just now hoping that a small available property near the churchhouse will be occupied by some one who could also serve the church as janitor. For particulars address Bro. H. N. Butler, Richland, Iowa.

The Pleasant View congregation, Md., is entitled to honorable mention by reason of having succeeded in getting the "Messenger" into the home of every member. Doubtless there are many other congregations that have been equally successful, and we shall be glad to make mention of all such, thereby inspiring others to a like degree of efficiency.

To answer all inquiries concerning the postponed Sunday-School Institute of Northeastern Ohio, we are requested to publish the following from Sister Emma Rohrer, Secretary of the Board: "As influenza is still prevalent in many localities, the Board of Control has decided entirely to withdraw the Institute this winter, looking forward to the one that will be held next winter."

The Waddams Grove church, Ill., decided not to remodel the house at Louisa, after hearing the report of the committee, and will, instead, build a new house, for which $10,000 has already been pledged. One brother offered $5,000 for the new structure. The location of the proposed church is more central and also more desirable in other respects. We are looking forward to reports of great achievements in the Waddams Grove church.

We are in receipt of a clipping from the Muncie, Ind., "Star," which gives a very creditable write-up of the meetings, now being conducted by Bro. Hugh Miller, of Gettysburg, Ohio. The little band of members at Muncie, with Bro. Geo. L. Studebaker as pastor in charge, is evidently enjoying a season of refreshing. After reading the very fair description of the meetings,—together with the leading topics discussed,—we were impressed with the desirability of thus presenting our claims to the community at large. Editors of most local papers are perfectly willing to give publicity to special meetings, revivals, etc., and our people should not be slow to make use of the opportunities thus presented.

AROUND THE WORLD

Increasing Use of Tobacco

According to a recent statement of the War Department, "tobacco seems to be established as a necessity in the soldier's life,—ninety-five per cent of the members of the American Expeditionary Forces using it in some form." It is a part of the regular daily ration, but "the quantity allowed is not sufficient for the average tobacco user." However, every soldier may buy "cigars, cigarettes and tobacco at the canteens in unlimited quantities." So far as tobacco is concerned, the war situation has apparently largely increased the use of the weed in every way. Since the signing of the Armistice, the monthly purchases of the Subsistence Division of the army call for 425,000,000 cigarettes and 20,000,000 cigars.

Starving Childhood

Recent investigations by sociologists in various cities of our land have revealed some astounding conditions among the children. It was found that thousands of children in school were prevented from doing thorough and effective school work because of a serious lack of nourishing food,—they were actually dying of slow starvation. While there is no real lack of food in this country, if properly distributed, these little ones failed to receive the food to which they were justly entitled. The parents, in many cases, were not to blame, as they did the best they could, with the resources available. In other cases, however, the drink demon was responsible for insufficient food and the consequent lack of bodily vigor.

The National Church Census

For the first time the official census of the churches is to contain a tabulation of church membership by sexes, and if we may believe advance figures, furnished by the "Federal Council of Christ in America," the enrollment of women still exceeds that of men, but the margin of preponderance is narrower than popular opinion has usually assigned to the gentler sex. It is shown that 197,404 congregations out of 228,007 in the United States report a membership of 19,990,204 women, and 15,653,958 men, or a trifle over 56 per cent women. Catholics show a larger than normal ratio of men, there being only 300,000 more women than men in that religious body. Southern Methodists, Colored Baptists, and Colored Methodists show a two-thirds ratio in favor of the women.

The Future of Palestine

Recently four hundred delegates from all sections of the United States, and representing more than three million American Jews, assembled at Philadelphia for the second session of the American Jewish Congress. With the present bright prospects for the early reëstablishment of a Jewish nation in Palestine, and the realization of the aspirations of the Jewish people throughout the world, it is not strange that the delegates were unusually enthusiastic. While, perhaps, it can hardly be expected that all or even a majority of the Jews will settle in Palestine, there will, nevertheless, be a fair representation. The project has already been approved by France, Italy and Serbia, and also by President Wilson. It is said that the attitude of the Peace Conference is also favorable to the plan.

"Converted" Breweries Getting Busy

Brewers have wailed loud and long, because,—as they claimed,—the prohibition enactment would eventually leave them with costly plants on their hands, and no possible way of utilizing them profitably. At latest reports the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Association Plant, at St. Louis,—known as the most extensive establishment of that sort in the world,—is to engage in the packing of pork before March 1. The owners have been assured by experts that the vast plant is ideally adapted to that line of work, so, after all, they will sustain no financial loss. We lack space to enumerate the many other breweries that have made a satisfactory change to other lines of activity, but one of the most pleasing transformations is that of the brewery at Flint, Mich., which has been "converted" into a church.

"Wall Street Journal" Against Prohibition

Temperance workers who thought that the battle was wholly won when more than thirty-six States ratified the Prohibition Amendment, will ere long come to the conclusion that some unexpected tactics by the wily foe are still to be reckoned with. Note this extract from the "Wall Street Journal": "Our grandfathers, and probably future ages, might wonder what stage of hysteria this country had reached when the Legislatures of more than the necessary thirty-six States, had, under the most flagrant system of lobbying and terrorism, by a small minority, passed a prohibition amendment to the Constitution. Clumsily drawn, it is capable of all sorts of interpretation, and absolutely incapable of enforcement as a Federal Police measure, unless the minority of our people are to keep the majority in jail, and provide for their support." Poor old Wall Street! If the extract quoted reflects, to some extent, the sentiment of the men who support the publication above referred to, they certainly need enlightenment. Perhaps Wall Street has looked so long and intently at the dollars, that it can see nothing else that is beautiful and really worth striving for. It is surely a case of perverted vision.

Another Testimony

Abram L. Elkus, former United States ambassador to Turkey, paints this graphic word picture of conditions as he found them in Armenia: "I thought I knew what hunger and poverty were, but I had no real conception of their meaning until I saw them in the Near East. It was no unusual thing in the cities to find, in the morning, bodies of women and children who had died of starvation and suffering during the night. Thousands would stand in line all day and all night to get a little soup and a small piece of bread. The 400,000 orphans of Armenia are crowding every available building. These little ones cry aloud to America for help. The roads of Asia Minor are white with skeletons of Armenians. While the dying and the dead are beyond our help, those who are still alive certainly should be saved."

Why the Korean Church Grows

In the days of the early church, the believers, when driven away from Jerusalem, "went everywhere preaching the Word." The same thing is true of the Koreans, many of whom, owing to the unprecedented rise in foodstuffs, found it impossible to live in their native land,—Chosen,—and so moved into the near-by Manchuria. True to the apostolic precedent, the Koreans not only took their religion with them but also made it known to others. As a result, a number of new churches have sprung up in Manchuria, and many old churches have been largely increased,—in some cases doubled. A number of congregational missionary societies have been started, and are flourishing. By means of these it is hoped to come in touch with many of the heathen communities, and bring them under Gospel influences.

"Neighborhood Bible Study Classes"

Those who have achieved a marked success in their plans for community uplift, have found the interdenominational "Neighborhood Bible Study Class" a factor of great value. Not only does it promote an increase of Bible knowledge, but also does it bring about greater sociability in the community. Any neighborhood can have such a class if a few are willing to start it. The one who is placed in direct charge need not, necessarily, be a trained instructor. Provided his attitude is right, and he has the coöperation of the others, the class is sure to be a practical help and a wonderful bond of fellowship. Bible study of this sort undoubtedly gives breadth of vision and a proper conception of its important truths. Then, too, it will do much to eliminate the exclusive narrowness, too often characteristic of isolated groups of believers.

Who Are the Armenians?

Briefly answering an inquiry concerning the Armenians, we give the following: The Armenians trace their history to Noah. The country which they have always occupied, in whole or in part, embraces the upper waters of the Euphrates, the Tigris, the Halys, and the Araxes Rivers, which originally are said to have emanated from the Garden of Eden. Armenians have ever been noted for their commercial ability, agricultural resourcefulness, habits of industry, and their devotion to domestic pursuits. The race has produced many eminent men. In 301 A. D. the Armenian race adopted Christianity as its national religion. Since that country was the first nation to take that step, Christianity must have been taught and practiced among them prior to that date. Armenians have not only fostered modern education themselves, and in their own country, but thousands of their young men and women have studied in the educational centers of the world.

Vigilance Is Needed

Again and again our people have been warned against sending their children to schools where their religious principles are not thoroughly safeguarded. That there are just grounds for care in this respect, is amply verified by statements made at the "Conference on World Religions and Vital Christianity," recently in session at the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, and largely attended by Bible students. Dr. J. M. Gray, of that school, in an address, referred to the deplorable departures from true evangelical Christianity at many higher institutions of learning. Concerning a leading university in Chicago he made this sweeping statement: "It stands today for all that is opposed to the things we understand to constitute the Gospel of Christ." In vindication of his stern arraignment, he read the following extract from a book by a leading professor of the university: "In the light of the new historical criticisms, the Bible is a natural and not a supernatural book. A religion for the twentieth century must be made by twentieth-century people. It was the Bible writers who adopted the 'myth' of the God-Man. Our belief in the Godhead of Christ is a myth. There is now more appreciation of Christ as a man, and less emphasis on his virgin birth and his supernatural nature. The statement in the Scriptures that 'without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sin,' is both foolish and futile." Dr. A. H. Strong, of the Baptist Theological Seminary, Rochester, N. Y., made the following noteworthy statement: "Unbelief in theological teaching, like a blinding mist, is slowly settling down upon the churches. We are ceasing to be evangelical, and we will in due time cease to exist." That such is the case in many of the leading churches, is all too true, and the reason for it is found in wrong teaching. Dr. Gray significantly said: "The apostasy, predicted in the Scriptures, is settling down upon us at an awful rate." There is great need, these days, of heeding Paul's admonition in 2 Tim. 4: 1-5.

A Salutary Change

Anticipating the day when national prohibition will close the doors of every saloon in the United States, many of the liquor men are already disposing of their stock on hand and their fixtures, preparatory to the surrender of their leases. Community clubs are taking many of these vacated properties and are using them for "neighborhood centers." Two of these have been established in one of the worst districts of New York, where they will serve as veritable lighthouses in an environment of deplorable darkness. One of the "centers" is for boys in their teens, offering every opportunity for mental and moral uplift. The other one, for men in general, aims to provide every facility for social intercourse, or discussion of topics for community betterment. Surely, this is a change truly worth while!

"Bone-Dry" Campaign for China

Already the noted "Woman's Christian Temperance Union" is planning to raise $25,000 for prohibition extension in other lands, with special reference to the emergency in China, to which country brewing equipment is now being shipped by United States brewers. China, just recovering from its long years of opium smoking, is viewing this move of the liquor people with fear, and has called upon the United States to prohibit the exportation of machinery. Such prohibition, however, is manifestly impracticable. Anti-liquor associations can, however, coöperate with missionaries, already at work in China, in starting a campaign for bone-dry provincial prohibition in that land. Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts, of Washington, is taking steps to this end, and hopes to enlist the coöperation of every believer in temperance principles.

Another World Problem

A leading writer calls attention to the fact that there can be no hope of permanent peace, as long as the ratio of increase, in the world's population, is as large as it has been in past years. He tells us that Russia, since the days of Peter the Great, has increased from thirteen millions to at least one hundred and fifty millions. Great Britain has about four times as many people as she had a century ago. The United States has doubled its population since 1880. Should these countries increase at the same ratio for the next hundred years, their populations would be as follows: Russia, 600 millions; Great Britain, 180 millions; the United States, 500 millions. From these figures he argues that the intense struggle for existence is bound to bring about hostilities. How strange that this writer can see nothing in the abounding promises of the Father as to the all-sufficiency of nature's fruitage for the needs of man, especially in view of the fact that improved methods of agriculture are constantly adding to the total output!

The Sufferers in Armenia

In view of the call for assistance by our Committee for Reconstruction Work in Armenia and other parts of the Near East, some facts by Dr. Pratt Judson, the noted educator,—who has just returned from an extensive official tour to that region,—will be of special interest. He traversed all of Persia and European Turkey. He came in personal touch with some 25,000 refugees,—Syrians and Armenians,—along the banks of the river Tigris in Mesopotamia. The able-bodied men among them are aiding the British in building roads, but the women and children are wholly dependent upon the charity of kind donors in other lands. When they reached the Tigris they had made a toilsome journey of seven hundred miles through storms, wind and rain, amid hardships which we can not even imagine. The clothing on their backs was tattered and torn. They were totally worn out, hungry and exhausted, when they reached camp. The smaller children had been carried on their mothers' backs. Many of the little ones, however, had fallen by the wayside and perished, while some could still be seen toddling along the road. Dr. Judson found all social conditions greatly demoralized. People in many sections were wandering through the mountains, vainly searching for shelter. Many were sleeping beneath wintry skies. Everywhere they were dying by scores and hundreds. All this is the result of centuries of tyranny. Society will have to be reconstructed from the foundation up. Order must be established where none exists now. The people are looking to America for guidance and help, but first they need life,—they must eat and be clothed. This is the task confronting the people of our land. Are we ready to assume it?

HOME AND FAMILY

Procrastination

BY RHETTA O'ROURKE

A neighbor who lives just across from me,
Is needing a helping hand;
His fields, with waves of the amber grain,
Gold ripe for the harvest stand.
Tomorrow I'll help him to store it away,
But I can't spare the time today.

A sister of mine is standing in fear,
Where the highways of life divide,
Her hand fast clasped in the horny palm
Of a tempter who waits by her side.
Tomorrow I'll help her to choose her way,
But I haven't the time today.

An outcast sits by the beaten path,
Where the Jericho road leads down,
Longing for pardon and peace and hope,
But dreading the world's cold frown.
Tomorrow I'll teach her to sing and pray,
But I'm really too busy today.

How often we borrow an hour from tomorrow,
And fill it with promises bright,
So quickly forgetting 'mid toiling and fretting,
Probation may end tonight!

Grandmother Warren

BY BESS BATES

1. John and Mary

GRANDMOTHER WARREN had been writing for some time. Little smiles disturbed the tiny wrinkles on her face and gave her an almost mischievous look at times. At last, she looked up from her work and spoke to Sally, who, as usual, was busily crocheting by the window.

"Sally," she asked, "what are you going to give John and Mary for a wedding present?"

"Why, I thought I had told you," answered Sally. "I am going to put this lace around a doily."

"So you did, so you did, Sally. I remember now. I have just been preparing my present. I am going to give them advice. Mary has so many pretty things, she wouldn't care for anything my shaky fingers could produce, and as long as prices are so high, I guess we had better not spend any more money than we have to, so I am going to give them some advice. I suppose they won't take it. That is one peculiarity about advice,—everyone has plenty to give and no one cares to accept very much. But I have fixed this up so that I know each of them will read it with attention.

"I have written them each the same thing, and placed the letters in separate envelopes which I addressed this way: 'To be opened after your first quarrel.'"

"But suppose they don't quarrel?" asked Sally, who was maidenly ignorant of the tribulations of married life.

Grandmother smiled. "My dear Sally, John is developing. I hear that he has made a success down there in the office as bookkeeper. He has a mind of his own. Mary, likewise, is no milk and water girl. Norton's will lose a good clerk when she marries. Mr. Norton told me himself that if she were only a man, he would make her a head clerk. Mary has had money to spend and has made her own way for three years, and she is independent. She loves John, and John loves her, but the time will come when they will read these letters. They look on each other as being perfect now. Mary always dresses up when John comes to see her. She is pleasant and happy, and if she happens to be tired, John is properly sympathetic and attentive. John, too, shows off his best side. They love each other, but each of them thinks that the other is about perfect. Now, after they live together every day, for a while, they will suddenly discover faults. There will be hurt feelings and, maybe, actual quarrels. I don't know when that time will come, but I want to help them over it if possible, so I have written these letters. If they follow them out, twenty years from now they will thank me, if I am here, for giving them the best present they ever received."

"What's in the letter?" asked Sally, more curious than usual.

Grandmother smiled and opened one of the letters, which she read.

"Dear John:—

"Go to Mary and tell her exactly how you feel about this trouble. Before you accuse her of anything, say sincerely: 'I love you.' Then talk it over. Make up every quarrel before night, and then, I guarantee, no quarrel of yours will ever end disastrously."

"I wrote Mary the same."

Grandmother smiled reminiscently. "That was the only rule of our married life and we stuck to it. It used to be hard for me to go to Grandfather and tell him how I felt when we had trouble. I was proud and always knew that I was right. Somehow, though, after we talked it over, we both felt that we had been wrong and then we would almost quarrel again, for we each wanted to give in the most. We never quarreled so very much, and after a while we got so that we did not quarrel at all. We seemed to have more faith in each other. If Grandfather was cross, or did something I didn't like, I didn't get angry, for I knew that he loved me and that he was only tired or had misunderstood. He felt the same way toward me. It was during the first years of adjustment that we needed that rule and it always worked.

"So I thought that if I could get John and Mary to try out this rule, it might preserve their happiness. They are such fine young people that they ought to have the best of life. They are going to grow and develop, and so there are bound to be adjustments all along the way. I hope this will help them over the bad places and get them started happily into their lives."

Grandmother sealed the envelopes, as she finished speaking, and as she did so, she smilingly wondered whether age could pass back its lessons to youth.

How They Do in Uncle Joe's Church

BY NORA E. BERKEBILE

"WELL, Joseph, did you ever see a sweeter child than that little one of Molly Dean's? Really, she is the most knowing-looking child I ever saw. Today, when her mother had her in the class, she looked up into the face of Bro. Wilson, as he taught the class, just as if she knew all he was talking about. Then there was that little baby of Milly Brown's. It has not been so strong, and today is the first Milly brought her to church. Never a whimper did she make, and those two mothers enjoyed the entire sermon and the minister said the babies were an inspiration to him.

"If they had cried, there is the nice little room where they could have taken them, and, as soon as they were quieted, they could have heard all the sermon. I notice, too, the children and young folks do not pay much attention to the babies in church. I guess it is because they see them, and a lot of them, so often, that a baby in church is no novelty.

"Alice James says it was such a comfort to her, when she moved here, to learn that babies are always welcome. Where she came from, a mother scarcely dared to come to church months before the baby came, and months afterwards, lest some of the people would object. She thinks we have the quietest services here, for the babies learn from the first that they must be good in church.

"Where she came from the children dared not go until they were three or four years old. She said there was one woman in that church who just stormed if any one brought a baby. She always said: 'Well, I will keep my children at home until they know how to behave,—when I have children of my own.'

"Well, she had a child of her own and she stayed at home until he learned to behave,—as she thought. The first Sunday she brought him, he yelled for a drink; he cried when they sang, and he got frightened at the minister. She took him out and he yelled all the way down the aisle: 'Don't whip me! Don't whip me, mother! Give me a drink and me'll be good.' Of course the young folks tittered and the preacher had all he could do to keep from smiling. He was brought the next Sunday, and made more noise than all our babies put together. He is older now and is the terror of his Sunday-school class. His mother never gives advice to mothers any more."

Uncle Joe laughed and said: "She was like the Irishman who bought a pair of boots just a little too small for his feet. They pinched his toes so that he exclaimed: 'Indade, an' I'll be lavin of thim off until I git used to thim,' but a month after he was no more used to them than at first, so he put them on and got them 'broken in' which he should have done in the start or else taken them back. I guess we have the best way here, Maggie. Our mothers get the babies used to coming as soon as baby is old enough to be taken anywhere, and where would you find a nicer lot of children? Our little room back there helps a good deal, I am sure, and the mother feels she is welcome.

"You know the disciples of old wanted to keep the children away from Jesus lest they disturb him, and his beautiful saying of 'Suffer little children and forbid them not' has been brought down through the ages in picture and song,—the comfort of motherhood. God bless the dear babies and may he forbid that I, his humble servant, should call the babies a bother when Christ loved them so and blessed them, and chided the disciples for trying to keep them away.

"How he loved children! 'Except ye become as a little child,' 'A little child shall lead them,' and so many of these beautiful passages of Scripture about children illumine God's precious Word. I would grieve deeply were our sweet young mothers and beautiful babies to stay away from our services."

"Yes, Joseph, I would, too," softly answered Aunt Margaret.

Babies in Church

BY SADIE PRICE WHISLER

AN ARTICLE, appearing in the MESSENGER under the above caption, caused some comments and we wish to submit a few lines in defense of the babies.

While we admit that babies are not always models of good church manners, nor easily controlled by their mothers, yet we have seen many babies who made less disturbance during service than the grownups who, by the way, are often the cause of babies playing and laughing in church. Let each one who has reached the years of understanding listen to the message that is being delivered, and let the babies to their mothers, and not much disturbance will result. If baby cries too much, the mother will withdraw quietly,—usually with less disturbance than is caused by the young folks who come in after services have already begun.

While the small children are a problem, let us remember we all were babies at one time, and let us not discourage the timid, sensitive mother by asking her to remain at home until such a time as her children will not disturb any one at church. And when would that time be? We have seen as much disturbance caused by those who are older as by babies.

Another thought: What would be the result if each mother, with her young children, remained away from church? Could the mother be expected to keep up her religious life through years of spiritual fasting? The strongest grow weak without food, and naturally die.

In many places the most energetic workers are mothers who have little ones to rear for the church. Because they love their children, they want them to have the best religious training, and so are working in the church to bring it to a greater degree of efficiency. While some churches could go on without the mothers, we know of places where, if they were to remain at home, the church doors would actually be closed, for the simple reason that there would be few others to attend.

Let us encourage the mothers in their religious efforts that they may implant the work of the Kingdom within the hearts of their children to such an extent that the church will grow stronger. If the little ones are trained from babyhood to be quiet and reverent, they will be an inspiration to others who see the interest they take in Sunday-school, while, if they were compelled to stay at home several years, they would not care for it. In all probability it would be hard to win them to the church if, indeed, they could even be interested, as the youthful impressions are the most valuable and enduring. The children must be taught to love the work of the church, for very little is ever accomplished without love at the root of any place. And Jesus said: "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the Kingdom of heaven."

ing a balance on the credit side. No wonder, when you know that many are tithers and that the duplex envelopes are used. It is each one giving as the Lord prospers, regularly, that has brought the finances of the church from a deficit to a surplus, and that, too, in the face of increased expenses and more liberal offerings to missions and benevolences. It is a pleasure to be able to respond to the cry of the orphans and the heathen. If regular systematic giving (with the tithe as a start) were put into practice by each Christian, millions would come where only thousands come now. We can even now see the signs of a wondrous awakening along this line in the Brotherhood. At first, perhaps, very few gave even a tithe to church work, but now many do. In a recent note in the "Messenger" forty in one church resolved to try it one year. They will never want to do less, and great spiritual results will follow.

AT BUCHANAN, MICHIGAN

The brethren and sisters of the above-named place are known as the "Berrien" church. The work is under the supervision of the Mission Board of the Northern District of Indiana. The members are few,—most of them residing in the town of Buchanan. The churchhouse owned by our people is in the country, several miles northwest of Buchanan. However, they have access to a church in town, where last fall it was arranged that a series of meetings would be held. The meetings were recalled because of the wide-spread influenza, but an evangelistic effort may be launched soon.

The undersigned is in pastoral charge, working the point as best he can, along with the pastorate of the Second Church at South Bend, Ind. Jan. 20 he was called there to officiate at an anointing service for Sister Decker, assisting Eld. Richard J. Shreve. Bro. Shreve resides in the congregation, but is seventy-nine years of age and, consequently, unable to exercise in the ministry. The writer remained three days. For the most part he found the members are very hungry,—quite anxious to be fed regularly with the life-giving Word.

During the school vacation season of last summer, the little flock were recipients of the much-appreciated help given by Bro. Earl W. Roop, of Bethany Bible School. They need a minister with them now and always. A brother who can locate there and minister to their needs is being sought for now by the District Mission Board.

JUNIATA BIBLE INSTITUTE NOTES

One of the best Bible Institutes ever held at Juniata has just passed into history. Athough the Institute could not be held at the date first announced, on account of the influenza epidemic at the College, and was postponed to the week before Christmas, yet, with all this handicap, it was the best attended Institute ever held here.

The opening address on Monday evening, which was to have been delivered by Gov. Brumbaugh, was delivered by Prof. I. H. Brumbaugh, of the College. Official business detaining the Governor, he was unable to be present. Although the large audience, which had gathered to hear the Governor, was somewhat disappointed, when it was announced that he could not be present, we are sure that no one went away disappointed after hearing the practical and scholarly address of Pres. Brumbaugh.

Herman Heisey, pastor at Rummel, Pa., missionary under appointment to India, gave two stirring addresses on "The Christ" and "A Mighty Weapon." His very straightforward, earnest presentation of truth, made lasting impressions upon his audience.

Ross D. Murphy, pastor at Shippensburg, Pa., gave three lectures. His addresses were of a most practical nature and enthused every one with a desire to do better and more efficient service in his field of labor.

Henry Gibbel, of Lititz, Pa., one of the College Trustees, gave a most helpful address on "The Development and Growth of Education in the Church of the Brethren." The audience was so impressed with the message that it voted unanimously to have Bro. Gibbel publish the address in full.

P. J. Blough, of Hooversville, Pa., gave one of the best addresses on "The Bible and Divine Healing" that we have ever heard. Every Christian should have heard this splendid exposition.

Galen B. Royer, who occupies the Chair of Missions in the College, was scheduled for five addresses, but was only permitted to give two. He was stricken with influenza the second day of the Institute, and was unable to attend. His lecture on Russia was a strong appeal for aid, both in a material and a spiritual way, for stricken Europe, especially Russia herself. The Institute missed very much because of his sickness.

W. J. Swigart, one of the College Trustees, gave, in a most interesting and helpful manner, two lectures on "Jesus, and the Woman at the Well." The great truths of this beautiful incident of the Bible were brought out in a most forceful way.

T. T. Myers, head of the Divinity School, gave a series of four lectures on "The Divine Incarnation," "The Death of Christ," "His Resurrection and Ascension," "The Second Coming of Christ." This series of Lectures gave no uncertain sound as to the fundamentals of our faith. Christ's incarnation, his death, his resurrection, and his ascension were all climaxed in a wonderful way in the final address on his return, or "The Christians' Blessed Hope."

Norman F. Johnson, of Williamsport, Pa., one of the field workers of the Pennsylvania State Sabbath School Association, gave four addresses. His pleasing personality and earnest presentation of truth so captivated his audience, that a unanimous invitation was extended to him to return at some future date.

Homer Bright, returned missionary to China, filled brimful of first-hand knowledge, gave us four lectures. As we listened to his messages, every one was made to feel a world brotherhood that he had never felt before.

Chas. G. Trumbull, of Philadelphia, editor of the "Sunday School Times," brought the Institute to a climax in his four messages on the "Victorious Life." These messages went to the very heart and soul. The audience listened with a most intense interest as he searched even the hidden things of God's Word and revealed them unto us.

J. H. Cassady gave four lectures on "Prayer" and "Soul-Winning."

One of the most significant features of this Bible Institute was the strong emphasis that every speaker placed upon the fundamentals. Higher criticism of the destructive or douhtful kind received some severe blows.

J. H. Cassady.

HAPPENINGS IN INDIA

The month of Novemher was one of unusual importance to the people of India. Owing to little rainfall, the heat during September and October was quite oppressive, so the cooler days of November are indeed refresbing. The influenza epidemic, during these past few months, has laid the band of death upon millions of people in this land. This disease has now practically spent itself,—much to the relief of all. But the close of the war is the one event, above all others, that has brought great rejoicing throughout India.

Wednesday, Nov. 27, was the last of three days, set aside in this land, to celebrate the close of the war. Upon this occasion speeches and other appropriate exercises were held in the larger towns and cities of India. Here in Anklesvar, the high school students gave a varied program to a crowd of over a thousand people. All our Boarding School children, teachers and missionaries were invited to attend. On the way to the place of meeting, six children went ahead, carrying a large United States flag. Many of the children that followed carried British flags. One hoy carried a banner, on one side of which was the picture of Lloyd George and on the other that of Pres. Wilson. In the evening there was a liberal display of fireworks. Not the least thing of importance was the distribution of fifty dollars' worth of food to the poor.

Bro. V. V. Solanki, son of our head-carpenter at Bulsar, expects to finish his B. A. course at Wilson College, Bombay, in the spring. While borne on vacation, he was bitten by a snake. Even with prompt and careful medical attention his condition was critical for several days. The past two summers he went to the Hills during the bot season, to teach our new missionaries the Gujerati language. We rejoice that he has been saved for the work that is before him.

While the Field Committee was in session at Bulsar, tne Christian community at Anklesvar met with a very sad experience. The morning paper told of Germany accepting the Armistice terms. Every one was rejoicing over this news, and an open-air praise service was planned for in the evening. But this joy was turned to sorrow, when, soon after five, the news was spread over the compound that Gomla, one of our older Boarding School boys, had fallen into the well. It took about twenty minutes before the body could he removed from the well. He was a promising Christian hoy, having been in school here from the time the Boarding School was opened,—three and one-half years ago. No one knows how the accident occurred.

Bro. J. B. Emmert and family had arranged their work, completed their packing, said farewell to many of the missionaries, and were expecting to sail by the middle of this past week, when the news came that the Government had commandeered their ship and that all sailings were cancelled. This was very disappointing indeed! They went to Dahanu on Saturday, Nov. 23, for several days of much needed rest, returning to Jalalpor the following Tuesday. They can not sail now before the first week in January. This will give them an opportunity to visit a number of the other stations before they sail.

Brother and Sister Emmert are leaving a promising field and we trust that their successors will be able to continue the work without any set-back by their leaving. A few weeks ago four were baptized, two of whom, to the great joy of their parents, were Lloyd and Anna Emmert.

The assistant station-master of Anklesvar bought a Bible from Bro. Stover several months ago, and began reading it. It was not long until he concluded that idol worship is wrong, and has given that up. When the missionary goes to the station, the station-master frequently has questions to ask concerning the things he has been reading from the Book. Upon several occasions he has attended our morning services. Several Sundays ago the offering was double the usual amount. The explanation was given that the man at the station, who is reading the Bible, sent three rupees, which doubled our offering for that Sunday. Pray for him that his reading of the Scriptures may lead him to the full and open acceptance of Christ!

The Famine Relief Committee, appointed at the last Committee Meeting, met at Anklesvar Nov. 23. Beside the committee,—Brethren Stover, Long and Ross,—Bro. Arnold and Sister Himmelsbaugh were also present. Bro. Ross visited at Vali before the time of meeting, and Bro. Long, with his two older children, also visited the Vali station before going back to his work, at Vyara. While Bro. Long was thus occupied, his wife and two younger children were visiting at Bulsar. Little Magdalene is recovering slowly from a severe attack of influenza. About three weeks ago, when her condition was critical, Dr. Nickey and Sister Grisso went to Vyara, to assist in caring for her. A full report of the work of the above-mentioned committee will be given in a separate article.

The Anklesvar church met in council on Saturday, Nov. 30. Our love feast is set for Dec. 31. After the meeting, five men were baptized. Among them was an elderly man who has three sons working for a Brahman. When he heard of this man's intention of being baptized, he spoke to him as follows: "Why are you being baptized? Why do you leave your religion? I will give you one hundred rupees ($34) if you will give it all up." The "doso" replied: "No, I will not give it up. The money would be spent after a few weeks, and then I would be where I am now. I want salvation, which will always be mine." Praise the Lord for such faith! May he always remain faithful! That bribe meant about as much to him, as a day laborer, as $1,000 would mean to an American laborer. Before baptism, when asked if he realized that he was a sinner, he said that he did not think he was. So, after all, he still has a very crude faith, without much knowledge. The next day sixteen more were baptized, making twenty-one in all, thirteen of whom are from the Boys' Boarding School.

NOTICE TO THE CHURCHES OF MICHIGAN

The Child Rescue Committee for the District of Michigan, after many postponements, met Feb. 4, and laid plans for definite work in the future. The committee is organized, with Eld. G. F. Culler, Woodland, Mich., foreman; Bro. S. S. Weaver, Clarksville, Mich., treasurer; the writer, secretary.

At present we are working under a State License, which is sufficient for our present needs, but steps were taken that the committee would be incorporated for future enlargement.

This is a great work, in which we, as a District, are just beginning. Homes will be blessed, children made happy, and souls saved. It is you and your home, brother and sister, that must assist in doing this work. The committee would like to have any home that could take a child, or any one who knows of a home wanting a child, so to inform the secretary, stating sex and age of child preferred.

The committee is authorized to receive funds for this work. Any church, Sunday-school, Aid Society, organized class, Christian Workers' Society, or individual, sending funds for this work, will be helping the little ones in the Master's name.

Send all donations and correspondence to the secretary. 65 Cutler Street, Grand Rapids, Mich. Roy E. Miller.

NOTICE TO THE CHURCHES OF NEBRASKA AND NORTHEASTERN COLORADO

The 1918 District Meeting, which was to have convened in the Omaha church last October, and was indefinitely postponed on account of the influenza, will be held in the South Beatrice church, near Holmesville, Nebr., April 22-27. Since the Omaha church is changing pastors March 1, they requested the official board to locate the meeting elsewhere, and after careful consideration the Board has decided on the time and place above named.

The various program committees will revise their programs, if necessary, and forward them as early as possible to Eld. S. G. Nickey, Haxtun, Colo. Any individuals or congregations having reports or business for the meeting, will do likewise.

A three-days' Bible and Sunday-school Institute is being planned for the last days of the Conference. Dr. D. W. Kurtz and others will be the instructors.

A series of meetings will be in progress at the time of the meeting, conducted by Eld. C. B. Smith and Bro. Haldeman, of Morrill, Kans. Everything possible will be done to make this five days' conference a time of real spiritual help and uplift. We trust that every congregation in the District will send a strong delegation for the entire meeting. Lodging will be furnished free, and meals will be served in the basement of the church at a reasonable price.

Edgar Rothrock,
Moderator of Official Board.

WASHINGTON CITY CHURCH, D. C.

A review of the activities of the Washington City church for the past year shows growth and improvement in many lines. The spiritual atmosphere is excellent, indicative of a healthy, growing church. The internal conditions were never, perhaps, in the history of the church, in better shape for a forward movement. The church building has become inadequate, both for church and Sunday-school extension on a large scale, and plans are being laid to meet future growth. A building fund has been established, and a committee appointed to make a survey of the field and obtain an expression of sentiment from the membership. The Washington church is situated in the nation's capital, and this fact will be taken into consideration in future plans.

The church services are pervaded with an evangelistic spirit, while the Sunday-school is a dynamic of sacrifice and service, as may be gathered from the various class-activities. The "service idea" was expressed in spending $554.56 for the following worthy causes: Missionary worker in India, Red Cross, flowers for sick, parsonage, Sunday-school Association, Polish "Girls' Home," Church Improvement Fund, support of French orphan, 1,500 to 2,000 postage stamps to Belgian Fund, Children's Home in Labrador, Pocket Testament League for Belgian soldiers, Books for children in Union Mission, and the Leper Mission. The total Sunday-school offerings amounted to $895.46. It is hoped that these humble services may be an inspiration to greater deeds of love for the coming year.

Charles E. Resser.

CHIPPEWA CHURCH, OHIO

Considering the year 1918 as a whole, there has been a "stretching forward" movement. The church has awakened to the "brotherhood of man" idea. Our Local Missionary Committee has been busily planning for the "Forward Movement," but as two of the members have been afflicted with influenza, we have not yet fully launched out.

At our love feast in November the church called Bro. Lloyd M. Hoff to the ministry. Being in school at North Manchester, at the time, the installation did not take place until the holiday vacation, Dec. 29.

We praise God for our young men and women who are surrendering their lives at the call of the Master, and we pray that this congregation may be ready to give her share and more, of the number asked for in the "Forward Movement" program,—not in this one phase only but contributing to every part of it.

The Beech Grove Sunday-school has closed another successful year. In the beginning our superintendent set the goal for average attendance at 120,—six above the previous year. We were getting on splendidly until the influenza epidemic came our way. Although our attendance was cut down, the giving was not. The Sunday-school loan of $6 netted this year $45.26,—a gain of $14.48 over last year. Of this $10 was given to the Sunday-school Extension, Chicago, and the remainder to the Armenian sufferers. The offerings were $262.37, compared with $234.38 during 1917. Last year we gave for missions $159.-54,—the year previous $112.55.

A Christmas program was not given on account of prevailing sickness. But that did not hinder the school from presenting to the superintendent and his wife a substantial gift,—a fine comforter, composed of eighty-one blocks, each bearing the name of some member of the school. The school took this way of showing a small measure of their appreciation of the services rendered by them.

Brethren Yoder and Hoff are at the helm for another year, so we have reason to expect another successful year.

During 1918 sixteen were received into the church by baptism. A number of these were Sunday-school scholars. At our last quarterly council the church decided to use the "Sower Envelope System." We trust we may thus be enabled to keep a better financial record of work done in the church, as well as to increase our benevolences.

We expect to have Bro. H. C. Early with us at the Beech Grove house, in a series of evangelistic services, the latter part of August.

Flora Irvin Hoff.

RIDDLESBURG, PENNSYLVANIA

On account of Spanish influenza we were obliged to suspend public worship for several months, during which time the Sisters' Aid Society had some much needed repairs done to the building, amounting, all told, to about $500. About half of this amount was provided for before the work was begun, and in order to make up the remainder, arrangements were made to hold a rededication service Jan. 19. Accordingly, Eld. T. T. Myers, of Juniata College, was secured and preached two soul-inspiring sermons,—one in the morning and one in the evening. As a result of these services, sufficient funds were raised to cancel the debt, and so the building was fittingly rededicated to the worship of Almighty God. Blessed be his name for ever!

On the afternoon of Jan. 26 we met in quarterly council, with the writer presiding. After hearing reports from the several officers and committees, and closing up the accounts for the last year, officers were elected for the ensuing year, among the number being the following: Elder, Bro. John P. Harris, who also is our pastor; church secretary, Bro. Shannon Weyant; soliciting committee, Sisters Louie and Annie Oaks; Sunday-school superintendent, H. H. Brumbaugh.

One member was received into the church by letter. It was decided to hold a series of evangelistic meetings a little later in the season.

The Christian Workers' Society has not yet organized, but we hope to be able to report on this in the near future.

We have much reason to be thankful, even though we had been deprived of the privilege of public worship for twenty weeks. While many of our fellow-men were stricken down during the epidemic of influenza, not one of our number was taken. Then, too, we feel encouraged by our offering of $16, lifted at the first session of the Sunday-

DARLOW, KANSAS, BRETHREN HOME

No doubt many of our brethren know of this Home which has been in existence since 1893, but a few words will not come amiss to those who are interested in the welfare of the aged. We do not wish to look on those at the Home as inmates merely, but as members of one common family. It becomes necessary for the management to live on the same plane as the members, and to share with them pleasures and joys, as well as sorrows.

The Lord has, indeed, blessed the members here, for we have had very little sickness. In the short time of our stay here,—eighteen months,—there have been only two deaths,—the last occurring Jan. 13. Bro. Samuel Fisher was eighty-four years old, and paralysis was the cause of his death. He came to the Home Jan. 18, 1917, from the Morrill church. Services were conducted by Eld. O. H. Feiler. Interment was made in the Pleasant View cemetery. He has a daughter married, but we know nothing of her whereabouts. We would be glad for any information regarding her. Bro. Fisher was always cheerful and kind-hearted, and is missed by all.

Christmas of 1917 was one to be long remembered, as we had a tree and many gifts for each member. Many of our churches and Aid Societies remembered us, for which we were very thankful. Christmas of 1918 was rather quiet, on account of the epidemic. Then, too, the awful war had diverted our minds, and everyone was expected to respond to the nation's calls. However, we were not forgotten altogether.

At present we are very busy making improvements and doing some repairing. At the recent board meeting the trustees decided to make a special effort to raise funds to build an addition to the house in the form of ground floor rooms. Nearly all of our rooms are on the second floor and it is very meonvenient to accommodate any who are unable to climb stairs. An electric-light plant has been installed, which does away with the danger of fire from oil lamps or matches.

We are now compiling a record of all members who have been in this Home, whether they have died here or elsewere; also including those who, for any reason whatever, have left the institution. If the readers know of one who has been here and can give us data, we would be grateful indeed. It is our desire to make this Home as comfortable and pleasant as the ordinary private home. Will you help us?

G. W. Keedy and wife.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

CALIFORNIA

Lindsay.—Eld. D. L. Miller came to visit our church Jan. 13, remaining until Jan. 20, during which time he gave talks on the Bible Lands. The attendance and interest were good. Bro. Miller talks with the vim and energy of a man of twenty-five.—I. S. Brubaker, Lindsay, Cal., Jan. 30.

IDAHO

Twin Falls church held her love feast Dec. 29. Bro. C. Fahrney preached the examination sermon. Bro. J. E. Steinour, of Murtaugh, Idaho, was present. Quite a few of our members have been sick with influenza, but we are thankful that there have been no deaths. Jan. 5 Bro. M. Alva Long, of Weiser, Idaho, began a three weeks' series of meetings. Eighteen confessed Christ and one was reclaimed. We held half-hour prayer services every evening before church, praying for particular ones, and we were made happy when they came out on the Lord's side. We feel that the meetings have done us much good. We had good crowds most of the time. Jan. 27 seventeen were baptized and one awaits baptism. Our attendance at Sunday-school, all this year, has been from ninety to one hundred, which is very good, considering the amount of sickness. —Alice Swab, Twin Falls, Idaho, Jan. 29.

ILLINOIS

Big Creek church met in quarterly council Feb. 1. Bro. A. J. Markman and Sisters Bertha Ridgely and Eva Lynch were chosen to arrange for a short children's service every two weeks, following Sunday-school. It was decided not to make any change in elder and pastor for the coming year. Elder N. H. Miller, of the Allison Prairie congregation, was with us and had charge of this part of the work. Bro. Miller preached for us on Friday evening but returned home on Saturday evening on account of his Sunday appointments. Steps were also taken towards securing an evangelist for the summer or fall of 1919.—Elsie A. Ridgely, Burbank, Ill., Feb. 5.

Mt. Morris.—Jan. 19 the Christian Workers' hour was given in a service pertaining to the recent temperance victory. Songs and speeches not only gladdened our hearts but also, we trust, inspired us with a resolve to continue the war on alcohol until the victory is won in all countries. Mrs. E. S. Nicholas, wife of the Methodist pastor here, was formerly a missionary in China. Since their return she has been giving addresses in the different local churches. Jan. 19 she addressed the Student Volunteers, and the following Sunday favored our congregation with an earnest and impressive talk on China's changes. Feb. 2 Bro. Chalmer Shull, traveling secretary of the Student Volunteers, addressed the local band and brought to our evening audience a vivid picture of the great need in all countries. We expect to begin a series of revival services Feb. 16, with Bro. F. E. McCune as evangelist. As this is one of the centers of influence in our Brotherhood, we hope that a large number will feel a keen interest in the work and join with us.—Nelson E. Shirk, Mt. Morris, Ill., Feb. 3.

Shannon church met in council Feb. 1, with Bro. Baum in charge, a pastor reported that the services of Bro. C. C. Cripe, of Auburn, Ind., could be secured for the coming year, and the church accepted that proposition. The committee's report on remodeling the Louisa house was not so favorably received. The sentiment has grown so strong for a church at the home of Waddams Grove, that it was decided not to remodel the Louisa house. Almost $10,000 has been pledged for the building of a new church. Mr. C. W. Stauffer and family, of Hampton, Iowa, who are moving back here on their old home farm, have offered $5,000 for the same. Other conferences did great things for us; the old church has served its purpose well. As it can be reached, however, only by going over the hills, and people would rather go over good roads, the property of building a church at Waddams Grove is all the more obvious. The location, also, is more central. The church at Waddams Grove has had a vision according to Acts 2: 17, and we are looking forward to greater things in the years to come.—Albert Myers, Waddams Grove, Ill., Jan. 30.

INDIANA

Arcadia church met in council Jan. 4, with Eld. G. F. Wagoner and Bro. Moses Smeltzer presiding. Officers for the year were chosen, with Eld. Wagoner reelected for the ensuing year. Our series of meetings, conducted by Bro. Mahon, were closed on account of the influenza and our love feast was postponed until spring. Dec. 22 an offering of $26 was taken for Belgian Relief. An offering of $56.05 was taken for Armenian-Syrian Relief. A special meeting was called Feb. 1, to consider remodeling our church. A committee of five was appointed to secure plans and estimates; also a committee of six, to solicit funds.—Katie Smeltzer, Noblesville, Ind., Feb. 1.

Bethany church is situated in Boone County, Ind., about twenty-five miles from Indianapolis. The writer has had charge for almost two years, and was recently chosen elder. As they have no resident pastor, I have also had services there the fourth Sunday of each month, until the epidemic interfered. Jan. 25 and 26 were the first services held since September. At the close of the Saturday evening service, five accepted Christ and were baptized the Sunday following. As we look over the fields, ready for harvest, we are made to realize more fully Christ's words: " The harvest truly is great but the laborers are few."—Geo. W. Hahn, Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 5.

Lower Deer Creek church met in council Feb. 1, with Eld. J. G. Stinehaugh presiding. Eld. Ira Kreider was also with us. Three letters of membership were received. Bro. Stinehaugh was reelected elder for three years. Bro. Owen Cripe was elected trustee. Bro. J. H. Fike, of Middlebury, Ind., is to assist us in a series of meetings next August. Our Sunday-school is increasing its activities since the epidemic is subsiding. A new school has been organized in Delphi for the accommodation of the members living there. They also have preaching every two weeks, and the outlook is good to develop a church here.—Vera Dilling, Delphi, Ind., Feb. 5.

Manchester.—I was our privilege to have Bro. T. E. George, of South Bend, Ind., with us Feb. 1, both morning and evening services. The morning sermon was based on Heb. 12: 1, 2. The theme of the evening discourse was " Sin Laid on Jesus." At the close of this service two accepted Christ. One was baptized after our prayer meeting on Thursday night. Each Sunday evening of this month will be given to evangelistic efforts, and it is our prayer that great gains will be made for the Kingdom.—Ivab M. Grossnickle, North Manchester, Ind., Feb. 3.

Middletown.—Our series of meetings, which began Jan. 8, closed Feb. 2. Bro. Jos. Spitzer was the evangelist. The attendance and interest were good. One accepted Christ. Eld. Roof, of Anderson, was with us one evening, when a collection of $15.28 was taken for the Armenian sufferers.—Florida J. E. Green, Middletown, Ind., Feb. 5.

Nappanee church closed a very successful series of meetings Jan. 26. Eld. Chas. Bonsack, of New Windsor, Md., brought his messages with great power to large and appreciative audiences. Not only was our membership strengthened spiritually, but also increased in numbers,—fourteen catering his service. Sister Lela Burns, of Plymouth, Ind., was with us, and by her untiring efforts the song service was a pleasant feature. Feb. 9 our Mission Study Class will give a missionary program. The class of fifteen completed " The Lure of Africa " a few weeks ago and will review this work at the close. The class worked diligently and is anticipating the study of some other mission work. The congregation is beginning the year with renewed interest in all the church work.—Fern Grosh, Nappanee, Ind., Jan. 30.

Upper Deer Creek.—For Armenian-Syrian Relief an offering of $30 was lifted at Sunday-school. During 1918 the Sunday-school offerings amounted to $133 and the average attendance was fifty-three.—Mrs. Geo. R. Murphy, Lincoln, Ind., Feb. 2.

Wakarusa.—Since our last report one more has been added to the church. Our Thanksgiving offering of $22.46 was sent to the General Mission Board. A collection of $65 was taken for Armenian-Syrian Relief.—Bertha Moyer, Wakarusa, Ind., Jan. 12.

Yellow River.—Our two weeks' series of meetings, conducted by Eld. S. J. Burger, of Howe, Ind., closed Feb. 2. We are glad to say that the attendance and interest were good. Four were received by baptism, and two changed their church relationship from the Progressive Brethren to our church.—Alma E. Hanawalt, Plymouth, Ind., Feb. 3.

IOWA

Dry Creek church met in council Nov. 13 and elected officers for the ensuing year: Elder, Bro. S. R. Miller; clerk, Sister Lizzie Leidigh; " Messenger " agents, Sister Nancy Buer; superintendents, Bro. H. N. Martin and Sister Eliza Burgess; Christian Workers' president, Bro. Harold Emmons. The Christian Workers and Sunday-school rendered a Christmas program Dec. 22. An offering of $16 was taken for Armenian-Syrian Relief. A poor family was also remembered with a Christmas offering by our Bible Class. While there have been sickness and many deaths, God has protected our little band of workers.—Mrs. Jennie B. Miller, Robins, Iowa, Feb. 3.

Greenn church met in council Feb. 1, with Eld. W. H. Lichty presiding. Our closing work for 1918 and organizing for 1919 is behind schedule time, owing to the epidemic. We had a good attendance and much business was transacted. Church and Sunday-school officers were elected for the year: Bro. Buntain, " Messenger " agent; Sister Katie Ringery, clerk; Bro. Paul Shook, Sunday-school superintendent. We decided to have a love feast May 17, to be followed by a series of meetings. Bro. Lichty remained with us over Sunday and gave two splendid lectures on the war-stricken countries. Bro. Buntain is also giving a series of sermons concerning the reconstruction work. Later we will lift an offering for Armenian-Syrian Relief.—Elsie A. Pyle, Greene, Iowa, Feb. 3.

Indian Creek.—On account of the epidemic, our services were greatly hindered in November and December. But God has blessed us, as there were no deaths. Jan. 29 we held our quarterly business meeting with Eld. E. D. Fiscel presiding. Bro. Fiscel was elected elder for the coming year; Bro. J. K. Eikenberry, " Messenger " agent; the writer, secretary. Jan. 1 we reorganized our Sunday-school, with Bro. P. H. Enfield, superintendent.—Mrs. P. H. Enfield, Maxwell, Iowa, Jan. 29.

KANSAS

Abilene.—Feb. 2 we met at the Navarre house in special council, with Eld. C. A. Shank presiding. The following officers were elected: Bro. Roy Rock, superintendent of Sunday-school; Bro. Leonard Rock, president of the Christian Workers' Society; the writer, correspondent. We decided to have Bro. S. E. ONE WAY OUT, ...68c
William Carleton.

A remarkable narrative in which a man tells simply, but with dynamic power, how at thirty-eight he lost his position in a big corporation; how he found that his special training was of no value in getting him a position in any other office, and how, while under forty, he was already too old to get another position like the one he had lost. In these dire straits this salary drawing New Englander of the middle class emigrated to America. A book every salaried man or woman should read.

The Millennium Not Here Yet

NEITHER a league of nations nor the dry amendment nor both together will make the world a paradise. The latter does not end all our troubles with King Alcohol, nor will the former guarantee us absolutely against all future trouble with the sword. But both of them are long steps, very long steps, in the direction of these most desirable ends.

For people of normal mentality such trite observations as these would seem needless. They are volunteered for the special benefit of those persons, here and there, who talk and write as if these two great reforms, one of them an accomplished fact and the other in fair prospect, will bring society to a perfect state of heavenly bliss. As if there would be no need of further efforts in behalf of individual righteousness.

Let us not lose our heads. With national prohibition only a few months off, we ought to begin to practice keeping sober. Bringing men and women everywhere, personally and individually, under the dominion of the Spirit of God, will continue to be our chief task and the chief need of the world. And there will be enough of this to do to keep us very busy for a long time yet.

It is our right to rejoice in the wonderful social progress of these days, and our duty to do all we can to help it on. If any reader's heart echoes a hearty amen to the note sounded in the foregoing paragraphs, well and good. Thank you. But if you feel like emphasizing your "Amen" by throwing a bucket of cold water on social uplift programs, please don't. Let them move right on too!

But let us not lose sight of the big job before us, the enthronement of Jesus Christ in human hearts. There's so much to be done. Have you found your place? Everybody's shoulder to the wheel!

Why They Seem So Burdensome

MAY we have a few frank and friendly words with you about that matter you've been thinking about lately? It seems to you that a good many people and a good many causes are wanting help just now. With the Forward Movement on and so many other things calling for money, it was rather unkind of those poor people in India and Armenia to go to starving, wasn't it? You can not give to everything, now, can you?

But wait a little. Consider how many things, how very many things you are putting money into right along for your own personal comfort. There's the grocery store, for instance, and the meat market. The dry goods man and the shoemaker must be reckoned with, not to speak of drugs and hardware. Perhaps we should keep still about the confectioner and photographer. But you will not get off that easy with your taxes. What is more regular or insistent than taxes? Then there may be rent, or interest, or insurance, or repairs, or all of these. Suppose you finish out the list yourself, on a separate piece of paper. It takes up too much room here.

You see, brother, the big trouble with you and me is that we were brought up on the idea that the church and charity should be taken care of out of whatever loose dimes and dollars happened to be lying around. If there were none such, why, of course, we had nothing for these things. How could we give when we had no money?

Well, how could we, sure enough? But what do you think would have become of us, if we had tried to do business with our grocer and landlord and tax collector on that basis?

And that was in the "good old days," remember. This is "after the war" now, and we are living in a new age. We are going to do business for the Lord in a business way. We are going to take his work into our calculations, into our expense budget, and plan for it as regularly and definitely as for our personal interests.

To begin with, many of us will set apart a definite percentage of our earnings,—one tenth, say,—for benevolent uses. If you had been doing even that, brother, would these calls for money have seemed too numerous? And some of us, before long, will make the Lord an equal Partner in our business. Can you imagine what that would mean for the Kingdom? And bye and bye,—wonder how far off that is,—some of us will do as Jesus said, make the interests of the Kingdom first. Can you imagine what that will mean?

Really, are these calls too burdensome? Would you think so if you were among the starving ones? Would you think so if you had learned to feel as keen an obligation to serve and sacrifice as to help yourself? Is the Lord's work worthy of being handled in a business way?

Viewing Justice From Two Sides

WHAT a thing looks like depends very much upon the point of observation, as well as upon which side of it you see. And this is true not only of material objects, but of such physically invisible things as Christian principles.

There's justice, for example,—a thing much talked about in these times of national and international settlements. Everybody wants it. The farmers want it, the railroads want it, the laborer wants it, the consumer wants it, and the same is true of the Italians and the Jugo-Slavs, the Belgians, French, Poles; bolsheviki and Germans.

What is justice? If you think you know, try putting a just valuation on some property of yours, having in mind, first, the tax assessor and then a prospective purchaser.

Would it not tend to clarity of understanding on this point to remember that "it is more blessed to give than to receive"? Will we not have a truer notion of that elusive thing we call justice when once we are as anxious to give it as to get it?

The Conservation of Youth

THE waste of young life,—of life that never comes to the age of productivity,—is appalling. Disease, ignorance, indifference and war are some of the agencies that strike down beginners in the race of life. If all of the destroying forces were listed and their effects summed up, a very dismal paper could be written. But it is our purpose to see white, and not black, for in spite of persistent wastes there are substantial reasons for hope.

There is a growing appreciation of the value of young life. Christ's attitude and appraisal of children has done much to leaven the thought of the world. Thus it has finally come about that people very generally see that even on the dollar and cents basis it is the part of wisdom not only to save young life, but also to give it a chance for its fullest development. When children grow up stunted and untrained, they may constitute as heavy a charge on society as though they died before reaching the age of productivity. In either case, where food, clothing and time have been consumed with no return, society suffers economic loss.

It may seem rather heartless to consider the losses of child life in terms of dollars and cents. But we do not propose to stop here. Society's economic loss is inseparably bound up with social, moral and spiritual losses. The nation or community that is prodigal with young life or indifferent to the fullest development of its youth, sustains such economic losses, either directly or indirectly, that it can not rise to the level of well-being that conditions high social, moral and spiritual attainment.

In the overcrowded Orient, as in India, all life, and especially young life, is very cheap. An overwhelming population permits no liberating accumulations of capital. On the mere subsistence level, population goes up and down with the food supply. In the long run better crops do not mean materially better conditions, but just more mouths to feed. To all appearances, India will stay at the subsistence level with frightful loss of life in every short crop year until industrial missions, agricultural schools and improved methods of manufacturing give the country an accumulation of capital which will make possible higher standards of living. With such standards should come the automatic checks to population, which render further progress in social, moral, and spiritual well-being possible.

In America our situation is not nearly so acute, for the average of well-being is far above that of India. Yet we still have tremendous wastes in young life, due to preventable diseases, to ignorance, industrial conditions and arrested development. These all result in economic losses that tend to keep down the general standard of well-being and so delay progress as regards social, moral and spiritual conditions. It must now be clear that our losses, due to the unnecessary wastes of young life, can not all be measured in dollars and cents. We can not measure the suffering and discouragement that go with frustrated and shortened lives. There is no way to measure the value of the inventions, the ideas, the gifts and the inspiration that might have come from those who have been broken or slain before their time.

But to save life is not to conserve it, unless, at the same time, there is offered the fullest possible opportu-

Peace

BY B. F. M. SOURS

At last? Thank God! O peace! The boys we love
Are covered by the wings of Heaven above;
The lands afar, with which we were at war,
Are happier now, and we so happy are.

Our prayers are heard,—our weeping, pleading prayers,
The prayers we offered, almost unawares,
That God would spare and keep the true, the brave,—
Our boys, our precious boys,—that he would save.

Our prayers are heard, our flag is still unfurled,
And Freedom sweeps the vision of the world,
The great death-spasm that earth's tyrants rent,
Is over, and their mighty rage is spent.

From henceforth peace,—the praise of victory
Belongs to God, the Lord of armies he.
Before his feet we fall, and him adore,
Beseeching him that war shall be no more.

O God, our Father, all the happy days,
May every freeman breathe a psalm of praise;
Thy love, thy love,—may never our hearts cease
Thee to adore, and give thee thanks for peace.

Our Boys When They Come Home,—What Shall They Hear?

BY W. O. BECKNER

In times of great tension,—like those we have gone through for the past three or four years,—the great subject of thought for all mankind is inevitably associated with the tension and what gave rise to it. The reconstruction and rebuilding of devastated Europe will certainly occupy a large place in the thought of the world for a number of years to come. The big, general subject of government is before the world to stay for a long time.

In the face of such conditions, what are preachers to preach about? How much attention should a minister give to such present-day matters in his messages from the pulpit? It is certainly true that a minister must keep up with the times in his thought, or he can not lead his people aright. And yet, after all, what is it that people want to hear at church on Sunday? Is it a digest of some book or an elaboration of some standard magazine article? Or is it the simple, plain story of how God loves mankind and wants them to cherish love and good will in their lives?

A well-informed man remarked to me, not long ago, that he wants something different from his minister on Sundays than what he can get from his magazines. He said that he can sit at home, in comfortable clothes, and read all of that kind of matter he wants to, but when he goes into the house of the Lord he wants something that immerses his soul in a fountain of love. Then he goes home fed and strengthened, ready to meet the work of the week-days in the spirit of love and good will for all his fellow-men.

I doubt whether the Kaiser has been more atrocious than Nero and whether the times in which we live have been very much different from those when Paul lived. Yet how much do we read in Paul's writings of the mistakes of Nero? How much do we read of the great sins of the Roman nation and government? Where do we read Paul's program of reconstruction, for the Roman officials to follow? Paul had a program for them, indeed, and he gave his life that they might learn of it. He stated it in 1 Corinthians 13.

Again; the Apostle John lived through some very trying times. Undoubtedly his heart ached when he learned of the sufferings of his people in the destruction of Jerusalem. He was made a victim of persecution from the unjust and brutal authorities. He, no doubt, shared the common view of his people that the kingdom was to be restored to the Jews (Acts 1: 6). Yet, where in any of his writings have we a hint of his program for civil government? How much did he interest himself in those things? Had there been magazines in his days, can we suppose that he would have rushed into print with his program for the rulers to follow?

And yet, that is exactly what he did in a way. His cure for the evils of the times was the story of the Good Shepherd,—God's unbounded love for man, awakening in man a disposition of love and good will for his fellow-men. He told the story of the Master Teacher of men, the wonderful revelation of God's character, in a way that men could understand him. It was the Bread of Life and the Cross and the resurrection that John preached and wrote about. Those were the things, which, when known, felt and acted upon by men, made them honest rulers and upright citizens, without regard to which side of a given national boundary line they happened to live on. God's love in men's hearts makes them brothers. When they recognize themselves as brothers, and begin to feel toward each other as brothers, and act toward each other as brothers,—then there is not much left for the Government specialists to figure out.

The Christian church has gone through an awful crucible in these trying war years. Are we to come out of it with all our dross of narrow sectarianism still clinging to us? Or are we to come out of it with a lot of that spirit burned out of us, and with the bright, shining gold of character before God, as our highest heritage? God pity us, and have mercy upon us for the envy we have cherished and for the jealousy we have nurtured against those of other church affiliations! May he help us see things more clearly as the Divine Eye sees them.

And our boys,—when they come home,—are they to hear us preaching about government and sociology and war, or are they to hear what their hungry souls will so much long for,—the story of God's great love, the story of the prodigal son and of the crucified but risen Christ?

God have mercy upon us and make us wise!

That Biennial Convention

Largest Organization of Women in the World

In Two Parts.—Part One

It was a belated train, nearing the end of a long journey. Thus tired passengers had taken on fresh courage, and yet this was only one of the many "specials" with the same destination.

This train, passing through the picturesque Ozarks, had curved about over hill and dale for almost four hours since sunrise, amid pleasingly new sights and sounds of rippling rill or torrent stream, bustling towns or browsing herds; now the milkmaid's call, and now the clear notes of the lark or cardinal, with everywhere a profusion of the most beautiful wild flowers.

The last station was finally reached, and we found relief in landing on a wide platform in the fragrant, balmy air of a beautiful May-day morning. The train's crew were men, of course, but the passengers were a literal, long trainload of women, with an ample "reception committee" of women waiting on the platform, eager to extend to all, whether delegate or guest, a cordial welcome.

"Are you guests to the Convention?" inquired a pleasant voice. "What State, please? . . . Then come this way," and we were quietly directed to the proper conveyance.

The place was Hot Springs, Ark., one of the most famous health resorts in America, and, like the surrounding country, true to its reputation for beauty. On every hand roses were blooming, while beautiful "ramblers," of varied hue, and fragrant honeysuckles clambered in rich profusion over trellis or rustic stone-wall alike.

In the spacious Eastman Hotel (of 1,000 rooms) we found the perfection of organization apparent on every hand. Here were hundreds of women grouped about the various desks, or clustered here and there in friendly greeting. All were busy, but nobody seemed hurried.

There were in attendance a few hotel-men, baggagemen and pages,—intent on divers errands,—but otherwise this was but a passing glance of a large gathering of thousands of quiet, cultured women, now literally filling the numerous large hotels of the city.

All were strangers to us, yet, true to the assurance in our "Biennial Instructions," we, with the others, were being made welcome. According to the same "Instructions," we were soon before the "Hospitality Committee." A beautiful, white-haired old lady, leisurely sitting in a large rocker, greeted us most cordially and as graciously turned us over to one of the many women of her force in waiting, who promptly led the way to her own automobile among the many parked on the shady lawn.

From here we were whisked away to our location, the less pretentious but more quiet hotel of our own choosing,—according to both purpose and purse,—funds for our lodging having been provided by a generous sister, who has our cause at heart. Next we were motored to the "Business Men's League" for registration, and back again to our room, our skillful guide acting as her own chauffeur, while delightfully entertaining us every block of the way.

In a little over two hours after arrival we were seated (as previously arranged) at the Home Economics Thrift Luncheon, where "Hooverism" was demonstrated by various items of the menu, including "Arkansas corn-bread," as substitute on a "wheatless day," as well as by the excellent speeches following the simple meal, of which several hundred partook.

"WHAT IS THE GENERAL FEDERATION?"—This question was asked recently by an army officer, as he stood gazing at the sign on the door of the Federation Magazine office. For answer, we quote first a certain United States Senator, according to a Washington paper:

"The women's clubs, federated, amalgamated, consolidated, nationalized, organized with general committees and advisory boards of consulting agencies and investigating branches, are more active in efforts to shape public policies than any other agency in the nation today. Why, if the women of the country should suddenly decide that they wanted the tariff revised, or a rate bill passed, or the coal mines nationalized, we should HAVE it before our men would wake up to know what had happened. Here is an illustration: Some time ago a compulsory bill for education, for the District of Columbia, was introduced into this Senate. There was objection to putting such a law into immediate operation, but this struck the Washington Women's Federation as all wrong. Just what they did, nobody knows. Presumably they appealed to the National Federation. Every member of the Senate Committee was flooded with petitions. The bill passed the Senate March 6. It will pass the House this session if the women's clubs keep up their work. And they have never been known to quit."

Federation Editor's Comment.—"It is unity of thought which makes any national movement possible. It is unity of action that brings success. In spite of German propaganda, carried on for years in this country, in spite of political, religious and educational differences, of lack of understanding and belief, one short year has served to reorganize the thought of the United States, and unite it in a common purpose. . . . Unification of thought,—therefore of action,—comes from mutual knowledge and understanding."

Now let us go back to the first meeting of the General Federation, New York City, 1890, as described by Mrs. Mary I. Wood, their historian:

"To this first convention of clubs had come women from every quarter of the land, drawn, not by curiosity, nor by the love of personal pleasure, nor the greed for personal gain, but by an inner consciousness, although but dimly expressed, that there was great work for them to do. These women, feeling the changes wrought in the economic world about them—changes which were heaping high the burdens upon man's shoulders, while giving to woman more leisure,—in answer to the cry which was growing louder and louder each year, had banded themselves together for service, the extent of which was but faintly realized, even by the most active and earnest leaders."

Now we take a look twenty years ahead, to the Tenth Biennial, Cincinnati, 1910, and hear Mrs. Sarah Platt Decker, Chairman, in the prophetic close of her address on "Tomorrow," given on that occasion:

"The tomorrow of the Federation must be more and more the sloughing off of the enemy tradition, more and more the loosening of the shackles of habit, more and more the keeping of eternal youth, more and more prophets, more and more saints, and the beginning of a mighty campaign for the conversion of our brothers away from greed, away from graft, away from selfish ease, into the undertaking,—the gigantic, but exalted undertaking,—of forming, so to speak, a civic government within our political government,—a civic government which would centralize all the forces now working for the building of humanity, direct and express their efforts, and in a scientific way construct, along the lines of practical altruism, the social life of a nation, which is already established in the eyes of the world as an example of political freedom. Peace

BY B. F. M. SOURS

At last? Thank God! O peace! The boys we love
Are covered by the wings of Heaven above;
The lands afar, with which we were at war,
Are happier now, and we so happy are.

Our prayers are heard,—our weeping, pleading prayers,
The prayers we offered, almost unawares,
That God would spare and keep the true, the brave;—
Our boys, our precious boys,—that he would save.

Our prayers are heard, our flag is still unfurled,
And Freedom sweeps the vision of the world.
The great death-spasm that earth's tyrants rent,
Is over, and their mighty rage is spent.

From henceforth peace,—the praise of victory
Belongs to God, the Lord of armies he.
Before his feet we fall, and him adore.
Beseeching him that war shall be no more.

O God, our Father, all the happy days,
May every freeman breathe a psalm of praise;
Thy love, thy love,—may never our hearts cease
Thee to adore, and give thee thanks for peace.

Our Boys When They Come Home,—What Shall They Hear?

BY W. O. BECKNER

In times of great tension,—like those we have gone through for the past three or four years,—the great subject of thought for all mankind is inevitably associated with the tension and what gave rise to it. The reconstruction and rebuilding of devastated Europe will certainly occupy a large place in the thought of the world for a number of years to come. The big, general subject of government is before the world to stay for a long time.

In the face of such conditions, what are preachers to preach about? How much attention should a minister give to such present-day matters in his messages from the pulpit? It is certainly true that a minister must keep up with the times in his thought, or he can not lead his people aright. And yet, after all, what is it that people want to hear at church on Sunday? Is it a digest of some book or an elaboration of some standard magazine article? Or is it the simple, plain story of how God loves mankind and wants them to cherish love and good will in their lives?

A well-informed man remarked to me, not long ago, that he wants something different from his minister on Sundays than what he can get from his magazines. He said that he can sit at home, in comfortable clothes, and read all of that kind of matter he wants to, but when he goes into the house of the Lord he wants something that immerses his soul in a fountain of love. Then he goes home fed and strengthened, ready to meet the work of the week-days in the spirit of love and good will for all his fellow-men.

I doubt whether the Kaiser has been more atrocious than Nero and whether the times in which we live have been very much different from those when Paul lived. Yet how much do we read in Paul's writings of the mistakes of Nero? How much do we read of the great sins of the Roman nation and government? Where do we read Paul's program of reconstruction, for the Roman officials to follow? Paul had a program for them, indeed, and he gave his life that they might learn of it. He stated it in I Corinthians 13.

Again; the Apostle John lived through some very trying times. Undoubtedly his heart ached when he learned of the sufferings of his people in the destruction of Jerusalem. He was made a victim of persecution from the unjust and brutal authorities. He, no doubt, shared the common view of his people that the kingdom was to be restored to the Jews (Acts 1: 6). Yet, where in any of his writings have we a hint of his program for civil government? How much did he interest himself in those things? Had there been magacure for the evils of the times was the story of the Good Shepherd,—God's unbounded love for man, awakening in man a disposition of love and good will for his fellow-men. He told the story of the Master Teacher of men, the wonderful revelation of God's character, in a way that men could understand him. It was the Bread of Life and the Cross and the resurrection that John preached and wrote about. Those were the things, which, when known, felt and acted upon by men, made them honest rulers and upright citizens, without regard to which side of a given national boundary line they happened to live on. God's love in men's hearts makes them brothers. When they recognize themselves as brothers, and begin to feel toward each other as brothers, and act toward each other as brothers,—then there is not much left for the Government specialists to figure out.

The Christian church has gone through an awful crucible in these trying war years. Are we to come out of it with all our dross of narrow sectarianism still clinging to us? Or are we to come out of it with a lot of that spirit burned out of us, and with the bright, shining gold of character before God, as our highest heritage? God pity us, and have mercy upon us for the envy we have cherished and for the jealousy we have nurtured against those of other church affiliations! May he help us see things more clearly as the Divine Eye sees them.

And our boys,—when they come home,—are they to hear us preaching about government and sociology and war, or are they to hear what their hungry souls will so much long for,—the story of God's great love, the story of the prodigal son and of the crucified but risen Christ?

God have mercy upon us and make us wise!

Again the Editor's Comment.—"The Fourteenth Biennial of the General Federation is to report how we abide the 'swelling of Jordan.'"

And so, the General Federation is the story of a mere handful (61 delegates) of the thinking women of the nation coming up through all sorts of prejudice, criticism and ridicule, until they number 2,500,000 women, publicly acknowledged by a Washington Senator as being "the most active force in shaping public policies in the nation today,"—until to them, the task deemed necessary, is never too great for them to undertake.

The occasion is the Fourteenth Biennial and the time April 30 to May 8, 1918. Take a glance at the program: The official program contained fifty-four pages, with all kinds of subjects for discussion, from bird value in food production to Biblical literature and legislative acts of State and Nation. The front cover-page of their own magazine for January runs like this:

> "The time has come," the walrus said,
> "To talk of many things:
> Of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—
> Of cabbages—and kings."

Of course, everywhere the theme was conservation, and the dominant note of the convention was war-work. In the main, it was a great earnest, determined army of women, bent upon the peaceful pursuits of conquest,—not only in the great world war, but in the greater moral battles, being waged throughout the nation, and throughout the world.

The general forenoon and evening sessions were held in the immense "Oaklawn Auditorium,"—in a small park two miles from the city, while the "conferences" (usually three) were held simultaneously in the auditoriums of the large hotels, thus giving ample opportunity for all present to hear free many of the most prominent speakers of the country.

There seemed to be delegates from everywhere, committees for everything and speakers for every subject. And, they were all there, a vacancy being a rare thing.

Of the many subjects, we mention only a few: "Child Welfare," "Nutrition Side of Food Conservation," "The Girl Problem in Wartime," "Safeguarding the Men in Service," "Social Hygiene," "Women, Labor and Law," "Uniform Divorce Laws," "Needs of Our Rural Schools," "Women as Laborers,—Farm and Garden," "The Bible and Modern Education," "The Making of a Singing Army," "Moving Pictures—Federal Censorship," "Adult Illiteracy in America."

Such subjects were discussed by such speakers as: Chas. H. Brough, Arkansas Governor; Dean J. R. Jewell, Arkansas University; Mrs. Herbert Hoover, wife of the United States Food Commissioner; Ellen B. Smith, M. D.; Jessica B. Piexotto, M. D.; Prof. E. V. McCollum, Johns Hopkins University; C. C. Price, M. D.; Sanitation Officer, Camp Pike, Ark.; Kenneth S. Clark, Division Song Leader, Camp Meade; Jane Addams, Hull House, Chicago; Hon. Jeanette Rankin, Member of Congress from Montana; Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, Chairman Woman's Committee, Council of National Defense.

THE MUSIC.—Occasionally there was "special music" of various kinds and excellent character, but the kind most frequently used was "Assembly Singing." The songs predominating were "America," "Keep the Home Fires Burning," and the hymn, "Holy, Holy, Holy!" At first one noticed the absence of male voices in song, but soon grew accustomed here, too, to the "substitute" of the many alto voices, some of the women also singing excellent bass. However, it must be said to the credit of the Camp Meade Song Leader, Kenneth Clark, that he was the only leader who, at all times, was able to compel his vast assembly, from everywhere, to keep together,—due, of course, to his unusually strong personality, and the practical skill, in his particular line of work.

Some Lessons Gleaned

First, there was the lesson taken home to ourselves of the welcome for the "stranger within our gates." At our own Conference, do we think much about the real stranger, or is it mainly the selfish concern of meeting old friends and having a good social time?

Then, there was the lesson of supreme personal interest in the work of the Convention. Hot Springs has many places of beauty and interest for the sight-seer, but few were lured by these away from the business of the meeting. Coming at the beginning and remaining to the close of the nine days, was seemingly accepted by the delegates as their duty to the cause of civic and moral world betterment, which they have espoused. Do you think we could improve in our interest in the programs and business of our own Conference?

How could a city of 20,000 population care for the wants of so large a gathering? Simply because they have specialized in entertainment. As many as 150,000 to 200,000 people visit Hot Springs every year, including various conventions. Of course, this was the "biggest thing" yet, but they mastered the situation by getting ready.

One could suit her expense to her purse very easily here, for while there are solid blocks of substantial bath-houses and likewise large hotels, there are also the smaller hotels which give excellent service, besides the numerous restaurants,—some on the cafeteria plan,—where the problem of "feeding people" en masse has seemingly reached solution. We managed nicely on two moderate meals per day,—a decided advantage in many ways. As we gathered from the Convention those things of value to our work we awoke to the fulfillment of a cherished dream, while we experienced a keen sense of gratitude toward those who had helped to make this trip possible. We hopefully look forward to the time when, through an improved system, none of our plans shall go undeveloped for want of funds. We have in sufficient numbers those who are especially interested in the cause for which our Committee labors, but it is that "mutual knowledge and understanding,"—the kind designated in the Federated Magazine editorial,—which is the crying need among us today.

The delegates were seated in sections, by lot, according to States. Note a few of the "Rules" most rigidly enforced:

1. A speaker shall announce her name and State when addressing the chairman.
2. Speakers shall be limited to two minutes in all business meetings.
3. No member shall speak more than twice on the same subject.
4. Members may enter the Convention Hall while a meeting is in progress, provided strict silence is observed, but shall not be seated, except in seats near the door, during the rendering of any part of the program. Members shall be silent during the presentation and discussion of all questions.

A study of the manner of enforcement of all "Rules" was a matter of special interest. On receiving persons, at the one rear entrance, not closed during the progress of the meeting, we saw the head usher deftly touch her fingers to her lips, when such persons attempted even to whisper. Between program numbers, a very few moments were used in seating persons properly, by uniformed ushers placarded, "Silence." Necessary communication usually was done in writing, or, just outside the door.

Only once,—following a thrilling speech,—did we observe anything like a wave of disorder pass over the audience. Then the "General Chairman," promptly came forward and, with a few strokes of her gavel and a few words of command, restored absolute silence in less time than it takes to speak of it.

Frequently were we led to compare the effect of the use of the gavel, as used here, with that of our august bodies assembled in U. S. Congress, to say nothing of the tardiness, the disorder and apparent indifference often reigning there. Yes, we could come closer home and make a guess at the effect upon our Annual Conference, if a like strict ruling were enforced there. Some "scenes" might result among certain classes, but it would be good for us. We are in need of just such discipline "in more ways than one."

At this Convention we had clear proof that hundreds of women, if cultured, can in public places avoid all loud laughing, exclamations of emotion, or evidence of affectation. This old world is seriously in need of that type of women on whom you can "bank" as being ladies anywhere.

THE NUISANCE ELIMINATED.—There was a keen sense of satisfaction in being able to make trip after trip on the street-car, attend session after session of the Convention and not get a whiff of tobacco smoke. An occasional laborer, aboard the car, was seen to carry his pipe in his pocket. The few men who came as speakers or visitors to the Convention were evidently abstainers,—at least no evidence of the "weed" was upon their persons. If thousands of women can thus spend ten days in a convention with unpolluted breath, why can not thousands of men? They can, and they will when the turn comes for tobacco, in the train of evils yet to be "cleaned up" in this old world.

The Second Birth

BY D. F. LEPLEY

Have You Been "Born Again"?

THE reader of these lines may feel that this is a very personal question to ask a church member. You may even feel that it is no business of mine, nor that of any one else, and that you prefer to look after your own personal affairs. It is true, too, that ultimately you will have to do this yourself.

But how about the question? Let us stick to the text a bit and press this question. It is important. No other question in the world concerns you and me as this one does. All of our eternal welfare hinges upon our answer to this question.

I hear an answer: "Why, of course I have been 'born again.' Haven't I been baptized, and even by trine immersion?" Yes, but have you been "born again"? Can you prove it? If not, you are in a lost condition.

Have you been changed into a "new creature"? Does your body bear the "birth-marks" of the "second birth"? If not, you are deceived yourself and are deceiving others. You are yet in your sins, and as a sinner you are lost.

Do you "bear in your body the marks of the Lord Jesus," as Paul did? Have you changed to that subdued, surrendered and crucified life, and so transformed your body that the world will recognize you as a child of God instead of the child of the world, that you formerly were? If not, you are none of his.

Have you given God your body as a "holy, acceptable and living sacrifice," wholly transformed from worldly things, to be a daily living "witness of the perfect will of God"? If not, how will he know you as one of his?

Have you given God your heart, your mouth, your will, your strength, your pocketbook and your bank account, with the distinct understanding with him that he is to rule all your affections, and that you are to let him do with you and yours just as he pleases, without asking any questions? If not, he surely will not own you as one of his children. You lack his birth-mark (obedient service). You have not been "born of God" (the Spirit).

Have you given up your bad habits and your worldly, sinful and doubtful pleasures,—your pride, vanity and your self-indulgences?

Are you allowing God to purge all of your selfishness, peevishness, spitefulness, your cold-heartedness and unforgiving spirit towards your brethren and sinners, out of your heart? If not, you are still the same carnal, sinful creature that you were before.

Have you allowed God to engrave his birth-mark of love in your heart, into your life, upon your tongue and lips, into your hands and your feet, into your eyes and upon your countenance,—the love that constrains you to love God and all that is good? Does it prompt you to love your brethren, to love sinners, yes, to love even your enemies, just because you can not help it? Do you love, in recognition of the fact that it is God's nature to love? If you have been born of God, it will and must be your nature also.

Dear reader, does your body show the marks of the "royal" birth into the family of the "King of Heaven and Earth"? Are you a child of the King?

"Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again he can not see the Kingdom of God."

The Power of Concerted Effort

BY H. H. NININGER

In April, 1917, the United States Government declared war against Germany. At that time millions of people in the United States were not in sympathy with this movement. Thousands said that if the matter were left to a vote of the people, we should never have entered the war. This theory was doubtless radical, but it indicates that at least a considerable percentage of our 100,000,000 people were against the movement.

Six months later our nation stood practically a unit on the proposition that the Central Powers must be subdued. Millions of men and women changed their minds in so short a time,—and why? Because we saw the question in a different light. New facts had been presented to us, some of which we had never yet discovered, but many of which we simply viewed from a different angle.

And how did it all happen? This way: The Government at once began a program of education, reaching all classes of people and revealing reasons why this great step seemed to be absolutely essential. Lecturers toured the country. The press was called upon to give voice to the message. Educational leaders were everywhere used to spread the message of "war for democracy."

But of all the forces which coöperated in the great task of creating sentiment, there was, perhaps, none quite so potent as the churches. The Government plead for the support of the American ministry, and the ministry responded almost as a unit, and plead for a successful prosecution of the war. From hundreds and thousands of pulpits there came sermon after sermon, Sunday after Sunday, holding up the Allied cause as the supreme duty of the hour. Millions of people, Sunday after Sunday, listened to this great message. Then they left the door of the church and became active agents in this nation-wide wave of sentiment.

This great and rapid swinging of 100,000,000 people into line for an altruistic enterprise stands without peer in human history. It demonstrates, beyond all doubt, that the American people are not proof against conviction. They will listen to a clarion call to sacrifice in an altruistic cause.

Now, just suppose that twenty-five or even ten years earlier the American ministry had, in response to an impelling force from within, voluntarily unified its efforts in a concerted campaign for the acceptance of Jesus' doctrine of peace, and for making the world proof against wars! Of course, the psychological state produced by witnessing so great a struggle as the European war, renders man unusually receptive, but it is safe to say that if the peace program had been pushed for ten or twenty years with the same concerted effort and intensity as we witnessed in 1917, the nation and even the world, Germany included, would have been won to the cause of peace, for it is well known that, at the outbreak of hostilities, at least three of the great nations were in favor of abolishing war and even Germany was almost evenly divided on the question.

But it is useless now to point out what might have been, for the record is made, and whoever believes in a final judgment may look forward to remorse enough at the opening of that record, so, why waste time and energy now in regretting the past? Let us look ahead, —now that we have learned what a power Christendom has at her command. What shall we do with it? Where lies the next great achievement to be wrought in this great foundry of sentiment? The liquor traffic has been weighed and found wanting, but there is still time for some effective strokes, by way of moulding the metal of this fallen idol into an instrument of uplift. As we view the end of the abominable traffic, let us look ahead to determine what institution shall satiate the human craving which the saloon has so treacherously met heretofore.

From what I know of the life of Jesus, he was a great man to plead for the rights of the weak,—for those helpless ones on whom the burdens of church and state were being shifted, not because they were able to bear them, but because they were unable to refuse. Is there, somewhere in our own day, a case where the rights of the weak have been disregarded by the strong, in which we may become the champions of the trampled as did Jesus, in the case of the woman who had fallen and was caught? It occurs to me that the world is still a bit more inclined to throw stones at a woman who has fallen than at the man who helped her to fall. Perhaps Jesus' standard of morality would suggest a move upon which Christendom might concentrate her efforts.

Then there are those inequalities of the rich and the poor before the law. Here, again, it is the cause of the poor which lacks vindication. It would be a noble, Christlike act to raise public sentiment to the white heat of reformation on this point.

Then there is that great social question which must be stabilized during this generation,—the relation of capital and labor,—the problem of dealing with the system by which it is predestined at birth that certain poor must always remain paupers, and that certain other individuals shall be favored by abounding wealth, —" that some must ever earn more than they get, while others shall ever get more than they earn." Who shall be the champion of the trampled millions and create the sentiment which shall guide the course of affairs during this reforming period just ahead of us? Shall it be the radical, anarchistic type of socialism, which has, in its delirium of suffering, cursed "Christianity" and pronounced it the enemy of the weak, or shall it be the organization which professes the name of him who pronounced it a part of his program to "set at liberty them that are bruised"?

If the question of labor and capital is not sufficiently large to keep us from the mischief of traditionalizing and mote-seeking, which wrought such a havoc with the church officials in Jesus' day, perhaps we could produce a change of sentiment on the matter of dress. What a reduction of suffering might be accomplished if there were a world-wide, concerted and vigorous campaign against the blind following of brainless fashion inventors, instead of using common sense, and clothing ourselves for protection, comfort and true beauty!

At the trumpet call of the nation the church arose as one man, and echoed its message with no uncertain sound. The people came to hear, and having heard, they arose to action, and once more the God-given right of man to think, speak and order his affairs according to the leading of his conscience, was rescued from the hand of despotism. Now come other calls,— not from our Government, but from various classes and conditions of humanity. We have seen that in union there is strength. Again let us arise, as one man, in those matters upon which we already agree, and, with the same enthusiasm, coöperation, and decision, go forward in this program of setting the captive free, of preaching the "good news" that the Kingdom is at hand, wherein the meek, the discouraged, the mourners, the merciful, the pure in heart, the yearner for righteousness, and the persecuted, shall all be blessed.

Our Response

BY I. V. FUNDERBURGH

The year 1918 will ever be a memorable one in history. During this year God has spoken to the world in no uncertain terms. He has said: "Suffer," and the earth groaned under the almost unendurable agony. He has said: "Sacrifice," and men and women unnumbered, and money unmeasured, answered: "Here am I." He has said: "Serve," and an innumerable host, bearing the insignia of the Cross, the Red Triangle, the Shield, the Red Cross, the Blue Triangle, and others, came forward "marching as to war."

Now what has been the response of the Church of the Brethren to these three messages from God? To the first one we have made noble answer. Our hearts, so long bathed in the atmosphere of peace, and taught to know no war, have bled unceasingly because of the awful struggle upon the earth. Our homes have been touched by disease, and loved ones are gone. Earthly ties have been severed on the battle-field. Deep-seated convictions have been torn from us. We have been hungry. We have been cold. Suffering? We have answered well the call.

The response the people of our loved church have made to the second summons has been no less. There are little blue stars in our windows that mean all the world to us. We pledge to the Red Cross; we subscribe for Liberty Bonds; we buy thrift-stamps; we conserve food, clothing and fuel. Sacrifice! Yes, we do.

But what of the summons, "Serve"? Oh, yes, we have served in responding to our country's demand for money. We have prayed earnestly for the boys in the Camps and at the front. But is this the only opportunity for service that God has given the Church of the Brethren?

The splendid spirit that prevailed at the Special Conference called early in 1918 at Goshen, marked a long step forward for the Church of the Brethren. It was a step in advance, such as we had never taken before, to decide to engage in reconstruction work in the war-torn areas of Europe. Following this Conference there was a call for money and workers to set the work going, and there was a generous response in both. One young brother said to me: "I'm glad that at last our church is providing a place for me to devote my life in practical Christian service." That young man waited and waited, and was finally drafted into the service of his country, bitterly disappointed that no opportunity had been provided for him to work under the auspices of the church of his choice, where service of a practical Christian nature was so badly needed. I know of a half dozen other young brethren who have been ready and waiting long for this opportunity.

May I say, with kindness and sincerity, that within six months after the splendid movement was started at Goshen, we should have had a score of young men at work in France, and fifty or more in special training for the field. Just why we have no one in that land of distress and suffering, representing directly the Church of the Brethren, I do not know. I believe we ought to find out why, and awake from our sleep, to make real our Christian faith.

Never before has there been such a tremendous need for practical Christian service as during the past few months on the battle-fields of France and Belgium. And since the Armistice is in force, the need and opportunity is no less. Millions and multiplied millions of suffering humanity are crying for the Gospel of love, peace, and service. And we, who have professed to live so close to the Master and obeyed his will so minutely, have let slip the glorious opportunity of demonstrating the principles of love and service which we have always held dear.

The theology and creed of our church (if it may be said we have a creed) are built on principles which are sound and true and abiding, and for which the human race has striven for centuries. Brethren, there comes to us now, in the name of Jesus Christ and humanity, a tremendous appeal for a clear and definite consciousness of the magnanimous opportunity God has given to the Church of the Brethren for a practical, constructive, and compelling demonstration of her religious faith. What shall our answer be?

God's Calls to Service

BY REBECCA C. FOUTZ

All through the Scriptures it is interesting to note some things about God's calls to service, and also the men called. As a rule, people are on the lookout for the easiest job with the largest pay. But we notice that the jobs God had for men to do, were not "soft snaps," by any means, and naturally it takes big men to fill the big jobs, whether they are for God or for men. The one who answered the call, often had to run the whole gauntlet of human suffering and troubles, in performing the task assigned. But he evidently considered it well worth while.

earth, but whose dizzy summit reaches into the radiant heaven!

Jacob,—sinful, despised of father and brother, a fugitive from justice,—is prone at its base, but, look, who stands at the top? "Behold, Jehovah stood above it." The angels were the messengers carrying Jacob's petitions up, and God's answers and blessings down.

The long, weary chasm between sinner and God was miraculously bridged. That solid, dependable, imperishable bridge has existed through the centuries, and shall continue to time's end. It is Jesus. He links earth with heaven.

No matter to what depths of despair, into what intricacies of sin, we have fallen, Jesus will always lift us up if we wish, and span the distance to heaven by his pitying intercession to a God who forgives and saves.

Influenza in India

BY A. T. HOFFERT

According to late reports from America and other civilized lands, Spanish influenza has been claiming its victims by the thousands. This is a disease that can be overcome best by proper nursing and suitable nourishment, hence in India, among the poorer classes, that do not know how to care for themselves, and who are too poor to provide suitable nourishment, the death rate has been terrible, the number of victims running into the millions. The following statements, taken from reports sent in from a number of our stations, will show in a general way how this part of India was affected:

Government figures for Bulsar Taluka (or county) show that during August 165 deaths occurred. In September there were 377, and for the first twenty-four days of October there were 2,517 deaths, making a total of 3,059, which is three and one-third per cent of the population. The balance of the figures for October and those for November are not in hand. They would doubtless bring it up to four per cent. Some villages suffered more than others. In one village of fifteen huts there were thirty-five deaths. In another village of 1,100 population there were 125 deaths from Oct. 1 to Nov. 15.

The death rate in Anklesvar Taluka, according to figures in hand, is much like that of Bulsar. The number of deaths for October is 1,800, which is three per cent of the population. The figures for November will probably increase this total to four per cent.

The epidemic was not so bad in the town of Jalalpor, but in the surrounding villages there was a high mortality. In Navsari, a Parsee town of 20,000, less than two miles to the east of Jalalpor, conditions were very bad. For a time the daily death rate was thirty to thirty-five. One day fifty deaths were reported. Bombay was filled with consternation when eight hundred died in a day, but at the Navsari rate, Bombay would have had 2,500 a day. However, that high rate continued for only a day or so. From the surrounding villages people came to the mission house, saying that everybody was sick. Exact statistics are not at hand, but it was much the same in both the Jalalpor and Chikhli Talukas. The hardest attack came at grass cutting time, and much grass was left uncut until later, because it was impossible to get laborers. At least seven schools were closed for some time, because ten of the teachers were laid up with the disease for several weeks. On the compound at Jalalpor nine cases occurred, but fortunately there were no deaths.

At all the stations the missionaries were alert to give all the medical assistance they could, to those who were suffering. Concerning what was done at Jalalpor, along this line, Bro. Emmert writes: "We did medical work through our village-teachers. I got several supplies of Dr. C. V.'s medicine and sent it out to all the teachers. The results were very gratifying. I know of several very bad cases which were cured and they think it was nothing but the medicine, under the blessing of the Lord. One master, who is much interested in the teaching of Christ, was ill, together with his whole family. We sent them medicine, and Trikam went to see them, arriving about the same time the medicine came. He told them how to use it, and then explained that the chief benefit would be in trusting the Lord. Then he prayed with them and I am glad to say that they all recovered. In another case a man had been removed from the bed and placed on the floor to die. Through a dream Limbaji came home hurriedly from a village, twelve miles away, and arrived just about that time. He was called and responded, taking some of the medicine with him. The sick man is influential and intelligent. Limbaji told him that it was of no benefit to use our medicine while trusting in the idol gods of his fathers. He also insisted that unless the idol gods were given up, in this particular work at least, he would not give medicine. The man consented and the medicine was given. The Lord acknowledged it at once, and the next morning the man was much better. He is now well. It would be very interesting to know if the mortality is higher among drinking people. No doubt the drinking people suffered greatly, but whether it was wholly due to drink or not, is a question."

From Dahanu, Sister Swartz writes: "What I have seen and heard of the epidemic, it was much the same here as elsewhere. With the poorer people their famished condition lessened their resistive power, and made them more susceptible to it, and also harder to help. All who came for help were given treatment and a number were cared for here at the dispensary. Some medicine was also sent out into the villages, where some one got it."

Bro. Long reports considerable medicine given out at Vyara, amounting to thirty-two large bottles,—there being from one and a half to two pints in each. There were fourteen villages and two hundred and nineteen people served,—many of the people being served often. Bro. Stover has prepared an article for the "Missionary Visitor," giving a vivid description of the epidemic in Anklesvar Taluka,—an account of the different missionaries who were attacked by the sickness and other phases of the subject, that will be read with interest. My purpose has been to avoid repeating what may be learned from his article.

At Vali, among the Christians, members of sixteen different families were attacked, and three deaths reported. While sick herself, Sister Himmelsbaugh directed the giving out of medicine. The medicine given to the Boarding School boys kept them free from the sickness. For a time after her recovery, the sick in fourteen different families were given milk and porridge until they recovered. Several visits were made to the villages. The master, who has charge of the church at Amletha, was sick, and so was his wife. He recovered but his wife died. In an adjoining village the sister of Dhanjabhi, who for years has been an earnest brother in the Amletha church, died of this disease. When asked to attend the funeral, Dhanjabhi said: "No, she was of this world; I am not of this world, therefore I can not attend her funeral." Later the husband of this woman took the influenza. Dhanjabhi and another brother went to see him. They asked if they might not pray for his recovery. He consented and after they prayed he was willing to go with Dhanjabhi to his house, where he would be cared for. About that time Nurse Himmelsbaugh and Sister Arnold arrived. Examining the man, he was found to be in a very critical condition, and no hopes were entertained of his recovery, yet medicine was given. After three days the nurse returned and found, to her great surprise, that the man was getting well. Going into the house Dhanjabhi said to the sick man: "Sit up now and say salaam to the Miss Sahib." But the Miss Sahib said: "No, stay where you are. Time enough to say 'salaam' after you get well." The man has since expressed his desire to become a Christian.

The epidemic in the Dangs still continues, and the death rate has been enormous. Concerning it Bro. Blough writes: "The influenza epidemic is sweeping over the Dangs like a forest fire. It is now practically two months since it broke out here, yet in many villages it is raging still, and some new villages, that have escaped so far, may get it yet. The death-rate varies in the villages from five to twenty-five per cent. A few small villages report even a still higher loss, but I have not yet been able to verify the reports. At present we estimate the number of deaths in the whole Dangs at fifteen per cent of the population, but it will be a long time before we know definitely. In our own town of Ahwa the loss is about twenty-five per cent. From our own Christian community we lost five adults and seven children. Two of the adults were teachers and one the wife of a teacher. A few ran away in the beginning and we don't know if they are living or not. We lost none of our Boarding School children. It was a sad and distressing time,—heart-rending indeed! Whole families were sick at once and without food and with but insufficient clothing. We supplied food, medicine and clothing, so far as our limited supply lasted, and attended as many as our strength would allow. There are still a few weak and sickly, and coughing severely."

But there are other parts of India where the epidemic is still raging, as the following will show. From "Times of India," Dec. 14, we read: "The influenza epidemic is still doing havoc in some districts of West Bengal. It has carried off whole villages in Ghatsilla, Midnapur and Baukura districts, and there is one village where there is no one to bury the dead. Information has been received also that in Naraingunj the people are dying like flies. In Manbhoom and the neighboring places Mohammedans suffer more than the Hindus. Some of the district and local boards have appointed special medical officers to visit villages, and to render medical aid. Still, the epidemic is so wide-spread that most people in the interior are dying without treatment." From the issue of Dec. 16 we note: "News has reached Kolimpong from Lhasa State, that influenza is raging in Lhasa and the surrounding country, and the mortality is very high. Many prominent traders and officials have also died."

In India, where the masses, through ignorance, are unable to care for themselves, and who, through poverty, are unable to feed themselves sufficiently, and whose normal resistance to disease has been greatly weakened through drink, we have a condition which made it possible for influenza to reap a mighty harvest.

Government statistics from Switzerland show that alcohol is a prominent cause of death in thirty per cent of the cases of pneumonia. We are told that influenza leads to pneumonia, which has caused the death of most cases. If thirty per cent of the pneumonia cases, that followed influenza, may be attributed to alcohol as a prominent cause, it is plainly evident that drink is one of the prominent causes why influenza in this country wrought so much havoc.

In this connection the following taken from "National Enquirer" of Sept. 26, 1918, will be of interest: "The prevalence of the so-called 'Spanish grip,' in many parts of Europe, has given the liquor interests an opportunity to laud the virtues of alcoholic drinks as a protection against the malady. The Government of the Canton of Vaud, Switzerland, has warned the people against accepting this idea. Dr. Forel and Dr. Hercod have recapitulated the evidence, showing that alcoholic habits weaken the normal resistance to infectious diseases. Spanish grip broke out in a school for artillery recruits at Thoune, and all the abstainers escaped. There were twenty officers in the school and nearly all of these were attacked, except three who were abstainers."

Suggestions for the Weekly Devotional Meeting Or for Prayerful, Private Meditation.

Christian Stewardship and Its Part in the "Forward Movement"

Proverbs 3: 9, 10

For Week Beginning March 2, 1919

1. Introductory.—(1) A command, "Honor the Lord," etc. (2) A privilege, "Honor the Lord with thy substance," etc. (3) A promise conditional upon compliance, "So shall thy barns be filled with plenty," etc. Fidelity brings not only spiritual but also temporal rewards.

2. Laying up Treasure in Heaven.—Riches gained and used for God bring blessings to a suffering world. So used, they are laid up in heaven,—the only safe place for our treasures. It is not, necessarily, a sin to be rich in this world's goods, if wealth has been honestly gained and is wisely appropriated. The cause of truth and righteousness is moving forward today because some of God's servants know the noble use of money. They have heard God's message to men: "Thou shalt remember the Lord thy God: for it is he that giveth thee power to get wealth, that he may establish his covenant that he swore unto thy fathers."

3. The Dangers of Unfaithful Stewardship.—Many serious evils have been rooted in "the love of money" in all countries and in all centuries. By covetousness, more than by perverted conscience, the persecutions of the Jews have been caused in all ages. Greed in American whalemen, aided by lust, has almost depopulated the Sandwich Islands. Christianity came too late to do more than delay the result. Greed in the Portuguese traders, aided by Romanism, caused the banishment of Christianity for two centuries from Japan. Greed in English merchants carried the opium curse into China. Greed's injustice and trickery have provoked most of our Indian wars. The papers, a few weeks ago, in speaking of a wealthy man who had recently passed away, made much of the fact that he left property to the value of twenty millions. When he faces the Judge on the great day of accounts, he will have two hard questions to answer: (1) "How did you get that money?" (2) "What did you do with it?"

4. Our Gifts Denote Our Love.—Without any question, our gifts to God indicate our esteem and love for him. And when we give for the support of the church at home, and for its extension into the heathen lands, and for any of its departments of work, with such feelings of love, we shall enjoy giving and be blessed in it. As soon as we determine to enter into the real spirit of the "Forward Movement," the choicest blessings of the Father will be showered upon us,—his promises can not fail. We shall not then look upon giving as a hardship, as many do now, nor shall we speak of the church as "begging," or of the ministers as preaching "begging sermons," when funds are solicited for the grand enterprises of the Gospel. It is a shame to have such a thought. The Gospel was founded in self-sacrifice. Its originators did not hold their lives dear unto themselves, but laid them down for the world's salvation. Were the whole realm of nature ours, that were a present far too small, with which to compensate Divine Love for the gift of Jesus Christ.

Treasure in the heavens (Luke 12: 33, 34). The Lord's plan (2 Cor. 9: 6-12). God's message to the rich (1 Tim. 6: 17-19). Sacrifices approved of God (Heb. 13: 16). From the issue of Dec. 16 we note: "News has reached Kolimpong from Lhasa State, that influenza is raging in Lhasa and the surrounding country, and the mortality is very high. Many prominent traders and officials have also died."

In India, where the masses, through ignorance, are unable to care for themselves, and who, through poverty, are unable to feed themselves sufficiently, and whose normal resistance to disease has been greatly weakened through drink, we have a condition which made it possible for influenza to reap a mighty harvest.

Government statistics from Switzerland show that alcohol is a prominent cause of death in thirty per cent of the cases of pneumonia. We are told that influenza leads to pneumonia, which has caused the death of most cases. If thirty per cent of the pneumonia cases that followed influenza, may be attributed to alcohol as a prominent cause, it is plainly evident that drink is one of the prominent causes why influenza in this country wrought so much havoc.

In this connection the following taken from "National Enquirer" of Sept. 26, 1918, will be of interest: "The prevalence of the so-called 'Spanish grip,' in many parts of Europe, has given the liquor interests an opportunity to laud the virtues of alcoholic drinks as a protection against the malady. The Government of the Canton of Vaud, Switzerland, has warned the people against accepting this idea. Dr. Forel and Dr. Hercod have recapitulated the evidence, showing that alcoholic habits weaken the normal resistance to infectious diseases. Spanish grip broke out in a school for artillery recruits at Thoune, and all the abstainers escaped. There were twenty officers in the school and nearly all of these were attacked, except three who were abstainers."

Christian Stewardship and Its Part in the "Forward Movement"

Proverbs 3: 9, 10

For Week Beginning March 2, 1919

1. Introductory.—(1) A command, "Honor the Lord," etc. (2) A privilege, "Honor the Lord with thy substance," etc. (3) A promise conditional upon compliance, "So shall thy barns be filled with plenty," etc. Fidelity brings not only spiritual but also temporal rewards.

2. Laying up Treasure in Heaven.—Riches gained and used for God bring blessings to a suffering world. So used, they are laid up in heaven,—the only safe place for our treasures. It is not, necessarily, a sin to be rich in this world's goods, if wealth has been honestly gained and is wisely appropriated. The cause of truth and righteousness is moving forward today because some of God's servants know the noble use of money. They have heard God's message to men: "Thou shalt remember the Lord thy God: for it is he that giveth thee power to get wealth, that he may establish his covenant that he swore unto thy fathers."

3. The Dangers of Unfaithful Stewardship.—Many serious evils have been rooted in "the love of money" in all countries and in all centuries. By covetousness, more than by perverted conscience, the persecutions of the Jews have been caused in all ages. Greed in American whalemen, aided by lust, has almost depopulated the Sandwich Islands. Christianity came too late to do more than delay the result. Greed in the Portuguese traders, aided by Romanism, caused the banishment of Christianity for two centuries from Japan. Greed in English merchants carried the opium curse into China. Greed's injustice and trickery have provoked most of our Indian wars. The papers, a few weeks ago, in speaking of a wealthy man who had recently passed away, made much of the fact that he left property to the value of twenty millions. When he faces the Judge on the great day of accounts, he will have two hard questions to answer: (1) "How did you get that money?" (2) "What did you do with it?"

4. Our Gifts Denote Our Love.—Without any question, our gifts to God indicate our esteem and love for him. And when we give for the support of the church at home, and for its extension into the heathen lands, and for any of its departments of work, with such feelings of love, we shall enjoy giving and be blessed in it. As soon as we determine to enter into the real spirit of the "Forward Movement," the choicest blessings of the Father will be showered upon us,—his promises can not fail. We shall not then look upon giving as a hardship, as many do now, nor shall we speak of the church as "begging," or of the ministers as preaching "begging sermons," when funds are solicited for the grand enterprises of the Gospel. It is a shame to have such a thought. The Gospel was founded in self-sacrifice. Its originators did not hold their lives dear unto themselves, but laid them down for the world's salvation. Were the whole realm of nature ours, that were a present far too small, with which to compensate Divine Love for the gift of Jesus Christ.

Suggestive References.—Liberality commended (Prov. 11: 24, 25). How great riches may be had (Prov. 13: 7). The reward of the liberal (Isa. 32: 8). Do not forget the Lord's share (Mal. 3: 10-12). Treasure in the heavens (Luke 12: 33, 34). The Lord's plan (2 Cor. 9: 6-12). God's message to the rich (1 Tim. 6: 17-19). Sacrifices approved of God (Heb. 13: 16). Christ's blessed example (2 Cor. 8: 9, 11, 12). Power to gain wealth comes from God (Deut. 8: 18).

AMONG THE CHURCHES

CALENDAR FOR SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 23

Sunday-school Lesson, Moses Praying for Israel.—Ex. 32: 1 to 34: 9.

Christian Workers' Meeting, "I Haven't Time."

MEETINGS IN PROGRESS

Bro. J. Edwin Jarhoe, of Chicago, Ill., in the West Wichita church, Kans. One accession so far, and good prospects for others.

CONTEMPLATED MEETINGS

Bro. R. N. Leatherman, of Cincinnati, Ohio, to begin March 2 at Sidney, Ohio.

Bro. W. D. Keller, of Canton, Ohio, to begin May 18 in the Reading church, same State.

Bro. Ralpb G. Rarick and wife, of South Bend, Ind., to begin Feb. 24 in their home church.

Bro. M. C. Swigart, of Philadelphia, Pa., to begin in March or April in the Bridgewater church, Va.

Bro. Ezra Flory, of Chicago, to conduct a Bible Institute some time in June in the Pleasant Hill church, Ind.

GAINS FOR THE KINGDOM

One stood for Christ in the Pleasant Hill church, Ind.—Bro. H. Forney, of Chenoa, Ill., evangelist.

One confessed Christ in the Hartford City church, Ind.—Brethren Chas. R. Oberlin and B. D. Hirt, evangelists.

Twenty-nine made the good choice in the East Fairview church, Pa.—Bro. Wm. N. Zobler, of Lancaster, same State, evangelist.

Fifty-two have so far been baptized at Waynesboro, Pa., total confessions, seventy-eight,—Bro. Galen B. Royer, of Huntingdon, Pa., evangelist.

PERSONAL MENTION

Bro. H. B. Martin changes his address from Summitville, Ind., to Timberville, Va.

At a meeting of the trustees of Mount Morris College, held last week, Dr. Levi S. Shively, who has been Acting President since the beginning of the current scholastic year, was elected President of the College.

In stating that the preaching of Eld. David Leatherman, whose biographical sketch appeared in our issue of Jan. 25, was largely extemporaneous, our correspondent did not mean to imply that this was entirely without preparation. Bro. Leatherman did not prepare written outlines of his sermons but he was nevertheless a very diligent student of the Scripture. And he loved to meditate upon the text of a sermon while at his work in the field. He was distinctly a text preacher.

ELSEWHERE IN THIS ISSUE

Bro. C. D. Hylton makes an important announcement to the churches of the First District of Virginia, and we take it for granted that it will be given the consideration to which it is justly entitled.

Special information is wanted by Sister Ethel G. Whitmer, Beaverton, Mich., District Sunday-school and Missionary Secretary, and we trust that her announcement among the Notes will receive prompt attention.

On page 124 we publish an appeal to the Aid Societies of the Brotherhood, which, we trust, will receive the considerate attention of all our sisters. As an additional item of interest, Sister Minnich sends us the following: "For the benefit of those who are interested in the Quinter Memorial Hospital Fund, we wish to say that the Aid Societies pledged $13,372.13 for this building and its equipment. At the close of 1918, $12,208.75 had been paid to the General Mission Board. We desire very much that all unpaid pledges be paid by the time of our Annual Conference in June. The payment of this fund being completed, we will then be ready to consider some other line of work at that time. A small part of the building has been erected, and is being used to the great satisfaction of our workers in Bulsar."

MISCELLANEOUS

The Mission Board of Southwestern Kansas and Southeastern Colorado desires to secure a pastor to take charge of the Larned City church by March 1, or as soon thereafter as arrangements can be made. Any one interested will please write the secretary, Bro. M. J. Mishler, 314 East Ninth Street, Newton, Kans.

Do you need a little help in deciding how to meet these calls for the relief of suffering? Possibly this extract from a letter received by the American Committee for Relief in the Near East may suggest a way out. The letter is from a minister and his wife: "Though financially limited ourselves, receiving a salary of but $60 per month as pastor of churches, we have decided to give one-half of this amount monthly for six months to relieve Armenian suffering and destitution, desiring the consolation only of Him who centuries ago in those lands said: 'I was hungry and ye gave me to eat; I was thirsty and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger and ye took me in; naked and ye clothed me; I was sick and ye visited me; I was in prison and ye came unto me.'"

The Second South Bend church, Ind., will be without a minister after April 1, and is desirous that some minister should locate in the city who would be willing to render the church pastoral service, for which a partial support would be given. Full information may be secured by addressing Bro. George A. Senseman, 745 N. Cushing Street, South Bend, Ind.

The Secretary of the Dress Reform Committee, Sister Lydia E. Taylor, regrets the necessity for the long delay in her articles about "The Biennial Convention," the first of which appears in this issue. There are good reasons, though it is not necessary to explain them here. But the subject is of such perennial interest that the articles have lost little in timeliness and practical value.

"Students of the United States for the Students of the World." What do you suppose that means? It is an appeal to the students of our church colleges, prepared by the General Mission Board in coöperation with the Student Volunteers. It tells about "your opportunity to share in a national student enterprise with a world-wide influence." It has pictures in it, too, and a map.

A BYSTANDER'S NOTES

A Significant Epitaph.—"John M. Wolf died Dec. 6, 1918, at Fort Riley, Kans., where he was a prisoner for his faith in Gospel principles, and because of his religious integrity." Such are the words, carved upon the marble monument that marks the final resting-place of a young brother of the Old Order church,—touchingly referred to in the February number of "The Vindicator." As generations yet to come read the pathetic words, they will wonder why, under the gracious provisions of our Chief Executive, such a penalty should have been meted out to the young soldier of the Cross.

When There Is a Will.—Many of us absent ourselves from church upon even the slightest pretext, considering the most trivial physical ailment an ample excuse for staying at home. Wholly different was the attitude of Bishop R. J. Cooke, of the Christian Church, when he slipped, recently, on an icy side-walk in Athens, Tenn., severely spraining an ankle and tearing ligaments. Did he cancel his pending appointment to preach, as many would have done, under like circumstances? No, he hobbled to the church, preached a wonderful sermon, and then had to be carried from the church. That is the sort of "grit" of which the Lord's work stands in dire need today.

The Undeveloped Talent.—As the Bystander contemplates the urgent need for more devoted workers in the Lord's vineyard, he is impressed with the fact that doubtless there are at least some in every local church, to whom might well be addressed the inquiry as of old: "Why stand ye all the day idle?" That many of the unemployed might well plead the lack of assignment to a definite line of work, is all too true. Have you ever noticed how much undeveloped talent you have in your church, your Sunday-school, your Sunday-school class? Why should there not be an organizing of available helpers, so far-reaching and complete that every member of the church, Sunday-school, and Sunday-school class has a definite task allotted him, in connection with these various phases of activity? Real success is not achieved by crowding the work of ten men upon any one individual, but by putting ten men to work, and having them do their very best.

Christian Stewardship.—On one occasion the Bystander heard an excellent missionary address, the topic being: "The Imperative Need of a Better Standard of Giving." In substance the speaker said that the true origin of the general unwillingness to give for God and his work is a great root of self-love, with many branch-roots, of which one is the love of money. Naturally, therefore, this whole root of selfishness, with its branch-roots, must bear the fruit of sinful self-indulgence of all kinds, in the lives of men. Now, while this root can not be removed by violent appeals to a natural sense of humanity or of piety, it may eventually be eliminated by faithful teaching, prayerfully given and received. There are various ways of looking at the possessions which men enjoy. Have they money? It must,—as they think,—do their bidding and provide them with every luxury that the heart may want. Such people act as if responsibility ended with themselves. They attribute what they have to natural ability or to good luck, and consider it wholly at their disposal. The real Christian takes a different view of the whole situation. He recognizes God as the Giver of all blessings, whether physical or spiritual. With this realization there comes the conviction of human stewardship. The Christian realizes that his property is not absolutely his own, but that he is merely God's steward or agent in the wise administration of all his gifts. The consecrated Christian quietly, yet cheerfully, takes up his stewardship, and with God's help does his best to discharge all its functions, remembering the end of life's little day,—the inevitable hour when the Master shall say to him: "Give an account of thy stewardship, for thou mayest no longer be steward."

A Reassuring Statement.—Confronted by the many aspersions now being urged against consistent advocates of "peace and good will to all men," it is encouraging to note a statement by Secretary of War, N. D. Baker: "I personally have no sympathy with the publication of lists of persons classified with reference to their supposed opinions, and grouped under general designations, such as 'pacifists,' which may mean any one of a dozen things,—some of them quite consistent with the finest loyalty to the country, and some of them inconsistent with such loyalty. As a matter of fact, the War Department does not undertake to censor the opinions of the people of the United States. It has no authority to classify such opinions." Mr. Baker, in the above remarks, alludes to several over-zealous war enthusiasts, who, by the publication of the names of so-called "pacifists," endeavored to throw discredit upon any one who dared to oppose an intensely militaristic program for the future. His comments on these anti-war men are as follows: "In the particular list, accredited to Mr. Stevenson, there are names of people of great distinction, exalted purity of purpose, and lifelong devotion to the highest interests of America and of mankind. Miss Jane Addams, for instance, lends dignity and greatness to any list in which her name appears."

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL SECRETARY GOING ABROAD

Under the auspices of the American Committee for Relief in the Near East, and in company with a number of the Sunday-school leaders of other denominations, Bro. J. E. Miller, our General Sunday School Secretary, is contemplating a trip to the lands about the eastern end of the Mediterranean Sea. The party is to sail from New York March 15, direct for Alexandria. From there they will travel by automobiles up through Palestine, Syria, Armenia, and on around, through the Asia Minor peninsula, to Constantinople. They are hoping to spend Easter at Jerusalem.

The purpose of this trip is to study conditions in these countries, learn what the people need, how to meet this need, study the methods of relief employed by the American Committee, suggest methods of improvement, if such are discovered, and report to the people of America. Further, the Committee hopes that those who constitute the personnel of this party will be of service in the future, in bringing real conditions before their constituents. The Sunday-schools have shown such a commendable spirit in this relief work that they are to be taken into the confidence of the American Committee and share in all that it does.

In accepting the invitation from the American Committee, to be a member of this party, Bro. Miller has been asked a number of interesting questions. Some of these pertain to his knowledge of languages and of books on Western Asia. Others to such practical matters as experience in operating a motor car, in cooking with special reference to camping, and "walking ability per day." Whether congratulations or sympathy is most in order, in view of all the conditions and possibilities, is hard to say. But our readers will certainly unite in extending him their best wishes for a prosperous trip,—as pleasant a one as the conditions permit,—and a safe return. If all goes according to plan, the party will be back by July 1.

As Chairman of the Relief and Reconstruction Committee, Bro. Miller will certainly find this trip of great value, especially as it comes just at the time when the Committee is taking up active work in the field which the trip covers. It is expected that Bro. Culler, whose part in this work was described last week, will be ready to leave for the field, together with some of his helpers, about the same time.

It is to be understood that the trip involves no expense to our Relief and Reconstruction Fund, nor even to the Relief Fund of the American Committee, but is to be paid for out of a special expense fund which the American Committee has raised for this purpose.

THE LATEST CALL FROM ARMENIA

Just as we go to press, we have the following from Bro. A. J. Culler, Director of our Armenian Relief Work:

I have just returned from New York, where I was making arrangements for Relief Work for the Armenians. While there the following cablegram came from those who are working in the interior:

"The conditions of the friendly people in the Near East are increasingly acute. The plight of Armenia and Syria is especially distressing because nearly everything that is done for them must be sheer charity, there being no established Government to give obligation for repayment. A systematic destruction of their agriculture and industry has been carried on for four years. The most heroic efforts and sacrifices will have to be made by the friends of these people, if they are to be restored to their homes and enabled to win their way back to an independent existence."

The program of relief includes the furnishing of farming implements and seed, so that they can begin to help themselves. The women must be given something to do, lest they go crazy, and so dress goods, and clothing for them to make, are furnished. Orphanages must be built, for the four hundred thousand homeless. Physicians and nurses must be provided to stop the epidemics and ravages.

We expect to sail from New York March 15. As soon as located, we will put forth our best efforts.

AROUND THE WORLD

Removing Racial Discriminations

One of the questions which seem likely to be given prominence by Japan, and possibly by China, at the Peace Conference, is that of the freedom of Orientals, so far as race discrimination against them is concerned. It is being urged that existing restrictions in this country single out the natives of the two countries named above, and debar them from privileges, readily accorded to other foreigners. That such a discrimination is neither Christian nor justifiable from the view-point of international equity, is generally admitted. According to the broad, general plans of the League of Nations, unfair discriminations against any nation are inadmissible and clearly against the preservation of world peace.

The League of Nations Must Prevail

Secretary of War Baker made the statement in a recent address at Boston, Mass., that unless the League of Nations idea prevails and is generally accepted, scientists would invent, for another war, weapons of destruction beyond the comprehension of those who fought in the recent world conflict. Mr. Baker spoke of a late invention, now being perfected, which will enable men to drop electrically-controlled bombs, containing five hundred pounds of explosives, upon unprotected cities 150 miles distant. These implements, in the opinion of Mr. Baker, would kill thousands. In addition to the above, several other devices have recently been perfected that will instantaneously bring about the annihilation of entire towns and cities.

Illiteracy a Real Loss

Usually a man's inability to read or write is regarded as a misfortune, though mainly his own. That it reaches much farther is shown in significant statistics of the Government, according to which our country is losing, at the lowest estimate, $825,000,000 a year through illiteracy. Half of our illiterates are between twenty and forty-five years of age. Over fifty-eight per cent are white persons, and of these, 1,500,000 are native-born whites. Ten per cent of our country folk can not read or write a word. They can not read a bulletin on agriculture, a farm paper, a newspaper, or their Bibles. Illiteracy, to the oation at large, is always a danger, for it really means ignorance of all that is best. It is the night of the mind, but a night without moon or star.

Long Pastorates

In a recent issue of "The World's Crisis" the editor calls attention to the fact that "many long and honored pastorates are measured not merely in years but in decades." He refers to Dr. John Clifford, of London, who served a single church for nearly sixty years. He is even now one of the most influential ministers in Great Britain. We are also cited to another example of a long and honored pastorate,—that of Dr. Joseph N. Twitchell, of Hartford, Conn., recently deceased. After being pastor of the Asylum Hill Congregational Church for forty-six years, he retired from active service six years ago. "Such men may be the marvel and wonder of short-stay pastors, but they are the admiration of those who test a man's work by decades rather than months."

How Leprosy Is Being Overcome

In 1913, the American Presbyterian Mission at Chingmai, Siam, opened a leper asylum on an island of 160 acres, presented for this purpose by the King of Siam. Since then, its work of beneficence has been richly blessed. It now shelters 200 lepers. Arrangements are now being made to undertake the systematic segregation of lepers throughout the domains of Siam, transferring all infected ones to the little island. Such a plan, persistently followed, will, it is confidently expected, eventually eliminate leprosy entirely. In this connection it is of interest to note that a similar policy is attaining satisfactory results in the Philippines where, during the past eleven years, 11,000 lepers have been closely segregated. By that means the former ratio of 1,200 new cases, annually, has been reduced to but a few.

Bolshevik Misrule in Moscow

If there should be lingering doubts in the mind of any one, whether the recent deportation of fifty-four Bolsheviki from Seattle, Wash., to the land of their nativity was fully justified, a scrutiny of their pernicious activities in Moscow, Russia, should be amply sufficient. Recent reports from that city paint a picture that is truly pathetic, so far as the victims are concerned, while they reveal the Bolsheviki in all their hideousness. Practically in control of affairs, they loot and slaughter right and left. The persons and property of the well-to-do class especially excite their fury. Many have been slain outright, and their property destroyed or confiscated. Anarchy and starvation stalk hand in hand through the streets of this most magnificent city, —really the heart of all Russia. Such is the terrible side of the picture. The pathetic phase to be seen is the distress and want of the common people. Led on by the most vicious of the revolutionary ring-leaders, they have been induced to destroy the very things that might bring them relief in their hour of need. They are groping about for something. They scarcely know just what they want, and so the vilest of men have seized the opportuoity to organize them for a carnival of crime. These misled people need food and fuel most of all. Were these supplied, they would probably listen to reason aod good sense, and turn against their vicious leaders.

Sunday-School Increase

Latest Sunday-school statistics show a total of 19,951,675 pupils enrolled, and almost two million teachers and officers. The increase over the figures of a decade ago, shows a total gain of 5,250,000. The Baptist schools of the Northern Convention claim 1,024,125 pupils and 112,250 teachers; Baptists of the Southern Convention, 1,656,324 pupils and 159,733 teachers; Colored Baptists, 1,204,328 pupils and 125,474 teachers; Presbyterians, 1,387,938 pupils and 145,196 teachers; Congregational Sunday-schools, 654,102 pupils and 81,690 teachers; Disciples of Christ claim the largest percentage of gain,—fifty per cent,—registering now 953,618 pupils and 85,036 teachers.

Evangelization of the Jews

Strange as it may seem, no really adequate effort for reaching the 3,500,000 Jews in the United States with the Gospel, has ever been made. Of this number, 1,500,000 are in New York City alone, and readily accessible at a minimun expenditure of time and money. Efforts made hitherto have been sporadic rather than comprehensive and thorough. As a consequence, the results have been disappointing. Undoubtedly the statement of Paul, "I am debtor, . . . to the Jew first, and also to the Greek," should be given more serious attention than it has hitherto received. The "go ye" undoubtedly applies as much to the "seed of Abraham," as to any one else, though a strange reluctance has, up to this time, prevented a systematic campaign of evangelism among them.

The Proposed Constitution for a League of Nations

President Wilson presented the draft of the League of Nations covenant to the Peace Conference on the afternoon of Feb. 14, and the occasion may well be regarded as an historical event of some significance. Signed by the representatives of all the powers on the committee, it demonstrates,—as the President puts it,—"a union of will in a common purpose. It is a union which can not be resisted, and I dare say, one which no nation will attempt to resist. . . . It is definite as a guarantee of peace. It is definite as a guarantee against aggression. It is definite against a renewal of such a cataclysm as has just shaken civilization. . . . We are done with annexations of helpless peoples, at times accomplished, in the past, for the purpose of the exploiting of these peoples. These helpless communities are to be helped and developed."

Sunday Observance Problems

In the wake of the war, many perplexing questions have arisen, and will have to be disposed of in some way. One of the leading problems is that of Sabbath observance,—how to restore it to the place it occupied before the war, however unsatisfactory, in some respects, it may have been. The very ruthlessness of war ignored the observance of a Rest Day at the front, but many influences at home have also combined to destroy it. Double pay on Sunday has tempted thousands of laboring people to work on that day, and under the guise of patriotism many, who never before thought of doing any such thing, have worked in their gardens, truck-patches and other lines of activity. Many fear that there will sweep over our land a pressure for what is known as the "Continental Sunday," —a day that ministers to the carnal and pleasure-loving inclinations of man, rather than to the spiritual phase. Such a tendency is to be expected, but must be resisted.

"A Wonderful Country Church"

Under the title above given, Mr. M. C. Cutting gives an interesting description of the South Waterloo church, Iowa, in the February issue of "The Farmer's Wife." A lack of space prevents the publication of the entire article, but even a brief allusion to some of his deductions may prove inspirational to other country churches, to help them develop into community centers. Mr. Cutting was determined to find the best example of successful and contented community life, and when directed to Orange Township, Blackhawk County, Iowa, he was naturally anxious to pry into the secret of the procedure which has made this particular community life so exemplary and of nation-wide prominence. He found the moving cause in the uplifting spirit emanating from a country church. He found it to be a church in which the people believe, and which, because of that belief, exerts a salutary influence on every act and impulse of their daily lives. Mr. Cutting, in emphasizing this point, deplores the fact that a majority of country churches do not exert themselves to reach out into the daily lives of the people. Then, too, the majority of the people may not always put themselves in a properly receptive attitude to the church. In Orange Township that problem has been solved. Both church and people have entered into an intimate relationship and a mutual understanding, which mean fullness of life to both of them. And so it has come about that Orange Township is a shining example of community life at its best. When the substantial and creditable church was erected at a cost of $35,000, the entire structure was paid for before the work began. Situated in the open country, six miles from town, it presents a striking example of what a country church may achieve. But the work did not stop there. In 1916 the people consolidated ten school districts and erected near the church, at a cost of $56,000, one of the finest consolidated schools in Iowa. Near by many handsome residences of retired farmers have been built, with others to follow,—an ideal rural community!

Another Witness for Bible Accuracy

For some time a research expedition to Ethiopia, under the auspices of Harvard University and the Museum of Fine Arts, of Boston, has been making investigations in that land of antiquity. Passing up the Nile, the explorers commenced their archeological researches near the site of Napate, the ancient capital of Ethiopia. At that point are the pyramids of Nuri and here the expectation, that important discoveries would be made, was verified. Among the mounds excavated was one which proved to be the burial place of one of the Ethiopian kings mentioned in the Bible. In 2 Kings 19: 9, the name of "Tirhakah, king of Ethiopia," is mentioned. Hitherto this name was not found in Egyptian and Ethiopian history. The late expedition has found the burial place of the Ethiopian king, and thus confirms the accuracy of the Bible record.

Opposition to National Prohibition

As intimated in our discussion of the matter some weeks ago, national prohibition will not be allowed by its foes to move onward over untroubled seas. Already the machinery of organized labor, representing all unions in New York, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, is arrayed against the bone-dry measure. The principal points of opposition may be itemized as follows: (1) The Central Federated Union has voted to submit the question of a strike against prohibition to all affiliated organizations. (2) At least 100,000 toilers in New-York, will be wearing the "No Beer, No Work" button. (3) Resolutions, placing individual unions on record against prohibition, have been prepared by officers of the Unions. (4) Protests have been sent to all the New York members of Congress, insisting that the Prohibition Amendment to the Constitution is objectionable to organized labor.

Love That Abounds

In Gal. 4: 15 Paul refers to the great love of his brethren by saying: "If it had been possible, ye would have plucked out your own eyes and have given them to me." As generally interpreted, he alluded to their sympathetic concern for his defective vision. Recent press reports speak of a like anxiety by the mother of a soldier. She was greatly concerned when she learned that her son had been stricken with blindness while on one of the battle-fields of France. When Mrs. Waugh,—the lady in question,—heard of the successful transferriog of various physical organs from animal to animal, and from one human being to another, she applied to medical experts, offering her own eyes in order that the son might have his eyesight restored. While the doctors admitted the feasibility of the operation under favorable conditions, they did not feel justified to undertake it. Her offer stands, nevertheless, as a monumental expression of maternal love.

A Decade of Growth

Judging by figures, submitted by the Religious Publicity Service, the thirty bodies, constituting the Federal Council of Churches in Christ in America, now show a total membership of 18,620,136. The total value of their church property is $1,040,236,194. A further study of the growth of the eight leading bodies of the Federal Council shows that, while the general rate of increase for all American religious bodies for the decade was good, these denominations made the following increases: The Methodist Episcopal Church, with a membership of 3,718,396, reports an increase of twenty-five per cent. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, with an added twenty-eight per cent, now numbers its communicants at 2,108,061. The Presbyterian Church enrolls 1,613,056 members,—a growth of almost thirty-seven per cent. The Congregational Church, with 90,000 new members, or thirteen per cent increase, has 790,163 communicants. The Protestant Episcopal Church, having added twenty-four per cent to its membership, has now 1,098,173. The Baptist Church organizations, reporting to the Northern Convention of that body, show 1,227,448 members,—an increase, during the ten years, of sixteen per cent. The Colored Baptist membership, of 3,018,341, shows an increase of almost thirty-three per cent. The Disciples of Christ, whose church enrollment has now reached a total of 1,231,404, reports twenty-four per cent of growth. While the total membership of the Church of the Brethren is not given in the list above referred to, we are informed that an accurate count will show it to be well up to the 100,000 mark, with a creditable increase for the decade.

Don't Wait Till After I Am Gone

BY MRS. DELILAH A. MAXCY

Were I a bnd of fairest bue,
With fragrance sweet as angel's breath,
My perfume I would lavish free;
The living should enjoy my wealth.

Yes, while the living plod their way
Through thorns and briers here on earth,
I would that I might fill their cup
With joy and peace of endless worth.

Don't scatter roses on my dust,
When from this weary life I'm free,
But let me scent their sweetness now,
While I may yet their beauty see.

And let me bear the kindly word
While 'midst the cares of life I'm pressed;
Don't wait till after I am gone,
To place sweet flowers on my breast.

Then scatter roses while you may,
While hearts can feel, and eyes behold;
'Tis better now the simplest gift,
Than after death a wealth of gold.

"Dead Work"

BY ELIZABETH D. ROSENBERGER

In the second chapter of Second Kings we have an account of two prophets,—Elijah and Elisha. As they walked together, Elisha, intent on plans for serving his people, as Elijah had served them, there appeared a chariot of fire and horses of fire, and parted them both asunder; and Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven.

Elisha cried: "My father, my father." Then he went back to the men who had known Elijah,—the sons of the prophets. They were anxious about Elijah. Since he had not returned, they felt that some of them should go and seek for him. They thought the body of Elijah might be upon some mountain or in some valley. So they sent fifty men to seek for Elijah. They wandered over mountains, through valleys and along the rivers. For three long days they looked and searched for Elijah, who had gone away in a fiery chariot. Then they came back to Elisha and all he said was: "Did I not say unto you, Go not?"

These men were seeking eagerly for a prophet who could not be found. Had they devoted their lives to the search, the result would have been the same. With this new year comes a desire to direct our energies into channels of service which will open out into larger activities. We talk about practical plans for practical work. Sometimes they are carried out. Once in a while an enthusiastic meeting or a unanimous vote leads to the hope that the contemplated work will be taken up and carried on to successful completion, and yet there is disappointment at times.

The famous cathedral of Cologne was designed by an artist. He drew a plan. In imagination he saw the solid stone courses, the pinnacle and the spire. It was to be one of the most beautiful cathedrals ever built. He dreamed of its splendor when it should rise perfected before him. The master builder toiled on it. He hoped to see it completed, but he hoped for the reward of his labors all in vain. Today we do not know the name of either artist or builder. For four hundred years the building stood incomplete, unfinished. Then other dreamers and builders began where the former left off. Workmen were busy. Day after day they placed the solid stone, they built buttress and walls and facade until the spires of the Cologne cathedral were in place. Forgotten is the "dead work" of the architect.

Emerson said well that the youth dreams of castles and palaces, but the middle-aged man ends by putting up a woodshed. But this is the point: It is better to build an honest woodshed, that will keep dry the fuel for the fires of life, than to go on dreaming forever of castles, turrets and towers. When we build our woodshed, we have really done something.

The fifty men who wandered three days, looking for the body of Elijah, came back weary, with no report of any kind,—they were unsuccessful. But the image of Elijah became more vivid. They were more willing to serve as Elijah had served the people. The value of that search lay only in the measure of manhood put into it. The young prophet who had admired Elijah's power, his fearlessness and his uprightness, thought of these qualities as he searched for Elijah and came back fearless,—more determined to oppose Baal and his followers.

There is some dead work for all of us. It is found in the kitchen,—washing dishes after the meal is ended. Knowing that it must be done in a few hours again, it is not inspiring. The danger lies in our doing so much "dead work" that we have no energy or inspiration left. Then we miss the best returns in life.

Lottie, a young girl, wiped floors and steps in an observatory where her father was janitor. She was small and stolid, without any expression of joy in her face. Then one of the students said: "Lottie, come and look through this telescope." Quietly wiping her soapy hands on her apron, Lottie came and put her eye to the telescope. She was struck with the wonder of it all.

"It looks like an orange with a knitting needle through it."

Then they told her it was the planet Saturn, with broad bands called rings. From that day Lottie's face was illuminated with the joy of knowing something about the stars and the planets. One look into the wonders of the heavens changed everything for her.

The mourner for the "Lost Chord" never found it. She sat down again by the keys, trying all possible combinations. Rich harmonies were found by wandering fingers, but never the "sound of the grand Amen."

Well, what of all this? you ask. We answer: Only that through Christ Jesus the dead work we do is not lost. Somehow all things work together for good. One who did much for himself alone, said: "Then I looked on all the works that my hands had wrought, and on the labor that I had labored to do: and behold there was no profit under the sun."

When we have dedicated our life to Jesus, we have this promise, "For God giveth to a man that is good in his sight,—wisdom, knowledge and joy." Day dreams are beautiful and alluring, but sometime we will regret them when we realize that in idly dreaming about some impossible thing, time has slipped up on us, and we have passed the hour for really doing the good we hoped to do.

Living is serious business. Through hard work we gain what we most want. The sons of the prophets pursued their search for the body of Elijah most faithfully, but they found him not. Some of life's deepest tragedies are only a mistake made in the darkness. Under the guidance of what seemed a true and noble motive, there is a failure to see the right path at the right moment, and then there is a long wandering beyond it. Sometimes it is a word left unspoken until the ears that should have heard it are sealed, and the tongue that should have spoken it is dumb. God help us to grow in the power to see and the power to do!

CORRESPONDENCE

"Write what thou seest, and send it unto the churches"

ELDER JOHN M. MOHLER

Eld. John M. Mohler, son of Eld. Jacob and Sarah (Rothrock) Mohler, was born Dec. 26, 1837, near Mechanicsburg, Pa. When quite young, his parents moved to Dry Valley, Pa., where he grew to manhood. Having received a very liberal education, he followed school-teaching for nearly twenty years, and was very successful. Dec. 24, 1858, he married Amanda Ellen Hoover. To this union five children were born, three of whom died in infancy. Two daughters survive. A few years after his marriage he and his wife united with the Church of the Brethren and at once they became workers for Christ and the church.

In 1874 Bro. Mohler was called to the ministry, and gave up teaching, to devote all his time and talent to the work of the church. He held evangelistic meetings in nearly every State, from the Atlantic to the Pacific. He was well established in the doctrines of the Bible, and was uncompromising in their defense. He was a strong advocate of Sunday-schools and of all missionary movements of the church. In 1898 he was ordained to the full ministry.

A great bereavement came to him in 1894, when his wife died. He rallied, however, and continued his work for the church. In 1902 he married Sister Sarah Mauk, of Mechanicsburg, who survives. In 1910 Bro. Mohler moved to Mechanicsburg, where he lived until his death. On Sunday, Jan. 19, he preached a strong sermon in the Baker church and was preparing a sermon for the following Sunday. He died Jan. 25, aged 81 years and 1 month.

Thus a busy, active life ended. He was in the Master's service until the last moment. Services were conducted at Mechanicsburg. The body was then brought to Lewistown and from there conveyed to the Dry Valley church, where services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Elders J. H. Richard, Albert Steinberger and W. J. Swigart. Text, Philpp. 1: 20, 21. S. J. Swigart.

A VISIT TO AHWA, INDIA

Recently, the writer, in company with Bro. J. B. Emmert and his son, Lloyd, visited at Ahwa, where Brother and Sister J. M. Blough are doing efficient work among a backward hill tribe of over 25,000 people, who live in the three hundred villages of the Dangs Forest,—a section of country covering about three hundred square miles. From Jalalpor, two-thirds of our journey was covered by rail, the balance,—twenty-three miles,—by slow-moving ox-carts. At the end of the first day we reached Pimpri, where we put up at the Government bungalow, which is only one of the bungalows that the Government has built at seven or eight different places in this forest, for the accommodation of higher officials and sahib-folks.

Among the travelers who have stopped here over night we noted,—among others familiar to "Messenger" readers,—the name of Bro. D. L. Miller. He and Bro. Stover made the trip together from Bilimora in a tonga,—a distance of sixty miles. That was before the branch railroad was built from Bilimora to Kala Amba, also before the time when Brother and Sister Pittenger were located at Ahwa. During their first term of heroic service in the Dangs, they made the same long journey many times.

With a nine-mile journey, mostly up-hill, for the second day, we reached Ahwa at noon, on Saturday, Dec. 7. A pleasant surprise was in store for us. Twenty school-children, with their master, met us some distance from the bungalow. Each child, holding up a small branch, bade us a hearty welcome, and began to sing. After a little while they turned about and, as they sang, they walked toward the bungalow, where we were warmly greeted by our dear Brother and Sister Blough. Certainly we felt that we were welcome, yes, twice welcome, to Ahwa.

From the beginning of the week, meetings had been in progress at the newly-built church. Bro. Blough, assisted by Bro. Hivale, did the preaching. The Saturday evening service and the two services on Sunday were conducted by Bro. Emmert. The church has a seating capacity of one hundred and fifty. About eighty were present at each service. It will meet the needs of Ahwa for a number of years. The purpose of the meetings was to teach the Word and to prepare the membership for the communion services to be held the following Monday evening. Though the evangelistic note was not emphasized, yet a number applied for baptism. Sunday afternoon, after a service at the bungalow, the applicants, with the members, gathered on the side of a stream, nearly a mile to the East, where our hearts were rejoiced to witness the receiving of twelve into the fold of Christ through baptism. On Monday evening the communion services were conducted by Bro. Emmert. Nearly seventy communed. The members who lived in the villages were present. Most of these are mere babes in Christ. Their grasp of spiritual things is not all it should be. Many fall in the hour of temptation, but their faces are set toward the Light. Many are growing in grace,—slowly, to be sure,—but they are growing. O that Christ might be formed in them, and that they might be transformed to his image! This is the hope of the missionary. This is the thing for which he works and prays, and for which you, dear reader, may also pray.

The outlook for our work in the Dangs is full of promise. Thirty-five, thus far, have been received into the church since Jan. 1. This shows that the foundation work of Bro. Pittenger,—who sacrificed his health that the work might go forward,—was well done. Others are entering into their labors. There is need of a man to give all his time to the educational and evangelistic work in the villages, as the medical, building, industrial, boarding school and other work at the mission compound in Ahwa are sufficient for one man and his wife. Bro. Emmert says that the progress of the work, since his last visit, five years ago, is very commendable. The twelve mission schools in the villages have been closed since the outbreak of influenza, early in October,—the school in Ahwa being the only one that is open. Bro. Blough expects to remain in the work here until his furlough comes due. With his family he is now looking forward to the coming of Bro. Adam Ebey and family, who are expected the forepart of next month. There is a great work for them in the Dangs. Knowing the Marathi, they will not be handicapped, in talking to the people. Bro. Blough has been able to learn the Marathi sufficiently to converse with the people with some freedom.

Thus the time passed quickly. The hours we spent together were indeed pleasant, helpful and uplifting. Thursday morning the two drivers, with tonga and cart, were ready to take us to the station. Bidding farewell to all, we started on our return journey. We met many liquor-carts on the way, carrying intoxicants that will destroy the bodies and souls of the people. May God hasten the day when the English Government will remove this great evil from these poor people!

Reaching home, we were told of the safe arrival of the Ebey party at Hong Kong Dec. 12. A daughter was born Dec. 6 to Brother and Sister Pittenger, at Dahanu, and a son was born to Brother and Sister Alley, at Bulsar, Dec. 11. We are glad to welcome these little ones into our mission family. May they grow up, like their parents, to lives of usefulness in his service!

A. T. Hoffert.

MISSION BOARD MEETING OF SOUTHERN ILLINOIS

On account of influenza conditions in our District, the regular meeting of the Board was not held until Jan. 28, convening at Astoria, Ill.

It seems to be a universal verdict that the work of the church in general is somewhat below normal,—possibly because of two prevalent conditions, namely, the great war and the epidemic of influenza. However, much business was considered, and some of the decisions made will doubtless have a far-reaching influence.

The work at each mission point was duly considered. Eld. J. W. Grater, of Indiana, took charge of the pastorate in Decatur, Jan. 1. Eld. J. W. Kitson and wife have spent one year in Champaign, where they will continue for at least another year. After five years of faithful service as a mission helper,—two years in Decatur and three in Champaign,—Sister Hettie Barnhart will take a much needed rest, beginning April 1. The Board needs another devoted, consecrated sister to take her place. Who will heed the call? Who will volunteer to fill the ranks in the Master's service? The two above-named places are very promising city mission churches. However, they have their problems, but victory will be ours. May we prepare for even larger success in the future!

One of the needs, most keenly and constantly felt, is that of efficient pastors. We have places for two pastors now.

The Board unanimously decided to endorse the great Forward Movement of the General Mission Board, and they earnestly desire that every church of Southern Illinois will respond to the call. They request that every elder and pastor, Sunday-school superintendent, and Local Missionary Committee, put forth a special effort in their several churches, to help bring about the desired aim.

This is the time of supreme need. We must meet it with a determined effort. The church must arise from her state of lethargy. The war is past, the awful epidemic of influenza is gradually subsiding, the hindrances to aggressive work are passing, so, to be equal to the occasion, we must move forward. The opportunity for evangelization is ours! God needs the help of every brother and sister in our District. May we unitedly go forward in the power of the Holy Spirit, to do our part in the evangelization of the world!

E. E. Brubaker.

MOBILE, ALABAMA

The influenza, as well as other sickness, has tried to hold us back, but our Sunday-school is surely succeeding, if we could only find room for further services! Our membership is, to a large extent, transient, but we think we will always have a few reliable, consecrated workers whom we can trust to carry on the work.

We have anxiously looked for Bro. Williams' report of his visit to the Southland. Now we have it. And while he has given a true outline, perhaps we can enlighten the readers further on the subject of possible success here. His heading, "A Strengthened Leadership," is the true key to success, but the "how" is not so easy to define.

To begin with, the northern minister will always be hindered in his work. Why? The natural traits are different. I hesitate to say it, but the prevalent conception, here in the South, is that the Northern ideal is "money" and "parade of fashion." Here it is "blood" and courtesy. Many gentlefolk will patiently endure a pittance of corn bread and bacon rather than labor. Why? Are they too lazy? No, a thousand times, no. Their "blood" will not permit. Neither will they admit to friendship some one whom they do not consider their equal, even though he has money. Not so with the Northern element. With them money opens almost all doors, even though the possessor be without manhood. Like blooded stock, nature always shows in man. Boasting of money values, while neglecting the deeper qualities of "blood," never passes unnoticed in the South.

I fear that a ministry from the North,—like Western workers in the foreign field,—can only be successful for a time, and that real success can only come from training the Southern boy or girl,—whose superior does not exist,—for leadership by full consecration. How can we do this with no Brethren school in the South? We can not afford to send our own children one thousand miles to school. How, then, can we ask others to go? A child trained by other schools is, to say the least, placed in great danger.

Another cause is seen in a circumstance which occurred in one of our Northern congregations, a few years ago. This congregation called for ministerial help from the District Mission Board when, to our certain knowledge, they had thirty-two brethren well qualified, as to age and education, for the ministry. Some were graduates of high school and all were consecrated brethren. Now, as we see it, Bro. Williams has the note of success: "Prepare leaders, call them; then turn the work over to them."

Another very real hindrance is the common one that the undesirable minister, the unfaithful member,—the failure,—runs off to a new field and expects to be a leader, often making trouble if not chosen. Would it not be a help, if at all possible, to pin a note to the church letters of such, saying: "We have failed to make anything out of this brother, but pray for your better success"? Then do the praying, naming the one to the All-father, who knows him.

Yes, by all means listen to the "Go ye" from out that "crowded" field, but go prepared to be a helper,—not necessarily a leader. We are planting for future generations, so let us plant where success will be best assured. We feel Mobile is the "where," but the "how" is not so. We feel through education of the home boy and girl.

Being an Alabamian by blood, northern by education, seventeen years a teacher, we feel we may have a viewpoint not seen by all. Let us plan for success and pray for the Southland!

Wm. E. White.

OUR FIRST GUEST

I met him at Taiyüanfu last winter, while engaged in anti-plague work. He is a tall, pleasant, wholesome Chinaman,—a man full of vigor, intensely interested in modern events and improvements. He is a jovial companion, liked and loved by all. The children, especially, enjoy his company. He is a warm-hearted Christian, and never misses an opportunity to witness for Christ. If there is no opportunity, he seems to make one.

When it was decided, some months ago, to have an opening day for our hospital, we decided to invite this noble Christian man to be the guest of honor. He was also asked to make the main address. Being adviser to the Provincial Governor of Shansi, we had some misgivings as to whether he could come or not. In fact, we did not know he was coming until the evening of his arrival, which was the evening preceding the opening. He had written us a letter, saying he was coming, but the letter went astray and did not reach us till afterwards. About 5:30 his card came by special messenger, saying he would be here by 7 P. M. We soon got the news around, and a number of men and boys went out to meet him. The three foreign men were among those who went, and how our hearts rejoiced when we heard his pleasant greeting of "Peace, peace!" which is the Christian greeting in China. We were not long in reaching our home, in the east suburb, and Mrs. Brubaker and the children soon became acquainted with him. All of us felt as much at home with our Chinese guest as if he had been a stranger from the States.

The next few days were busy ones! On Thanksgiving Day our guest made a strong public address to a large open-air meeting. There were some 1,500 or 1,700 present. They had come to celebrate the opening of the Administration Building of the Hiel Hamilton Memorial Hospital. The local magistrate, Dr. Yün, and some of the teachers of the Boys' School, made appropriate addresses. The speech-making lasted for nearly three hours.

After this the local magistrate took the key to the main door, and opened the hospital to our friends,—the Chinese people. The crowd was allowed to enter the building and take a look at the various rooms and equipment. It was a great day,—one that will be long remembered! That night and the following three nights our friend preached to a packed audience in our city chapel. During the day time he gave addresses in the Boys' and Girls' Schools, the hospital and in the Government school in the city. He and I happened to be at our out-station,—Ho Shen,—on the following Sunday. Here he addressed a large crowd, the officials and Government school-teachers and pupils being in attendance.

While in our home, he spent much time in Bible study. We asked him to lead our morning devotions. Passages from John's Gospel, chapters 14, 15 and 16, and from James, seem to be favorites of his. It was a great treat to us to have this noble, brave, wholesome Chinese Christian gentleman, Col. Chao Shuo Yü, as the first guest in our new home on "Mountain Vista,"—the name given to our residence compound in the east suburb. We wish that we might have him often!

A REMARKABLE INCIDENT

It is stated in Eld. Jerome E. Blough's book, "History of the Church of the Brethren of the Western District of Pennsylvania," that this incident occurred in the Mt. Joy house, Jacob's Creek congregation, some years ago.

While Bro. F. B. Weimer was reading his text from Matt. 3: 16, a dove flew in at the open window, and alighted on the Bible from which he was reading. Bro. Weimer pushed the dove gently aside and finished reading his text. The dove then flew out of the window through which it had entered.

The occasion was the usual Sunday service. Bro. Weimer seemed to be more than usually endowed with the Spirit that day. At the close of his sermon he gave an invitation, when fifteen persons came forward and asked for baptism. It is good to be filled with the Spirit.

"Come, Holy Spirit, heavenly Dove,
With all thy quickening powers;
Come, shed abroad a Savior's love,
And that shall kindle ours."

DEATH OF O. L. HARTLE

Bro. O. L. Hartle died Jan. 10, 1919, aged forty-six years, eleven months and twenty-nine days. Sick scarcely a week, his illness and death cast a gloom over the entire community. When his funeral services were held, at our church, every business house in town was closed.

Bro. Hartle graduated in 1895 from Juniata College. He used every talent usefully for his God and his church. Others will carry on his work, but so long as the church stands, his work will be remembered, for he wrought faithfully.

Bro. Hartle was one of the building committee of our new church, where he rendered valuable service during a trying year. Next to his own home Bro. Hartle loved his church. In 1910 he organized a Men's Bible Class, which still holds a unique place. It was a success from the start. Bro. Hartle, with a number of men, decided that the class should reach the men who never went inside of a church,—even men who were down and out. These men were reached in various ways. The class members paid for the coal, for doctor bills, for clothing. They were big brothers, indeed, to the men. On the Sunday morning, when the teacher of this class lay silent in his home, the class mourned his loss. They sat silent,—without a teacher.

Bro. Hartle was our church treasurer, and one of the superintendents of our Sunday-school. He was married in 1900 to Sister Margaret Mikesell, who with one son, James, survives him. Bro. George W. Flory, in his funeral discourse, took for his text: "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches." Elder D. D. Wine read the fifteenth chapter of First Corinthians.

SADLY MISSED BUT NOT FORGOTTEN

The entire community was made very sad by the death of Bro. William Ebersole. His influence for good was felt for many miles around. He had served for a number of years in the office of deacon, and always took an active part in all the activities of the church.

He knew his Bible, and stood firm for its teachings. He was just, generous, upright and fair. Tender and sympathetic of heart, he had a message of good will to all, and encouragement to his fellow-men. His life will always be a grateful memory to his family and friends. We shall miss him, but never forget him. His genial character, splendid personality and generous impulses caused him to be loved by all.

Bro. Ebersole was born March 11, 1852, in Sandusky County, Ohio. In the spring of 1860 he moved to Elkhart County, Ind. Here he was married to Sarah Ulery March 10, 1878.

In 1886 they moved to Harper County, Kans. In 1892 he, with his companion, united with the church at Conway Springs, Kans. Wishing to live nearer the church of their choice, they moved to Conway Springs, Kans., in 1901. Here he was very successful in a financial way, but ever ready to help the needy, and to assist the church financially. In 1908 they moved into the city of Conway Springs, where he lived until the time of his death, Feb. 1, 1919. His age was sixty-six years, ten months and twenty days.

He leaves his companion and four children, two sons and two daughters, besides one brother, grandchildren, and many other near and dear friends and relatives. His children are all members of the Brethren church, and living in this church. One of the sons is a deacon. The departed one shall ever live in the memory of all as one who loved and cared for them. May we emulate his virtues and cherish his memories!

Funeral services from the First Church of the Brethren, of Conway Springs, Kans., Feb. 3, by his pastor, Wm. E. Thompson, assisted by Rev. Poore, of the M. E. church, and Rev. Hendrickson, of the Christian church. The house was packed with people of all creeds and beliefs, to pay their last respects to one whom they admired and loved.

The passing of our brother is a great loss to the Conway Springs church. He will be greatly missed in our services.

Wm. E. Thompson.

CHRISTMAS WEEK AT PING TING HSIEN

The Christmas spirit at Ping Ting ran bigh and was made an occasion of joy both in a physical and spiritual sense. The Sunday before Christmas we had the pleasure of baving with us Mr. Chao Shib Ling (military advisor of the governor of Shansi), who delivered two most excellent discourses in the church,—the one in the morning dealing with the evils that are so common bere in China, and the discourse in the afternoon being one on prayer. He appears to be a most sincere Christian, and so full of the Spirit's power in his life that to hear him is an inspiration indeed. If China's leaders were all men like Mr. Ling, how it would basten the evangelization of this great nation! He is a man of very rare type indeed, here in China, and with his spiritual qualifications, combined with the station he bolds among the Chinese, he can not but have a large influence for Christianity among the people of his race. The inspiring messages, received througb him, helped to bring our hearts more fully in tune to appreciate the spiritual feasts following.

The next day, Monday, it was a great joy to see thirty-one souls horn into the Kingdom through baptism. How we wish that our friends in the homeland could have seen the earnestness with which many of the applicants for baptism spoke before the church! One little boy, especially, seemed to put much feeling into what he said, as he stood on the platform, and made gestures just like a preacher who is in real earnest.

In the evening of the same day was the love feast service, which, because of the sacred scene of the morning and the soul-stirring messages, so recently received, seemed especially sacred on this occasion, and proved to be an occasion of joy in the truest and fullest sense. The day following (Tuesday) the boys' and girls' schools held their Christmas exercises, both of which were well rendered and attended by large and appreciative audiences.

At 2:30 on Christmas morning we were awakened by the sound of fire crackers on the compound, and just a few moments later the voices of the school-boys rang out melodiously in Christmas carols. At about 5 A. M. we were again aroused, as the school-girls poured out their voices in song, in honor of our Savior's birth. It was all so beautiful.

In the morning, after breakfast, prayers were conducted for the patients in the hospital. The story of our Savior's birth was told them in a simple manner, after which gifts were distributed, consisting of Sunday-school cards, sent out by thoughtful friends in America, nicely arranged together in groups, for hanging on the wall; also some candy, English walnuts, Chinese dates and a pear for each one.

At 10 A. M. a service was held in the church. At this time money and various kinds of food were contributed to distribute among those who are destitute and who do not have the peace and joy that our Savior came to bring.

In the afternoon a service was held for the children of the city, where the Christmas story was told them by Bro. Vaniman. And how those three hundred children's voices rang out as they sang: "Jesus loves me"! At the close of the service, cards and a few things to appeal to their appetites were distributed to gladden their little hearts.

Later in the afternoon a foreign service was held among the missionaries of our station, after which we had the pleasure of being seated around one common table, where we together partook of a Christmas supper.

We have many reasons for praise and thankfulness to our Heavenly Father for his abundant blessings, and to kind friends in the homeland who have made it possible to bring joy and sunshine into so many poverty-stricken, saddened lives.

OUR APPEAL TO THE AID SOCIETIES OF THE BROTHERHOOD FOR 1919

The year 1919 has been ushered in. Great and important events bave clustered around its opening days. We hear the echoes and feel the pulsations of "Great Drives," "Over the Top," and "Forward Movements" all about us. Larger doors of opportunity have opened to us than ever before, to minister to the needy of earth and to further the advancement of his Kingdom in all lands.

Forward Movements have been planned by the several departments of church work. We believe our Aid Societies should arise to the opportunity of the day and move forward, along with other church activities. As women of America, if we will compare our condition with that of the women of other lands,—France, Belgium, India,—we can but feel that God has been good to us and we may well ask: "What shall I render to Jehovah for all his benefits to me?" If we desire to show our appreciation we will find the opportunity near at hand. Let us consider some ways in which we might move forward to larger and better service in 1919:

We have been happy in the effort to raise the funds for the Quinter Memorial Hospital in India. We pledged $13,372.13. At the close of 1918 $12,208.75 had been paid in to the General Mission Board for the hospital. Part of the building has been erected and is being used with great profit to the work there.

First of all, then, let us see to the paying of these pledges, so that we may be able to report that effort completed. One of our missionaries says this of the Hospital: "I wish the sisters could have a day's visit to the Hospital, and could see the many patients that receive treatment at our doctor's hands. I am sure they would be glad,—twice glad,—of having contributed toward it."

At the coming Conference we shall want to consider some other need, somewhere, for our support, as a united band of societies of the entire Brotherhood. What shall it be? Lift up your eyes and look on the field, and then be ready to help consider this question. May we suggest several things for you to think about?

We are told by the General Mission Board that the greatest need is MEN. Are there young men being detained for the lack of funds whom we might help in their preparation and whose going we might hasten by our support?

A fund for the educating and training of native preachers and Bible women. In both the December and January numbers of the "Visitor" you will find presentations of the great need of Christian education. A missionary from the field says: "One trained Bible woman can do more real effective work than a dozen untrained ones."

Buildings for Bible and Normal Schools.

Boarding Schools for boys and girls.

During the year 1918 our societies have given liberally for the Red Cross and other relief work. There will be great need for our help in reconstruction and further relief work this year, and we want to do our part in this. Notice the report of the Relief Committee in the "Gospel Messenger," from time to time, of their need and work.

As we think of the effort put forth for material help during the past year, we wonder if that effort could be duplicated this year in ministering to the spiritual needs of men and women, so far as we can reach them through personal effort and financial aid, by the help of those on the field.

Again, what can we do to enlist the help of more of the women of the Brotherhood? Let the District Secretary put forth her efforts for an Aid Society in every congregation by the close of 1919. Two or three interested women can have an Aid Society. Begin now and you will grow. If not in numbers, in Christian service. In every congregation there are those who, for various reasons, can not attend the Aid meetings. Let us ask each one of these to contribute at least $1 this year, to the Aid Society of the congregation. This would add very largely to the efficiency of the society, in her efforts to do missionary and benevolent work. In one congregation each sister was asked to contribute $5 this year. The response was commendable and the blessing realized is in harmony with Mal. 3: 10: "Bring ye the whole tithe into the store-house, that there may be food in my house, and prove me now herewith, saith Jehovah of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

Some of our workers favor a fee of $1 from each society, instead of twenty-five cents. Then, after expenses are paid, the surplus might be used for some benevolent work. Let us begin at once, in some way, the Forward Movement of our Aid work, and thus make it of greater service for our own community, then to the regions just beyond our community, and then to the uttermost parts of the earth.

Mrs. M. C. Swigart, Mrs. Naomi Shaw, Mrs. Levi Minnich, Committee.

"THE GOSPEL MESSENGER" A WELCOME VISITOR

Yes, it is, and no mistake. We are far from our church, but not far from our Lord and Savior. The "Messenger" seems like a letter from home. The writer was especially impressed with the article, "God's Mirror." In fact, everything in the "Messenger" has a strengthening effect.

It is hoped that the time will come when we can worship again in the church of our choice. Until then, we can do no better than attend churches of other denominations, though different from the Church of the Brethren. May the "Messenger" staff continue to brighten the homes of readers who are situated as is the writer.

Elkridge, Md. Cora G. Stallings.

God's Call to Service

Now God always had rich rewards to give, but he never promised a smooth, easy road to them. Here is where he and Satan greatly differ. The latter holds out most alluring pictures of fine traveling,—just as when one motors over the best roads of the country, on which there is not a rut and never a jolt to disturb the pleasure of the ride. His ability to fulfill is another matter, but he succeeds in deluding many. Neither does he have any reward to offer at the journey's end.

To go back to God's calls to service, let us first consider Noah. Now his task of building the ark surely did seem to be a fool's job, and made him the subject of open and constant ridicule. But Noah survived the flood, and the fun-makers didn't. Wasn't the reward worth the effort and the enduring?

Now, how about ourselves, who are in Christ's service today? Aren't we too often ready to back down and out, if we even imagine that some one is ridiculing us for our belief and its exemplification in practice? Aren't we made of better stuff? Aren't we big enough to fill the positions that are always open and calling for those equal to them?

Then there was Abraham, who was put to the greatest test possible for a father, but God had called him for great service, and had promised him most wonderful things, so he had to stand the test that showed him worthy of the trust the Lord had placed in him. Now, would we back down on such a task if given, and prefer the way of least resistance to standing such a test?

And Joseph, a pure, innocent boy, who was destined for illustrious service, but who found the road thereto a very stony one, even suffering imprisonment unjustly,—a very hard thing, indeed, to endure and to keep hope and trust alive. Wouldn't we think that when we are in God's service and doing his bidding, he should make the way easier, and spare us such suffering? Would we be willing to bear imprisonment for doing the right, and to keep our conscience clear towards God?

Then there was Moses, who was called to a task of such magnitude as might make any man hesitate because of its greatness and responsibility. It was, indeed, a trying service,—trying even beyond Moses' endurance at times. But think of the wonderful work he accomplished,—and the privilege of being one of the heavenly visitors on the Mount of Transfiguration.

We can not enumerate the many prophets who, for being in God's service and doing his bidding, were hunted and hounded,—some even to the losing of their life. But they did not count it loss.

No, God's path of service isn't a rutless road or a bed of thornless roses. After the call comes the testing. How could one, otherwise, be made fit for the task assigned, or equal for the work to be done? But his way is more than worth the treading. The greatest men of the world have thought so. Only the weak shrink from it.

Then we come to Christ, who endured all things. God did not make the way any easier for his own Son than for others in his service. In fact, he had to suffer more, but think what it meant to mankind!

Then there were Christ's calls to service. Helping to save mankind was the one great inducement held out. The apostles and many other sainted martyrs answered it. They had to endure all kinds of hardship and persecution, in order to accomplish the task given them. But they all considered the way of sacrifice well worth the traveling. How about us? Do we prove ourselves equal to the requirements?

Let us make a present-day comparison! Our country during the war had a big job on hand. It needed much help to get it accomplished, so it issued a constant call to service. It does not try to conceal what those who go into its service will have to endure, but pictures the great good to their fellow-man, in the ends to be attained as the reward for their sacrifice. And men do not hesitate. Willingly, yes, even eagerly, they respond to their country's call to service; although they well know that it means hardship, perhaps death, or the horrors of imprisonment. But they gladly suffer all, for the preservation of their ideals, and consider it well worth while.

Now, can we do less for our Master? Can we hesitate because the way of service is not an easy road, because there ridicule, trials and persecution must be endured while traveling it, when we know the great end to be attained?

God still calls to service. The big jobs are not all done, but, as of old, it takes big men to do them. Can we, or will we, measure up to them? Or do we take the smoother-looking path, that is so alluringly pointed out to us, but on which no high purpose travels as a guiding-star overhead? Remember, the great things, in either the temporal or spiritual world, have not been done by those who sought the easy way.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

CALIFORNIA

Lindsay.—Bro. D. L. Miller came to us Jan. 13 and remained until Jan. 29. We felt it a great privilege to have Bro. Miller with us. Both old and young appreciated his sermons. His visit was an inspiration to all. Feeling that some were almost persuaded, we decided that Bro. F. E. Robertson continue the meetings throughout the week. Bro. Robertson closed the Woodville meeting after six weeks of preaching and personal work. Sixteen confessions and renewals were the immediate result. A Sunday-school is to be organized in the town. Bro. Robertson expects to devote most of his time to evangelistic work.—Mrs. Emma V. Yoder, Lindsay, Cal., Feb. 5.

South Loe Angeles.—A special business meeting was held on Friday evening, Jan. 3, and it was decided to retain Bro. Miller as elder in charge of this congregation. Sunday morning, Jan. 5, he preached his last sermon here as such. Since Jan. 1 Bro. Isaac V. Funderburgh has occupied our pulpit each Sunday morning. He is giving us some splendid sermons. The evening appointments are filled by our resident ministers, Bro. J. W. Cline and Bro. N. J. Brubaker. Our offering for the Syrian and Armenian relief work was $144.14.—Lena Irene Swank, 1156 E. Forty-fifth Street, Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 5.

COLORADO

Haxtun.—Though our church and Sunday-school work has been hindered very much by influenza and snow-bound roads, yet the work is picking up with good interest. At our last quarterly meeting the church unanimously agreed to give our pastor three months' leave of absence, and to allow him to secure a supply pastor to care for the work during his absence. The finance committee was instructed to provide for the support of the supply in the annual budget. We expect to have three families of members locate here this spring. We are planning to have a series of meetings during the latter part of May by the supply pastor. This will put him next to the work in a fine way and ready to proceed with the work when Bro. Nickey takes his leave of absence for Europe. We are hopeful that we may secure one of the Bethany faculty for the supply. We expect to have a class in vocal music soon by Prof. M. M. Heiney.—E. L. Lapp, Fleming, Colo., Feb. 10.

IDAHO

Nampa.—Feb. 2, instead of our Sunday-school lesson, we had a short program. A talk was given by a young man, a native of Armenia. He told us of the destitution of his people and of the suffering. Since they were driven from their homes and Christians massacred because of their refusal to deny Jesus. Bro. Graybill spoke briefly of the opportunity to deny ourselves, that we might give something to relieve their wants. The offering amounted to $156. We did not hold our council for election of officers till the January. Nearly all offices were filled by reelection: Bro. J. H. Graybill will have charge of the church; Bro. A. D. Keller of the Sunday-school and Bro. B. Miller of the Christian Workers. With their assistants they are planning on better work for the coming year.—Amanda Garber, Nampa, Idaho, Feb. 6.

ILLINOIS

Cerro Gordo church met in council Feb. 1, with Bro. J. E. Keller, of Chicago, presiding, in the absence of Eld. R. H. Nicodemus. Six letters were granted. Brethren Elmer Hoffman and Calen Wallick were chosen deacons and installed on Sunday morning. Bro. Keller conducted the installation services for our new Sunday-school officers. An offering of $78.30 was lifted for Armenian-Syrian Relief. We are thankful to our Heavenly Father for his care over us during the epidemic.—Nettie Leedy, Cerro Gordo, Ill., Feb. 7.

Hurricane Creek.—On account of the epidemic we were not permitted to hold any services for several months. Our quarterly council, that was to have convened in November, met Jan. 28, with Eld. M. Flory presiding. Sunday-school officers were elected, with Sister Pearl Parker superintendent. Bro. Flory preached for us Saturday and at both Sunday services.—Barbara Baldwin, Mulberry Grove, Ill., Feb. 5.

Romine church met in council Jan. 25, with Bro. Urias Blough presiding. The following officers were reelected for the coming year: Bro. Blough, elder; Sister Gladys Blough, clerk; Sister Delia Blough, "Messenger" agent; the writer, correspondent. We have been without regular services since Nov. 3, on account of influenza, but now have Sunday-school and preaching again each Sunday. We are, indeed, thankful for God's care and protection through this period. None of our number was taken, but quite a few were ill. Our Sunday-school is growing and we hope for a prosperous year in the Lord's work, since we have Bro. Blough and wife as leaders.—Mrs. Katy Baker, Salem, Ill., Feb. 9.

INDIANA

A Request.—Bro. William D. Rostetter has been seriously ill for three weeks with typhoid pneumonia, suffering and enduring a siege. He earnestly desires the prayers of God's children in his behalf. The effectual, fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much.—D. W. Hostetler, Plymouth, Ind., Feb. 2.

Flora church is in the midst of a Bible Institute, conducted by Bro. E. B. Hoff, of Bethany Bible School. We have fine weather and good roads but the influenza has not entirely disappeared. Consequently the attendance is not large. The Flora church made Nov. 30 a day of giving for her pastor and family. The crowd gathered at the church with their offerings and then Bro. Beery was called over. He could not realize that the gifts were for one family, and had he never had experienced the like since being pastor. There were about two hundred members present. It was a blessed evening for all. It is one way of assuring the pastor of the appreciation in which he is held.—Mattie Welty, Flora, Ind., Feb. 9.

Hartford City church began a series of meetings Jan. 27, with Bro. Chas. R. Oberlin, our pastor, and Bro. B. D. Hirt, of the Leon Creek church, in charge. Sisters Gertrude Oberlin and Lottie Hirt led the singing. The interest was good throughout the meeting and the attendance greater than last year. There was one accession. The meetings closed Feb. 9. We expect to begin a series of meetings at the Bethel Center church soon.—Mrs. Lydia Waters, Hartford City, Ind., Feb. 11.

Kewanna.—Spring is near at hand, the epidemic is subsiding and we are well pleased with the regular attendance again. We began the new year with Bro. Bert Gorsline, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Jud Crabill, church clerk; the writer, "Messenger" correspondent and agent. We are now in the midst of a revival meeting, conducted by Eld. Geo. E. Swihart, of Roann. The interest is good.—Myrtie Mishler, Kewanna, Ind., Feb. 10.

Logansport church met in special council Feb. 6. Trustees were reelected as follows: Brethren Jos. Martin, Sr., Roy Shepler and Wm. Zimmerman. A Ten-cent-a-week Ladies' Aid met and reorganized. We have had two meetings, which were well attended. We are looking forward to a prosperous year in the Lord's work.—Dora Hirt, Logansport, Ind., Feb. 8.

Osceola church met in council on Saturday, Feb. 8. Our elder, Hiram Strycker, was with us also Bro. H. M. Schwalm. Three letters were given. Bro. George, of South Bend, is to be our pastor for three months.—John Cocanower, Elkhart, Ind., Feb. 12.

Pleasant Hill (Northern District) congregation met in council Feb. 8, with Bro. Jesse Gump presiding. Bro. H. Forney was also present. We took a collection of $42 for the Armenian-Syrian Relief. The time of our love feast was appointed for May 24, at 2 P. M. Bro. H. Forney has been secured for that service. Bro. Ezra Flory will be with us some time in June, to conduct a Bible Institute. Our series of meetings, conducted by Bro. H. Forney, commenced Jan. 19 and closed Feb. 9. One stood for Christ. Weather conditions were good and the attendance fine.—Irma Gump, Churubusco, Ind., Feb. 10.

Rossville.—The influenza epidemic has somewhat subsided in this community and the church is thankful that none of the members was lost. The work was hindered considerably, however, and to as much sickness, and we have not had regular services since September. Sunday-school and church services, however, are again being held regularly, and the work is growing. Feb. 2 three of our Sunday-school scholars were received into baptism. Brother and Sister Elsworth Weimer were with us Feb. 2. Our brother preached an excellent sermon.—Lillian A. Hufford, Rossville, Ind., Feb. 15.

IOWA

Ivester church has been conducting all services regularly since the first Sunday in January this year, after almost three months' suspension on account of the influenza epidemic struck us and interest are commendable. On Sunday evening, Feb. 2, a young man and his wife were baptized. The Junior League, Senior Christian Workers' Society and Ladies' Aid are doing good work. Sister are married on by the faithful who attend Sunday night services. Since regular services were held, last year, there have been three deaths, sixteen letters given, three letters received, and two baptized. Our Sunday-school has made a liberal contribution for the Relief of the Christian nations in the Near East, and over $700 has been raised, thus far, with still more coming in. Our offering will likely be around $200, when all is collected.—D. W. Shock, Grundy Center, Iowa, Feb. 5.

Ottumwa.—Our three weeks' series of meetings, conducted by Bro. J. Edwin Jarboe, closed Feb. 2. The meetings were well attended and the interest was good. Thirty-one were received by baptism and seven were restored. Sixty-seven commuued Jan. 27. The church has been revived and we are hoping to do more aggressive work through its different departments. Our Sunday-school is progressing nicely, with Eld. C. Stevens, superintendent. Our Sisters' Aid Society meets every two weeks. Our prayer meetings are well attended.—E. M. Baughman, Ottumwa, Iowa, Feb. 8.

KANSAS

Olathe church met in council Feb. 1, Eld. H. F. Brubaker presiding. Officers for the year were elected as follows: H. T. Brubaker, elder; A. Riffey, Sunday-school superintendent; the writer, correspondent; Lilly Riffey, clerk. One letter of membership was received. It was decided to hold our love feast on Saturday, April 19.—Edith M. Mahaffey, R. 1, Olathe, Kans., Feb. 12.

Pleasant View church met in council Jan. 11, our regular council having been deferred on account of influenza. We chose Bro. O. H. Feiler as elder for another year. Our Sunday-school took an offering for the Armenian-Syrian relief amounting to $43.45—$25 of which was the allowance for the Christmas treat. The children gave it gladly. In addition to this, the church gave $28.88. We have planned for our series of meetings to begin April 6, with Bro. Wm. Thompson, of Bethany Bible School, evangelist. Our love feast will be held April 20. There has been very little activity in either the church or Sunday-school this winter, on account of sickness, but we hope to accomplish a great deal this spring and summer.—Mrs. W. W. Rexroad, Darlow, Kans., Feb. 4.

Quinter church met in council Feb. 4, instead of the first Saturday in December, when we usually elect officers for the coming year. We had no services of any kind for about three months, on account of influenza. The following officers were elected: Bro. O. A. Lahman, church clerk; Bro. J. H. Long, trustee; Bro. B. F. Jamison, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Roy H. Crist, president of Christian Workers' Meeting. We decided to have a love feast May 31, beginning at 10 A. M. We also decided to have a two weeks' series of meetings, preceding our love feast. Since our meetings have started again, we are having good attendance and interest.—Mrs. Ella Quinter, Quinter, Kans., Jan. 28.

Sabetha church met in council Feb. 4, with Eld. R. A. Yoder presiding, assisted by Bro. Roy Kistner. Our offering for World-wide Missions was $60. Our series of meetings, to be held by Bro. Frank McCune, had to be postponed on account of influenza. We hope to have it in the near future. Since the last report we have received four members by letter. An offering of $45 was taken for Armenian-Syrian Relief. Our Sunday-school is progressing nicely. The attendance has been good, considering the weather and the amount of sickness. We hope for a bright and successful future and that this may be the banner year of our church.—Mrs. John Heikes, Sabetha, Kans., Feb. 8.

MARYLAND

Ridgely.—We met in council Feb. 5, with Eld. A. C. Reber presiding. The attendance was not so large, because of sickness still prevailing in this section. One letter was received and three were granted. The monthly Sunday-school missionary collection of $22.65 is to be divided equally between Home and World-wide Missions. A collection of $125.61 was taken for Armenian-Syrian Relief; $40.11 was contributed by the Christian Workers' Society. Bro. A. C. Reber is to represent us at Annual Meeting, with Brethren L. R. Brumbaugh and M. F. King, alternates. Delegates to District Meeting are Brethren M. F. King and A. C. Reber; alternates, Bro. L. R. Brumbaugh and Ella Brumbaugh.—Debora K. Reber, Ridgely, Md., Feb. 6.

MICHIGAN

Crystal church met in council Jan. 19. Bro. Geo. E. Stone was chosen elder; Sister Ella Stone, Sunday-school superintendent. Brother and Sister Stone presented the church with two lots in Crystal, to be used for the good of the church. This property will be used in such a way as will best remind us of their love for the church. —W. H. Beaver, Crystal, Mich., Feb. 10.

Harlan church met in council Feb. 7, with Eld. J. Edson Ulery presiding. Eight letters were granted. Bro. Ulery was chosen elder for another year. Officers for Christian Workers' Meeting were reelected, with Bro. Ernest Leffell, president. The writer was chosen "Messenger" agent and church correspondent. Our love feast will be held May 17, at 6 P. M. Bro. J. Edson Ulery will hold a series of meetings for us some time during the year.—Maud Wilburn, Copemish, Mich., Feb. 10.

New Haven.—Eld. C. H. Deardorff came Feb. 3 and spent nine days in a pastoral visit and also gave us an inspiring sermon each evening. Feb. 10 we met in council, with Bro. Deardorff presiding. We decided to have services each Sunday evening. The Missionary Committee was given authority to organize a Mission Study Class, and to ask the Volunteer Mission Band of Bethany Bible School to be with us in the near future. An Aid Society was organized, with the writer as president. One service was held at Carson City, with our aged brother, David Baker, the oldest minister in the District. All greatly appreciate our brother's labors among us.—Alla L. Emrick, Middleton, Mich., Feb. 12.

Notice.—As District Sunday-school and Missionary Secretary the writer is very desirous of having the name and address of each Sunday-school superintendent, also the address of the chairman of each Missionary Committee in the State, at an early date.—Ethel G. Whitmer, Beavertoo, Mich., Feb. 7.

Riverside church met Feb. 9, after our church doors had been closed for several months, on account of influenza. Several of our members were ill, but we lost none by death. We reorganized our Sunday-school, with Bro. C. Tyson, superintendent. Everybody seemed happy to meet again for worship.—Ida Puterbaugh, McBain, Mich., Feb. 10.

Zion.—An offering of $64.08 was recently taken for Armenian-Syrian Relief. Since our last report two letters have been received. On account of influenza our series of meetings and Bible Normal have been postponed indefinitely.—Neva Moats, Prescott, Mich., Feb. 6.

MISSOURI

Bethany church met in council Feb. 1. Eld. E. W. Mason presided. The Sunday-school was reorganized, with Bro. E. J. Yoncy superintendent. The writer was elected president of Christian Workers' Meeting. We hope, with this corps of workers, to go ahead, and try to make up, in a measure at least, some of the time lost this winter.—Mattie Lam, Norborne, Mo., Feb. 4.

Walnuta church met in regular council Feb. 8, with our elder, Bro. Van Pelt, in charge. Two letters of membership were granted. Sisters Ida Hollar and Mary Minnick were appointed District Mission solicitors. We elected new officers for the Christian Workers' Society, with Sister Grace Bowman as president. On account of the influenza epidemic we did not have services on Thanksgiving Day, so, on Sunday, Jan. 26, we took up an offering of $171.50, which was sent to the General Mission Board for World-wide Missions.—Miss Mary Bowman, Hardin, Mo., Feb. 12.

NEW MEXICO

Clovis church met in council Jan. 31, with Eld. C. D. Fager in charge. Bro. J. R. Fitzer was selected elder for the coming year; Sister Rodes, Sunday-school superintendent and "Messenger" correspondent; Sister Amy Anderson, president of Christian Workers' Society. We have a live Christian Workers' Society with a continual increase in attendance and enrollment. We can barely take care of the work with our limited supply of teachers, but we are doing the best we can, and hoping for better days.—Velma Fager, Clovis, N. Mex., Feb. 9.

NORTH CAROLINA

Pleasant Grove.—Bro. Virgil C. Finnell, the Sunday-school worker, came Jan. 17, and stayed with us three days, giving five very interesting lectures, and showing us a great need as a Sunday-school. His efficient work has helped us all to resolve to raise the standard. We have now organized a teacher-training class, cradle roll and home department.—Jos. H. Griffith, Brummet, N. C., Feb. 10.

Relief.—The writer and W. M. Honeycutt began a meeting at the Bliss schoolhouse, near Poplar church. We preached for five days to a crowded house. The people seemed to be impressed with the Word, and many of them invited us to come again. We hope that there has been some good done. Jan. 29 Bro. Virgil C. Finnell came to us. He gave us three lectures on Sunday-school work, which we all appreciated. We pray that he may have success in his work. —E. Peterson, Relief, R. F. D. No. 1, Feb. 3.

NORTH DAKOTA

Pleasant Valley church met in council Feb. 1, with Bro. Miller in charge. Bro. A. H. Blocher was elected elder; Bro. Eli Stauffer, Sunday-school superintendent. The church was again opened, after being closed for some time, on account of sickness and cold weather. —Ethel Barnes, York, N. Dak., Feb. 6.

Surrey.—We are having fine weather and health conditions have improved. Our regular appointments are well attended. Sergeant Ray Hardy, one of our returned soldier boys from France, occupied the time of the Christian Workers' Meeting Feb. 2. He gave a lecture on the "Religious Effect of the Present War on the Soldier." We all appreciated it very much.—Nora E. Petry, Surrey, N. Dak., Feb. 6.

OHIO

Bellefountaine.—Sister Mary Cook, District Sunday-school and Mission Secretary, was with us Feb. 9. She addressed the Sunday-school and gave her talk regarding the Mission work of the church. In the evening she gave an inspiring missionary address. Feb. 23 our pastor, Bro. Tinkle, will preach on "Health and Social Morals." During the week following he will address the men, and Sister Tinkle the women, on the subject of "Purity." An additional $5 was given by a sister for Armenian-Syrian Relief, making a total of $120 from this church.—Lula R. Tinkle, Bellefontaine, Ohio, Feb. 10.

Black River church met in council Feb. 1. Eld. D. R. McFadden presided. On account of quarantine for influenza we did not hold our November council. The 1918 Sunday-school officers continued to serve until our next February council, which was elected, with Bro. L. F. Findley, superintendent. Bro. Wm. F. Wertz is president of Christian Workers' Society. Five letters were granted. —Mrs. Anna Nolt, Lodi, Ohio, Feb. 5.

Castine.—Jan. 26 we met for worship, and Bro. B. F. Sharp, of Poplar Grove, preached for us. It was a good lesson for all. It is certainly true that numbers do not make a strong church. We were glad to have Bro. Sharp come to us.—Mrs. D. H. Funderburg, New Madison, Ohio, Feb. 11.

Marion.—Eld. Guthrie, of Upper Sandusky, began a series of meetings at this place Feb. 2, with Sister Marie Deardorff in charge of the song service. The interest is good, although the attendance, owing to the cold, is not as great as we would like. Sunday-school is doing well. There is a noticeable increase in the attendance and greater interest in the lessons; also a splendid offering. We have adopted the "Our Aim" system in connection with its teachings. The Christian Workers' Meetings are also well attended, and very inspiring. We have teachers' meeting every two weeks, which is attended with a marked degree of interest. We also have eutage prayer meetings every Thursday evening, using the subjects of the "Quiet Hour." —Rachel Bowman, Marion, Ohio, Feb. 7.

Reading.—After our church had been closed for a period of four weeks, on account of the prevalence of influenza, we were permitted to have our council Feb. 8, with Bro. Miller in charge, presiding. We have decided, if nothing interferes, to have Bro. W. D. Keller, of Canton, Ohio, begin a series of meetings May 18, and to close with a love feast on the evening of June 1. Bro. Heestand preached for us on Sunday morning and evening. The date of our next council is May 10.—Rena Heestand, R. D. 2, Mpnitrie, Ohio, Feb. 12.

OREGON

Weston congregation met for preaching services Jan. 26, which was the first service since Oct. 13. The ban has been lifted and we expect to begin our Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meetings Feb. 9. We met in council Feb. 1, with the writer in charge. Bro. J. H. Gordon was chosen elder; Bro. E. E. Tucker, superintendent of Sunday-school; Sister Huldah Metz, President of Christian Workers. The Christian Workers sent $4.00 to the Armenian-Syrian Relief Fund and the church contributed $29.25 for the same cause. Union revival meetings begin this month.—Isaac H. Miller, Weston, Oregon, Feb. 5.

Smith, Nancy Ellen, daughter of David and Martha Eiler, born in Wells County, Ind., died Jan. 16, 1919, aged 72 years, 11 months and 21 days. She married Martin V. Davis in 1863. Two children were born to them, one dying in infancy. Her husband was killed in the Civil War. She later married Chas. B. Smith. To them seven children were born. She united with the Church of the Brethren about forty years ago. She leaves her husband, six children, twenty-six grandchildren, twenty-two great-grandchildren and one brother, Eld. Calvin F. Eiler, of North Manchester, Ind. Services at Sugar Grove by Eld. Lewis Huffman, assisted by the writer.—D. R. Hardman, Warren, Ind.

Snavely, Mary Magdalene, died at the age of 62 years. She was the youngest daughter of Eld. Thos. D. and Mary Lyon, deceased. She leaves her husband, W. E. Snavely, and five children. Services from the Church of the Brethren at Hudson, Ill.—Mrs. Hannah L. Snavely, Alva, Nebr.

Spitnale, Grace Vesta, died Jan. 24, 1919, aged 48 years. In 1894 she married James Spitnale. To them were born four children, three of whom, with the father, survive. Sister Spitnale has been a member of the Church of the Brethren for the past seventeen years. She died within the bounds of the Sand Ridge congregation. Services from the Blanchard church by Bro. J. L. Guthrie, assisted by Bro. L. H. Prowant. Burial in the cemetery near by.—Mary E. Prowant, Hamler, Ohio.

Spitnale, Sister Zoe Anna, daughter of Brother James and Sister Grace Spitnale, died Jan. 25, 1919, at her home in West Leipsic, about twenty-four hours after her mother had passed away, aged 18 years, 7 months and 13 days. She united with the Church of the Brethren in July, 1918, during a series of meetings held by Bro. C. S. Garber. She was sick for more than a year. She was laid to rest in the same grave with her mother.—Mary E. Prowant, Hamler, Ohio.

Ulrich, Bro. John, born near Hagerstown, Ind., died at the home of his son, near Ordway, Colo., Jan. 31, 1919, aged 82 years, 2 months and 5 days. In 1859 he married Lydia Brewer, who died in 1913. Bro. Ulrich served the church very faithfully as deacon for over fifty years. Four sons, two daughters, twenty grandchildren and thirteen great-grandchildren survive. Services at the Rocky Ford church by the writer. Text, Geo. 25: 8. The body was taken to Lawrence, Kans., for interment in Oak Hill cemetery.—David Hamm, Rocky Ford, Colo.

Wampler, Bro. Jonathan, born near Broadway, Va., died at his home near Singer Glen, Jan. 25, 1919, aged 86 years, 4 months and 21 days. Bro. Wampler had been greatly afflicted with rheumatism for the past two years. He had been, for many years, a member of the Church of the Brethren. He is survived by one son, two daughters and six grandchildren. His wife preceded him a year ago. Brief services at the grave by Eld. B. D. Miller, interment in the Greenmount cemetery.—Annie Miller, Harrisonburg, Va.

Way, Bro. Sherman Francis, died Feb. 4, 1919, of dilatation of the heart, following an operation for appendicitis, aged 24 years, 9 months and 9 days. He was the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Way. He was born at the old family home, near Davenport, Nebr., where he grew to manhood. At the age of fifteen he gave his heart to the Lord, and united with the Church of the Brethren. Since that time he has lived an earnest Christian life. He was the youngest of the family, and the home circle was first broken when he left us. He leaves a father, mother, five sisters and an aged grandfather. Services at the Bethel Church of the Brethren by Bro. Edgar Rothrock and the writer.—Geo. W. Hilton, Bruning, Nebr.

Williams, Marvel Claire, adopted daughter of Sister Ella Williams and the late Leonard M. Williams, died of influenza and diphtheritic sore throat, aged 5 years, 3 months and 15 days. The father's death occurred just nine days before. Services at the home. Interment in the Grandview cemetery.—J. S. Geiser, Froid, Mont.

Windmiller, Andrew, son of Geo. and Sarah Windmiller, born in Pennsylvania, died Aug. 28, 1918, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Amos Shaeffer, aged 84 years, 5 months and 12 days. He married Mary Brown in 1857. To them were born four sons and five daughters. Three daughters, one son and the wife preceded him. Later he married Nancy Allen, who died in 1900. Services in the West Branch church by Brethren Sylvan Bockwalter and Andrew Miller. —Francis Hollinger, New Madison, Ohio.

Vicnguet, Henry Aaron, youngest son of Brother and Sister Geo. Vicnguet, born in Kingman County, Kans., died in the St. Joseph Hospital at Clayton, N. Mex., Dec. 4, 1918, of pneumonia following influenza, aged 9 years and 2 months. Besides his parents he leaves two brothers, one half-brother and three half-sisters. The family were in New Mexico, visiting, when they were all taken with influenza. The body was brought back to the home of his parents, near Murdock, Kans. Services by Bro. S. E. Delp. Interment in the Greenwood cemetery.—Sarah Frantz, Murdock, Kans.

Zapf, Bro. Edward, was born in Germany in 1845. He came to this country fifty years ago. First he located near Freeport, Ill., but three years later removed to Grundy County, Iowa, where he lived till the time of his death, Jan. 5, 1919. He was a member of the Ivester congregation for thirty-seven years, and was very earnest and conscientious in his belief. Services near his home, in the Lincoln Center church, and burial near by. The services were in charge of the Ivester pastor, Jan. 10.—D. Warren Shock, Grundy Center, Iowa.

Zook, Sister Sarah, nee Teeter, born at Hagerstown, Ind., died at her home in Milan, Kans., Jan. 19, 1919, aged 85 years, 3 months and 5 days. She had been in poor health for over four years, and had been confined to her bed for nearly one year. With her husband she came from Indiana to Kansas in 1884. Her companion preceded her in 1910. She was the mother of eight children, seven of whom are living. She was a kind mother. She united with the Church of the Brethren when quite young, and lived ever faithful. Although she lived somewhat isolated from the church, she was always deeply interested in its welfare, and attended services whenever she could. She had a loving disposition, and no sacrifice was too great for her to make, if it would only help some one. Those who knew her best, loved her most. The writer visited her a number of times during her sickness, but never saw greater patience than she possessed. Services from the Christian Church of Milan, Kans., by her pastor, Wm. E. Thompson, of Conway Springs. She will be greatly missed, and never forgotten.—Wm. E. Thompson, Conway Springs, Kans.

Some of the chapters are: Manipulation of the Memory, Nature of Study and Thinking, Mode of Study, Reading, Examinations.

ONE WAY OUT, ...68c
William Carleton.

A remarkable narrative in which a man tells simply, but with dynamic power, how at thirty-eight he lost his position in a big corporation; how he found that his special training was of no value in getting him a position in any other office, and how, while under forty, he was already too old to get another position like the one he had lost. In these dire straits this salary drawing New Englander of the middle class emigrated to America! A book every salaried man or woman should read.

Notes From Our Correspondents

PENNSYLVANIA

East Fairview.—We have just closed one of the most spiritual revivals ever conducted by our church. Bro. Wm. N. Zoble, of Lancaster, Pa., came to us, and by the united efforts of the church we were given an old-fashioned revival. As the result of our efforts twenty-nine have made the good choice and decided to walk in the Master's footsteps. Bro. Zoble preached the Word with power to appreciative audiences, and his influence has made many lasting impressions both upon Christians and non-Christians. The members were greatly encouraged and strengthened, and are better fitted to go on in this great work than ever before. Many, who were almost persuaded to become Christians, have not made the good choice. Thirteen of the converts are boys and girls from our Sunday-school, and we are planning to have all the converts become members. Our Sunday-school is now evergreen, and is constantly increasing, both in number and interest. Our church has sent a liberal offering for the Armenian and Syrian Relief Fund.—H. A. Merkey, Manheim, Pa., Feb. 7.

Elizabethtown.—Our Missionary Committee rendered a very interesting program on Sunday evening, Feb. 9. Afterward Eld. Geo. Weaver, of Manheim, Pa., preached for us. The offering for India amounted to $45.57. Jan. 26 the Sunday-school (Mary) contributed $330 to the Armenian-Syrian Relief.—S. P. Engle, Elizabethtown Pa., Feb. 10.

Elk Lick church met in council Jan. 18, with Bro. B. F. Waltz presiding. Officers for the year elected as follows: Bro. W. S. Mann, church clerk; Sister Bertha Yoder, "Messenger" agent, the writer, correspondent; Bro. Lloyd Vonght, Sunday-school superintendent. The Board of Trustees, who formerly held office for life, were elected as follows: Bro. Wilson Yoder for three years; Bro. Frank Mann, four years; Bro. M. S. Mann, three years; Bro. Wilson Vnught, two years; Bro. Harvey C. Miller, one year. Our delegates, elected to District Meeting are Brethren Emanuel Yoder and James Mann. Brethren Lloyd Vonght and Joe Winegood were elected deacons and, with their wives, installed by Eld. B. F. Waltz. The graded lessons, published by our Sunday School Board, have proved satisfactory in our school, we shall continue to use them in the three lower grades. The duplex envelope will also be used again.—Mrs. B. F. Waltz, Elk Lick, Pa., Feb. 4.

Ephrata.—Feb. 2 the members and friends of the "Andrew and Philip Bible Class," of the Lancaster congregation, and the "Willing Workers" of the local church,—both being men's organized classes,—met in joint session, and rendered an interesting and helpful program. This was followed by an excellent address by Eld. H. K. Ober, of Elizabethtown College, on the "Forward Movement." An offering of $26.58 was lifted for the benefit of Elizabethtown College. This was the third joint class meeting, held by the two classes, but the first to which the public was invited. The church was well filled on this occasion. Feb. 9, Bro. Abram Royer, of Denver, delivered a splendid sermon in the forenoon. In the evening a class of eleven graduates, who had completed the first Standard Teacher-training Course, rendered a very interesting program. An address was given by the teacher. Each one of the class took part in the program. Bro. A. P. Wenger, of Brownstown, then followed with a final address. The class is organized for the second study of the Advanced Teacher-training Course, as prescribed in Book 2. Another class of ten members has been organized to pursue the lesson studies of Book No. 3. Just recently a class of seven completed the course in Book No. 2. It is eagerly waiting for the completion of Book No. 3.—Gertrude R. Shirk, Ephrata, Pa., Feb. 11.

Greensburg.—During the recent epidmie the Greensburg church and Sunday-school suffered a heavy loss in membership and funds. While the pastor and his family were sick, Brn. B. B. Ludwick, of Mt. Pleasant, Pa., gave very valuable service in visiting, anointing the sick and conducting funerals. Following is a list of those who have died: Mary Elizabeth Reed, 9, and Ivan Reed, John Smalley, Oct. 22, 14 years; Philip Curry, Nov. 1, 2 years; Albert Donahoe, Nov. 3, 30 years; Edw. Shaffer, Nov. 6, 7 months; Sara Leonard, Nov. 7, 11 years; Elizabeth Bashioum, Nov. 8, 28 years; Lydia Tait Swartz, Nov. 14, 22 years; Ray Leonard, Nov. 19, 19 years; Dora May Hayden, Nov. 21, 37 years; Helen Bakewell, Nov. 22, 24 years; Clarence Raylor, Dec. 12, 12 years; Louise Kaylor, Jan. 2, 1919, 40 years; Olive Cheek, Jan. 12, 20 years; Mrs. Hechler, Feb. 2, 77 years.—M. J. Brougher, Greensburg, Pa., Feb. 10.

Lancaster.—Our Sunday-school Board held two meetings to discuss the Forward Movement. Plans were made which, we trust, will be the means of bringing many into the Sunday-school. The offerings of two Sundays in January amounting to $38, were given for Armenian-Syrian Relief. Feb. 4 we had a very impressive missionary meeting. The program was rendered by the Student Volunteer Band of Elizabethtown College. An oration, "The Great World Need," was given by Bro. John Graham. Sister Martha Martin spoke on "Our Relation to the World's Evangelization." Sister Sara Shissler told us of "The Higher Spiritual Life." These speakers had their subjects well prepared and vividly portrayed to us the need of more workers in the foreign field. Bro. Ezra Wenger followed with the heart-searching question, "What Shall I Do?" Bro. A. C. Baugher, who presided, made a strong plea for a volunteer to take the place of the one we had hoped to support. The Band quartet favored us with several selections.—Leah N. Phillipy, Lancaster, Pa., Feb. 10.

Mountville.—Feb. 9 the Missionary Committee rendered a program at the Mountville house. Bro. John Myers, of Lancaster, gave a splendid address, speaking very forcibly about the Forward Movement of the church. The interest was good and he made us feel like doing better work for the Master. An offering of $23.35 was lifted.—Annie L. Neff, Lancaster, Pa., Feb. 10.

Walnut Grove church, Johnstown congregation, met in council at the beginning of the year and elected officers, with Bro. M. Clyde Horst, elder; Bro. W. E. Brougher was elected Sunday-school superintendent at a previous meeting. The Annual Teacher-training Alumni reception was held at the home of Anderson Wertz Jan. 15. There were about seventy-five members present. The late graduating class, consisting of ten, was received into the association. We hope to have a revival meeting, beginning March 11, with Bro. A. B. Miller and wife, of Hagerstown, Md., in charge. Sister Marguerite Bixler Garrett will conduct the song service. Influenza still prevails among our people and a number were claimed by death.—Elsabeth W. Howe, Johnstown, Pa., Feb. 6.

TENNESSEE

Knob Creek church met in council Feb. 1, with Eld. D. P. Bowman presiding. We are planning to have a missionary meeting in the near future. Brethren C. S. Heuberry, of Daleville, Va., J. M. Kagey, of Dayton, Va., and A. S. Thomas, of Bridgewater, Va., gave us some good instructions on Saturday. Brethren Kagey and Thomas gave us two good discourses on Sunday morning and evening.—Mary Bowman, Johnson City, Tenn., Feb. 10.

VIRGINIA

A Pastor Wanted.—The Ministerial Board for the First District of Virginia has an inquiry for a young man, either married or single, to engage in pastoral work. Correspondence solicited. We would like to hear from any ministers or elders who wish to take up work in our State District. We are ready to assist any church in the District in find ministers.—C. D. Hylton, Troniville, Va., Feb. 10.

Bethlehem church met in council Jan. 25, with Eld. Geo. Bowman presiding. One letter was granted. On account of the epidemic the crowd was very small, so it was decided that Bro. D. A. Naff remain as our elder until our September council, when the election will be held. Bro. C. D. Hylton, who is working in behalf of the Daleville College endowment fund, gave a talk. He also gave us an excellent discourse the day following, on the subject of "Reconstruction." Bro. H. G. Bowman is our Sunday-school superintendent for this year.—Blanche Bowman, Boone Mill, Va., Feb. 2.

Bridgewater church met in council Feb. 5, with Eld. H. G. Miller presiding. Bro. A. S. Thomas, of the Beaver Creek congregation, was also present. Six letters were received and five were granted. We decided to have our evangelistic services in March or April, to be conducted by Bro. Swigart, of Philadelphia. The church instructed the Pastoral Board to secure a pastor. Bro. H. G. Miller was re-elected elder for one year. Our District Sunday-school Training School opened on Feb. 9, with a sermon in the morning by Dr. Dreisbach and one at night by Dr. Bowman, both of which were inspiring. The District Superintendents effected an organization in the afternoon, with Bro. Virgil L. Miller president. The Training School began its class work on Monday morning at 9 o'clock.—M. A. Cassell, Bridgewater, Va., Feb. 11.

Cook's Creek.—We met in council Feb. 1, with a fair representation of the membership present. The finance committee gave a very encouraging report. The missionary part of the church was not overlooked. Contributions were made for various times for the sufferers in the Near East, and for General Missions. Eld. S. D. Zigler and the writer were chosen delegates in Annual Meeting; Brethren J. F. Sharpes, J. F. Miller, S. D. Zigler and E. Kelly to District Meeting. Some of our services have been irregular of late, because of the epidemic, but now the four Sunday-schools, as well as our church services, are regular again, and we trust that much good will be accomplished this year for the Lord.—S. I. Bowman, Harrisonburg, Va., Feb. 8.

Mill Creek congregation held no services for some weeks, on account of the influenza epidemic. There were a number of cases in the congregation, but only 2 deaths so far. At the beginning of the new year we organized our Sunday-school with Dr. C. P. Harshbarger, T. I. Bowman and Sister Ida Willberger, superintendents. The offering taken for Armenian-Syrian Relief, amounted to $150.—Stella S. Long, Penn Laird, Va., Feb. 6.

Pleasant Valley church (Second District) met in council Feb. 1. Elders Peter Garber and S. D. Miller were both present. This council should have been held Jan. 1, but because of Spanish influenza could not be carried out for several months. Bro. S. D. Miller was elected Sunday-school superintendent. Nine letters were granted. We decided to support Sister Margie Morgan at Grottoes again this year. She did very effective work in this district last year. Our regular services began Feb. 2, for which we are glad.—Ruth E. Williams, Mt. Sidney, Va., Feb. 6.

Schoolfield church met in council Feb. 1, with Eld. H. J. Woodie presiding. The writer was chosen "Messenger" agent and correspondent. We decided to hold our love feast May 4. Our elder preached on Sunday night in a large audience.—A. T. Prather, Schoolfield, Va., Feb. 10.

Summit church met in council Jan. 18, with Eld. J. T. Glick presiding. Owing to Spanish influenza, the meeting could not be held at the beginning of the year, as usual. The treasurer's report showed a balance of $40 in the treasury. Money given for charity, during the year, was as follows: United Brethren, $290.85; Red Cross, $110; Armenian-Syrian Relief, $323; total, $732.85. The regular $100 scholarship is to be used by two young ministers attending Bridgewater College. Bro. D. L. Forney was reelected superintendent for Summit Sunday-school, and Bro. Frank Cline for Glade. The former "Messenger" correspondent, Christina Huffer, having resigned, the writer was appointed.—Mattie F. Wise, Bridgewater, Va., Feb. 5.

To the First District of Virginia.—The District Ministerial Board requests each church to keep a constant lookout for spiritually-minded young brethren, with ministerial aspirations. We need them, and we must train out quota of the 300 called for in the Forward Movement. We trust that our ministers of the District will get busy and go in search of the unconverted and bring in their part of the 15,000, to be converted annually. Through Christ we are able. Our workers must get busy on the financial part of the program. The Daleville College is now engaged in the endowment campaign, and we have implicit confidence in our brethren, that they will respond liberally. Don't fail us!—C. D. Hylton, Troutville, Va., Feb. 10.

WASHINGTON

Spokane church met in council Feb. 9, with Eld. Stephen Johnson presiding. Five letters were received. Bro. C. F. Rupel, of Plain, Wash., was elected elder. The following officers were elected: Bro. R. Force, church clerk; the writer correspondent; Bro. R. Force, Sunday-school superintendent.—Truman Aschenbrenner, S. 109 G Street, Spokane, Wash., Feb. 11.

WEST VIRGINIA

Mount Union congregation held its fifth Bible institute in the Wiles Hill House, commencing Sunday evening, Feb. 9. We had a splendid meeting,—the best we ever held. Brethren Emra T. Pike, Obed Hamsteed and C. M. Driver conducted our meetings, assisted by Bro. S. H. Arnson and Sister Arnson. Their talks were interesting. Our services and Sunday-school are well attended, and good interest is being manifested.—S. Bucklew, 903 Highland Avenue, Morgantown, W. Va., Feb. 11.

2,000 MILES IN A WAGON

Have you ever read the story of the "Mission Wagon"? At the close of the first year of travel Eld. James M. Neff wrote: "During the year we traveled by wagon 2,141 miles, camped outdoors under all sorts of circumstances, made 430 house-to-house visits, conducted 110 public services at twenty-one widely-scattered points in Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas and New Mexico, attended two love feasts and distributed 47,860 pages of tracts and the "Messenger" is going regularly into many homes, and we are hopeful that the Lord will magnify himself through it all." The complete story of the "Mission Wagon" is contained in the Biography of James M. Neff, formerly $1.00, now on special sale at 50c, postpaid.

Literary Activity of the Brethren in the Eighteenth Century

By Jno. S. Flory

The author has treated the first century of the literary activity of the Brethren in a scholarly and interesting way. This volume will be a credit to your library. Formerly sold at $1.25; special sale price, 79c, postpaid.

Religious Poetry of Mack

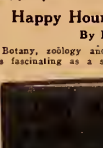
By S. B. Heckman

The religious poetry of Alexander Mack, Jr., possessed such merit that it has been collected and carefully edited. This book is of special interest at a time when in connection with the Becker Bicentennial our minds go back to the beginnings of the church. Former price, $1.00; special sale price, 50c, postpaid.

Happy Hours in the Big Outdoors

By N. J. Miller, B. S.

Botany, zoology and a lot of other "ologies" become as fascinating as a story in this new nature book. The author was a gifted naturalist who spent much of his life in the big outdoors. Consequently he has many strange and alarming things to say about the birds, flowers and wild animals that he knew.



Happy Hours in the Big Outdoors is a book that will delight all ages of readers. But especially should parents put this engaging and instructive book in the hands of boys and girls. Here are just two samples of what scientists and others think of the book:

"I know of no book on nature which . . . is as good to put into the hands of young people."—S. L. Boothroyd, University of Washington.

"I find it an excellent book for our young people. It is interesting, practical, scientific."—H. J. Harnly, McPherson College.

The price of this cloth bound, handsomely illustrated book is only $1.25.

The four books listed above were written by our own authors. They should be in every Brethren Home.

Our Chance to Answer

ISRAEL was scarcely out of Egypt until the hard life which the people had lived in that country began to grow softer in their eyes. The first hardships in the wilderness both blotted out the memory of their former wretchedness and blinded their vision of all future good.

That is the way human nature always glorifies the past. It overlooks the good things in the present situation and magnifies the bad ones, while it applies exactly the reverse process to the days gone by. Of these the pleasant things grow pleasanter and the disagreeable ones less so.

The pity of this is that it cuts the nerve of effort. When people get to thinking that their best days are past and keep thinking so, why, of course their best days are past. And when an institution or organization of any kind gets to living mostly on the contemplation of the good old days, its good days will be mostly old ones. Such a temper can do little toward making the new days good.

But such an attitude is not only hurtful to progress, it is groundless. There is no occasion for it. The past is a fixed quantity. Whether good or bad we can not change it. But the present is in our hands. We can make this what we will. Is the best part of the history of the Church of the Brethren in the past or in the future? Isn't it as plain as day that the answer to that depends entirely on what we do? And those to come after us?

The FORWARD MOVEMENT is our opportunity to give the answer.

Marcus Dods on Religious Ordinances

"ONE great secret in the growth of character is the art of prolonging the quickening power of right ideas, of perpetuating just and inspiring impressions. And he who despises the aid of all external helps for the accomplishment of this object is not likely to succeed. Religion, some men say, is an inward thing; it does not consist of public worship, ordinances, and so forth, but it is a state of heart. Very true; but he knows little of human nature who fancies a state of spirit can be maintained without the aid of external reminders,—presentations to eye and ear of central religious truths and facts. We have all of us had such visions of truth, and such corresponding desires and purposes, as would transform us, were they only permanent."

Well said. Dr. Dods had a clear discernment of the function of religious rites. We need them to perpetuate and deepen "just and inspiring impressions." We need them to foster and prolong "the quickening power of right ideas."

"And He Called It Nehushtan"

BECAUSE that was all it was. Once it had been more. Once it had been the symbol of Jehovah's love and power, a means of pointing the people to the Source of help, so that when the bitten wanderer in the wilderness looked upon it, he remembered that Jehovah pitied him. And his faith was kindled. And mounting upward, that faith laid hold upon the beneficent power of Jehovah, and he was healed.

But now the people had forgotten that. Instead of looking through the image to the truth it symbolized, they stopped with looking at the image. Instead of worshiping him in whose honor Moses had set it up, they worshiped the symbol itself. So far from being an instrument of faith in God, it had become a hindrance to such faith. And so King Hezekiah, seeing that it was the occasion of more harm than help, irreverently (?) laid hands upon it, smashed the sacred (?) thing in pieces, saying contemptuously that it was nothing but a "piece of brass."

For symbols are nothing but the material of which they are composed, when they do not lead the mind to a perception and appreciation of the truth they stand for.

What is the proper designation of that comfortable shelter in which we gather each Lord's Day to sing and preach and pray? What if some prophet of God, seeing the hollowness of much of our pious pretense, were to blast the building into a thousand pieces and then say, in answer to our shocked surprise, "Well, what of it? It is nothing but a pile of brick."

Did you ever eat the bit of bread your brother gave you at the communion table, when it was nothing, really nothing, but a spoonful or two of flour?

There's a highly prized Book on your center table. You would not think of being without it in your home, nor permit it to be handled roughly. But what is the purpose of it? Is it the Book you worship? Are you trusting in its mere presence for security? Or does it lead you, through the study of its pages, into deeper soul communion with its Author? What would you think if some modern Hezekiah, discerning your idolizing of the Book itself, along with your utter failure to translate its truth into your life, were to seize it and tear it to pieces before your eyes, explaining simply, "Here's three pounds of paper, ink and leather"?

Such measures would seem radical, surely. May they ever be too radical for any need of ours. We can keep them so by using all the symbols and instruments of spiritual knowledge which God has given us, as means of acquaintanceship with him. Let us not worship the symbol and the instrument. Let them teach us how to worship God.

A Commentary on the Decalog

THERE are commentaries and commentaries, most of them explaining very clearly what needs no explanation, and passing by the very things you want some light on. Or else, befogging them with learned phrases more mysterious than the text itself. But there is one we can commend without reserve. It is practical, right to the point, exactly the kind you need. It is a commentary on the Old Testament Law with special reference to the Ten Commandments. It is popularly known as the Sermon on the Mount.

It is very brief, but very luminous. It discusses only a few injunctions, but it does this in such a way that you can easily explain the rest yourself. Could anybody question, after reading it, how to keep the sixth and seventh commandments? And don't you see, from these examples, how to interpret and practice the others also? And don't you see that you have here, fresh from the hands of the Master Interpreter, the key to the whole New Testament, as well?

It is all very simple. If you really want to do and be, it is not hard to understand what to do and how to be.

Back to the Garden of Eden

THE war has done much towards familiarizing the careful newspaper reader with the different sections of the Bible Lands. In some of these sections the public has become more than ordinarily interested, and there are other portions that are yet to come into prominent view. From time to time we have said something about the conditions in Palestine, but in this article we shall draw special attention to what may be regarded as the cradle of the human race.

We will understand the situation more fully by noting the fact that, in the early history of the world, both Egypt and the country lying along the Euphrates and Tigris Rivers possessed the most advanced orders of civilization known to the ancients. In everything relating to wealth, education, culture, skill and power, they were rivals. The two countries are about 700 miles apart and between them extensive commercial interests were carried on, several well-kept public highways being maintained. They were not only rivals in commerce but they were frequently at war with each other. Between them was Palestine, and across this country led nearly all the roads between Egypt and the Mesopotamian Valley. This was advantageous for Palestine in times of peace, but distressing in times of war.

Let us now spend a little while studying the eastern part of the ancient world here referred to. It was somewhere just north of the Persian Gulf that the Garden of Eden was located. At some point in this extensive valley Noah built his ark, and up near the headwaters of the river that traverses the plain, the ark landed, and the foundation for new nations was laid. Here great cities sprang up and vast empires took their rise, and when at the height of its glory, this section was the most wealthy and densely-populated of the globe.

Now turn to your map of Asia and notice how the two rivers,—Euphrates and Tigris,—take their rise in the mountains of Armenia, flowing almost parallel in a southeasterly direction until they join and then enter the Persian Gulf as one stream. At this time the silt carried down by the rivers is filling up the northern end of the Gulf at the rate of 72 feet a year. This means that 6,000 years ago the Gulf extended nearly 80 miles farther north than at the present time, and that the two rivers emptied into it by separate mouths. With your

The Bridge Builder

An old man going a lone highway
Came at the evening cold and grey,
To a chasm vast and deep and wide.
The old man crossed in the twilight dim,
The sullen stream had no fear for him;
But he turned when safe on the other side
And built a bridge to span the tide.

"Old man," said a fellow-pilgrim near,
"You are wasting your strength with building here;
Your journey will end with the ending day,
You never again will pass this way;
You've crossed the chasm deep and wide;
Why build you this bridge at evening tide?"

The builder lifted his old grey head.
"Good friend, in the path I have come," he said,
"There followeth after me today
A youth whose feet must pass this way.
This chasm that has been as naught to me,
To that fair-haired youth may a pitfall be,
He, too, must cross in the twilight dim.—
Good friend, I am building this bridge for him."

The Abrahamic Covenant

BY E. B. HOFF

In Four Parts.—Part One

Abraham, the Father of Monotheism.—Abraham is the leading character of the kingdom of God in the patriarchal age of the world. There were great men before him and after him, during that age, but his figure stands out in large prominence, before them all. When the world had wandered away into the confusion of polytheism, he heard the call of God, and came forth to become the father of the doctrine of monotheism, for all the nations of the world. While he was yet at Ur of the Chaldees, where his ancestors worshiped the heavenly bodies, and various other gods, God appeared to him and called him forth. "The God of glory appeared unto our father Abraham, when he was in Mesopotamia, before he dwelt in Haran, and said unto him, Get thee out of thy land, and from thy kindred, and come into the land which I shall show thee. Then came he out of the land of the Chaldeans, and dwelt in Haran: and from thence, when his father was dead, God removed him into this land, wherein ye now dwell" (Acts 7: 2-4; cf. Neh. 9: 7, 8).

The Call and Promise.—The main record of the call and the promise is found in the twelfth chapter of Genesis, and reads as follows: "Now Jehovah said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto the land that I will show thee: and I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and be thou a blessing: and I will bless them that bless thee, and him that curseth thee will I curse: and in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed" (Gen. 12: 1-3). He is called to leave his native land and people, and to take up his home in a new and foreign land. The call is immediately accompanied by a great promise. This promise is twofold in its nature: (1) He is given the assurance that he will be the head of a great nation. (2) He will be a blessing to all the families of the earth. The promise is, therefore, both national and international. He will be so blessed and so protected that he will become a universal blessing. One of the commendable traits of this noble character was his obedience. What he knew to be right, that he did with unwavering loyalty.

Abraham, the Man of Obedience.—Abraham faithfully accepted this call, and followed the guiding hand of Jehovah, to the far Northwest, a thousand miles, to the land of promise. "By faith Abraham, when he was called, obeyed to go out unto a place which he was to receive for an inheritance; and he went out, not knowing whither he went. By faith he became a sojourner in the land of promise, as in a land not his own, dwelling in tents, with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise; for he looked for the city which hath the foundations, whose builder and maker is God" (Heb. 11: 8-10; cf. Gen. 12: 4, 5).

Abraham, the Man of Devotion.—"And Abram passed through the land unto the place of Shechem, unto the oak of Moreh. And the Canaanite was then in the land" (Gen. 12: 6). As he entered the land, Jehovah again appeared to him and assured him that he was now standing on the ground which, by and by, his people would inherit. This moved the godly man to build an altar, to express the gratitude of his heart. The altar was not built to the moon god of Ur, which his people worshiped in Chaldea, but it bore an offering to Jehovah. "And Jehovah appeared unto Abram, and said, Unto thy seed will I give this land: and there builded he an altar unto Jehovah, who appeared unto him" (Gen. 12: 7).

Magnanimity of Soul.—Abraham had an unselfish and a magnanimous soul. When his servants and the servants of Lot, his nephew, were quarreling concerning their pasture lands, he answered: "Let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee, and between my herdsmen and thy herdsmen; for we are brethren. Is not the whole land before thee? separate thyself, I pray thee, from me: if thou wilt take the left hand, then I will go to the right; or if thou wilt take the right hand, then I will go to the left" (Gen. 13: 8, 9). In response to this act of genuine moral integrity, Jehovah said unto him: "Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art, northward and southward and eastward and westward: for all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed forever. And I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth: so that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then may thy seed also be numbered. Arise, walk through the land in the length of it and in the breadth of it; for unto thee will I give it. And Abram moved his tent, and came and dwelt by the oaks of Mamre, which are in Hebron, and built there an altar unto Jehovah" (Gen. 13: 14-18). The renewal of the promise must have given him much strength. From this time on, the countless particles of dust, before his eyes, became, day by day, the ground of his assurance of the magnitude of the blessing of God.

The Progenitor of the Kingdom of God.—This promise assumed the form of a covenant of mutual assurance, and became thus the nucleus of the two great covenants which God later made with his people, —the Mosaic covenant and the Gospel covenant. As we look back over the pages of history, we can plainly see that Abraham was standing in the very apex of two diverging lines, which keep broadening out into the grace of God which is to be manifested to all the world.

1. The Deacon

More than a quarter of a century ago, after having been invited, as a boy, to go along with a good brother on a "deacon's visit," I was so impressed with the possible inner spiritual value of the deacon, as an official in the church, that I wrote a letter to the then editor of the Messenger, urging that he organize a symposium on "The Deacon," calling upon a widely-scattered group of our leaders to express themselves as to the constructive possibilities of this office. The editor replied by urging me to write out my own thoughts more fully, for publication; but I never found the time to do so.

Now, in spite of the fact that the quarter century just passed has brought the "pastor" as a really new factor into the Church of the Brethren, my belief in the deacon, as the most wholesomely-constructive potentiality in the local congregation, is not diminished but increased, rather. The Scriptural setting of the deacon is clear; and church history, universally, accords him a permanent place next to, or even inside, the clergy,—this in practically every denomination. He is known as the "arm of the clergy," thus indicating support, assistance, performance, achievement. These are positive qualities, and it is well for clergy and laity alike not only to expect but really to create and sustain a healthy demand for spiritual activity and leadership on the part of the deacons. The odium of censoriousness and disciplinary severity, wherever it still exists, should be dispelled from the deaconate, either by the deacons themselves, or by the ministers, or by the congregation, or by all acting harmoniously toward a higher ideal.

The pastor need not, and should not, despite his pastoral visits, set aside the deacons' visit,—one of the most ancient and most wholesome institutions in the church, notwithstanding its crude abuses at times; but let it be a real and well-conducted visit, not a mere formality in the basement of the church or in some otherwise hastily-conducted or wholesale meeting. Furthermore, in lifting the offering, in arranging for and managing the features of the love feast, in providing for the sick and worthy poor, in looking after the details of comfort and convenience of the worshipers, and certainly in assisting in exhortation or reading or song or prayer, the deacon may beautifully, graciously, and acceptably "magnify" his office to the great and increasing good of all.

In the expanding program of the church, whether in town or country or city, let us all realize that the very manner of choosing our deacons guarantees to them a real place in the polity of the church, as real and as worth while as that of the ministers; and let the deacons, modestly realizing their authority, just as modestly, but none the less faithfully, set about to make their office a real asset in the Kingdom of God.

The Purity Forward Movement

BY WM. J. TINKLE

The World's Purity Federation is now launching a notable forward movement. This federation, in my estimation, is the ablest of all purity organizations, having among its officers noted men and women, such as P. T. Galloway, Clifford G. Roe, B. B. Lindsey, Madaline Southard, Richmond P. Hobson and B. S. Steadwell. Its official organ,—"The Light,"—has been published since 1897, during which time twenty-eight other purity journals have suspended publication.

The subscription of a $15,000 budget fund was completed Dec. 1. This budget fund is for the purpose of financing the campaign for a half million dollars, so that all of the latter fund can be used for the purpose for which it is donated. It is proposed to equip the Federation with a home of four buildings. The administration building is to house an efficient information bureau and a lecture bureau, equipped to supply every neighborhood with well-trained and sane speakers. The printing building will supply the great demand for better literature on purity subjects. One of the buildings is to be used as a college for the training of social workers. The president of the federation says that not one-hundredth part of the demand for social workers can be filled and that two-thirds of such workers, now employed, have had no adequate training. The fourth building is to be a hospital for the correction of physical defects, leading to impurity.

Just now is a specially favorable time to launch this forward movement because of three conditions: (1) The war is over. (2) Liquor practically has been expelled. (3) The work is well started. Let us take a brief look at each of the three.

While the Kaiser,—the arch-enemy of our ideals,—was presenting such a bold front to our nation, we hardly could expect the public to give much attention to that sinister but no less deadly foe,—impurity. For we must admit that this monster is an adept at keeping himself hid, even when pursued relentlessly. The cry has been: "Win the war! Win the war!" So insistently was this slogan heralded that it absorbed the entire attention of a great many. Now, since the goal is reached, their minds are empty, swept and garnished. What now is to occupy their attention? Selfish amusement or the hoarding of wealth? God forbid! Now is the opportune time to herald the new war,—a war not against flesh and blood, but against the rulers of the darkness of this world. The most powerful ruler of darkness of our time is impurity.

But it is not the mere fact that our minds are disengaged from the war that makes this an important time. The mobilization of armies always results in an

While the Kaiser,—the arch-enemy of our ideals,— was presenting such a bold front to our nation, we hardly could expect the public to give much attention to that sinister but no less deadly foe,—impurity. For we must admit that this monster is an adept at keeping himself hid, even when pursued relentlessly. The cry has been: "Win the war! Win the war!" So insistently was this slogan heralded that it absorbed the entire attention of a great many. Now, since the goal is reached, their minds are empty, swept and garnished. What now is to occupy their attention? Selfish amusement or the hoarding of wealth? God forbid! Now is the opportune time to herald the new war,—a war not against flesh and blood, but against the rulers of the darkness of this world. The most powerful ruler of darkness of our time is impurity.

But it is not the mere fact that our minds are disengaged from the war that makes this an important time. The mobilization of armies always results in an hath before ordained that we should walk in them" (Eph. 2: 10).

Christians are admonished not to neglect the assembling of themselves together, and we need houses where we can assemble and unitedly worship God, the Creator of heaven and earth, our Redeemer and Friend. Nowhere else can the church be so well blended as in the association of worship. Here our lives should be lifted from their individual struggles and mingled in a larger, a common atmosphere. Here we get in touch with God and get courage and strength for the common, world-wide task.

Though there are church members today, who profit by the labor of others, and who shirk their part of the work, they do not constitute the church, the bride with whom the Bridegroom,—Christ Jesus,—is well pleased. But the true church is teaching and manifesting the idealism that organizes life in righteousness and justice.

The churchhouse, though its doors are closed six days in the week, is a powerful object lesson in the community. Even people who do not go to church prefer to live in a community that is influenced by the church, and real estate agents, having much land to sell in a community where there was no church, have been known to build one, in order to make the land more salable. Christians are salt and light to the community.

The church building, with its sacred precincts, its hallowed associations, its graveyard and grave-stones, with their epitaphs, combine to stir the soul and open it to God. There is no more powerful force for community improvement and for general social advance than to see to it that the churchhouse is well kept, and that the teachings of righteousness, of social duties, of the Golden Rule, of obedience to God in all things, are continually taught and practiced in the congregation. The regeneration of the world can not be accomplished by proclamation and statute, nor by the preachers alone. It must be accomplished by the united efforts of every follower of Christ, working in the strength of the Holy Spirit.

CLOTHING CONSERVATION CONFERENCE

While we received much inspiration from this great gathering of representative women of the country, and while we found the discussion of all the various subjects profitable, yet the subject of particular interest to us was the Clothing Conference, with its attendant demonstrations and exhibits.

Because of the relation of the work of our Dress Reform Committee to this feature of the program, and the far-reaching value of first-hand information, it was recommended at our St. Joseph, Mo., Committee Meeting, the previous February, that, if possible, two sisters of our Committee attend this Convention. That sounds easy, but the difficulties were many. Finally the way opened for Sister Eva Trostle and myself to go.

Clothing conservation entered into almost every Home Economics number of the program, yet the practical application of the various subjects was brought out most clearly through the discussion in the "special conferences."

The Clothing Conservation Conference was held on Saturday afternoon, May 4. Long before the time for opening, the large "Eastman" auditorium was packed, while the wide corridors were filled with those standing,—a number being unable to gain admittance, although two other interesting conferences were held at the same time.

Miss Pearl MacDonald, Vice-Chairman of the Home Economics Department, presided. The first address, on "The Art of Dress," was given by Mr. M. D. C. Crawford, of New York City, editor of "Women's Wear," and formerly Curator of Textiles. Mr. Crawford spoke from the standpoint of the manufacturer, and discussed the textile industry and the need for women so to adjust their wearing apparel that looms might be freed for war purposes. He spoke emphatically against women copying any feature of the soldier's uniform in their dress.

Madam Alla Ripley, of Chicago, presented "The Ethics of Dress," handling the subject from the dressmaker's view-point, and deploring the fact that there is so much poor dress-making. She urged women, in adopting a standardized dress, to be individual and to let hand-work be a prominent part in that individuality. She called attention to the fact that NOW is the time to bring out "American" clothing. She spoke of the limiting of material by the Government for dresses, coats and suits and urged women, as an economie feature, to buy only the most durable material possible.

Mrs. Belle Armstrong Whitney, of New York, author of an extensive book on women's wear, was unable to attend the Convention because of a Government assignment, but as substitute for her part on the program she sent a long telegram which was read. As proof of its weight with the delegates, a large part of it was embodied in one of the resolutions given below.

Miss Helen Louise Johnson, editor of the "General Federation Magazine," and former chairman of the Clothing Department, spoke on "The Economics of Dress," reviewing the progress toward standardization since the passage of the first dress "Resolution" at the Chicago Biennial, 1914. She insisted that "standardization is a principle and not a uniform," and recounted the advantages to be enjoyed by such standardization. She said: "Women's clothes should be confined to four or five styles, as are men's clothes, instead of several hundred styles as women now have. . . . The woman who will select and wear a sensible standard will be doing the country real service and will help to establish a precedent of what ought even now to be a rule." She explained how the "Biennial Dress" came into being, how it could be made of any material and so adjusted as to suit different figures. She gave three reasons for standardization of clothing:

1. Excessive cost of women's clothes.
2. Seasonal employment produced by changing styles,—a handicap to the industrial world.
3. Ethical,—Dress should bring out the personality,—in short, "should be the frame of the picture, not the picture itself." She here discussed points made by the preceding speakers, emphasizing the fact that they were all working to accomplish the same end, though approaching it from different angles.

At this juncture Miss Johnson, with several other ladies wearing standardized suits, and a number wearing remodeled dresses, demonstrated to the audience from the platform, the economy, common-sense and practicability of such clothing.

The National Wartime Dress Committee, through Mrs. Frank A. Vanderlip, introduced a war-time dress, designed by this Committee, to be made of any material (the model, dark blue serge) and placed on sale in one shop of every large city, the price being moderate and the patterns available for home and dressmakers' use. The purpose of this garment is to conserve materials, the dress to be used by all classes of women as a general expression of democracy.

Following each speaker, opportunity was given for general discussion, and here the tense interest was manifest in the fact that usually a dozen to a score of women were on tiptoe at once, eager for a two-minute speech,—the limit in general discussion. Thus was opportunity given to hear some of the most prominent speakers, most of whom exemplified their claims by their dress. Especially was this true of Mrs. Robert Burdette, whose pointed remarks showed rare personal poise and were a ringing indictment of Madam Fashion.

One speaker had the tact and courage to rap the manifest irony in the term "Clothing Conservation," as contrasted with the display in the "evening sessions," where a number of "society leaders" insisted on "full dress" display, in the face of "Wartime Conservation." At this psychological moment, Mrs. Josiah Evans Cowles, General Chairman of the Convention, a woman of unique executive ability and keenest perception, rose to ask how many women there had denied themselves the "new gown" to attend the Convention. All were gratified by the great number of hands which went up,—significant of the fact that few of those women on "dress parade" were to be found at a "Clothing Conservation Conference."

On the following Monday afternoon a session was given over to an exhibit of the various forms of standardized clothing. One dress was so made as to be capable of four or five changes for as many purposes. Miss Helen Louise Johnson brought over a half-dozen dresses, no two alike, yet all standardized,—in fact, her own complete wardrobe, as worn on all occasions, at the "Biennial" and elsewhere. Though the Conference lasted till late afternoon there was rapt attention throughout, and long after adjournment groups of interested women clustered about in prolonged interviews on the subjects discussed. It was here we had the privilege of meeting Mrs. Robert Burdette, who assured us that the clothing she wore on that occasion had been made two years,—all perfectly plain, including hat and shoes,—no semblance of recent styles, no indecent chest exposure, high heels or ornamentation of any kind.

One woman spoke in the same suit she had worn to the "Biennial" in New York, two years before,—beautifully plain and becoming. Another was wearing the same shoes in which she toured the Central States on a lecture trip the year before.

We noted the individuality and simplicity in the dress of Miss Pearl MacDonald, who presided, as also in Mrs. Jos. C. Gawler, author of "Problems in Dress," one of the booklets in our recommended "book-list." The same appearance characterized these and others, wherever we saw them, throughout the Convention.

Some Lessons Gleaned

We had to think how our "problems in dress" would be affected if those of our people who insist on obliterating every mark of distinction as members of the Church of the Brethren, should ignore changing fashions, eschew jewelry, feathers and flowers, thus reproving all immodest dress by following such a course as these "champions of simple dress," whom we admired as they moved in that vast throng.

For 'tis true they, too, have their problems, as have we; they have opposition to face (in their own ranks) as have we, and it requires the same type of courage to meet the difficulties, for they have those,—many,—who are faithfully serving this form of mammon, bound to their idols, as the heathen to his gods.

But each "Biennial" their number is being reduced. One woman voluntarily pointed out to us the marked improvement through the falling off of dress display since passage of their first "Resolutions" on the subject, four years before. Shall they put US to shame?

Many resolutions are passed each year by this large organization, and the best part about it is, that they set to work at once to CARRY OUT these resolutions. For instance, from the seventeen pages of Resolutions in their "full report," we gleaned a few significant ones:

To both U. S. Senate and House, through Vice-President Marshall and Speaker Clark, the following resolution was promptly sent:

1. The fourteenth biennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, assembled at Hot Springs, Arkansas, representing two and one-half million women of the United States, earnestly requests your honorable body to pass immediately a National Bone-Dry Law as a war measure.

When both food and man power are at such a premium, we believe it folly to indulge in the waste of one and the dissipation of the other. We, the women of the land, pledge our sons, our money, our labor and our all, and we beseech the United States Congress to strike from our land the greatest despoiler of food and the greatest wrecker of man power. (Signed)

And be it further

Resolved: That we urge every woman's club in the United States to cooperate in this drive against alcohol, and to call one meeting between now and July fourth for the purpose of securing the signatures of its members to a telegram to the United States Senate in care of both United States Senators, and to the House of Representatives in care of the local Representative, requesting the immediate passage of a National Bone-Dry Prohibition Law as a war measure.

In the light of the evidence in our first article from the U. S. Senator, concerning results of the "active efforts of this Federation to shape public policies," can you guess the secret of the final action for Bone-Dry War Prohibition, as having anything to do with the "miles of petitions," in accordance with the above resolutions?

Think of the enthusiasm aroused in this great gathering, on the passage of a resolution containing this sweeping section:

Resolved: That we, the delegates to the biennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, assembled to consider in what ways we can best serve our country and our allies, do voluntarily pledge ourselves to consume no wheat nor wheat products until the next harvest, or about September first.

In the light of the great "Forward Movement," what could we, as a people pledge, in order that "we can best serve our church, our country and our God"?

Clothing Resolutions

6. Whereas, clothing has become an economic question in the United States today and is an important factor in every woman's personal and financial problems; be it

Resolved: That the General Federation of Women's Clubs, in the Fourteenth Biennial Convention assembled, go on record as standing behind every effort to make clothing artistically better in line and color, more simple and practical, economical, sober, and sane, by giving up foolish, fleeting fashions; by purchasing only that which is suitable for wear at the time and place and according to the work to be performed; by buying as far as possible only the best fabrics the government can allow for civilian use; and furthermore, be it

Resolved: That we endorse the compulsory use of the label, "Made in the United States of America," for all American fabrics and clothing.

We also recommend that a requirement be established whereby manufactured products from every foreign country shall be properly labeled as such, in order to protect the creative genius in foreign countries as well as to do justice to American manufacturers.

Resolution 10 endorsed the wearing of a "black sleeve-band with gray star," for those who are bereaved of relatives in national service, "to conserve materials," and "instead of the conventional mourning costume," which is useless and "tends to depress the spirit," etc.

What about THESE resolutions? Please allow me to call your attention to one of the many State Federatiou reports in the last (February) issue of the "Federation Magazine," as to "carrying out":

At the State Federation Convention of Florida in November it was suggested by Mrs. Edgar Lewis, the President, that all club women attend the meeting "simply gowned." A letter from a correspondent reads: "And they did—and the simple dressing helped a great deal, for all were alike and no time was wasted dressing up, and, best thing of all, there WAS NO TALK ABOUT IT. The last Federation meeting in Florida was one of the best managed, most dignified and up-to-date gatherings ever held, over two hundred women doing their bit splendidly and in order. I am very proud of our women and our president."

And the "Magazine" knows that the correspondent is one Florida has reason to be proud of. But we want to add, the "simple dressing" helped,—it surely did!—Editor "General Federation Magazine."

Did we feel at home? Perfectly. On every hand we were treated with the utmost courtesy and respect. In fact, the "conservation" theme of the whole convention was right in line with the "simple life" principles for which our church has always stood.

proached many times and have been urged to support certain activities and ideals which you could not quite see your way clear to support. Your excuse may have been just a little hazy to yourself, at times, and extremely unsatisfactory to those who approached you, but you quieted your own heart by assuring yourself that your time would come later on in the program, when you could and would respond liberally and willingly. Honest, now, isn't that the way you eased your conscience as to this matter? Well, the war is practically over, peace is at our door and you may be settling down to the regular routine of life again, but if you are, you need to do some thinking and some praying.

You must confess that our sister denominations and the world at large have played their part nobly, as they saw the situation in the recent struggle. Every possible sacrifice has been made, and nothing was left undone which would contribute to the success of the cause which meant so much to them and to us as well, but just now the eyes of many thinking people are turned upon the Church of the Brethren, and they are asking, with deep seriousness, where we, as a church, fit in. Most of us believe that the teachings of our church involve the highest possible standards of Christian living, and we further believe that our church is facing the greatest opportunity today that she has ever faced, but do we further realize that our future influence, as well as our future progress, depends on how we answer the question which is today facing us: "Where does the Church of the Brethren fit in when it comes to the tragic struggle of the present century?"

Last night, as I listened to the whispering wind, I saw a picture which has been before my eyes often, recently. I can not dismiss it and I pray that it may become a burden upon the heart of every member of the Church of the Brethren. I saw the Belgians, the French, the Armenians, and many other nations on their knees, in the dust of humility and suffering. I looked into the pitiful, pleading eyes of thousands of orphan children. I saw the sad tear-stained faces of thousands of grief-stricken mothers, and still other thousands of old men and homeless cripples. I saw them without food, without clothing, without shelter,—sick, distressed and starving,—and yet with hope in their eyes as they looked into mine, for they were eagerly stretching their trembling hands toward America, and I heard them say: "America will surely help us, for the Americans are a Christian people."

My brother, have you heard their cry and do you realize that here is the opportune place for our beloved church to fit in? It is splendid to have high ideals and a great inspiration. It is fine to belong to a church that believes in a full acceptance of the teachings of Jesus Christ, but I am wondering if our belief is going to stand the test just now. Is it a living belief, a giving belief, or is it only an empty formalism? The Master had no patience with that class of folks who are always saying: "Be ye filled," but who go on increasing their bank accounts or adding acres to their farms, while the poor starve. He smiles on those who believe in him enough to furnish the "filling" as an evidence of their belief, and as I see the situation, our doctrines will be of little consequence to us, or of little interest to others, unless we, as a church, are willing to make the "supreme sacrifice" and go "over the top" in our response to this plea for help, which is so urgent and so worthy of attention. If we fail to respond, and to respond until it hurts, what are we going to say to the world just now, to our children during the next few years, and to God when we stand in his presence to render an account for our stewardship?

Our Mission Board, in the "Forward Movement," has made an urgent appeal that $250,000 be given to missions. We can readily give the amount asked for, by sacrifice and prayer. I know of at least one church which has given over five dollars to each one of its members, though many of them are in limited circumstances. Some of these brethren decided on a certain amount, but after prayerful thought they have changed the amount two, three, and even four times that figure. That is suggestive of what most of our members would do if the gift were preceded by prayer. You may have given what change was handy, or you may have given all that you thought you could give, but if you didn't give until it actually hurt, won't you please listen to the whispering wind again, tonight, and then, after a season of earnest prayer, won't you just go down into your pocket and give again? Our gifts, just now, will not only relieve the suffering, but they will materially assist in the advancement of the Kingdom of God.

Strangers and Pilgrims

BY D. E. CRIPE

THE child of God is not really at home in this land of sin and sorrow and death. He is a stranger and a pilgrim, seeking a better home, a city which has foundations, which endures, whose Builder and Maker is God. For this reason Abraham was content to dwell in tents all the years of his sojourn in the land which had been promised to him and his children, and never owned any of it except a field and a cave which he had purchased, in which to bury his dead. For this reason the early Christians sold all their possessions and gave the proceeds for the general good.

In this our day we are so apt to overlook the fact that we are strangers and pilgrims,—that we need but little of the things of earth in our journey heavenward, and that the abundance of the things of this world may only hinder us in that onward and upward march. We want to enjoy all the conveniences and luxuries,—if not the pleasures,—of this life, and feel abused if circumstances compel us to deny ourselves of any of the good things which our neighbors enjoy. We fail to grasp the fulness of the command: "If ye have food and raiment, be therewith content."

If we are citizens of that Heavenly Kingdom, whose law is the Gospel, whose King is Christ, we needs must be strangers and pilgrims in earthly kingdoms or nations, and can only enjoy such privileges and blessings as do not infringe upon our duty in that higher spiritual Kingdom. But as our bodies are in an earthly nation, we must be subject to every rule and regulation of the "higher powers" who, under God, govern the temporal kingdom in such matters as doing them reverence, obeying the laws, and paying tribute to whom tribute is due. It is our duty, as spiritual citizens of that spiritual Kingdom, to be subject to everything which these "higher powers" demand, so long as they do not command anything which is absolutely forbidden by our King.

Though we be strangers and pilgrims, while we are in the flesh, we can not avoid living in an earthly kingdom or nation, and therefore we have duties which can not be evaded. One of these is paying tribute or taxes. Even Jesus, through Peter, paid tribute, "lest we should offend them," and he never asked what use would be made of the money. Paul says we should pay tribute, not only for wrath but for conscience's sake. Very likely this tribute was turned into the treasury to support the Roman army, but Paul did not question this. After the Christian has paid his tribute, he has done his duty, and he is not responsible for the use that the Government makes of it.

Our Government permits Christian strangers and pilgrims to cast their vote in electing the men who are to rule over them, and also allows them to fill such earthly offices if they can be elected to them. But one whose citizenship is in heaven makes a sad spectacle when he labors to obtain an earthly office. He is not likely to advance in his pilgrimage while electioneering or ruling over men who are not fellow-pilgrims with him.

The example of Paul gives us clear light as to how far we may go in seeking the protection of the laws of our land in time of trouble and danger. He was a Roman citizen, which, in the time of the apostles, gave great power and protection. When he, with Silas, was brought before the magistrates at Philippi, and condemned to be beaten, he suffered without claiming immunity as a Roman citizen, perhaps because Silas was not a Roman citizen. The next day, when the magistrates sent word to let them go, he returned the reply: "They have beaten us uncondemned, being Romans; now let them come themselves and fetch us out." When Paul had been rescued from the Jerusalem mob, and when the Roman officer was going to examine him by scourging, Paul asked the question: "Is it lawful to scourge a Roman citizen, and uncondemned?" This protected him from the punishment. At Cesarea Festus asked Paul if he were willing to go to Jerusalem and there be tried. Paul knew there was a mob at Jerusalem ready to kill him, so he said he would appeal to Cæsar. He knew that the Roman law gave him this privilege, and Festus was compelled to grant his wish. In this way he saved his life and was enabled to preach the Gospel at Rome.

If it was right for Paul to place himself under the protection of the law of heathen Rome, it is right that we should be protected by the provisions of the law of our land, which are intended to safeguard the rights of all its citizens.

Stepping Heavenward in Prayer

John 16: 24

For Week Beginning March 9, 1919

1. Introductory.—(1) God provides an inexhaustible reservoir of life's best blessings. (2) He is waiting eagerly to bestow them upon us. (3) God's choicest gifts are given freely, in response to the prayer of faith. (4) The ever blessed promise: "Ask and ye shall receive."

2. "Take Time to Be Holy."—It will be generally admitted that holiness implies close communion with the Father, and such a blessed state can not be thought of without prayer. To say that a man is "religious," is to take it for granted that he prays. For what is prayer? It is to connect every thought of ours with the thoughts that God has. We must look on everything as God's work, and upon every happening as God's appointment. We must submit every thought, wish and resolve to him. We must so feel his presence that it shall direct us in all the affairs of life. That is prayer! Whatever we have been enabled, by God's grace, to attain to in this life, we have accomplished through prayer. If we have resisted temptations, if we have succeeded in gaining the mastery over ourselves, or if we have aspirations and desires far beyond the common, we should not hesitate to ascribe all these to prayer.

3. Prayer as a Character Builder.—Prayer counts, even when it is only the occasional impulse of the heart, but when prayer becomes the habitual attitude of the soul, then the real glory comes in, and the possibilities of life begin to open as they have never opened before. It is not a question of what a man is called upon to do, or what he is called upon to say,—in the secret moments of his life he is forging and fixing that strength of character that is to stand him in such good stead when the time of trial and testing comes,—as it will come to each and every one of us.

4. Prayer as a Refreshing.—Very significantly our Blessed Master declared: "Men ought always to pray and not to faint." That is a very profound statement. It is evident, according to his conception of life, that if men pray, they will not faint, and conversely, if men do not pray, then they will faint. We can readily see that Jesus had a profound consciousness of the pressure and strain of life.

5. Patience in Prayer.—Even the best of us have need of profound patience in prayer, for God does not always give a speedy answer to the petitions of his children. That ardent believer in persistent prayer, George Müller, of the English orphanages, tells of continuing in prayer ten, twelve and even twenty years for specific blessings that eventually came. Well might the Psalmist say: "I waited patiently for the Lord, and he inclined unto me and heard my cry."

6. Daniel's Blessed Example.—Daniel was a very busy official of the Babylonian realm, but he found leisure to pray three times daily. Some one has suggested that he must have been a very efficient business man, to find so much time for prayer, but it is nearer right to say that his abundant time for prayer made him diligent and successful in business.

7. Suggestive References.—Absolute assurance (John 16: 23-28). Abundant blessings to the upright (Psa. 84: 11). "Whatsoever ye shall ask" (John 14: 13, 14). "Ask," "knock," "seek" (Matt. 7: 7). Promise to the two or three (Matt. 18: 19, 20). "All things, whatsoever" (Matt. 21: 22). The help of the Spirit (Rom. 8: 26). Come boldly (Heb. 4: 16). "In full assurance of faith" (Heb. 10: 22, 23). "If you lack wisdom, ask of God" (James 1: 5-7).

proached many times and have been urged to support certain activities and ideals which you could not quite see your way clear to support. Your excuse may have been just a little hazy to yourself, at times, and extremely unsatisfactory to those who approached you, but you quieted your own heart by assuring yourself that your time would come later on in the program, when you could and would respond liberally and willingly. Honest, now, isn't that the way you eased your conscience as to this matter? Well, the war is practically over, peace is at our door and you may be settling down to the regular routine of life again, but if you are, you need to do some thinking and some praying.

You must confess that our sister denominations and the world at large have played their part nobly, as they saw the situation in the recent struggle. Every possible sacrifice has been made, and nothing was left undone which would contribute to the success of the cause which meant so much to them and to us as well, but just now the eyes of many thinking people are turned upon the Church of the Brethren, and they are asking, with deep seriousness, where we, as a church, fit in. Most of us believe that the teachings of our church involve the highest possible standards of Christian living, and we further believe that our church is facing the greatest opportunity today that she has ever faced, but do we further realize that our future influence, as well as our future progress, depends on how we answer the question which is today facing us: "Where does the Church of the Brethren fit in when it comes to the tragic struggle of the present century?"

Last night, as I listened to the whispering wind, I saw a picture which has been before my eyes often, recently. I can not dismiss it and I pray that it may become a burden upon the heart of every member of the Church of the Brethren. I saw the Belgians, the French, the Armenians, and many other nations on their knees, in the dust of humility and suffering. I looked into the pitiful, pleading eyes of thousands of orphan children. I saw the sad tear-stained faces of thousands of grief-stricken mothers, and still other thousands of old men and homeless cripples. I saw them without food, without clothing, without shelter,—sick, distressed and starving,—and yet with hope in their eyes as they looked into mine, for they were eagerly stretching their trembling hands toward America, and I heard them say: "America will surely help us, for the Americans are a Christian people."

My brother, have you heard their cry and do you realize that here is the opportune place for our beloved church to fit in? It is splendid to have high ideals and a great inspiration. It is fine to belong to a church that believes in a full acceptance of the teachings of Jesus Christ, but I am wondering if our belief is going to stand the test just now. Is it a living belief, a giving belief, or is it only an empty formalism? The Master had no patience with that class of folks who are always saying: "Be ye filled," but who go on increasing their bank accounts or adding acres to their farms, while the poor starve. He smiles on those who believe in him enough to furnish the "filling" as an evidence of their belief, and as I see the situation, our doctrines will be of little consequence to us, or of little interest to others, unless we, as a church, are willing to make the "supreme sacrifice" and go "over the top" in our response to this plea for help, which is so urgent and so worthy of attention. If we fail to respond, and to respond until it hurts, what are we going to say to the world just now, to our children during the next few years, and to God when we stand in his presence to render an account for our stewardship?

Our Mission Board, in the "Forward Movement," has made an urgent appeal that $250,000 be given to missions. We can readily give the amount asked for, by sacrifice and prayer. I know of at least one church which has given over five dollars to each one of its members, though many of them are in limited circumstances. Some of these brethren decided on a certain given what change was handy, or you may have given all that you thought you could give, but if you didn't give until it actually hurt, won't you please listen to the whispering wind again, tonight, and then, after a season of earnest prayer, won't you just go down into your pocket and give again? Our gifts, just now, will not only relieve the suffering, but they will materially assist in the advancement of the Kingdom of God.

Strangers and Pilgrims

BY D. E. CRIPE

THE child of God is not really at home in this land of sin and sorrow and death. He is a stranger and a pilgrim, seeking a better home, a city which has foundations, which endures, whose Builder and Maker is God. For this reason Abraham was content to dwell in tents all the years of his sojourn in the land which had been promised to him and his children, and never owned any of it except a field and a cave which he had purchased, in which to bury his dead. For this reason the early Christians sold all their possessions and gave the proceeds for the general good.

In this our day we are so apt to overlook the fact that we are strangers and pilgrims,—that we need but little of the things of earth in our journey heavenward, and that the abundance of the things of this world may only hinder us in that onward and upward march. Though we be strangers and pilgrims, while we are in the flesh, we can not avoid living in an earthly kingdom or nation, and therefore we have duties which can not be evaded. One of these is paying tribute or taxes. Even Jesus, through Peter, paid tribute, "lest we should offend them," and he never asked what use would be made of the money. CALENDAR FOR SUNDAY, MARCH 2

Sunday-school Lesson, The Report of the Spies.—Num. 13: 1 to 14: 38.

Christian Workers' Meeting, "The Gospel According to You"—Matt. 4: 23; Rom. 1: 16.

MEETINGS IN PROGRESS

Bro. P. E. Robertson, of Lindsay, Cal., in the Reedley church, same State.

Bro. M. J. Brougher, of Greensburg, Pa., in the Bethany church, Philadelphia.

GAINS FOR THE KINGDOM

One was recently baptized in the Meyersdale church, Pa.

Two were recently baptized in the Pasadena church, Cal.

One was recently reinstated in the Nettle Creek church, Ind.

One has been baptized at Akron, Ohio, since the last report.

Two have been baptized since the last report in the Conway Springs church, Kans.

Six were baptized at New Windsor, Md., during the Blue Ridge College Bible Institute.

Seven were added to the Independence church, Kans.,—Bro. W. H. Miller, home minister, evangelist.

Four confessed Christ at Windber, Pa.,—Bro. H. S. Replogle, home minister, conducting the meetings.

Five confessed Christ in the church at Cincinnati, Ohio,—Bro. R. N. Leatherman, home minister, evangelist.

Two were baptized in the Grand Rapids church, Mich.,—Bro. C. L. Wilkins, elder of the congregation, evangelist.

Two more, making eight in all, have recently been baptized in the Hade house, Falling Springs congregation, Pa.

One has been restored in the Circleville church, Ohio, since the last report; one was received by baptism during a series of meetings, conducted by the pastor, Bro. Oliver Royer.

Twenty-eight stood for Christ, nine were received by baptism, two were reclaimed, thirteen asked the privilege of going to other denominations, four await baptism, in the Wade Chapel church, W. Va.,—Brethren J. B. Shaffer and J. E. Shepler, evangelists.

CONTEMPLATED MEETINGS

Bro. Wm. Lampin, of Polo, Ill., to begin March 2, in the Waterloo City church, Iowa.

Bro. O. H. Feiler, of Hutchinson, Kans., to begin March 2 at Conway Springs, same State.

Bro. D. L. Miller, of Pasadena, Cal., to commence March 2 in the Covina church, same State.

Bro. H. B. Heisey, of Rummel, Pa., to begin March 24 in the Greensburg church, same State.

Bro. H. C. Early, of Penn Laird, Va., to begin May 4 in the Peter's Creek house, same State.

Bro. Reuben Shroyer, of North Canton, Ohio, to begin some time in May in the Plevna church, Ind.

Bro. S. E. Thompson, of Garden City, Kans., to begin April 6 in the Larned City church, same State.

Bro. Wm. L. Hatcher, of the Rossville church, Ind., to begin March 2, at the Kokomo church, same State.

PERSONAL MENTION

Word has just reached us from Bro. S. H. Garst, of Blountville, Tenn., announcing the death of Eld. Noah B. Sherfy, of that place, which occurred Feb. 10, as a result of a complication of diseases. An account of Bro. Sherfy's life and labors is to be given later.

Bro. Reuben Shroyer, of North Canton, Ohio, informs us that December of 1919, and January and February of the year following, are still available to churches that may desire his services in a series of meetings. The early fall months of this year have all been taken up.

Brother and Sister Ralph G. Rarick expect to close their pastoral labors with the Second Church of South Bend, Ind., April 1, that they may give their time exclusively to the evangelistic field. Following the Winona Lake Conference, they will spend some time in Virginia and the East. Their correspondents will continue to address them, omitting street number, at South Bend, Ind.

Only three words were in the cablegram received by the Secretary of the General Mission Board last Sunday, Feb. 23, "Ronald dead pneumonia," but they tell the sad story of the sorrow which has come to Brother and Sister Samuel Bowman, our China missionaries, now engaged in language studies at Peking. Ronald was a little more than a year and a half old. His twin brother had passed on before him, after only a few months of life, in the homeland. Let all our hearts go out in prayerful sympathy to the stricken parents.

Bro. J. C. Garber, of Mt. Sidney, Va., having accepted the pastorate of the Staunton church, same State, should be addressed accordingly.

From a recent communication we learn that Bro. D. L. Miller and wife are contemplating an early return, this season, to their summer quarters. Bro. Miller is scheduled for a series of meetings at Covina, Cal., to begin March 2, and after that they expect to turn their faces eastward.

ELSEWHERE IN THIS ISSUE

Members of Northwestern Ohio will please note Bro. J. L. Guthrie's announcement concerning the District Conference and Missionary Meeting, to be held in the Pleasant View church March 19 and 20.

The District Meeting and other gatherings of Northeastern Kansas, postponed from last October, are now announced to be held in the Ozawkie church April 6-8. See further particulars among the Notes.

On page 140 Bro. P. S. Miller, General Railway Transportation Agent, makes a statement concerning the rates of fare to our next Annual Conference. According to his report, reduced fares for the membership in general are out of the question, though our ministers may secure the benefit of a half-fare rate upon presentation of a clergyman's certificate.

The District Conference and associated gatherings of the Southern District of Virginia, originally announced for last November, and later on postponed indefinitely, are now scheduled to be held April 16-18 in the Smith's River church, Patrick County. See Bro. D. A. Naff's announcement among the Notes. Programs of the various gatherings will be given in our next issue.

Bro. W. R. Miller, of Onekama, Mich., well known to our people through his lectures on Bible Lands, has just completed a three weeks' series with several of the churches in Northeastern Ohio, in which an unusual degree of interest was aroused. Bro. Miller has had recently a number of inquiries about a possible trip to Palestine the coming fall, and has, in fact, tentatively arranged for such a trip, to begin about Sept. 1. Others of our readers, who may be considering this subject, will be especially interested in his announcement, which appears on page 140 of this issue.

MISCELLANEOUS

A number of Aid Society reports, omitted from this issue on account of a lack of space, will appear next week.

The Marilla church, formerly a part of the Harlan congregation, Mich., is the latest addition to the churches of the Wolverine State.

"In one school half the children died. In one village 46% of the people died," says Bro. J. M. Blough, of Ahwa, India, under date of Dec. 30, 1918, referring to the influenza epidemic. And then he adds: "How helpless the people are!"

"The Religion of Unspottedness," "The Church Force of Tomorrow," "The Simple Life in Dress," "The Believer's Right to Be Well Born," "The High Cost of Low Living," and "Where Do We Go from Here?" are a few suggestive sermon subjects, used recently by one of our evangelists.

We understand that a number of our rural congregations are looking for pastors. If there is one such, in which the facilities offered the pastor would include the use of a few acres of ground, that congregation might learn of a minister open to such an arrangement by communicating with the office of the Secretary of the General Mission Board.

"There is much unused talent that needs to be aroused by the touch of the Spirit." Isn't that true almost everywhere? The words are taken from the pastor's message in the directory of the Norristown church, Pa., for 1918. But there seems to be already some evidence of the "touch of the Spirit" in a congregation of eighty-four members, which contributes over $2,500 in a year to the various activities of the church.

A BYSTANDER'S NOTES

The Way to Victory and Rest.—Allegorically speaking, the Christian has practically to deal with three lands: In the flesh life, with Egypt; in the spiritual life, ideally, with Canaan; but experimentally, and all too habitually, with the Wilderness. Cross over at once and occupy the land of promise; you will be sure to find victory and rest.

Making the Most out of Our Rest Periods.—Some kinds of rest are really selfish and wholly indolent. Have you ever tried to improve your rest period by reading something really worth while? That is neither selfish nor indolent, and the very best of all rest. What pleasure can equal it? And out of it, what profit comes for the reader and, eventually, from him!

Good Advice.—A minister, who does a great deal of solid thinking, offers the following suggestion to those who are entering upon ministerial duties in an untried locality: "My son, when thou goest to a new field, let thine ears be open and thy mouth shut. Beware of him that knocketh the last prophet, for, behold, he that spareth not thy brother, shall he spare thee?"

The Most Aggressive Religion.—Of India's 315,000,000 people, 66,000,000 are Mohammedans. It may truly be said that Mohammedanism is the really aggressive religion of India, and that it has increased its membership nine per cent in a decade, while the general population has increased only two per cent. Many more native Indians are becoming Mohammedans every year than are turning to Christianity, but this factor is not really as discouraging as it would seem at first sight, for proportionately Christianity is leading in growth, having increased twenty-five per cent in ten years.

ACCESSIONS FOR 1918

Bro. Jacob Missimer, of Lancaster, Pa., sends us the following statement of additions to our church membership during the year 1918, as obtained from a careful study of the weekly reports given in the "Gospel Messenger." Special pains were taken to avoid all duplicates, so that the figures given are certainly somewhat below the number actually received, owing to the fact that here and there additions fail of mention by our correspondents. The falling off from the figures for the preceding year is to be deeply regretted. Yet it was not unexpected, in view of the conditions which so greatly interfered with our usual church activities. But isn't it possible to extract some real encouragement from the situation, after all? The result shows how much depends upon the active agencies of church evangelism. It gives us splendid grounds for confidence that if we do our part, God will be able to bless our efforts to the extent of 15,000 annual additions to the church,—the goal proposed in our Forward Movement program.

THE NATURE OF THE TASK

The following, from Bro. A. J. Culler, just received, gives further information concerning our Armenian Relief and Reconstruction work:

In making the call for $250,000 for Relief Work among the Armenians and Syrians, the Church of the Brethren is making the greatest appeal for suffering humanity in her history. Now the opportunity is ours to show, in the lands made luminous by the footprints of Christ and the apostles, what Christianity means today. There are many and mingled races in the Near East, with a Babel of languages, but, as on the day of Pentecost, they will all understand the meaning of the Gospel which comes with healing and rescue from famine and suffering.

The task is many-sided. It is not merely the doling out of charity. It is the farthest from that. It means, in a word, the rebuilding and reëstablishing of a people, or many peoples, who, driven from their homes, and all that goes to make up life, must be taken back and set to living again.

First, there is the elemental need of food. Nearly three million people must be fed for some months, and some for a longer time. At present food is sent from America by the shipload, and distributed, thus going many times farther than food bought at the exorbitant prices obtaining in Turkey and eastern countries. This is done at a minimum of expense.

The refugees must be taken back to their homes. Over a million of them are away from their homes, some of them a thousand miles and even more. Food must be taken to them before they can go home, for much of the distance they will have to walk.

Clothing must be furnished for nearly three millions. This includes over four hundred thousand orphans. In many cases bedding must also be furnished. The women are anxious to do something in order to get their minds off their sad plight and so the plan is to send the goods and have them made into garments over there. The workers who are sent from America are to oversee and direct the native workers.

The land must be cultivated and put into crops. Nothing can be wiser than putting the land back into cultivation as soon as possible. The people want us to help them to help themselves. The Committee is already sending over farm tractors, implements, cattle, sheep, motor trucks, etc., to stock up the country and get it into crops as early as possible. Over a thousand farm tractors and thousands of implements have already been sent for the spring sowing.

The orphans must be provided for. It is planned to build at least twenty orphanages this summer. These will be made permanent, and will always be used for hospital or missionary work of some kind.

The plan is not to keep on simply feeding these people but to place them back in their homes, make their land to smile again, and to furnish the fruits of the earth, reëstablish the institutions which make life worth living, educate their people and plant Christianity in the lands in which first it was preached. It is an opportunity to build deep and well and to make the present count for the future.

Compulsory Military Training to Wait

It is decidedly encouraging to note that a number of the leading journals of our country have not been swept away by the clamor for compulsory military training, but are doing their share in arousing sober reflection along right lines. Recent reports from Washington indicate that the question is to be deferred until the convening of the new Congress, at which time it will be taken up in connection with the consideration of a permanent military policy. More and more is the conviction gaining ground that such a policy can not well be determined upon, until the full scope of the League of Nations and the reduction of military armaments have been definitely settled.

He Refused a $20,000 Raise

It has been one of the reform measures, advocated by "Capper's Weekly," Topeka, Kans., that no public official should receive a salary exceeding $10,000,—that sum being considered ample to meet the requirements of any real patriot. The recommendation has received endorsement, recently, from an unexpected quarter. The first official act of William D. Van Dyke, newly-elected president of the Northwestern Life Insurance Company, was to reject a $20,000 increase in pay. As president he is entitled to draw $50,000 a year, but he chose to retain the smaller salary he had been receiving as vice-president. Such a decision is so uncommon as to be well worthy of mention.

The Sacrifice of $14,000,000

It is a matter well worthy of praise that the Chinese President, Hsü Shih-ch'ang, has decided to burn the entire stock of opium, acquired by influential Chinese for the purpose of reopening the traffic in China. The loss of the $14,000,000 stock is no trifle, but when you add to it the loss of vast sums by way of revenue, at a time when the country is in sore financial straits, it is a matter of some significance. This action, on the part of China, demonstrates a quality of strength in her people that we can hardly appreciate at its full value. The eradication of a century-old vice was not brought about through the issuing of edicts by the Government alone, but even more so by the immense pressure of public opinion,—a force imbued with the simple and definite instinct of right.

"Holding the Ropes"

In a recent editorial item the "Herald of Gospel Liberty" explains the origin of the well-known phrase, alluded to in our heading, and its particular reference to the work of missions. Apparently it dates back to the days of Andrew Fuller, in 1793. After listening to the stirring words of John Thomas, who had been pleading for India, he passionately exclaimed: "I see there is a gold mine in India, but it seems almost as deep as the center of the earth. Who will venture to go and explore it?" "I will go down," responded William Carey, "but remember that you must hold the ropes." How very significant that all we, here at home, are the rope-holders! Our missionaries have gone down into the depths. We must not forget that their safety and efficiency depend upon our care.

Back Pay Given to Reconstruction Work

When the 113 "conscientious objectors" in the Military Prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., were to be discharged, they were given their choice between remaining in prison or accepting the back pay that had accumulated during their protracted confinement in prison. Seemingly there was no alternative in the matter, and so, out of a total of 115, all but two signed the pay-roll receipt that gave them their freedom. None of these men, however, appropriated the funds, thus received, for his own use. In every case the funds were turned over to Reconstruction Work. The Friends' Service Committee received over $4,000 by contributions of this sort, and we understand that Mennonites and others have been equally solicitous about devoting the funds at their command to the humanitarian work of redeeming the battle area of France.

A Church That Did Not Fail

It is generally supposed that a sudden influx of unexpected wealth may easily prove disastrous to the average individual, and that a congregation is just as apt to lose sight of its highest interests, under like circumstances. Illustrative of the possibility of a larger vision, the remarkable experience of the Baptist Church at Ranger, Texas, is of peculiar interest. Until recently the town of Ranger was an insignificant hamlet, and the little Baptist church had only twenty-nine members enrolled. Then the oil boom struck the neighborhood, and prospectors persuaded the congregation to let them sink a well on a part of the church grounds. The drill went down and down, and ere long struck what is technically known as a "gusher." enjoy the proceeds thereof at their leisure. But not so the believers at Ranger, who obviously are people of principle. They have decided that all this money must be dedicated to the Lord's work. Baptist schools and orphanages of Texas have already received $100,000, and the rest will be devoted to an equally good purpose. Be it remembered, however, that these members are far from mercenary, for when the oil men proposed to buy the graveyard for $1,000,000, the offer was sternly refused.

To Make Gossip a Prison Offense

In recognition of the fact that malicious gossip is productive of untold harm, a bill has been introduced in the Oklahoma Legislature, according to which the circulation of detrimental and unfounded rumors is to be made a felony. Persons convicted of a pernicious tendency along that line, are to be subjected to heavy penalties. One of the Oklahoma journals fittingly observes: "We have laws to protect us from thieves and bodily assassins, but the tongue of gossip is permitted to assassinate human character, and why should it go unpunished?" Well may we heed the Bible precept: "Set a watch over thy mouth, and keep the door of thy lips, for a talebearer is worse than a thief."

Resettling of Palestine

Concerning the possibility of the taking over of Palestine by the Jewish people in the near future, under the trusteeship of Great Britain, various suggestions have been offered by those especially concerned. To begin with, there must be plans by which the expected immigration may be received, cared for, and properly distributed over the land. Bernard A. Rosenblatt, of New York, honorary secretary of the Zionist organization, calls attention to the fact that "Palestine today contains but 100,000 Jewish inhabitants. Before the Jewish commonwealth can take its place among the nations of the world, it is necessary that a much larger Jewish population should concentrate in the old land of Israel. It will require careful and judicious management to safeguard the welfare of the new nation."

Wasted Sunday-school Literature

There is a general complaint, of late, among Sunday-school workers in general, that in practically all Sunday-schools much of the literature is absolutely wasted. Leaflets, quarterlies and papers are found on the floors, in a shapeless mass, or mutilated beyond any possible use. Such an unfortunate state of affairs is characteristic of many schools, to the sincere regret of the workers. Then, too, many of the Sunday-school papers, when taken home, are often scarcely looked at. Unless some method can be devised, by which disinterested pupils can be induced to read the literature provided for them, the distribution of such supplies is simply useless. Sometimes a hint, by teacher or superintendent, as to some things to be found in the papers or lesson helps, might arouse general interest.

The Cigarette Again

Perhaps it is not a very popular venture, these days, to condemn the cigarette, considering the fact that so many who are high in authority have given it their unqualified endorsement. A few outstanding facts, however, are worthy of serious thought. We are assured upon very good authority that a number of Y. M. C. A. workers, as well as several army chaplains, have become addicted to the cigarette habit, their plea being that it "got them closer into the affections of the boys in camp." They argue that indulgence in cigarette smoking, in company with the soldier boys, will produce a spirit of fellowship that is sure to win their good will. No idea could be more fallacious. The condoning of a practice, so generally condemned by all right-thinking people, can not possibly be productive of good results in the end.

Need of International Confidence and Coöperation

Industrial conditions in Europe are not improving as rapidly as was hoped for, and competent judges of the situation assure us that it is due to a general uncertainty. The victorious nations, instead of framing the actual terms of peace, are still endeavoring to adjust the terms of the armistice, making these, progressively, more severe. Under the circumstances, they can not deal with the problems of productive industry in the spirit that is absolutely necessary to advance the work of reconstruction. Industrial centers in the war regions of France and Belgium were virtually destroyed by the invaders, and the same thing is true of Poland. The industries of the Central Powers might operate, if supplied with raw materials by the allied nations. Right there, however, enters the disquieting factor, on the part of France, that Germany might thus monopolize the world markets, to the detriment of western Europe. And yet Germany,—it is conceded,—must not be deprived of all opportunity of producing revenue, otherwise it can not pay the heavy indemnities to be exacted, nor can it escape bolshevism. love casteth out fear, then will they be the better qualified to assist their children in attaining like graces.

In addition to this spiritual qualification, which every parent and teacher should possess, in dealing with fear, the mental and physical need careful direction.

The physical condition of the child, in its various functions of health and disease, needs to be thoroughly understood. This is especially true of one who is cowardly because of nervousness. A nervous and emaciated child is more susceptible to the depressing emotion of fear than one which is strong and robust. When one is tired physically, or depleted in mental energy, there is less bravery and courage. When we realize this fact, we may help the child in laying a strong hold on life, and thereby tend to dispel fear, which militates against its highest interest. The general shaping of the life, physically and mentally, in the direction of strength, helps to get rid of fear, which is rooted in pain.

There are, however, some useful phases of fear that need to be stimulated, such as fear of fire, dread of water to prevent drowning, fear of contracting contagious diseases, etc., which had better be termed caution than fear.

Physicians say that faith and its attributes represent the normal, healthy life, while fear stands for the opposite, abnormal and unhealthy state. When fear thoughts control the mind, the brain is abnormal, and the nervous system seems to be more or less demoralized. Every bodily function is capable of being perverted and distorted by fear. This tends toward physical disease and mental despair. We see, therefore, how aptly fear may be called a mental blight, a moral mildew and an intellectual poison.

The fear-life of the child in the home should be carefully and wisely guarded. Avoid causes of depression, worry or fright. Especially avoid threats of the "boogy man," the "bad man" and all the "boo dark" stuff that frightens the young mind. These impressions of fear sometimes continue throughout a lifetime. No doubt you can recall instances in your own childhood when you were overcome by instinctive fears. At no time did you need the destructive agency of a fear threat, but rather the constructive uplifting of faith, trust, confidence and love.

Another morbid fear to be noted is the child's fear of nagging, of threats, of scolding and of punishment and how it leads to deception and falsehood. Fear of the parent is not the true motive of obedience. There is needed a keen sense of respect for what is right. Some one has said: "There can be no healthful growth of the will under the restraints of fear. A child which lives in fear of punishment has half his faculties absorbed by that fear, and becomes incapable of governing himself."

This fear of the parent may lead to fear of God. Is your child afraid of God? A child refused to say her prayers unless some one was with her, saying she was afraid to be alone with God. Some of us may have grown up with this same fear and it may be difficult, always, to show the love side of God to our children. Help them to realize that the love of the parent is a foreshadowing of the love of God. Teach them the truth of 1 John 4: 18: "There is no fear in love: but perfect love casteth out fear, because fear hath punishment; and he that feareth is not made perfect in love." God's loving care, in removing fear, was felt by the child when he said: "I am not afraid because God is here and he is taking care of me all the time."

Children are more apt to see the Divine than we, and our part,—that of divine coworkers,—is to help them to keep this vision. They come into this world innocent and pure, and when they continue to grow in faith, love and trust, their fears will be largely overcome. How may we help children to love God without fear? How may we keep them in touch with his goodness? How may we hold their confidence and sympathy? One who believes in a normal Christian development has said: "Children need a quiet hour when, apart from any adult suggestion, they may open wide the windows of their souls to the Divine Light."

In the New Testament there are three hundred and thirty-two references on faith and trust and but sixty-eight on fear. Of these "fear" texts nearly half of them tell us: "Fear not," and a goodly share of the remainder refer to "fear" from a reverential standpoint, rather than from being afraid, thus giving a very large preponderance on the side of faith. As Christian parents and teachers, may we feel it a privilege rather than a duty to help others, especially our own children, to be delivered from the thraldom of fear into a victorious life of faith, trust and love!

Cruel Sympathy

BY NORA E. BERKEBILE

Old Ned was taking his time going home from church, as he always did. Going, he trots right along, for he knows Uncle Joe never likes to get there late. If the opening song has been started when he reaches the corner, Uncle Joe has all he can do to keep Old Ned from making the final stretch on the gallop. Whoever trained him to that, no one will say. Uncle Joe just laughs and says: "Oh, it's Old Ned's horse sense. He just does not like to get there late." Uncle Joe says he does not believe it is right to stay in bed so long on Sunday morning that you have to take it out of horse flesh to get there on time.

Sometime or other Uncle Joe must have been a little late, and urged Ned to go faster when he heard the audience singing, or else the hired man, he used to have, whose best girl was the chorister, did not want to miss being at church while she was singing, and hurried old Ned more than usual,—but anyway it was fun for the boys, on the few occasions it happened, to see old Ned prick up his ears as the first strain of the opening song reached them, and come tearing at full speed to the church door.

But going home it was different. Ned took his own time and plodded slowly along. This evening it was so pleasant and the moonlight made it almost as light as day. Uncle Joe was talkative, but Aunt Margaret was more than ordinarily quiet.

"What is the matter, Maggie?" asked Uncle Joe, patting her shoulder.

"Well, Joseph, I was just thinking how cruel some sympathy is."

"For instance, Maggie?"

"Well, this evening, when we were all getting so greatly interested in the text and the preacher's opening remarks, and while every one was on the tiptoe of expectancy,—for we have been having some splendid sermons, and this promised to be above the usual of the series,—he stopped and waited while poor little crippled Bobby Burns walked down the aisle, and over to his place on the second seat, with the other boys. I saw the poor little fellow's face flush, and before he got seated, the preacher pointed his finger at him and said: 'See that cripple?' All eyes looked, of course, even though they had seen Bobby every Sunday since he was a baby. 'Well, there will be no cripples in heaven,' he added.

"You know Bobby has always been so sensitive about his deformity. He has a mind that is not deformed by any means, and the other boys all know that when it comes to books, Bobby is away ahead of them and they love him. Knowing how sensitive he is about his twisted legs, they pretend not to notice them. I know the preacher meant it all right but we, who know Bobby, could have cried for him, if it would have done any good. Two big tears started down over his cheeks, and with a half angry motion he dashed them away. He might be a cripple but he wasn't going to let folks call him a baby. His mother wept until her shoulders shook. I was sitting where I could see it all.

"Of course, the preacher felt badly for the boy, but he took a cruel way to show his sympathy. It just spoiled the sermon for a while for me."

"Yes, Maggie, you are right. It was cruel to a child like Bobby. A more refined, sensitive child I have never seen. When there is a game he can play with the boys, he is so delighted. He is a splendid catcher in their ball games, and that is a great pleasure to him. One should be careful how they sympathize with these sensitive natures. If all could take it like the 'Tommy' I read of, the other day, it would not make so much difference."

"How was that, Joseph?" asked his wife.

"Well, a 'Tommy' was hobbling down the street, one leg off, one arm missing, both ears shot off, and a bandage over one eye. A lady stopped him and asked: 'Do tell me how did you get hurt? I am so sorry, so sorry for you, my man. Is there anything I can do for you? I can not tell how I sympathize with you. Did you receive those wounds in real action?'

"The man had stood patiently, with a look of weariness, and then slowly answered: 'No, ma'am. I was cleaning out the canary cage and the bird bit me.'

"She was honest in her sympathy, but had a cruel, silly way of showing it," said Uncle Joe, slapping the lines over old Ned's back, which made him go just as he wanted to according to his own sweet will.

"I think, though, that woman will think twice next time," he chuckled.

"As after the Civil War, so now will we see the maimed, the halt and the blind,—victims of this cruel war. Our sympathies will go out to them as we see them thus, but may we be careful how we show our sympathy, Joseph, for neither of us would want to give a thrust in the name of sympathy, that will go deeper and hurt more than the wound itself."

Grandmother Warren

BY BESS BATES

2. Mary Gets An Allowance

John came walking home one evening frowning. That morning Mary had given him the grocery bill and meat bill to pay, and to John's unpracticed eyes they seemed exceedingly large for just two people.

"All of that!" he had exclaimed surprisedly when he had viewed the totals.

"You know we have had company," Mary explained, looking worried. They seemed large to her also.

"That's an awful lot," John went on.

"Do you think we have had more to eat than we should?" asked Mary.

"No, we have fine meals. You're a good cook all right, but I didn't know it took so much. Mother used to get along on less."

"Your mother has her own eggs and milk and butter and meat. She doesn't know how much she spends in a month," Mary replied with spirit.

"Well, we will have to try to cut down next month. I will bring home a soup-bone for tomorrow instead of the steak."

And John kissed Mary good-bye absently, and went away, hardly noticing that he left her looking hurt and worried. But now, as he walked home in the evening, he remembered that look. He also felt the weight of the soup-bone under his arm, and what be considered to be a bargain in dried fruit. He had passed by the fresh fruit which, he knew, Mary particularly relished. But the weight of the eatables was nothing compared to the weight on his mind, for he was trying to devise a way of cutting down expenses. Any one who has been through that knows how he felt. John had had to work hard for what little money he had, and had been compelled to save, so he can not be blamed for being startled at the size of the grocery and meat bills. Neither could one expect anything else, but that a young man of his ability would immediately tackle the problem of reducing those bills for the next month. Do not forget that soup-bone and dried fruit weighing down his arm.

As he passed Grandmother Warren's house, he saw her sitting on the porch. She smiled and called to him. He walked across the narrow lawn, shifted the soup-bone and dried fruit to the other arm and leaned against the porch post.

"How do you do, John? How is Mary?"

"Fine, Grandmother, fine," declared John stoutly.

"I thought you were looking a little worried," said Grandmother gently.

"First of the month, Grandmother. Bills these days are enough to worry anybody."

"Shouldn't think any bills that Mary would pile up should worry you."

In addition to this spiritual qualification, which every parent and teacher should possess, in dealing with fear, the mental and physical need careful direction.

The physical condition of the child, in its various functions of health and disease, needs to be thoroughly understood. This is especially true of one who is cowardly because of nervousness. A nervous and emaciated child is more susceptible to the depressing emotion of fear than one which is strong and robust. When one is tired physically, or depleted in mental energy, there is less bravery and courage. When we realize this fact, we may help the child in laying a strong hold on life, and thereby tend to dispel fear, which militates against its highest interest. The general shaping of the life, physically and mentally, in the direction of strength, helps to get rid of fear, which is rooted in pain.

There are, however, some useful phases of fear that need to be stimulated, such as fear of fire, dread of water to prevent drowning, fear of contracting contagious diseases, etc., which had better be termed caution than fear.

Some one has said: "There can be no healthful growth of the will under the restraints of fear. A child which lives in fear of punishment has half his faculties absorbed by that fear, and becomes incapable of governing himself."

This fear of the parent may lead to fear of God. Is your child afraid of God? A child refused to say her prayers unless some one was with her, saying she was afraid to be alone with God. Some of us may have grown up with this same fear and it may be difficult, always, to show the love side of God to our children. Help them to realize that the love of the parent is a foreshadowing of the love of God. Teach them the truth of 1 John 4: 18: "There is no fear in love: but perfect love casteth out fear, because fear hath punishment; and he that feareth is not made perfect in love." God's loving care, in removing fear, was felt by the child when he said: "I am not afraid because God is here and he is taking care of me all the time."

"Well, Joseph, I was just thinking how cruel some sympathy is."

"For instance, Maggie?"

"Well, this evening, when we were all getting so greatly interested in the text and the preacher's opening remarks, and while every one was on the tiptoe of expectancy,—for we have been having some splendid sermons, and this promised to be above the usual of the series,—he stopped and waited while poor little crippled Bobby Burns walked down the aisle, and over to his place on the second seat, with the other boys. I saw the poor little fellow's face flush, and before he got seated, the preacher pointed his finger at him and said: 'See that cripple?' All eyes looked, of course, even though they had seen Bobby every Sunday since he was a baby. 'Well, there will be no cripples in heaven,' he added.

"You know Bobby has always been so sensitive about his deformity. He has a mind that is not deformed by any means, and the other boys all know that when it comes to books, Bobby is away ahead of them and they love him. Knowing how sensitive he is about his twisted legs, they pretend not to notice them. I know the preacher meant it all right but we, who know Bobby, could have cried for him, if it would have done any good. Two big tears started down over his cheeks, and with a half angry motion he dashed them away. He might be a cripple but he wasn't going to let folks call him a baby. His mother wept until her shoulders shook. I was sitting where I could see it all.

"Of course, the preacher felt badly for the boy, but he took a cruel way to show his sympathy. It just spoiled the sermon for a while for me."

"Yes, Maggie, you are right. It was cruel to a child like Bobby. A more refined, sensitive child I have never seen. When there is a game he can play with the boys, he is so delighted. He is a splendid catcher I read of, the other difference."

"How was that, J

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

CALIFORNIA

Covina.—Our Sunday-school and church were closed the fourth Sunday in December and opened again Jan. 26, on which day the Sunday-school collection, amounting to $40.76, was donated to Armenian Relief Work, and forwarded to the General Mission Board. Our regular business meeting, for the election of church officers, was delayed on account of the closing of the churches, until Friday evening, Feb. 7. Three members were received by letter, Eld. D. L. Miller will begin our series of meetings March 2, and continue two or three weeks. It was decided to hold our spring love feast at the close of the meetings. Eld. Geo. F. Chemberlen was reelected to have charge for another year; Isaac Overholtzer, clerk; Eulalia Overholtzer, "Messenger" and church-paper church correspondent.—Mrs. Tempie S. Funk, Charter Oak, Cal., Feb. 11.

Pasadena.—Feb. 2 Bro. S. J. Miller, of La Verne, filled the pulpit both morning and evening. Five members have been received by letter since Jan. 1. Feb. 16 two were baptized. Sunday evening Bro. I. V. Funderburgh, of La Verne, gave a splendid sermon on the text, "My Life Creed." Our church services have all been well attended since the influenza ban has been lifted. Our mid-week prayer meetings are also well attended.—Mrs. Alice Vanliman, Pasadena, Cal., Feb. 16.

Reedley.—Feb. 8 we met in council, which had been postponed on account of the influenza, Feb. 2. Bro. Miller was reelected elder. We organized an intermediate Christian Workers' Society, and elected Bro. J. B. Fisher as superintendent. We now have a Junior, Intermediate and Senior Christian Workers' Society, and hope they will prove a great help to the old and young, that they may be of more service in the Master's cause. An offering was taken for World-wide Missions, to increase the Thanksgiving offering, which brings the total to $45.30. Also an offering was taken for Armenian-Syrian Relief. In the evening, Sister S. P. Noll's Sunday-school class of girls rendered an inspiring missionary program for the Christian Workers' Meeting. Afterward Bro. P. E. Robertson, from the Lindsay church, Tulare, will begin a revival services at this place Feb. 16.—Mabel Armantrout, Reedley, Cal., Feb. 13.

CANADA

Bow Valley.—Feb. 9 was the day set apart for Armenian Relief. No contribution was taken at the time of the Sunday-school, but envelopes were distributed and after a splendid sermon by Bro. Geo. Stearn, the envelopes were opened and found to contain $17.60. We are looking forward to the time when we can help to carry to these people the "Bread of Life" by a voluntary offering of some of our young people, as well as by the giving of our means. Feb. 16 we organized a Teacher-training Class, with Bro. J. H. Brubaker, teacher.—Maude F. Pohst, Gleichen, Alta., Can., Feb. 18.

COLORADO

Information Wanted.—Please help me to find my two sisters. My father died on Island No. 10, Tenn., during the Civil War. My mother went to St. Louis with three children, and after being there a short time, she died. The head man of the "Mission Free School" having lost his daughter, and thinking that my sister looked very much like his departed daughter, adopted her, leaving the writer and the younger daughter in the school. I was bound out to a farmer till I was twenty-one years old. The younger sister got a home in St. Louis, Mo. The farmer never took me in to see her, so I lost track of her entirely. I thought that perhaps the "Messenger" could help me to find them. I have been a reader of the "Messenger" for thirty-nine years.—Manuel Cohun, 403 S. Nevada, Colorado Springs, Colo., Feb. 3.

ILLINOIS

Notice.—The District Mission Board of Northern Illinois and Wisconsin met at Dixon, Ill., Feb. 7 and heartily endorsed the five-year "Forward Movement" and is planning to do its part in carrying out the various activities of this movement. The Board will make an effort to open a new mission point in the District and will recommend some improvement in several points of mission work.—O. D. Buck, Secretary-Treasurer, Franklin Grove, Ill., Feb. 13.

Virden.—Recently our Christian Workers' Society rendered an excellent program in the interest of the Armenian-Syrian Relief. After a touching appeal, an offering of $105 was lifted. Sister Haynes, our primary superintendent, is doing some splendid work in that department along the line of temperance instruction. Feb. 16 the entire school gave a splendid program. At the close the little folks gave their pennies and nickels to help our Sisters' Aid in the support of little Leah Ruth Ebey, one of our missionary children in the India field. Our pastor is giving us good spiritual sermons. Last Sunday was a speech good—the subject being "Christian Consistency," emphasizing the thought that people at large read the Christian, rather than the Christian's Bible.—Stella Brubaker, Virden, Ill., Feb. 12.

INDIANA

Bango congregation met in council Feb. 15, with Eld. H. S. Bowers as moderator. Elders H. W. Schwalm and H. Roose were present. One letter was granted. It was decided to hold the communion service May 29. A missionary committee was elected. Bro. Shriner and wife were installed to the deacon's office.—Gleta Schwalm, Wakarusa, Ind., Feb. 16.

Buck Creek.—Jan. 5 Bro. V. F. Schwalm, of Manchester College, delivered two excellent sermons. Jan. 11 Bro. L. T. Holsinger, of Brethren, Mich., began a two weeks' series of meetings. Sister Bertha Dilling, of Hagerstown, ably conducted the song service. Feb. 3 Bro. Chas. Replogle, a minister of the Friends' church, gave a very interesting lecture on Alaska. Our Sunday-school gave $16.36 for Armenian-Syrian Relief, and $10.28 toward the Manchester Mission Chapel debt.—Clara Sheets, Mooreland, Ind., Feb. 14.

Burlington City church met in council Jan. 2, with Brethren Ira E. Long and D. W. Fisher presiding. Sunday-school officers were elected for the year, with Bro. W. H. Weybright and Sister Cora Emley superintendents. Bro. C. C. Kindy was elected pastor and elder, and Orville Long, deacon. The church had no regular pastor this winter, but the pulpit has been filled by such brethren as J. H. Wright, J. C. Murray and A. S. Workman, all of North Manchester, and Bro. Howard, one of the oldest ministers in the State of Indiana, who is spending the winter here. All gave us many good thoughts. Our Sunday-school sent an offering of $21 to the Armenian-Syrian Relief. We also decided to support an orphan. Our Christmas program was postponed on account of the epidemic. Health conditions are much improved, and attendance at services is increasing, which is encouraging.—Mrs. J. B. Bailey, Huntington, Ind., Feb. 18.

Middletown.—Bro. Rood, of Anderson, preached two Sundays in succession. In the evening, Bro. Carpenter preached. He is a young minister and we do all we can to help him build up the Kingdom. We will begin cottage prayer meetings on Thursday evening.—Florida J. E. Green, Middletown, Ind., Feb. 17.

Nettle Creek church met in council Feb. 8. Our trustees and various other committees made their reports. One was reinstated. Our communion services will be held April 26, beginning at 6:30, and Oct. 11, beginning at 10:30.—Chas. W. Miller, Hagerstown, Ind.

IOWA

Beaver church met in council Feb. 15, with Bro. Chas. Rowe, of Dallas Center, presiding. Our crowds are becoming larger, and the work is going on with more vigor and determination. Bro. Rowe stayed over Sunday and gave us two good sermons. Bro. Ezra Flory, of Chicago, recently closed a very interesting Bible Institute.—Belle Ruth, Grand Junction, Iowa, Feb. 17.

Fernald.—We were hindered very much in our services during December and January, on account of the epidemic, but were permitted to open church and Sunday-school again Feb. 2. Bro. Robinson and wife have left for the South and will be greatly missed in our work here. Feb. 2, Bro. Fegthy, of Des Moines, gave us an interesting talk on missions. A collection of $25 was taken for the Orphans' Home.—Ona Stevens, Fernald, Iowa, Feb. 8.

KANSAS

Bloom congregation has been blessed in that, during the influenza epidemic, only a few members were ill, and none of these cases proved serious. The increase in attendance and interest in Sunday-school and church services is very gratifying. The Sunday-school gave a very entertaining and instructive program Feb. 2, celebrating the ratification of the Prohibition Amendment. Our pastor, Bro. J. S. Sherfy, has been giving us some very inspiring sermons on the "Forward Movement." The Christian Workers' Band has recently adopted a constitution and arranged for some committees, which will enable the members to do more effective Christian service. The Band has secured Dr. Kurtz, of McPherson, Kans., to lecture here on Sunday evening and Sunday, March 1 and 2.—Carrie Smith, Bloom, Kans., Feb. 18.

Conway Springs.—Once again we are having Sunday-school. Although we had preaching services several times, we had no Sunday-school from Dec. 6 until Feb. 2. Since our last report two have been received into the church by baptism. At a recent business meeting, officers for the year were elected, with Bro. W. E. Thompson, elder; John Stauffer, president of Christian Workers' Band; Mrs. Bertha Hutchison, president of Aid Society; Ruth Frantz, "Messenger" correspondent. If health conditions permit, we are expecting Bro. O. H. Feller, of Hutchinson, to help us in a series of meetings, beginning March 2.—Naomi Fasnacht, Conway Springs, Kans., Feb. 17.

Independence.—Bro. W. H. Miller, our home elder and minister, began a series of meetings Jan. 29 and continued till Feb. 16. Much good was done, and seven were added to the church. Among the number were Bro. Edward Van Pelt and family, of the Progressive church. He will be able to help our faithful elder and minister, who has labored so faithfully and earnestly here for the past few years. We have recently organized a Teacher-training Class.—Pella Carson, Independence, Kans., Feb. 18.

Larned City church met in council Jan. 10, 1919, with Eld. E. S. Fox presiding. Church, Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Band officers were elected. Our services have been greatly interfered with by the influenza epidemic, but now the ban has been taken up with renewed interest. It became necessary to postpone both our love feast and revival meetings. The date for the former has not yet been definitely fixed. However, we expect Bro. S. E. Thompson, of Garden City, Kans., to be with us to open revival meetings April 6.—Mary Geiman, Larned, Kans., Feb. 11.

McPherson First Church met in council Feb. 17. Eleven church letters were received and three were granted. Brethren Henry Stoner, Edward Van Pelt and Wilbur Hoover were elected to the ministry. Bro. J. A. Flory was appointed prayer meeting leader for the year. Bro. J. Edson Ulery, of Michigan, has been engaged to conduct the revival meeting this coming fall. Dr. D. W. Kurtz will fill the pulpit the month of this month during the absence of our pastor.—Mrs. R. E. Mohler, McPherson, Kans., Feb. 18.

To the Churches of Northeastern Kansas.—The 1918 District Meeting, which was to have convened in the Ozawkie church last October, and was indefinitely postponed on account of influenza, will be held in the above-named church April 6-8. The Bible and Sunday-school Institute, arranged for in connection with the meeting, has been called off. We urge that every congregation in the District send a strong delegation, and that those members and officials having reports or business for the meeting, will forward them to Bro. E. F. Sherfy, McPherson, Kans.—C. E. Smith, Moderator of Official Board, Morrill, Kans., Feb. 19.

MARYLAND

Meadow Branch.—Our contributions to the Armenian Relief Fund amounted to $85.5. Feb. 7 the Sunday-school of the men's organized Bible Class, of the Westminster Sunday-school, met at the home of the teacher, Prof. W. B. Yount, and heard an inspiring address by Elder D. Bonsack, of Blue Ridge College. The women's organized Bible Class, of the same school, with Sister Lydia Trostle, teacher, is planning for more aggressive work for the ensuing year. Our elder, Bro. Uriah Bixler, has returned from the Johns Hopkins Hospital, where he underwent an operation. He is much improved in health.—W. E. Roop, Westminster, Md., Feb. 12.

Pipe Creek church met in council Feb. 8, at Blue Ridge College, with Bro. J. J. John presiding. One letter was received and one granted. The yearly report of the deacons was read and accepted. The church decided to hold a series of meetings at our next council, to be held May 3 at the Pipe Creek house. Brethren E. C. Bixler, J. W. Euglar and Wm. Kinsey were elected delegates to District Meeting.—Ida M. Englar, Uniontown, Md., Feb. 12.

MICHIGAN

Grand Rapids congregation closed a revival Feb. 4, conducted by Eld. C. E. Wilkins. Our song service, both congregational and special, was very spiritual and inspiring, and was conducted by Sister Iva Burke, of North Liberty, Ind. We had a number of very helpful cottage and special prayer meetings, which were well attended by earnest workers. Much home visiting and personal work was done by our evangelist, pastor and others. Two were received into the church by baptism. Good interest was aroused and the attendance was quite good.—Mrs. M. M. Chambers, Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 13.

Marilla.—Members of the Marilla branch of the Harlan congregation met at the Marilla church Feb. 7, for the purpose of organizing a separate congregation, which we decided to call Marilla. The following officers were elected: Eld. Jos. Robison, moderator; Ebey, clerk; Beatrice Shideler, "Messenger" agent and correspondent; H. Grossnickle, Clark Williams and Irvin Grossnickle, trustees.—Mrs. Beatrice Shideler, Marilla, Mich., Feb. 15.

Vestaburg.—Jan. 7 Eld. J. Edson Ulery commenced a series of meetings, and continued until Jan. 19. On account of influenza, the attendance was not large, but Bro. Ulery did a good work while here and the church has been encouraged. Feb. 15 we held our council meeting, with Eld. Jos. Robison presiding.—Samuel Bollinger, Vestaburg, Mich., Feb. 18.

MINNESOTA

Monticello church was again opened Feb. 2, having been closed since Jan. 5. The attendance is good and we have much to be thankful for. Only a few members of the congregation were stricken with the epidemic and there were no fatal cases. An offering of $36.63 has been taken by the Sunday-school for Armenian-Syrian Relief. Our quarterly council was held Feb. 13. Two letters were received. Arrangements were made to begin our Mission Study Class in the near future. Mrs. W. S. Sink, Monticello, Minn., Feb. 17.

MISSOURI

Mineral Creek church met in council Jan. 26, with Eld. Jas. M. Mohler presiding. Bro. E. M. Mohler and wife, and Bro. Mark E. Neher were installed into the deacon's office. Our officers for the year are, Bro. D. M. Wenrich, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. Howard Garvey, president of the Christian Workers' Society; the writer, "Messenger" correspondent. For a number of years, Bro. Moses Neher, our retiring Sunday-school superintendent, has labored untiringly for the upbuilding of the Sunday-school, and his efforts are much appreciated by all. Interest and attendance in Sunday-school have increased since the influenza epidemic has subsided. Efforts are being made to increase the efficiency of our school.—Ruth Pentecost, Lenton, Mo., Feb. 16.

NORTH CAROLINA

Pleasant Grove.—Bro. Clayton B. Miller is still conducting a Bible Class here. He has one lesson in the morning from the Book of Mark for the children. The evening lesson is from the Book of Acts. Bro. Miller explains so clearly that anyone can understand. He will be here for some time yet. Our Sunday-school is progressing nicely. We have added a cradle roll and a home department, with Sister Hattie Masters as superintendent of the former, and the writer as superintendent of the latter.—Emma Bryant, Brummett, N. C., Feb. 14.

NORTH DAKOTA

Brantford.—Jan. 26 we met for services,—the first since last September. Bro. David Miller preached a splendid sermon. During the epidemic not a member of the congregation was called home, but others around us were. Bro. W. A. Deardorff suffered from the disease, but was able to return and give us one of his splendid spiritual services Feb. 2. Feb. 5, Sunday-school officers were elected, with Bro. Otto Richter, superintendent.—Vada Row, Brantford, N. Dak., Feb. 16.

OHIO

Akron.—Beginning Jan. 11, Bro. A. I. Heestand was with us for two weeks. His sermons were simple and full of interest the children, and yet they were full of deep, spiritual truths for the older ones. Since our last report one has been baptized. The Christian Workers gave their quarterly missionary offering for the India Famine Fund. Bro. W. R. Miller is with us this week, giving his Bible Land pictures and lectures.—Alice Tippy Klinger, Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, Feb. 18.

Canton Center congregation met in council Feb. 8, with Eld. Taylor presiding. One letter was read and one was granted. The committees, in charge of various departments of church work, gave their annual reports. We gave $485 to missions, and $252.78 to Armenian-Syrian Relief. Offering will be continued indefinitely. Several classes of the Bible School have obligated themselves to support an orphan. An offering is also taken at each meeting of the Mission Study Class. The book "Christian Heroism in Heathen Lands" has been completed under the leadership of Bro. Ira Moomaw. This work will also be continued.—Rachel A. Mohn, Lonisville, Ohio, Feb. 15.

Cincinnati.—After seven long years of anxious waiting and earnest praying, the Lord has wonderfully blessed us, for we now have a beautiful little churchhouse. Jan. 19 we dedicated it. Bro. S. S. Ober, of Elizabethtown College, delivered the address. Feb. 16, our pastor, Bro. R. N. Leatherman, closed a four weeks' series of meetings. Sister Nora Stover, of Plymouth, Ind., led the song service, assisted by Sister Martha Landis, of Dayton, Ohio. The services were well attended and greatly appreciated by the people of this community. Nine have confessed Christ. Perhaps some of you, who read this message, would like to locate here and help in the great work.—Mabel Knoepfle, Cincinnati, Ohio, Feb. 17.

Circleville.—Our series of meetings, conducted by the pastor, began Jan. 12 and closed Jan. 22. As a result of the meetings the membership seems to be revived and one was received by baptism. We expect to hold another two weeks' series of meetings as soon as health conditions permit. One has been restored since our last report. To show their appreciation, the members here have decided to take a special offering each month for the pastor. We have been favored recently with visits from many of our soldier brethren at Camp Sherman. Our pastor fills the appointment there each Saturday evening.—Mrs. Oliver Royer, Circleville, Ohio, Feb. 17.

Mohican church met in council Feb. 15, with Eld. A. I. Heestand presiding. Seven letters were granted. Bro. Geo. Gortner was reelected trustee. We decided to have our elder, Bro. John Wise, hold our revival meetings some time this fall. He preached for us on Sunday.—Minnie Wagner, West Salem, Ohio, Feb. 18.

Nimishillen.—Feb. 3 Eld. W. R. Miller, of Onekama, Mich., began a series of illustrated Bible lectures. The attendance and interest were excellent. We feel that these lectures did the community much good and that we are well paid for what we did along that line. Feb. 12 the writer began a series of meetings at the Carson Valley church. Attendance, so far, is splendid, as well as attention and interest, and we trust that much good can be accomplished. May next, I expect to conduct meetings in the Pleyna congregation, Ind. December, January and February are good months for this work. Early fall' months are taken up. Surely there is need of much effort to save souls and extend the borders of Christ's Kingdom.—Reuben Hoover, North Canton, Ohio, Feb. 13.

Notice to Members of the Northwestern Ohio.—The Missionary and District Meeting of Northwestern Ohio will be held in the Pleasant View church March 19 and 20. Churches are requested by the minutes of District Meeting to take up a liberal offering for District Mission work and to send it with the delegates. Elders of the District will meet March 18, at 1 o'clock, at the church. Those coming will take the Western Ohio Traction Line from Lima or Findlay, get off at Lewis,—stop right at the church. Local cars about every two hours each way.—J. L. Guthrie, Secretary, Upper Sandusky, Ohio.

Silvar Creek church met in council Feb. 8, with Eld. J. W. Keiser presiding. Two letters were received and one was granted. Breth-

CALIFORNIA

Covina.—Our Sunday-school and church were closed the fourth Sunday in December and opened again Jan. 26, on which day the Sunday-school collection, amounting to $40.76, was donated to Armenian Relief Work, and forwarded to the General Mission Board. Our regular business meeting, for the election of church officers, was delayed on account of the closing of the churches, until Friday evening, Feb. 7. Three members were received by letter. Eld. D. L. Miller will begin our series of meetings March 2, and continue two or three weeks. It was decided to hold our spring love feast at the close of the meetings. Eld. Geo. P. Chemberlen was reelected to have charge for another year; Isaac Overholtzer, clerk; Eulalia Overholtzer, "Messenger" agent; the writer church correspondent.—Mrs. Temple S. Funk, Charter Oak, Cal., Feb. 11.

Pasadena.—Feb. 2 Bro. S. J. Miller, La Verne, filled the pulpit both morning and evening. Five members have been received by letter since Jan. 1. Feb. 16 two were baptized. Sunday evening Bro. I. V. Funderburgh, of La Verne, gave a splendid sermon on the text, "My Life Creed." Our church services have all been well attended since the influenza ban has been lifted. Our mid-week prayer meetings are also well attended.—Mrs. Alice Vaniman, Pasadena, Cal., Feb. 16.

Reedley.—Feb. 8 we met in council, which had been postponed on account of the influenza. Bro. M. H. Miller was reelected elder. We organized an intermediate Christian Workers' Society, and elected Bro. J. B. Fisher as superintendent. We now have a Junior, Intermediate and Senior Christian Workers' Society, and hope they will prove a great help to both old and young, that they may be of more service in the Master's cause. An offering was taken for World-wide Missions, to increase the Thanksgiving offering, which brings the total to $45.34. An offering of $41.25 was taken for Armenian-Syrian Relief. In the evening, Sister S. P. Noll's Sunday-school class of girls rendered an inspiring missionary program for the Christian Workers' Meeting. Afterward Bro. F. E. Robertson, from the Lindsay church, preached. He will begin revival services at this place Feb. 16.—Mabel Armantrout, Reedley, Cal., Feb. 13.

Bow Valley.—Feb. 9 was the day set apart for Armenian Relief. No contribution was taken at the time of the Sunday-school, but envelopes were distributed and after a splendid sermon by Bro. Geo. Stearn, the envelopes were opened and found to contain $117.60. We are looking forward to the time when we can help to carry to these people the "bread of life" by a voluntary offering of some of our young people, as well as by the giving of our means. Feb. 16 we organized a Teacher-training Class, with Bro. J. H. Brubaker, teacher.—Maude E. Pohst, Gleichen, Alta., Can., Feb. 18.

COLORADO

Information Wanted.—Please help me to find my two sisters. My father died on Island No. 10, Tenn., during the Civil War. My mother went to St. Louis with three of her children. After being there a short time, she died. The head man of the "Mission Free School," having lost his daughter, and thinking that my sister looked very much like his departed daughter, adopted her, leaving the writer and the younger daughter in the school. I was bound out to a farmer till I was twenty-one years old. The younger sister was born in St. Louis, Mo. My mother never took me in to see her, so I lost track of both sisters. I thought that perhaps the "Messenger" could help me to find them. I have been a reader of the "Messenger" for thirty-one years.—Manuel Cobun, 403 S. Nevada, Colorado Springs, Colo., Feb. 13.

ILLINOIS

Notice.—The District Mission Board of Northern Illinois and Wisconsin met at Disco, Ill., Feb. 19. The Board heartily endorsed the five-year "Forward Movement" and is planning to do its part in carrying out the various activities of this movement. The Board will make an effort to open a new mission point in the District and will recommend some improvement in raising finances for mission work.—O. D. Buck, Secretary-Treasurer, Franklin Grove, Ill., Feb. 17.
